CONCORDANCE TO SWEDENBORG.

O. The letter O.

H. 241². (Words of the celestial class in the Hebrew Word are characterised by the vowels U (oo) and O . . . As affections . . . put themselves forth by sounds, therefore in the discourse of man also, when great things are being treated of, as Heaven and God, those words are loved in which are U and O. Musical sounds also exalt themselves thither, when the like things are being expressed . . .

S. 90². The vowels A, O, and U (oo) are used in the Third Heaven, because they give a full sound. T.278. De Verbo 4².

D. 5112. The words of the celestial Angels have an affinity with A, O, and U; and therefore their speech falls into such words as contain these vowels. Therefore, when a man is speaking with these, he is bent from words in which are E and I, to words in which are A, O, and U.

5620². The celestial Angels said, as also I have often perceived, that they have not the vowels I and E, but A, O, and chiefly U.

5622^e. Instead of A, there, they say AO, intermediate.

6063. (In spiritual writing), for example, in the word hono . . . O signifies with—cum aut apud . . . All the vowels signify that which conjoins . . .

Oak. Quercus.

See MOREH and under MAMRE.

A. 1306. Here, (Is.ii.14) the love of self is described by . . . 'the oaks of Bashan,' etc. . . which are 'high and lifted up.'

1443. The scientifics (of the celestial man) are compared to 'oak-groves,' and this from their intertwined branches, such as are those of the oak. . . By the trees of an oak-grove are signified exterior perceptions, or those of scientifics, which are of the external man . . . Ill. 1616. 2144.

2466¹⁰. 'The oak, poplar, and robur' (Hos.iv.13)=so many gross perceptions thence upon which they trust.

2831⁸. 'Oaks'=the apperceptions from scientifics. Refs.

4552. 'Jacob hid them under the oak which is near Shechem' (Gen.xxxv.4)=eternal rejection . . . 'Under an oak'=to eternity; for the oak is a tree which grows to the greatest age . . . and it also signified that which was entangled, and moreover that which was fallacious and false; because the lowest of the Natural is relatively entangled and fallacious, in so far as it derives its Scientific and pleasure from the sensuous things which are of the body, and thus from fallacies; for by the oak in special is signified the lowest of the Natural; consequently, in a good sense, the truths and goods which are there; and, in the opposite, the evils and falsities which are there. Ex.

—³. That oaks = the falsities which are of the lowest Natural, is because in the Ancient Church, when external worship was representative of the Lord's Kingdom, all trees, of whatever kind, signified something celestial or spiritual . . .

—⁴. That 'the oak,' in a good sense, = the truths and goods which are the lowest ones of the Natural; and, in the opposite sense, the falsities and evils. Ill.

4564. '(Deborah) was buried from beneath Bethel under the oak' (ver.S)=rejected in perpetuity . . . 'Under an oak'=in perpetuity.

4565. 'Allon-bachuth' means 'the oak of weeping;' and the place was so called for the reason that 'the oak' = the lowest of the Natural, into which, and at last out of which, hereditary evil is cast.

6306⁴. The evil of the love of self is described by . . . 'the strength of the oak' (Amos ii.9).

S. 18². By the olive, vine, cedar, poplar, and oak, are meant the good and truth of the Church celestial, spiritual, rational, natural, and sensuous.

R. 936^e. The leaves of the fir, poplar, oak, pine = rational truths from sensuous light. The leaves of these trees strike terror in the Spiritual World, when they are shaken by a strong wind . . .

M. 78². (On the way to the people of the Iron Age, they passed through) a forest consisting of beeches, chestnuts (or Italian oaks), and oaks.

E. 324²⁰. 'The oak, poplar, and robur' (Hos.iv.13)=the lowest goods of truth and truths of good of the natural man.

410³. 'The cedars of Lebanon,' and 'the oaks of Bashan' (Is.ii.14)=conceit from Own intelligence . . . (the latter)=exterior conceit.

504²⁶. 'An oak' (Is.i.30)=the natural man.

[E.] 514⁹. 'The oaks of Bashan' (Is.ii.)=those who boast from knowledge; for 'oaks' are predicated of the natural man, (to which) knowledge belongs.

1029¹³. 'The oaks,' and 'the cedars of Lebanon' (Is. xiv.S)=the Knowledges of good and truth in an external and internal sense.

1145². Wood from the poplar=natural good; and from the oak, sensuous good.

Oak, Italian. Aesculus. M.78². T.815^e.

Oar. Remus.

See ROWER.

A. 6385². See SHIP, here.

E. 514⁴. 'Those who hold the oar' (Ezek.xxvii.29)=the intelligent.

—¹⁰. 'The oars of a ship' (Is.xxxiii.21)=intelligence from proprium.

1146². 'Oars' (Ezek.xxvii.)=those things of the understanding through which it speaks, which things are of the sensuous man.

Oath. See under SWEAR.

Obed Edom. Obed Edom. E.700²⁶. —³¹.

Obedience. Obedientia.

Obey. Obedire.

See under EAR, EAR-RING, and HEAR.

A. 36. Faith is . . . chiefly obedience to all that it teaches.

394^e. Angelic Spirits [act] not so much from charity, but from obedience.

989^e. There are some who exercise the works of charity from obedience alone, that is, because it is so commanded by the Lord, and yet are not regenerated.

1937. That man ought to compel himself . . . to obey the things which have been commanded by the Lord . . . involves arcana . . .

—⁴. They do this for the sake of obedience to what the Lord has commanded . . . in which still more interiorly . . . there is for the sake of the Lord's Kingdom, nay, for the sake of the Lord Himself.

2271. Obedience is signified by the ear.

2425². Those who are in the affection of truth . . . do the goods of charity . . . from obedience.

2439². With another (to do a good work) is a work of obedience, because it proceeds from obedience.

2541². How the Lord reduced rational and scientific things to obedience . . .

2542. An exhortation to the confirmatory things thence, even so that they should obey. Sig. and Ex.

2604^e. (The Africans) wish especially to be called the obedient, but not the faithful. H.326.

2701³. 'Blessed are your . . . ears, because they hear' = . . . that they had obeyed.

2932. 'To hear'=to obey, or comply.

3295^e. This honour, because it is from the precept, is not good in itself; because it is not from love; but is either from obedience to the law, or from fear of the law; but still it is called the good of truth; but, in its first coming forth, it is truth . . .

3381. From (the uniting of the Divine essence to the Human through temptations) is obedience predicated of the Lord in the Word. 3382.

3409. 'Service'= . . . what obeys.

3551. Obedience. Sig.

3611. 'To hearken to the voice'=to obey.

3684. Obedience from affection. Sig.

3869¹¹. To will truth from obedience, which, relatively, is not freedom. Sig.

3870. The first life manifests itself by obedience, which is the first of will; the second, by the affection of doing truth . . .

4101. 'To do all that God says'=to obey.

4104⁵. Then all things are disposed and ordained in his Natural according to these things, in order that they may be servient and obedient.

4211³. Still, the Lord conjoins Himself with (those outside the Church) through their good of charity and of obedience in their gross idea . . .

4326³. As (those of the Iron Age) did not pass their time in the affection of truth, but in the obedience of truth, the Involuntary was no longer manifest in the face . . .

4606. 'Simeon' . . . in the external sense, = obedience. Refs.

5164². Those who are the greatest in Heaven—that is, who are the inmost—are servants more than others, because they are in the greatest obedience . . .

5312. That everything there shall be under obedience to (the Celestial of the Spiritual). Sig.

5368. 'What he saith unto you, do'=provided there is obedience. . . Hereby is signified that good is adjoined to truth in the Natural, provided the Natural applies itself and obeys. Ex.

—². The internal man is what ought to command, and the external is what ought to obey; and it obeys when it has for the end not the world, but Heaven; not self, but the neighbour . . .

5843^e. Whereas the good of charity not from affection but from obedience . . . is external good, or the good of the External Church. Tr.

6374. 'Unto him the obedience of the people' (Ex. xlix.10)=that from His Divine Human should proceed truths which could be received. 'Obedience'=the reception of the truths which proceed from the Lord.

6396. Those who are such ('Dan') are in the Lord's Kingdom; but, as they do not act good from good, but from truth; that is, not from any new Voluntary, but from the Intellectual; thus not so much from love, but from obedience because it has been so commanded, they are among those who are in the First Heaven.

6513^e. Obedience also is consent; but obedience is said when lower things are treated of, and consent, when more eminent ones.

6678. As all holy fear, and the consequent obedience and keeping of the precepts, are from the Divine, and not at all from man . . .

6971. The effect of not obeying what is announced from the Word. Sig. and Ex. 6974.

6989. 'Or deaf' = no perception of truth, and thence no obedience.

7640. 'How long dost thou refuse to be humbled before Me?' = no obedience. Ex.

7839². Those (who are being regenerated) are in obedience to truth; but those (who are regenerate) are in the affection of doing truth; and therefore the former are men of the External Church, but the latter of the Internal one. 7840².

7857. When man is being regenerated, the good with him then proceeds from the truth of faith, for he then does, not from the affection of truth, but from obedience because it has been so commanded. But afterwards, when he has been regenerated, he does good from affection, thus from love. These two states with man are completely distinguished in the Word, for the reason that man cannot be in both states together . . .

7944. That those who are of the Spiritual Church must obey truth Divine. Sig.

—'. 'To go and do' = to obey.

8234. At first (those of the Spiritual Church) do what is good because the truth dictates that it is to be done, consequently from obedience; but afterwards they do what is good from affection . . . From this it is evident that before the man of the Spiritual Church receives a new will from the Lord—that is, before he has been regenerated—he does truth from obedience; but after he has been regenerated, he does truth from affection . . . For to do from obedience is to do from the Intellectual . . . Hence, too, it is, that those who do truth from obedience are men of the External Church . . .

8330². The Heaven in which is the truth of faith, is that in which are the exterior Angels of the Spiritual Kingdom, (who) do what is good from obedience.

8362. 'If thou wilt hearken to His precepts' = obedience and life according to the goods of faith.

8399². The good which is from truth, is the good which is with the spiritual man before regeneration; for he then does what is good from truth; that is, because it has been so commanded; and consequently from obedience . . .

8479. No faith, and thence no obedience. Sig.

8505². Man before regeneration acts from obedience; but after regeneration from affection . . .

8686. Obedience then from truth Divine. Sig. and Ex.

8690. As (this = obedience) it = what is of the will; for obedience is from the will; but it is the will of doing truth from command, and not from affection, which will is obedience.

—². It treats here concerning the first state in which is man before regeneration, which is, that he does what is good from obedience, and not yet from affection; but this good is the truth which he does, because it is solely from command, thus as yet from what is compulsory, and not yet from what is free . . .

8762. Those are of the External Church who do what is good to the neighbour, and worship the Lord, solely from the obedience of faith . . .

8920. The reception of truth in an accommodated form, which they would thus obey. Sig. and Ex.

8987. 'I will not go out free' = the delight of obedience. Ex.

—². Those who suffer themselves . . . only to be reformed, do not act from affection, but from obedience . . . those who act from obedience, do not act so much from the heart, consequently not from what is free. If they seem to themselves to act from the heart and from what is free, it is for the sake of something of the glory of self . . . nor do they act truth for the sake of truth, nor good for the sake of good, but for the sake of the delight from that glory . . . From these things it is evident who and of what quality are those who are represented by . . . 'the Hebrew servants.'

8988. Here is described the state of those who are in truths, and not in the corresponding good, in that, to wit, it is a state of perpetual obedience; for those who are in this state are in servitude relatively to those who are in the good corresponding to the truths; for . . . those who act solely from obedience, act not from their own will, but from the will of their lord; thus not from themselves, but from another, on which account they are relatively in servitude. To act from truths and not from good, is to act solely from the Intellectual . . . and to act from the Intellectual and not from the Voluntary, is to act from that which stands outside and serves . . .

—². But to serve the Lord, by doing according to His precepts, and thus by obeying, is not to be a servant, but is to be free . . .

8990. A representative of (eternal) obedience. Sig. and Ex. 8991.

[A.] 9193^e. The life of faith is to do the precepts from obedience; and the life of charity is to do the precepts from love.

9198^r. Obedience, and the longing of good for truth, is described by that from command she gave water to the prophet. . . .

9230^r. All that of the Church is called the good of faith . . . which concerns the willing of these things, and the doing of them, from obedience . . .

—^c. Therefore, when man does what is good from the good of faith, he does (it) from obedience; but when he does (it) from the good of charity, he does (it) from affection.

9249. No obedience to malignities. Sig. and Ex.

9284. That we are not to obey (the doctrine of falsity) with any affirmation. Sig. and Ex.

9307. Obedience to the precepts which are from the Lord. Sig.

9318. That (the falsities of evil) are not to be obeyed. Sig.

9397. For hearkening and obedience. Sig. and Ex.

9398. The reception of the truth which proceeds from the Divine Human of the Lord, and obedience from the heart and soul. Sig. 'To do'=obedience from the will . . . and 'to hear'=obedience from the understanding.

9468. In the Spiritual Kingdom . . . the External is the good of obedience from faith.

9812^r. Divine natural good, which makes the First Heaven, is the good of faith and of obedience.

10087. The feet correspond to the good of faith, thus to the good of obedience, which is the good of the Ultimate Heaven, and is called the Divine Natural.

10130^r. Those who are in the obedience of faith—that is, who do truth for the sake of truth—are consociated in the Ultimate Heaven.

H. 218^r. They accept this glory and honour . . . for the sake of obedience; for all there know that this honour and glory are with them from the Lord, and that on this account they are to be obeyed.

278^r. Hence it is, that the things which (the Angels) hear from the Lord, whether it is by the medium of the Word, or the medium of preaching, they do not lay up in the memory, but at once obey, that is, will and do . . .

F. 35. He reduced Hell . . . under His obedience. T. 224^r.

M. 7^r. The magnificence (there) is for the sake of obedience.

T. 106. With every man . . . the state of his infancy and childhood, up to puberty, adolescence, and early manhood . . . is the state of his humiliation before his parents, and of obedience then . . .

338^r. The dogma that the understanding is to be captive under obedience to faith. 508^r.

588. He becomes prosperous and blessed if he acquires wisdom, and keeps his will under obedience to it; but he becomes unprosperous and unhappy if he puts his understanding under obedience to the will. Ex.

D. 5001. In the other life, it cannot be otherwise than that some command, and some obey. . . Some, who have served in the world, have drawn [with them] the life of obeying; they know of, and want, nothing else; hence it is necessary to exercise command . . .

5851. With the celestial, with whom the internals are open, all things which they hear about truths and goods, enter into their Voluntary and life, and thus make it; so that the things which enter through the ear are with them obedience. It is otherwise with the spiritual . . .

5963^e. Russians have sometimes been with me . . . they were in obedience, and modest; so that they were much better than (the evil from Christendom). The reason is, that they can be kept in good affection from the fact that they are in obedience and subordination . . .

D. Min. 4813^e. They are those who are in simple obedience.

E. 102^r. 'To give a drink of cold [water]' = to exercise charity from obedience.

388^r. That the contrary state is with those who are not in charity, is described by, 'If ye will not obey Me, and do all my precepts, I will send the wild beast of the field among you . . .' (Lev. xxvi. 14 et seq.).

400^r. Those who are in faith, and do what is good from obedience, although not from charity, dwell upon the rocks.

443. 'From the tribe of Simeon were sealed 12,000' = obedience, and that all who are in it, are in Heaven and come into Heaven.

—³. As by 'Simeon' is signified obedience, there is also signified faith; for faith is faith with man when he obeys and does the precepts . . .

455^r. That these would receive Divine truths, if they were to be instructed, is signified by that 'they would obey' (Ezek. iii. 6).

695^r. By 'to give to drink a cup of cold [water] . . .' is meant to do good and teach truth from obedience; for by 'water' is signified truth in affection; and by 'cold [water],' truth in obedience; for obedience alone is a natural affection and not spiritual; and therefore it is relatively cold.

721^e. As in the natural man there are concupiscences from the love of self and of the world, and these cannot be removed except by truths, it is said that 'to the man shall be her obedience . . .' (Gen. iii. 16).

798^r. That it may be known that to do what is good from obedience is from the natural man, it shall be told what it is to do what is good from charity . . . Inasmuch as charity is from the love of doing good for the sake of good . . . it follows that to do good from charity is spiritual; but that to do good from obedience, because it is from the love of the reward, is natural. This is the Natural in which are they who are in the entrance to Heaven, whither also come those who do what is good only from obedience, who are they who, in doctrine and life, confirm with themselves that faith produces good works as a tree does fruits.

1071^r. The body is only obedience . . .

J. (Post.) 345. Man does what is good from obedience, and . . . from affection. He does what is good from obedience before he has fought against evils. This state is the first state of man, and can be a state of reformation; and he who is in this state, and does not do evils, is regenerated in the other life by means of combats against them . . . To do what is good from affection is when man has fought against evils. This state is that of man's regeneration; and is the inverse of the former one.

346. To do what is good from obedience is not from what is free, because it is not from affection. There is the thought of recompence in it; thus afterwards, of merit.

C. 210². Anyone, from the principle that it is Christian not to do evil to the neighbour, does not do it. But he who from this principle only does not do evil to the neighbour, and does good to him, still does not love him; but he does not do evil to him from obedience to the Divine law, and not from the affection of love towards the neighbour; and concerning this affection no one knows anything but he who shuns evils as sins, that is, who does not love evils: he comes into the affection of that love. For it is one thing from obedience not to do evil but to do good, and it is another thing from the affection of love towards the neighbour not to do evil to him, but to do good to him. The difference is as between nocturnal heat and light . . . and diurnal heat and light . . . In obedience there is not the heat of that love, nor the light of that love; but in affection there is . . . And therefore also those who from obedience have done good, are in the ultimates of Heaven, and are in light and heat as of the moon. The light also of their understanding is shady: they do not see any spiritual truths in light. There is also the difference, that they who do good from obedience, do it from the fear of the penalty, and so likewise do they abstain from doing evils . . . Nay, they who from obedience do good are natural, whereas they who do it from affection are spiritual. Those, also, who do good from obedience are those who are reformed: it also precedes. Whereas they who do it from affection are regenerated: this follows in order. All those who have believed man to be saved by faith alone—if they live as Christians, confessing that they are sinners—and who have not explored themselves, do good from obedience, and not from affection. Nay, neither do they know anything concerning faith, nor love, nor God, except what they hear from a preacher; but still they do good. They who from obedience do what is good take the lead in acts of benevolence . . . and they cannot do otherwise than place merit in these things . . . nor do they know that the affection of good, with its delights, is itself the reward.

Object. Objectus.

A. 920. In each object of the senses they perceived something Divine and heavenly. Examp.

—². A general idea rules all the particulars; thus all the objects of the senses . . . and indeed so that they do not care anything for the objects, except in so far as these inflow into the general idea: as with him who is glad at heart, all things which he hears and sees appear to him as if glad and smiling . . . Such was the case with the man of the Most Ancient Church—whatever he saw with the eyes was heavenly to him; and thus with him each and all things were as if alive . . .

—³. But when the Church declined . . . in the objects of the senses they no longer perceived what was heavenly . . . but what was worldly . . . and in the last posterity . . . they apprehended nothing else in objects than what was worldly, corporeal, and earthly. Thus was Heaven separated from man . . . 4580².

1122. Therefore to them the objects of the external senses . . . were nothing . . . and therefore, when they saw earthly objects, they thought nothing about them, but only about those things which they signified . . .

1361. Representatives are . . . all the objects of the senses . . .

1389. In the life of the body the objects of the senses inflow . . .

1409. The Most Ancient Church . . . regarded all earthly, mundane, and corporeal things which were ever the objects of their senses, as dead Things . . . When they saw or apprehended them by any sense, they did not think about them, but about the celestial and spiritual things (which they represented); and indeed they did not think from them, but by means of them; thus with them dead Things lived. 2722⁵.

1756². Thus intilled their mind and soul with delights . . . when they regarded the objects of the universe . . .

1806^e. That from the objects in the world he may reflect constantly upon those which are in the other life.

1807⁴. They who are in Divine ideas never stop in the objects of the external sight; but from them and in them constantly see internal things.

1866. The letter serves as an object for heavenly ideas. 2275. 2953².

1881. The objects which Spirits sensate are adapted to the excellence of their senses . . .

1909². The inflowing life is not applied to any other object than the end . . . All other objects are only derivations thence . . .

1953². The first ideas which are received from the objects of sight are material . . . but there is a more interior sight which views those objects, and thus thinks.

1954. Unless (the interior sight) continually inflowed into the external sight . . . this could never . . . discern any object . . .

2045³. Like an object which continually turns the inflowing rays of light into ugly . . . colours.

2953². For there are ideas of man's thought which are the objects of the spiritual thoughts with the Angels; and indeed principally those ideas of thought with man which are from the Word; for the reason that all the Things there represent . . .

3001^e. (The sun's heat and light flowing into objects. 4214³. 4320. 5847. 6467. 6991. H. 569. W. 348. P. 160. 292, Des. T. 8. E. 349³.)

3223². Spiritual light inflows into the light of the world . . . and makes man perceive sensuously the objects of Things.

[A.] 3336². When the Thing returns, if this is effected from the objects of the senses, or from the objects of thought . . . the affection also, with which the Thing had entered, is reproduced.

3686². The Most Ancients . . . by means of all the objects which they saw, perceived such things as are of the Lord's Kingdom. Refs. 5136².

3721². It appears before man that the objects of the world enter through the senses of his body . . . but this is an appearance and a fallacy . . .

4301³. When the eye sees objects, it perceives delight thence according to . . .

—⁴. (Thus) the objects of the external sight are implanted according to the delight of the affections, and they are in this delight; for when a like delight recurs, such objects also recur; and, in like manner, when like objects recur, so does such a delight . . . The objects of the understanding . . . are spiritual, and are called truths . . .

4390^o. The human mind, in the universal, has no other objects than the things which are of truth and good . . .

4406. The things which man perceives are called the objects of the intellectual sight.

4408. For the objects of the world, all of which derive something from the light of the sun, enter through the eye, and store themselves up in the memory; and this evidently, under a like visual shape; for the things which are thence reproduced are seen within . . . When these objects appear still more interiorly they present thought . . .

4526. The reason man can acquire intelligence through the things which appear to him in the light of the world, is that a higher light . . . inflows into the objects which are from the light of the world, and causes them to appear representatively and correspondently . . .

4528. In each object there, there is something of intelligence and wisdom which shines forth . . .

4618². Like the sight of the eye, which perishes, unless it has objects outside of itself which it may see; and so also the rest of the senses; in like manner if the objects are altogether contrary; for these induce death. . . . It is the like with the Rational . . . for the scientifics in the Natural are the objects of the sight of the Rational; and if these objects are contrary to the light . . . the sight of the Rational also perishes . . . (Then) the Rational lives in the Natural; for it sees its objects in the Natural; as the sight of the eye does in the objects of the world.

6032². The objects which the intellectual mind sees are spiritual; namely, scientifics and truths; but when the light of Heaven does not illuminate these things, the intellectual mind . . . is in darkness . . .

6084². With scientifics before the internal sight (what is best is inmost, being directly under the eye). The objects of this sight are no other than scientifics and truths. It is the delight and good in the objects which direct the sight thither. Ex.

6319². Before the Spirits who are with man, there do not appear objects such as the man sees . . .

6601². With the extension of the thought from the objects which are the Things being thought of, the case is the same as with the objects of sight, from which a sphere of rays diffuses itself to a great distance . . . according to the sparkling and flaming in the object . . . In like manner the internal sight . . . in relation to its objects. The objects of this sight are not material, like the objects in the world; but are spiritual; and therefore they diffuse themselves to such things as are in the Spiritual World . . .

7847. Thus the things which in the natural world are dead objects, when they pass into the Spiritual World, become living objects . . .

8705⁴. All conjunction requires an object; and the conjunction is effected according to the quality of the object . . .

9215². The Sensuous receives the objects of the world, and is thus inservient to interior things.

9278⁴. Hence he is in such shade that he cannot apprehend otherwise than that . . . the objects (of the eye and ear) produce thoughts . . .

9553. The scientifics of truth precede . . . for they are inservient to the Rational for objects; and thus for media of being wise. 9688. 9723. —.

10237³. Spiritual ideas cannot be comprehended in the Natural; for they are intellectual ideas which are without objects such as are in the material world . . .

10712. When they (saw) the objects of this Earth through my eyes, (the Spirits of the Fourth Earth) attended very little to them; for the reason that it is familiar to them to think remotely from the nearest objects; and thus not to see them except in shade . . .

10768. (The Angels of the Fifth Earth), when . . . they are presented as men, see with their eyes the objects there just as the inhabitants do . . .

H. 130. The objects of spiritual light are truths. R.911. 920.

266². Hence the objects (in Heaven) are forms representative of such things as are of wisdom.

270³. They who reason see scarcely anything beyond the object of the Thing about which they are reasoning, or go beyond the subject . . .

—⁵. The (celestial) Angels . . . see Divine and heavenly things in each object; and wonderful things in a series of many . . . and this with all variety according to the face of the objects . . . 489³.

338. The ideas of infants when they see objects; they are as if each object were alive . . .

W. 70. All who die enter into spiritual light, in which the objects of thought are truths; and the objects of sight are like those which are in the natural world; but are correspondent to their thoughts. The objects of their thought, which . . . are truths, derive nothing whatever from space and time; but the objects of their sight do indeed appear as if in space and time, but still they do not think from these.

322. The [objects] of the Spiritual World appear and come forth around an Angel, and around the angelic Societies, as if they were produced or created from them; they remain around them, and do not recede . . . When the Angel goes away, or when the Society passes to another [place], they no longer appear. Des. and Ex.

M. 12². (The beautiful objects in Heaven are all made by the Lord, and are only accessory to the joys of the Angels.)

133. The second subject of discussion.

329². There are innumerable things within . . . every object which appears before you as one, simple, and least, as well in your actions as in your affections and thoughts. . . Every grain of your thought . . . is divisible ad infinitum . . .

477³. Such as is the mind, so does a man in the Spiritual World see objects. Examp.

I. 1. It appears as if the objects of sight, which affect the eyes, inflow into the thought, and produce it. Ex. 19².

T. 43². The reason . . . is in the subjects and objects themselves . . .

78². The Angels said . . . All the [objects] which are presented to our eyes are correspondences . . . The things in our houses . . . constantly remain there; but to the eyes of those who wander from one Society to another, such things are changed according to the co-sociation. 66.

420. The spiritual mind looks principally into the Spiritual World, and for objects has those things which are there . . . But the natural mind looks principally into the natural world, and for objects has those things which are there . . .

D. 2329. It may come into doubt, whence are the objects of the thoughts; for it is known that no thought can come forth unless an object is given; according to the rule that objects must move the sense. Wherefore it is replied that [it is] the Lord, who loves the preservation of all and each . . . Thence comes every object, which from its origin is Divine and most holy; but, when it falls into forms, or formed substances, which are perverted, then thoughts come forth according to the form and nature of each . . .

2751. Ultimates are in the natural mind . . . which is formed from the senses of the body; whence is the memory of objects, which are material ideas . . .

2784. That all the objects of the eye, even if there are thousands, and most diverse ones, are still reduced by the Lord into a series, and into a certain continuous Thing. Ex.

— The objects of the eye, in the streets, are reduced by the Lord into a continuous series of Things, before good Spirits and Angels. The objects were very diverse, and very numerous; and I was told that they saw nothing of them; but that still a certain meaning continually came up thence to them; and in fact through the way which the representatives of the world have to spiritual Things. . . I was told that there can be no object which has not something which can be applied by the Lord to the matter in hand; and in fact by the removal of the things in the object, or in a number of objects, which represent something else . . . It is of the Lord alone thus to apply Things; as, for example, good can be represented by everything which is fat, sweet, delightful, which is about the objects, in part, in special, or in general; nay, delightful and good things can also be drawn out from those which are sad and evil.

2942. Spirits know whom they can use as objects (that is, Subjects).

[D.] 3274. When they go to the ninth use, they then know the objects . . . or the proximate use removed from the object—for they now want to care nothing for the object, but only for the use of the object—thus they know this use obscurely . . .

3332. It was shown a Spirit that he could not speak otherwise than [according] as an object was presented to him through my thought. . . I fixed my look on a fly, and then he could not speak otherwise than about the fly . . .

3592. There are besides indefinite contrary objects, which induce Falsities; for almost everything which the eye sees is a contradictory object . . .

3624. There are some objects of thoughts which create much trouble while the man is held in them . . . (Examps. my garden, money matters, the things to be written, how they would be received by men, other garments which are to be obtained, etc.) When I was kept long in this reflection, the Spirits at once injected inconvenient, troublesome, evil things, with the confirmatory things and cupidities; and I have observed, that when I have not been in thought about such things for months and years, I have never cared anything . . . These are the reflections of thought, and he who is detained in them is infested the more by evil Spirits the longer he is detained.

3635. That the objects of sight and hearing are the variations of the vessels. Ex.

— As it appears that the objects of sight and hearing inflow into the thoughts . . . it was given me to perceive that the objects of sight, and consequently of hearing, effect nothing else than that they dispose variously the interior vessels, which are of the lower thought; and such as are the vessels, so are received the influent ideas of the Spirits; for the vessels receive the influx according to their forms, consequently as they are disposed by the objects; nay, sometimes so that the ideas are turned into what is contrary . . .

3640. The ideas (of the evil who are in the interior sphere) are tied to various objects; thus they are phantasies which cannot be described . . .

3667. But they objected that the objects are various, now this and now that, which at once move the thought. But to this it was given to reply, that such things are contingent, consequently of the Providence of the Lord, which can never be penetrated.

3668. That objects are only vessels, and that the eyes are directed to see these objects more intensely, and others more indifferently, while many are not seen; thus that they are vessels, is evident from (the fact that) the Lord, from various and multiplex objects, (forms) before the Angels a delicious, and in the highest degree connected, form of Things. 3670.

4000. Spirits objected . . . that ideas arise from the objects of sight, and not the objects of sight from ideas. Ex.

4627⁸. As the sight of the eye sees objects which are outside itself . . . not within itself . . .

5971^e. For good must have such objects . . .

E. 831⁴. For truths in the Heavens are spiritual objects, which appear more clearly before the Angels there, than natural objects before men in the world.

889⁴. As the eye receives the quality of its sight from the objects in the natural world according to the determinations of the eye, so does the understanding receive the quality of its thought from truths, which are its objects, in the Spiritual World also according to its determinations . . .

895². All Angels and good Spirits see the truths of Heaven as the eye of the body sees the objects of the world; for the objects of Heaven are truths . . .

926. [The objects] which appear in Heaven in general appear exactly like those which come forth in our material world from its three kingdoms; and they appear before the eyes of the Angels exactly as do such things . . . before the eyes of men in the world. There appear there gold, silver, copper, tin, lead, precious stones and those not precious, soil, lands, mountains, hills, valleys, waters, fountains, and all other things which are of the mineral kingdom. There appear paradises, gardens, forests, fruit-bearing trees of every kind, lawns, harvests, fields full of flowers, herbs, and grass; and also the products of them, as oils, wines, strong drinks, and all other things which are of the vegetable kingdom. There appear animals of the land, birds of the heaven, fishes of the sea, reptiles, and these of every kind, and so like those which are on our Earth that they cannot be distinguished from them. But the difference is, that those things which appear in Heaven are from a spiritual origin; whereas those things which appear in our world are from a material origin . . . De Verbo 3¹¹.

De Verbo 3⁶. The objects of the thoughts of the Angels of the Middle Heaven are, like the thoughts themselves, spiritual; and therefore they think about them spiritually and not naturally . . .

—¹¹. There is a likeness of state natural, spiritual, and celestial, in such things as are objects of sight, taste, smell, and hearing, and also of the sense of touch . . .

D. Wis. vii. 5². The spiritual man or spirit has not these things for subjects, but only for objects. The reason is that in the Spiritual World there are objects exactly like those which are in the natural world. (Enum. at full length.) Nevertheless all these things are appearances . . . for they are created in a moment by the Lord, and are also dissipated in a moment; being permanent and non-permanent according to the constancy or inconstancy of the Spirits and Angels in those things of which they are the appearances; which is the reason why these things are only the objects of their thoughts and affections; and why the subjects are those things from which they appear. Examps.

ix². The Divine love has for an object . . . The Divine wisdom has for an object . . .

Conv. 9. Natural objects are felt in the organs of the body as if they were in them; in like manner are spiritual objects as if in the mind, although they are not there.

Objection. Objectio.

Object, To. Objicere.

A. 1886, Pref.². A thousand objections would inflow, which would strengthen his mind in the negative.

5821. Objection. Sig.

6469^e. There inflowed from Heaven that no attention is to be paid to thousands of objections and reasonings from fallacies.

D. 1955². Myriads of objections against these things can be presented, which cannot be shaken off from the human mind; and if the mind inheres long in the objections, it is obscured, wavers, at last denies . . . for there is no universal Truth in which there are not myriads of myriads of Truths, and as many objections, because . . . to every Truth there is its own contrary, which a mind seeing in inverted order favours; and thus is blinded.

2987. Spirits . . . infused against these things objections, or doubts, with such persuasion that . . .

3582^e. Therefore, thousands of objections can be formed; as many indeed as the objects; and all such as thus destroy Truth, and darken the light of truth.

3612. When it was given me by the Lord not to care for such objections nor to admit them, I then felt a pain in the nerves of the left neck . . . the cause being that the reasoners did not want to be present, but began to recede.

3614. Those who do not admit objections against the Knowledges of faith are secure from evil Spirits.—The Spirits complained that they could no longer be present, because, remaining in the Knowledges of faith, it was not permitted to admit objections; saying, that so they have nothing by which to lead them, (or) by which to seduce them; for by such things they very greatly seduce men: by objecting only one thing—then however many confirming truths there may be, they are nothing; for man is so carried away by his cupidities, which produce phantasies; thus freely admits objections, one of which is then stronger with him than a thousand confirming things. Therefore, in order that a man be true, or in true faith, he ought to be in the opposite, so that one Truth should prevail over thousands and myriads of objections. Thus do evil spirits flee, because they cannot live in such a sphere.

[D] 3667. The Spirits objected that . . . 4000.

3669. It was said to the Spirits, that those who form such objections for themselves that they do not believe unless they know each and all things, desire and intend no otherwise than to destroy ; thus that it goes forth from their evil and deceitful nature . . . For this is consequent—when they thus object such things—that they want to destroy Truths . . . If they were different, they then would desire only to confirm the Truths of the Lord.

Oblation. Oblatio.

See OFFER.

A. 349^o. Oblations and the first-fruits of the gifts in the holy things (Ezek.xx.40) in like manner are works sanctified by charity from the Lord.

9223³. For the first-fruits were oblations and gifts, which were thanksgivings.

E. 661². Occurs.

Obligation. Debitum.

A. 4730³. The fundamental of charity is to act rightly and justly in every Thing which is of any duty or office . . .

4955². Hence they knew in what obligation they were towards one and towards another.

4988⁴. Those who act good from the other origin are carried along from an internal obligation . . .

6389². They thus regard the Lord's mercy as a debt.

7298². No one ought to be persuaded concerning truth in a moment.

8121. Charity towards the neighbour is . . . to do duty in every office . . .

T. 317. The Seventh Precept extends itself . . . to fraudulent practices in . . . discharging debts.

423². They do not think of merit, but of duty.

425^o. They call such things as (these) benefactions, as also obligations, although they are of charity.

426^o. They then regard those former works . . . no otherwise than as duties.

429. That there are the obligations of charity ; some public, some domestic, and some private. Gen.art.

— The benefactions of charity, and the obligations of charity, are distinct from each other ; as [are] those which are done from free will, and those which are done from necessity : but still by the obligations of charity are not here meant the obligations of functions in a kingdom and commonwealth : as of a minister that he should minister ; of a judge that he should judge ; and so on : but there are meant the obligations of each one in whatever function he is ; and therefore they are from a different origin, and flow forth from a different will ; and are therefore done from charity by those who are in charity ; and, on the other hand, from no charity by those who are in none.

430. The public obligations of charity are especially tributes and taxes, which are not to be commingled with the obligations of functions. Those who are spiritual pay these with one heart, and those who are natural with another. The spiritual pay them from good will, because they are collected for the preservation of their country, and for its protection and that of the Church ; and for the administration by the officials and governors, to whom salaries and stipends are to be paid from the public treasury ; and therefore they to whom their country, and also the Church, are the neighbour, discharge them from a spontaneous and favourable will, and repute it as an iniquity to cheat and frustrate ; whereas they to whom country and Church are not the neighbour, discharge them with a reluctant and repugnant will, and at every opportunity they defraud and secretly take away : for with these their own house and their own flesh are the neighbour.

431. The domestic obligations of charity are those of a husband towards a wife, and of a wife towards a husband ; also of a father and mother towards the children, and of the children towards the father and mother ; and likewise those of a master and mistress towards the male and female servants, and of the latter towards the former. These obligations, because they are of the education and administration in the house, are so many, that if they were to be enumerated, they would fill a volume. Every man is carried along in these obligations from a different love from what he is in the obligations of his function : of a husband towards a wife, and of a wife towards a husband, from conjugal love and according to it ; of a father and mother towards the children, from the love implanted in everyone, which is called storgé ; and of children towards the parents from a different love and according to it, which conjoins itself closely with obedience from obligation. But the obligations of a master and mistress towards the male and female servants partake of the love of reigning ; and this from the state of mind of each one. But conjugal love, and love towards the children, with their obligations and exercises of obligations, do not produce love towards the neighbour, as do the exercises of obligations in functions. Ex.

—³. As to what in special concerns the obligations of parents towards the children—the obligations are inwardly different with those who are in charity from what they are with those who are not in charity ; but outwardly they appear alike. Ex.

432. The private obligations of charity are also many ; as the payment of wages to workmen, the payment of interest, the discharging of stipulated things, the keeping of securities, and other like things ; some of which are obligations by the public law, some from civil law, and some from moral law. These also are shown by those who are in charity with a different mind from that with those who are not in charity. Ex.

441². Like these are priests who perform the duties of their ministry solely for the sake of the emoluments . . .

539. There are two duties which are incumbent on man to do after [self] exploration . . .

D. 3197. The persuasion that the conjugal debt is null . . .

3307. A woman who did not know what the conjugal debt is : that only one wife and one husband make a marriage.

3384. The Jewish Church esteemed the conjugal debt as nothing ; so that, as to the debt, it was loosed . . . The conjugal debt was such, that so long as what is venereal and its adjoined delights lasted, there was as it were a consort, or wife ; but when these did not last, the conjugal debt was loosed . . . Such women are punished most grievously . . . in order that they may be brought back to the conjugal debt.

3937. The bonds of conscience . . . are the same as debts ; as the conjugal debt . . .

6075. He who does not place merit therein, does it on account of duty ; because it belongs to his office : in this lies the fear of God . . . So an operative . . . does his labour from the fact that it is of his religion, and thence that it is of his duty . . .

6105. Then from this as the essential proceed all other things which are called the signs, benefactions, and obligations of charity . . . But without this essence . . .

E. 812². 'All who take the sword ought to perish by the sword' (Matt.xxvi.52).

C. 187. That the obligations of charity are all things which a man ought to do besides those above mentioned. Gen.art.

— . The obligations of charity are tributes for various necessities and for various uses in the commonwealth ; customs duties ; the expenses and outlay for the various necessities and uses of the house . . . There are some things which become obligations by solemn promise . . . also civil ones, which are of subordination, obedience, honour, and social intercourse ; which are to be called obligations because a man ought to do them. . . Various things which the laws of the kingdom impose, are called obligations of charity because charity does them from obligation, and not from good pleasure . . . The sincerity and benignity of charity are in every obligation inwardly with those who are in charity . . .

188. The same obligations with those who are not in charity appear alike in externals . . .

526. A Church in which the perception of truth and good was so general and obscure . . .

949. Therefore it is called the dark chamber. Des.

1042². The existence of colour requires something both obscure and snowy . . .

1043. 'The cloud' = the obscure light in which is the spiritual man . . . The obscurity itself . . . through which the sun's rays shine, is what is turned into colours; thus such as is the obscurity . . . such is the colour . . . The obscurity with the spiritual man . . . is falsity, which is the same as his intellectual proprium . . .

1047. The voluntary proprium of man . . . continually pours into the intellectual part what is obscure or false . . .

—². Falsity beclouds truth, just as an obscure cloud does the light of the sun.

1059². The cloud of Christians . . . is so obscure as to be darkness.

1188². In the obscurity of an understanding which is not illustrated . . .

1265. So that I was very much in obscurity.

1401. The Lord . . . progressed from an obscure state to one more lucid. 'Haran' = the first state, which was obscure.

1528. That obscure lumen is (then) turned into darkness.

1533. (What is immaterial supposed to be obscure.)

1757. The ideas (of Spirits) are not so obscure as those of man . . .

1838³. When the Church is in darkness, the Lord is obscured before them, insomuch that He does not appear . . . although the Lord is never obscured, but the man . . . but still the obscuration is predicated of the Lord.

1904⁵. For man is in what is most obscure.

1967. If the object is in obscurity (Spirits can cause an illusory vision).

2367. In an obscure general [perception]. Sig. and Ex.

—'. The perception of good and truth is only in obscurity with man, even a regenerate man; and still more so with him who is in external worship . . . The affections (also) when man is in corporeal things . . . are most general, consequently most obscure, however the man may think that it is not so. Ex. 2380².

2618^e. By a description from such things, they are more obscured.

2708. That . . . the state of the spiritual Church, relatively to that of the Celestial Church, is obscure. Sig. and Ex.

— . This is the reason why with the spiritual there is what is relatively obscure. Refs. 2713.

2715. The arcana that the good of the spiritual man is relatively obscure; and that this obscurity is illuminated by the Lord's Divine Human. Ex. 2718. —⁷.

2718⁷. But still the spiritual can come from obscurity into light, if they are only willing to be in the affirmative . . .

2719². The man of the Spiritual Church is in obscurity relatively; and doctrine is therefore to be clothed with such appearances as are of human thought and affection. Sig.

2722⁶. The Ancient Church . . . was relatively in obscurity.

2902. That the first state (of this New Church) was obscure. Tr.

2935. 'The cave of Machpelah' = what is obscure of faith. Ex.

— . 'A cave' = what is obscure, because it is a dark place; 'a cave of a mountain' = what is obscure of good; 'a cave of the field of Machpelah' = what is obscure of truth . . .

—². Those who are being regenerated, and are becoming spiritual, are in the greatest obscurity as to truth . . . So long as good is in obscurity with them, so long is truth . . . They know only very obscurely that the Lord is good itself, etc. etc. . . Hence it is evident how greatly the spiritual are in obscurity; and still more so before regeneration . . .

2945. That first state . . . that they were in obscurity of faith. Sig. 2946.

3197. As those things with man which are . . . of the natural mind, are obscure relatively to those which are . . . in the rational mind, therefore by 'evening' are signified those things which are relatively in obscurity . . .

3221. Negatives of truth are there represented by dark and descending clouds.

3660³. For then such (spiritual) things appear to man both obscure and undelightful.

3693. Life in what is obscure. Sig. and Ex.

— . By what is obscure is here meant what is obscure of intelligence as to truth, and what is obscure of wisdom as to good . . .

—². That 'sunset' = . . . also what is obscure as to those things which are of good and truth. III.

—⁷. After (good and angelic Spirits) have been in this obscure state . . . they return into their former state. Sig.

3708⁹. The things which were distant from Zion and Jerusalem represented what is obscure as to good and truth: all this which is in obscurity is called 'the land of the north,' and also 'the sides of the earth.'

—¹⁰. As, moreover, all the good which inflows with light from the Lord is terminated in the obscurity of man, the north is also called 'the assembly.'

—²². See NORTH, here.

3833. A state as yet obscure. Sig. and Ex.

— . The state of initiation which precedes conjunction is obscure relatively to the state of conjunction; for when man is being initiated into truth and thence into good, all which he then learns is obscure to him; but when good is being conjoined with him, and he thence looks at truth, it becomes clear to him . . .

—^e. Hence it can be known in what obscurity are those who are such . . .

3909^e. This zeal . . . in a still more interior form, is only an obscure something which intercepts heavenly delight . . .

3949. The good of truth in a state of good, but in what is obscure, such as belongs to the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

3957². For when man is in the body, corporeal and worldly things occupy his thoughts, which induce what is obscure . . .

4060². 'The sun shall be darkened . . .' (Matt. xxiv. 29) = that love to the Lord . . . will not appear . . .

—². Those who are in . . . the love of self and of the world . . . induce on themselves this obscuration.

4073^e. Man can only perceive obscurely . . .

4096⁶. Because good . . . inflows into man's obscurity which he has from worldly and corporeal things.

4125. 'In a dream by night' = the obscure perception of that good when left to itself.

4245. Therefore the things here said . . . cannot but be obscure . . .

4261. In this obscure state. Sig.

— . 'To pass the night,' and also 'the night,' = an obscure state.

4301². Because to them truth is in obscurity; for they call that truth which they have learned from doctrinal things . . .

4329. For I was in the opinion that what is general (must) be obscure. Ex.

4402³. These things are obscure to those who are in the light of the world . . .

4783. As they are generals, they are also relatively obscure . . .

4883. That the obscurity was dissipated. Sig.

— . 'To cover herself with a veil' = to obscure truth.

5036². This combat . . . man perceives so obscurely that . . . For man, especially he who believes nothing concerning influx, is in a state altogether obscure . . .

5078¹. When the Internal acts into the External, as in the world, the sensation is dulled and obscured.

5092. The event which to them was in obscurity. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'Night' = a state of shade induced by falsity from evil; thus also what is obscure of the mind.

— . The obscurity which is of night in the world is natural obscurity; but the obscurity which is of night in the other life is spiritual obscurity . . .

—². Moreover, spiritual obscurity is threefold; one which is from the falsity of evil; a second which is from ignorance of the truth; a third which is that of exterior things relatively to interior ones . . . Still, all these kinds come forth from the fact that the light of Heaven . . . is not received . . .

[A.] 5141. Apperception from the Sensuous is relatively obscure.

5210. An obscure state. Sig.

— . 'To sleep' = an obscure state. Ex.

5219. (A general state of illustration) in that obscurity. Sig.

— . 'A dream' = an obscure state.

— . It is called obscurity, because truths are exterminated; for where there are no truths, there is obscurity . . .

—². What is here meant by obscurity (is) the state of the Natural when good scientifics have been exterminated by scientifics of no use. Such an obscurity is what can be illustrated generally; whereas an obscurity from falsities cannot be illustrated at all . . . 5224, Ex.

6000. Obscure revelation. Sig. and Ex.

— . Obscure, in the spiritual sense, is that truth does not appear.

— . Those who are in falsity from evil are in the obscurity of night.

—². That 'night' = what is obscure. Ill.

6068. The things at the sides appear obscurely.

6256. His obscure perception. Sig. and Ex.

6384². Hence (these) more than all others in the Spiritual Church, are in obscurity.

6390. 'To lie down' = obscure life.

6405. (Such) have the understanding obscured . . .

6408. Man, while he lives in the body, feels . . . very obscurely the things which come forth in his spirit . . . — .

6443. Their possession in the Lord's Kingdom while they are as yet in obscurity. Sig. and Ex.

—². For those who are being elevated into Heaven are first in obscurity; for they cannot come to clearness until they have been in Heaven, and have been instructed . . . for there is need of a space of time, in order that the obscurity induced by falsities may be dissipated.

6451². Hence it is, that life in exteriors is obscure relatively to life in interiors; for in exteriors there is a general life . . .

6453. '(Bury me . . .) at the cave' = where is what is obscure.

— . In the exterior Natural, where are the truths and goods which are represented by the sons of Israel, there is what is obscure, because what is general is there.

6454. Those with whom . . . the obscurity of faith can be made clear. Sig. The case is this: whatever is in the Natural, and still more in the exterior Natural, is obscure relatively to those things which are in the interior Natural, and still more relatively to those things which are in the Rational; but this obscurity is made clear in two ways; firstly, if exterior things are reduced to compliance with interior ones . . . secondly, if the man can be elevated from exterior to interior things, and thus can see exterior things from interior ones; the latter exists with those who are in the Internal of the Church; but the former with those who are in its External.

6500. For the man of the Spiritual Church is relatively in obscurity, and reasons concerning truths as to whether they are truths, or confirms those things which are called doctrine, and this without a perception as to whether what he confirms is true or not; and, when he has confirmed it with himself, he quite believes that it is true, although it may be false . . . 6945².

6548. 'The cave of the field of Machpelah' = faith in obscurity . . . thus the beginning of regeneration; for then faith is in obscurity.

6686. For the Natural is relatively in obscurity: that it is in obscurity [is from the fact that it is] in the light of the world, and thence at the same time in worldly things; and when the light of Heaven inflows into these, the apperception becomes obscure.

7093. That from a glad mind they may worship the Lord in obscurity of faith in which they are. Sig. and Ex.

— . That those who are of the Spiritual Church are relatively in the obscurity of faith. Refs.

7270³. The ultimates which are with man, as also in nature, are . . . relatively general, and thence obscure. . . The Divine truth . . . in the way . . . becomes more general; thus more gross and obscure . . .

7298. They know how to induce fallacies . . . and at the same time to obscure truths themselves.

7313. Worship in what is obscure. Sig. and Ex.

— . Those of the Spiritual Church are . . . in obscurity when they are emerging from a state of infestations and temptations. Ex. . . But this obscurity is then illustrated by degrees.

7645. The obscuration of the whole mind thence. Sig. and Ex.

7680. Everything of perception, both obscure and not obscure. Sig. and Ex.

7801. One kind (of the Spirits of Jupiter) appear dark, almost black.

8106. That when there is a state of illustration it is tempered by what is obscure of truth. Sig. and Ex.

—². 'A cloud' = what is obscure of truth; in special, the literal sense of the Word; for this sense, relatively to the internal sense, is what is obscure of truth.

8108. That when there is a state of obscurity it is tempered by illustration from good. Sig. and Ex.

8134. That obscurity has seized them. Sig.

8199. By 'night' is here meant that obscurity which follows immediately after temptations; for those who are delivered thence come first into what is obscure, before they come into what is clear; for the falsities and evils injected by the Hells inhere for some time, and are dissipated only successively.

8426². When it is evening, they are then in obscurity as to truths . . .

8512. The appearance of the Divine obscured. Sig. and Ex.

8625². For the man of the Spiritual Church is in obscurity as to the truth of faith; and acknowledges for truth because the Church has said so; not because he perceives truth.

8750². Hence the Angels are alternately in the good of love, in the truth of faith, and in obscurity as to both . . .

8781. 'Density' = what is obscure, such as is that of the thought of man from sensuous lumen alone . . .

8819. The appearing of celestial good in the greatest obscurity. Sig. and Ex.

— . By obscurity is meant the obscurity of faith, such as is that of those of the Spiritual Church relatively to those of the Celestial Church.

9430. The ultimate of the Word which is thus relatively obscure. Sig. and Ex.

9433. From the obscurity which was before. Sig. and Ex.

9648. Towards the exteriors of that Heaven, where truths are in obscurity. Sig. and Ex.

9653. Conjunction with Heaven where good is in obscurity. Sig. and Ex.

9685. Good in obscurity. Sig. and Ex.

9750. Where the good of truth is in obscurity. Sig. and Ex.

10582. The obscurity and falsity of faith. Sig. and Ex.

10685². When man is in temptations, he is in obscurity from the evil and from the falsities of evil which are assauling.

H. 1. 'The sun shall be darkened . . .' R.27².

68. An entire Society first appeared as one obscure thing.

150. The west = love and its good in obscure perception . . . The north = wisdom and intelligence in obscure light.

155. The Angels . . . are then in their obscurity and undelight.

—^e. 'Twilight' = the obscurity which precedes the morning.

159. A great obscure belt round the Sun, seen.

— . Afterwards the belt was seen to become more obscure—obscurere.

—^e. The quality of their state was represented by the obscure belt.

401². The obscure delight . . . which (they had) in the world . . . is then turned into the delight of Heaven . . .

P. 137. Compulsory worship is . . . obscure.

R. 423. 'The sun and the air were darkened . . .' (Rev.ix.2) = that the light of truth became thick darkness. E.541.

D. 1247^e. They love to be in obscurity . . .

1937^e. If these were adduced, they would come into discussion, and thus into obscurity and ambiguity.

1950. When they were present, all things . . . were so obscure and confused that . . .

1955. The truth is obscured (by controversy). 3493.

2373. Those who induce obscurities are such as in their life had been obscure in spiritual and celestial things . . . The obscurity is especially from this: that they have been in the love of self, and have set themselves before others.

3473. What appears clear to man is obscure to good Spirits; and conversely. Ex.

—^e. What is obscure to Spirits is manifest to the Angels.

3493^e. Negation is driven away; then doubt; then obscurity . . .

5317. Those who had been in the dark ages . . . 5318.

5452. The Russian nation have obscurity above all others.

E. 304²³. 'The land is darkened' (Is.ix.19) = the things of the Church in thick darkness, or in falsities.

386². The perversion of the Church by falsity, is meant by, 'the land is darkened in the wrath of Jehovah Zebaoth' (id.).

476. The garments of those who are in falsities . . . appear dark, and also spotted.

677³. The signs of the presence of such are obscuratio of the understanding, etc.

865. They began to be completely darkened as to the sight, and at the same time as to the understanding.

4352. He supposed that no one had observed; but all could observe the hypocrisy and deceit; which is given to almost every man . . .

4763. (Charles xii.) thought that no one in the world could observe; nor did he want it to be observed . . .

E. 15. 'To observe,' and 'to keep,' = to perceive, will, and do according to it.

190. 'To observe' = attention, such as is with those who are in the spiritual affection of truth; for when these read the Word, they do not see it from the doctrine of the Church where they were born . . . for they want to be illustrated, and to see truths within themselves, and not from others . . .

209. 'To observe My Word' = to make of the life truths from the Word; for 'to observe' truths or precepts = not only to know and appreciate them; but also to will and do, or keep them . . .

A. 1983⁴. (Sirens) study nothing more than to destroy the conscience; and, when this is destroyed, they possess the interiors of men, and even obsess them, although the man is ignorant of this. At this day there are not external obsessions, as formerly, but internal ones, by such. They who have no conscience are thus obsessed: the interiors of their thoughts are insane . . . but these are concealed . . . This may also be known to them, if they attend to their thoughts.

2477². If Spirits were permitted to use the exterior memory . . . the man would be obsessed. The obsessions of former times were nothing else.

2752. Those who have been addicted to adulteries, want, more than others, to obsess man; and thus through them to return into the world; but they are kept back in Hell . . . De Conj. 124.

4227². These Spirits (who are in the love of commanding) obsess the thoughts and will of the men who are like them . . . so that, without the Lord's mercy, they cannot possibly know that such Spirits are present . . . These Spirits correspond to the vitiated things of the . . . animal spirit . . .

4793. When (these wandering Spirits) have entered into the taste with man, they possess his interiors; namely, the life of his thoughts and affections . . . Very many at this day are possessed by these Spirits; for there are at this day interior obsessions; but not, as formerly, exterior ones. Interior obsessions are effected by such Spirits; and their quality may be evident if attention is paid to the thoughts and affections, especially to the interior intentions which they are afraid to manifest; and which are so insane with some, that unless they were restrained by external bonds . . . they would rush into murders and rapine more than the obsessed . . .

—⁴. These pernicious Spirits try especially to loosen all internal bonds . . . when these have been loosened the man is obsessed by such. When they cannot thus introduce themselves into the interiors . . . they try [to do so] by magical arts . . . by which they pervert the scientifics with man, and only apply those which favour filthy cupidities. Such obsessions cannot be avoided, unless the man is in the affection of good, and thence in faith in the Lord. . . Such Spirits correspond to . . . the itch.

5862². Thus (the Spirits who are with man) do not speak by the man's tongue: this would be obsession . . .

5991^e. Hence he was interiorly obsessed . . .

6212⁴. How the prophets . . . were possessed: The Spirits occupied their body, so that scarcely anything was left, except that they knew that they existed. There were certain Spirits for this use who did not want to obsess men, but only to enter into the corporeal affections of the man; and, when they entered into these, they entered into all things of the body. The Spirits who were usually with me said that I was absent from them while I remained in that state. The Spirits who possessed my body, as formerly those of the prophets . . . said that at the time they had known no otherwise than that they had life as in the body . . .

6829. When man is in temptation, he is obsessed around by falsities and evils, which impede the influx of light from the Divine . . . Darkness in the other life is nothing else than obsession by falsities . . .

8321. They were cast into Hell, where, obsessed by their own evils and falsities, they might be kept bound to eternity.

H. 257^e. There are Spirits who are called natural and corporeal. When these come to man they do not conjoin themselves with his thought as do other Spirits; but enter into his body, and take possession of all his senses, and speak through his mouth, and act through his members, knowing then no otherwise than that all things of the man are theirs. These are the Spirits who obsess man; but these have been cast by the Lord into Hell, and thus completely removed; whence there are no such obsessions at this day.

(x). Refs. to passages on the subject of obsession.

561. The interiors of the thoughts and affections of those who love themselves above all things are turned to self and the world . . . Hence it is that they are obsessed with evils of every kind, and that the Divine cannot inflow . . .

T. 133. The ways to Heaven . . . have been beset with thieves and robbers.

D. 1177. I was obsessed within the head, about the region of the interior palate . . .

—^e. When a man is thus obsessed, he cannot act and speak otherwise than according to the state and pleasure of him [who obsesses].

2272. If they had lived at this day . . . they would have been reputed obsessed; as Saul, who lay naked . . . From which it may be concluded that they were completely obsessed by Spirits, who occupied their body . . .

2273. How it was with the prophets . . . was shown me; for through a whole night . . . I was obsessed by Spirits, who so occupied my body . . . that I scarcely knew . . . that it was my body . . . 2277.

2278. Those who were obsessed in the Lord's time by demons were no otherwise [obsessed than the prophets], except that the [demons] could inflict harm upon the man . . .

2279. (Thus) such obsessions of Spirits at this day cannot act in like manner in the man who is in faith . . . for those who are in faith in the Lord cannot be possessed by Spirits as to their faculty of thinking and acting. 2282.

2659. Concerning the obsessed. Ex.

— . When Spirits come into a man so that they are quite aware that they are there, and thus rule the body and members of the man, then this is called obsessing the man; for there is given to no Spirit the opportunity so to rule the body as [they do] with me, unless he were obsessed. For there are those to whom is allotted the office of ruling the body, who know nothing about it, because their endeavour only there comes into act. But with the obsessed, not only the endeavour, but also the act, is present. And therefore there are Spirits, not allotted to this office, who when they thus obsess the body it is obsession; whereas when those who are allotted do so it is not obsession; because then all things take place in order, and the man is unaware of it. [But with] those who are obsessed it does not take place in order, but against order; and therefore [it is done] by evil Spirits. But it is wonderful that I have been obsessed, and yet nothing has ever harmed me; and I could enjoy the rational mind, as if they were not present.

2662. These (Spirits) had been obsessed with the cupidity of fighting . . .

2665. I was as it were obsessed by these (adulterers).

—^e. Adulterers and the cruel . . . desire nothing more than to obsess the bodies of men; and thus to live in the world through man . . . and therefore, unless the Lord guarded man, everyone would be obsessed by such; for there is an immense crowd of such.

2951². When things were written to which evil Spirits were averse, I was obsessed almost to horror.

3716. Sirens especially desire to obsess man; but his interiors through his exteriors . . . The adulterers and cruel desire to obsess the exteriors of man; but these the interiors . . . The corporeal memory . . . they want to appropriate to themselves; and thus to obsess; and to return into the world through another; which obsessions are interior. Whether at this day many men are thus obsessed, may hence, it seems, be concluded. Let a man examine himself as to whether he is in any internal bond . . . [or] if external bonds were removed, whether . . . he would perpetrate such (wicked and obscene things) . . . If a man is such, he is obsessed within by such Sirens; which obsession exists at this day; while with the Jews . . . there was external obsession. 3717. 3718.

3719. These are such as want to enter in and obsess the scientific and intellectual things of man . . .

3723. Hence their sphere in the other life is that of continually obsessing the interiors of man . . . They want to infuse themselves into the taste . . .

3781^e. For almost the whole World of Spirits is wicked, and enthusiastic, and sedulously desires to obsess man; but the Lord takes precautions . . .

4596^d. They obsess the interiors of man . . .

4601. (The Sirens) thus obsess (the Spirits). Des.

4668. There are many Spirits who want to return into the world; and they inquire where men are, and also to some extent perceive it; and, when they come thither, they burn with the cupidity of entering into man, and obsessing him; that is, to lead his speech and his actions. Such become those Spirits who have loved worldly and earthly things, and have felt horror of the life after death, because they would thus lose all the delight of life; but, of the Lord's Providence, such are remitted into places far from the Spirits who are with man . . .

5078. When the rocks and mountains have been obsessed by evil Spirits . . .

5857. (They) began to obsess my left ear.

5981. Concerning obsessors.—There are many Spirits who want to obsess others, and when they find other Spirits who want it, they infil them and as it were enter into their whole body, and thus completely obsess them: they act through them; they speak through them; and the obsessed (females) act as if they were insane. Examp.

—². There are many kinds of obsessors: those are pre-eminently obsessors who want to captivate the lower minds of others by the method of entering into their affections . . . They are all sensuous and corporeal, although they do not appear such in the external form. Moreover, all those are obsessors who are so sensuous that they can with difficulty be withdrawn from natural things.

5982. Obsessors are Known from the fact that they enter into each of the thoughts and affections, even the least, and constantly conjoin themselves with them . . . Those who are upright correspond to the nails.

—². That 'an odour'=what is grateful and accepted; and thus that an odour in the Jewish Church was a representative of what is grateful . . . is for the reason that the good of charity and the truth of faith from charity correspond to delightful and sweet odours. Ill.

1514. Spheres are also made sensible by odours, which Spirits smell much more exquisitely than men; for spheres correspond to odours. When the sphere of those who have indulged in simulation . . . is turned into an odour, it is the stench of vomit. When the sphere of those who have studied eloquence to the end that all things may be for self-admiration is turned into what is odoriferous, it is like the odour of burnt bread. With those who have indulged in mere pleasures, and have been in no charity and faith, the odour of their sphere is excrementitious. So is the odour of those who have passed their lives in adulteries, which is still more offensive. When the sphere of those who have lived in deep hatred and revenge, and in cruelty, is turned into odours, it is a cadaverous stench. The stench of mice is diffused around from those who have been sordidly avaricious; the stench of bed-bugs from those who persecute the innocent. These odours cannot be smelled by any man, except by one whose interior senses are opened . . . D.1044.

[A.] 1517. A vinous odour (comes) from those who compliment one another from friendship . . . so that there is truth in the compliments.

1519. When the spheres of charity and faith are perceived as odours, they are most delightful; the odours are pleasant, as of flowers, lilies, and spices of various kinds, with indefinite variety.

2177⁴. 'An odour'=what is well-pleasing, that is, grateful.

2826⁸. 'His smell in the fear of Jehovah' (Is.xi.3)=the Divine love of good.

3103. See NOSE, here. R.611⁸.

3575. 'He smelled the odour of his garments' (Gen.xxvii.27)=what is grateful from the truth of good which he perceived. 'Odour'=what is grateful; and 'to smell'=to perceive what is grateful.

3577. 'The odour of my son'=what is grateful from the truth of good: 'as the odour of a field' (id.)=as from good ground from which is truth. 'The odour of a field'=the perception of truth from good, like the exhalation from ripe corn in a field. . . That 'odour'=perception, is because the delights of good and the pleasantnesses of truth, which are perceived in the other life, manifest themselves there by corresponding odours. Hence, and from the correspondences, it is evident that odour is nothing else than what is perceptive, but natural . . .

4214³. As when the light of the sun . . . causes foul odours.

4311². Which Spirits perceive as manifestly as a man does with the smell . . .

4404. The sense of smell corresponds to the affection of perceiving.

4464². Then a sphere of odour . . .

— The spiritual sphere . . . is (then) as foul as the sphere of odour from corpses, ordure, etc.

4622. Concerning the correspondence of odour, and of the nostrils, with the Grand Man. Gen.art.

4626. These spheres . . . are turned into odours: the odour itself is manifestly smelled. The reason is . . . that odour corresponds to perception; and, as perception is as it were spiritual odour, odour also descends thence. Refs.

4628. The odours into which the spheres of perception are turned are smelled as manifestly as odours on earth; but they do not come to the sense of a man with whom the interiors are closed; for they inflow through an internal way . . . These odours are from a twofold origin; from the perception of good, and from the perception of evil. Those from the perception of good are most grateful, exhaling as it were from the fragrant flowers of a garden, and from other fragrances, with such pleasantness, and also variety, as are ineffable. In the spheres of such odours are those who are in Heaven. But the odours which are from the perception of evil are most ungrateful, being fetid and stinking like those which rise from stinking waters, from excrements, and from corpses, and smelling foully as from mice and bed-bugs. In the spheres of such stinks are those who are in Hell; and, wonderful to say, those who are in them do not smell the stench; nay, these stinks are delightful to them; and when they are in them they are in the sphere of their delights and deliciousnesses. But when the Hell is opened, and the exhalation thence reaches to good Spirits, they are seized with horror and anxiety, like those in the world who fall into the sphere of such stinks.

4629^e. The odour of this sphere was perceived like that of stinking water . . .

4631. A cadaverous odour breathed upon me . . . it was from the Hell where are foul robbers, and assassins, and those who have perpetrated criminal things from deep deceit. Sometimes also an excrementitious odour . . . it was from the Hell where are adulterers. And when an excrementitious odour was commingled with a cadaverous one . . . it was from a Hell where are adulterers who are also cruel.

5077³. The Sensual which is subject to . . . both the intellectual and voluntary parts together is the smell, and still more the taste.

5621. Therefore, when the perceptions of the Angels are turned into odours . . . they are smelled like the fragrances from spices and from flowers . . .

5943³. 'An odour of rest'=what is grateful from the good of love.

7038². The delight of smell is a less delight, because it is of service only for recreation, and thus also for health.

7161. 'Ye have made our odour to stink . . .' (Ex.v.21)=that . . . they have so great an aversion to our compliance. . . 'Odour'=the Perceptive of what is grateful; and as 'odour'=(this), it=the Perceptive of faith and charity; for these are grateful; and, as these are grateful, compliance is most grateful . . . Hence it is that by 'odour' is signified compliance.

—⁴. Sweet and grateful odours are foul to them.

9466. The sphere of the affections of good and truth is presented . . . before the nostrils of Angels and Spirits by odours . . .

9475. For sweet odours, according to their perfumes, =what is grateful; and whatever is grateful is (so) from good through truths.

9996. The ultimate of the perception of both (the Intellectual and the Voluntary) is smell.

10054. An odour of rest' (Ex.xxix.18)=a Perceptive of peace. An 'odour'=a Perceptive. 10085.

10177³. By the odour of the smoke was signified that which is grateful, consequently that which is heard and received by the Lord.

10199. That spices=things grateful, is from their odour; for odour=a Perceptive; hence a sweet odour=a grateful Perceptive; and a foul odour, an ungrateful Perceptive. . . Hence odour=the Perceptive of interior truth from the good of love. Ex. 10292.

—³. That odour in general corresponds to perception according to the quality of the Thing. Refs.

10254². That all odours=perception. Refs.

10298. A fragrant odour=grateful perception and reception.

10309. 'To make an odour' (Ex.xxx.38)=to please; and, as this is effected through the affections of good and truth, it is these which are signified by pleasing; for 'odour'=the Perceptive of what is grateful; thus that which pleases.

H. 287³. A state of peace is meant in the Word by that Jehovah is said to have 'smelled an odour of rest.' Ill. By 'an odour of rest,' in the celestial sense, is signified the perception of peace.

579. Genii smell out-odorant-affections as dogs do wild beasts in forests.

W. 363^e. It is the understanding which smells-odorat from its perception . . . and therefore to smell-odorare is said of perception.

420³. For the Angels . . . are delighted only with the odours which correspond to the love of their wisdom; but the Spirits in Hell are delighted only with the odours which correspond to a love opposite to wisdom: the latter odours are stinks, but the former odours are fragrances. That men in the world impregnate their blood with the like things according to correspondence with the affections of their love, follows . . .

P. 304. The opposites (of these delights) are felt when they come near, especially when they are turned into odours; for every delight corresponds to an odour; and in the Spiritual World can be converted into it; and then the general delight in Heaven is smelled as the odour of a garden, with a variety according to the fragrances therein from the flowers and fruits; and the general delight in Hell is smelled like stagnant water, into which different kinds of filth have been thrown, with a variety according to the evil-smelling things from the putrid and offensive things therein.

319^e. It is as if he smelled-oloret-it.

R. 278. The reason the incense is called 'the prayers of the saints,' is that fragrant odours correspond to the affections of good and truth. Ill.

394². For in Heaven are smelled the most fragrant odours corresponding to the perceptions of the Angels which originate from their love; and therefore it is (frequently) said in the Word, that 'Jehovah smelled an odour of rest.'

M. 272². If their delights were smelled-olorentur, as is the case in the Spiritual World.

430. In the Spiritual World every delight of love is presented . . . to the smell under various odours . . . The odours by which (the lascivious delights of scortatory love) are presented to the smell are stinks and stenches . . . But . . . the odours by which (the chaste delights of conjugal love) are presented to the smell are the redolences from fruits and the fragrances from flowers . . .

524⁴. Delights exhale from everyone, as odours-odorata-do from every plant on the earth . . . and as evil is there smelled as in its odour, it is this which accuses . . . and this is what is meant by imputation.

T. 108. His prayers in Heaven are like evil-smelling odours . . .

365⁴. The fragrant odour breathed forth from (large gardens and fields of flowers) consists of thousands and myriads of different things; and still they are smelled as one.

569. After death . . . the delights of man's love and the pleasant things of his thought are fully felt and perceived; and, wonderful to say, sometimes as odours. . . The odours into which are turned the delights of loves in Heaven are all smelled as such fragrances, sweet smells, pleasant breathings, and delicious perceptions, as are smelled in gardens, flower-beds, fields, and forests, in the mornings of the spring time. But the odours into which are turned the delights of the loves of those who are in Hell are smelled as the stinks, fetors, and stenches such as come from privies, carcases, and stagnant waters filled with filth and ordure; and, wonderful to say, the devils and satans there smell them as balsams, spices, and frankincense, which refresh their nostrils and hearts. In the natural world also it is given to beasts, birds, and worms, to be consociated according to odours; but not to men until they have laid aside their bodies . . .

—⁴. A devil . . . passed the Middle . . . and did not perceive any odour offensive to his life; the reason being that there were no Angels present. But as soon as there were, he was seized with convulsions . . . and he was carried away into a cavern, where by the evil-smelling odour of his delight he revived.

—⁵. I once saw a satan punished by his companions . . . because with his nostrils stopped up he had gone near those who were in the odour of Heaven, and had brought back that odour with him in his clothes.

— . It has sometimes happened that a putrid stink like that from a corpse, from some open cavern of Hell, has reached my nostrils and brought on vomiting. From these things it may be evident why in the Word the smell=perception; for it is often said that Jehovah smelled a grateful odour from the burnt-offerings; also that the oil of anointing, and the frankincense, were made of fragrant things; and, on the other hand, that the sons of Israel were commanded to carry out from their camps the unclean things, and that they were to dig down and cover over their excrements (Deut.xxiii. 12,13).

D. 323. That Spirits can smell, and that odours with them correspond to their spiritual life.—They can clearly and sensibly smell of what quality the subject is who is dead; and who, when he has led an evil life, emits an odour so foul, like that smelled from a corpse, that they cannot endure his approach. They have told me that such an odour is like that of a most fetid carcase, and that there is a difference of such odours such as is that of the spiritual things of the life. A similar fetor has been often excited with me, and indeed one of fetid mice, which corresponds to avarice, with indefinite variety. From these things I can conclude that by the mark set on Cain such an odour is meant, so that he could wander about nowhere, because they wanted to drive him away; for the like occurs in the other life. . . But such an odour is taken away from everyone when he is carried to his mansion, because if they were present then, he could not be received into any place . . . and therefore they are admitted into mansions by other perceptions, which are disposed by God Messiah alone.

[D.] 791. The odour of scandals (against the Lord) . . . is like stinking water, or water defiled with filth.

1044. Concerning Genii, who are Known from their various odours.

2051. That Spirits can also produce odours.

3132. That the spheres of Spirits and of Societies are presented also by odours.

3339. As such spheres correspond to the sphere of odour with man, hence [come] odours; and therefore I may mention that brute animals smell from spheres things they would never perceive in any other way; so that there exist spheres in the Things of nature which are quite unknown to man; but which are regnant with beasts. Examps.

3343. Therefore spheres of odour correspond: hence 'odour,' in the Word . . .

3349. (This) may be evident from the sphere of odour; in that gardeners do not perceive the sphere of odour of flowers as do those who come thither . . .

3353^e. The Spirits fled away, and cried out that they could not endure so cadaverous an odour . . .

3531^e. (Rustics known there from the odour of the dung of the beasts they had tended.)

3817. I walked about a stable of horses and smelled the dung of the horses, of which upright Spirits at once complained, saying that they could not endure that odour, because there at once occurred a sphere of reasonings from natural things . . .

4220^e. Such spheres are wont to be turned into spheres of odour . . .

D. Min. 4730. It appears as if (the perception of animals) is from a certain smell, but it is not; for perception is the beginning of smelling—odorationis—and in the other life is turned into smell when it pleases the Lord.

E. 324. Hence to smell=to perceive, even in common discourse.

—²⁵. For fragrant odours correspond to pleasant and delicious things which are in thoughts and perceptions from the delight of spiritual love. —²⁷.

349³. The heat of Heaven when it inflows into objects which are varied as to odours according to the interior receptive forms.

365^e. 'An odour of rest'=the perception of peace.

638¹¹. 'Odour' (Hos. xiv. 6)=perception.

1080². The perception of the mind corresponds to the odour of the nostrils: odour and the nostrils are correspondences, and the action is influx. Hence . . . to perceive a Thing is called smelling it.

1146⁴. So the sensory of smell perceives from within that which inflows from without, sometimes from afar.

1150². The reason these spices=Divine wisdom, is that by odour is signified perception; and perception is of wisdom.

D. Wis. x. 6². With everyone the blood . . . is nourished by the volatile elements and odours from the air; but in a manner quite different with the good from what it is with the evil. (This may be inferred from the fact that) in the Spiritual World a good Spirit attracts with his nostrils from delight fragrant and sweet-smelling things, and is horrified at putrid and evil-smelling ones; but an evil Spirit attracts with his nostrils from delight putrid and evil-smelling things, and shuns fragrant and sweet-smelling ones: hence it is that in the Hells there are stinks fetid, rancid, stercoraceous, cadaverous, and others like these; and this because all odour corresponds to the perception which is from the affection of each person's love.

Docu. 302. I. Concerning odours.—[The odours in Hell] are like those of . . . mice, cats, dogs, foxes, wolves, panthers, bears, tigers, or swine. Further, like the stench of the excrements of these beasts, and also of man; like the bad odour of stagnant waters, and marshes; like that of various dead bodies; like that of various putrid substances; like that of privies, urinals, and snakes; like the bad smell of dregs, and of vomit; like the smell of various he-goats. These they sniff in with their noses, and by their eyes are led to the places whence they emanate. When they scent the sphere of matrimony, they are affected with nausea, or become lustful.

—². In Heaven are fragrances from herbs, from various trees, from apples, pears, oranges, olives, grapes. There is an odour as from their leaves; as from the various cereals; and the various kinds of wine and must. There is a perfume as from newly baked bread and cakes; as from various flowers; as from various useful trees in groves and forests; as from honey. There is an aroma as from frankincense, and various other ingredients. The sphere of infants, and of the Angels, is changed into such perfumes in Heaven.

—³. Wild beasts on earth are consociated according to their odours; they know those of their own kind by their smell; likewise their enemies. From the odour they know their food. The bees fly directed by their sense of smell, likewise butterflies.

—⁴. The infernals shun heavenly perfumes, and the inhabitants of Heaven the stenches of Hell. . . Sympathy and antipathy originate thence. Man is not affected by these in the body, because the Lord removes them, for the sake of consociation.

—⁵. The following odours are not displeasing, namely, those from lambs, sheep, calves; cattle, horses, mules; elephants, camels, stags; chickens, swans, doves, and other birds.

—⁶. There is not a single object in the mineral kingdom which does not give out an odour, and, indeed, in the form of an impalpable powder, by which seeds are impregnated. In the vegetable kingdom also there is not a single object which does not emit an odour. This odour consists of particles of a fatty and saline nature; which are given out at the same time with the watery exhalations. In the animal kingdom also there is not a single object which does not breathe out an odour.

—7. Odour or scent is nothing else than a sort of smoke, consisting of minutest substances separated from the various matters. This separation goes on continually, and the loss is made up by the addition of new particles. The particles which are thus cast off become the volatile aura of their subject. This appears clearly from the magnet, and from the dogs used in hunting, which pursue hares, stags, and game of different kinds by their smell.

—8. Those who appear like satyrs scent prostitutes; those who appear like foxes scent cunning and stratagems; those who are like leopards smell those who are crafty; those who are like panthers scent murderers and assassins . . .

—9. Horses by their smell turn their heads towards those who are rational in truths; but their tails towards those who reason from fallacies. Those who are like dogs scent those who are luxurious, etc.

—11. The odour of everyone is like an elementary sphere in which he freely draws breath; everyone pants after this, and as soon as he is in it, he is in himself.

—12. The Hell of robbers and pirates smells like the carcasses of cows and sheep; the Hell of murderers and assassins like a human corpse; likewise the Hell of the Sodomites. This stench is balmy, aromatic, and fragrant to them, and like a sweet feast in their breast; and like a noble spirit of wine in their heads. They inhale this stench with both nostrils, and with open mouths; and it refreshes them after they have made their escape from some heavenly odour.

768⁸. 'Their offspring in the midst of the peoples' (Is.lxi.9) = life according to it. —⁹.

—⁹. The reason 'offspring' = those who live according to Divine truth . . . is that in the Original Language the word 'offspring' is derived from a word which means to go forth and to proceed ; and that which goes forth and proceeds from Divine truth when received is a life according to it.

Offspring. Proles.

R. 10³. 'Multiprolis'=the Church from the Jews, who had the Word.

M. 44⁹. Love and wisdom are the offspring which are born from the marriage of good and truth; and as the husband in Heaven is wisdom, and the wife is the love thereof, and as both are spiritual, therefore no other offspring than spiritual ones can be there conceived and brought forth. 51, Gen. art. 65^e. 355⁶.

120. The offspring from the Lord as a Husband and from the Church as a wife . . . Ex.

121. That [this] spiritual offspring is truths . . . Ex.

202. That the offspring born from two who are in love truly conjugal derive from their parents the Conjugal of good and truth, from which they have the inclination and faculty, if a son, to perceive the things which are of wisdom, if a daughter, to love the things which wisdom teaches. Ex.

206. That . . . the soul of the offspring is from the father, and its clothing from the mother. Ex.

211^e. The spiritual offspring which are born from the marriages of the Angels, are such things as are of wisdom from the father, and of love from the mother, which they love from a spiritual storgé; and which love adds itself to their conjugal love . . .

245. The reason souls or offspring are propagated (from consorts who are in spiritual cold). Ex.

392^e. The support of offspring and children=factuum—by evil parents.

T. 307^e. The spiritual offspring which are born from the marriage of the Lord and the Church are the goods of charity and the truths of faith.

377². From the husband as father and from the wife as mother are born all natural offspring; in like manner from charity as father and from faith as mother are born all spiritual offspring, which are the Knowledges of good and truth . . .

D. 546. The unrestricted procreation of offspring in Jupiter.

1202. Concerning those who exercise venery without true conjugal love, that is, any desire to procreate offspring.—There are many, both men and women, especially in Christendom, who, because they contract matrimony late in life, and because they are punished if they conceive and bear offspring without lawful matrimony, contract therefrom the nature that they desire to exercise venery without a desire for offspring; and thus they completely exclude from themselves that which is the middle and the inmost. (1203) As this is damnable, they are separated from the Heavens so long [as they indulge in it]; and when they live to the end of life in the desire of venery alone, and not of love truly conjugal, and so die, they are grievously punished after death. Des. Thus are they divested of that profane cupidity of exercising venery alone for the sole sake of lust, without any desire for offspring; for they are thus as it were murdered by those (punishing) Spirits; for such is the animus of those Spirits that they murder such; and therefore [it is that] they lay them supine, and as it were cut them to pieces with knives. The Souls also suppose that they are being murdered; and thus they are divested of this desire.

3315^e. From that time they thought of scarcely anything but offspring, so that their continual deliciousnesses were to love their consort for the sake of offspring . . . (3316) and they desire nothing with more avidity than to procreate offspring=sobolem; and I perceived that it was for the reason that it inflowed from the advent of the Lord into the world . . . wherefore I now perceive that the love of the consort has perished, and has remained in love towards the offspring, that is, in storgé . . .

3353. Concerning an offspring of the Most Ancient Church . . . 3354.

— So that they loved their offspring most tenderly.

3450². So that the offspring might be the common one of all . . .

3899. Therefore (these lascivious girls) can rarely have offspring; and, if they do have them, they do not love them; for this follows from the destruction of conjugal love.

E. 1002³. The good works of chastity which concern offspring and posterity, are, that so many and such great evils should not be born in families; for the reigning love of the parents is traduced into the offspring . . . and this is broken and becomes mild with parents who shun adulteries as infernal, and love marriages as heavenly.

See under ANOINT and OLIVE.

A. 716². 'Oil' (Lev. viii. 10) = the Holy of love.

886. 'Oil of olive' was employed for the anointings and the lamps, because it represented all the Celestial, consequently all the good of love and of charity; for the oil is the essential itself of the tree, and as it were its soul; as the Celestial or the good of love . . . is the essential itself or soul itself of faith. Hence the representation. 2162¹⁴.

2177⁴. 'Fine flour with oil and frankincense' = all things of charity . . . 'Oil' = the Celestial thereof.

—^e. The affections of truth and good are signified by 'fine flour, honey, and oil' (Ezek. xvi. 13).

2184. Oil, because fat, = the Celestial itself.

2708⁴. 'The tree of oil' = the good of the interior man.

2832¹⁰. 'Oil' = good.

3009. Kings were anointed, because the oil with which they were anointed signified good. Ex.

3079^e. The prudent virgins taking oil in their vessels = that [there was] good in their truths; thus charity in their faith.

3147⁵. 'To anoint with oil' (Ezek.xvi.9) = to infill with good.

3580⁴. 'Oil' (Jer.xxxi.12) = the good from which are these things.

3728. 'He poured oil upon the head of (the statue)' (Gen.xxviii.18) = holy good; (for) 'oil' = the Celestial of love, or good. . . (This rite) signified that truth was not without good, but from good. . .

4581. There are two universal kinds of good: the good of faith, and the good of love. (The former) is signified by the drink-offering, and (the latter) by the oil. —.

—⁴. The oil (in the meat-offering) = love to the Lord.

4582. 'He poured oil upon (the statue)' (Gen.xxxv.14) = the Divine good of love. Ex.

4638³. 'Those who were foolish took their lamps, but took no oil with them' = that they had not the good of charity in their truths; 'Oil' = the good of charity and of love. 'But the prudent took oil in their vessels with their lamps' = that they had the good of charity and of love in their truths.

4644¹². 'A cruse of oil' (1 Kings xvii.) = charity and love.

5120³. 'To make the head fat with oil' (Ps.xxiii.5) = to gift with the good of love.

5620. For 'oil' = good. —⁴. —⁸.

6377⁶. 'Oil' (Rev.vi.6) = the good of celestial love.

—⁷. 'Poured in oil and wine' = performed the works of love and charity. (= the good of love and the good of faith. 9057².)

7778^e. 'Oil' = the good of charity; thus 'lamps without oil' = the truths of faith without the good of charity.

8468². By oil is signified the good of love.

8989⁸. 'To have oil in their lamps' = to have the good of charity in the truths of faith; and 'not to have oil in their lamps' = to have the truths of faith and not in them the good of charity. 9182¹¹. 9369^e.

9139⁴. 'The horn of a son of oil' (Is.v.1) = the good of faith of that Church from the good of love. . . 'A son of oil' = the external good of love of the Celestial Kingdom. The Celestial Kingdom . . . is called 'an olive-tree,' or 'oliveyard,' because 'oil' = the good of celestial love.

9198⁷. 'Oil' (1 Kings xvii.) = the good of love. Refs.

9296⁵. Oil, which is of the press, = good from which is truth. Refs.

9472². 'The wood of oil' (Is.xli.19) = celestial good.

9473. 'Oil for the luminary' (Ex.xxv.6) = the internal good which is in mutual love and in charity; (for) 'oil' = the good of love. Ex. 9474.

9510. The wood of oil (of which the cherubs in the Temple were made) = the good of love.

9712. The good of charity by which the Spiritual Heaven is illuminated in the truths of faith, is signified by 'the oil of olive-oliveae,' and 'the luminary.'

9780. 'Let them take for thee oil of olive' (Ex.xxvii.20) = the good of charity and of faith; (for) 'the oil of olive' = the good of celestial love; but here the good of spiritual love, which is the good of charity towards the neighbour, and the good of faith. That this good is here signified by 'the oil of olive' is because it was for the luminary . . . by which is signified the Spiritual Heaven. . . 'Oil,' and the 'olive-tree,' in the Word, = both celestial good and spiritual good; celestial good, when the Celestial Kingdom or Church is treated of; and spiritual good when the Spiritual Kingdom or Church is treated of.

—³. That 'oil,' and also 'the olive-oliva' = good. Ill.

—⁷. 'Oil in the lamps' = the good of love and of charity in the truths of faith. 'The virgins who took lamps and not oil' = those who hear the Word, read it, and say that they believe, and yet on that account do nothing of good; and if they do it, it is not from the love of good or truth, but from the love of self or of the world.

9806⁴. 'Oil' (Ps.cxxxiii.2) = good.

9954⁷. Hence inauguration to represent was done by oil, which in the spiritual sense is the good of love.

—¹⁵. 'The oil of holiness with which Jehovah hath anointed him' (Ps.lxxxix.20) = the Divine good of the Divine love. E.375²⁰.

—^e. They anointed themselves and others not with the oil of holiness . . . but with common oil, for the reason that this oil = the gladness and happiness which is of the good of love; but the oil of holiness = the Divine good. E.375²⁴.

9993. 'Cakes of unleavened things mingled with oil' (Ex.xxix.2) = the purification of the middle Celestial. Ex.

9994. 'And wafers of unleavened things anointed with oil' (id.) = the Celestial in the external man. Ex.

9995⁴. 'Oil' (Ezek.xvi.13) = the good of love.

10136. 'Oil' (ver.40) = celestial good. Refs.

10137¹¹. No oil upon the meat offering of the sacrifice of sin, because 'oil' = the good of love. . .

10175a. The preparation of the oil of anointing = the quality of love in worship.

10182¹¹. 'Oil' = good.

10252. The oil of anointing = celestial good, which is the Divine good of the Lord's Divine love in the Inmost Heaven. (Its composition des. and ex.) 10254². —^e.

10261. 'Oil of olive' (Ex.xxx.24) = the Lord's Divine celestial good; (for) 'oil' = good, both celestial and spiritual; and 'an olive' (fruit) = celestial love. Hence 'oil of olive'=the celestial good of love; or, what is the same, celestial good. It is said, the Lord's Divine celestial good, because all good, which is essentially good in the Heavens, is from the Lord's Divine. Ex.

[A.] 10266. By the preparation of the oil of anointing is described the Divine good of the Lord's Divine love in His Divine Human; and, in the relative sense, the good of love with man from the Lord. . . (Thus) the preparation of the oil of anointing involves also the generation and formation of the good of love with man by the Lord; consequently, that the good of love is formed through the truths of the Church which are from the Word; first, through the external ones; and then through more and more interior ones . . . and that thus first the external man, and then the interior one is successively imbued with them. Ex.

10267. 'It shall be the oil of anointing of holiness' (id.)=a representative of the Lord as to the Divine Human. Ex. 10285. 10349.

10540³. 'Oil'=internal good. Refs.

R. 173². 'Oil'=the good of love.

316. 'Hurt not the oil and the wine' (Rev.vi.6)=that it is provided by the Lord that the holy goods and truths which lie hidden interiorly in the Word be not violated and profaned. 'Oil'=the good of love . . . thus 'oil'=holy good. E.375.

468^e. By 'oil' is meant fire, and thus love.

493². Hence celestial love, which is love to the Lord, is signified by the 'oil' with which all the holy things of the Church were anointed. The oil which was called 'the oil of holiness' was made from olives and from spices mixed together.

778. 'Oil' (Rev.xviii.13)=the good of love. 779²; III.

Ad. 3/5503. 'Oil'=all that which is essential; for oil is the essence of the tree, thus the life of the tree . . .

314⁷. 'Oil out of the flint of rock' (Deut.xxxii.13)=spiritual good also through truths.

324¹⁴. The 'oil' (on the meat-offering)=the good of celestial love. —¹⁵. 491³.

—²⁶. The 'oil' (of anointing)=celestial good, or the good of love to the Lord.

— In the oil of anointing the oil of olive was the primary thing . . .

329⁸. All (these) things were inaugurated by oil and by blood . . . because 'oil'=the Divine good of the Divine love.

336⁸. 'Rivers of oil' (Micah vi.7)=truths proceeding from good.

374³. 'Oil' (Jer.xxxi.12)=the good of the spiritual man.

—⁴. 'Oil' (Joel i.10)=good in the internal man. (=good. 375³⁰.)

—⁶. 'Oil' (Jer.xli.8)=the good of the internal man.

—⁷. 'Oil of olive, and honey' (Deut.viii.8)=the Church as to the good of love and its delight.

—⁸. The cause of the representation of what is holy by oil is this: the Lord alone as to the Divine Human is the Anointed of Jehovah . . . and therefore oil—by which was signified the Divine good of the Divine love—was employed to induce the representations . . .

—⁹. These things have been said in order that it may be known that 'oil'=the good of love. Ill.

—²⁷. 'To anoint with oil' (Ezek.xvi.9)=to gift with the good of love. 475⁹.

—²⁸. 'Must and oil' (Jer.xxxi.12)=truth and good.

—²⁹. 'Must and oil' (Joel ii.24)=the truth and good of the Church. (=truth and its delight. 922⁶.)

—³¹. The inauguration of the Spiritual is meant by 'a horn of oil' (Is.v.1) . . . and 'a son of oil'=truth from good.

—³². 'Oil' (Hos.ii.22)=good.

—³⁴. 'Thou makest fat my head with oil' (Ps.xxiii.5)=wisdom which is from good. (=through the good of love. 727².)

—³⁶. 'To suck oil out of the flint of rock'=to be imbued with good through the truths of faith. 'Oil'=spiritual good and delight. 411⁷. (=the delight of spiritual love. 619⁹.)

—³⁸. 'To carry down oil into Egypt' (Hos.xii.1)=to pervert the goods of the Church by reasonings from scientifics. 419¹⁸. 654⁵⁸.

—⁴¹. As 'oil'=the good of love to the Lord and the good of charity towards the neighbour, the Lord (mentioned it in the parable of the virgins).

—⁴². As 'oil'=the good of love and of charity, the Lord (mentioned it in the parable of the Samaritan).

—⁴³. As 'oil'=the good of love and of charity, and as those who are spiritually sick are healed by this, the disciples 'anointed many with oil, and healed them' (Mark vi.13).

—^e. (Thus) 'oil'=celestial good and spiritual good; or the good of love to the Lord, and the good of charity towards the neighbour; 'the oil of anointing,' the good of love to the Lord from the Lord; and the oil for the lamps, the good of charity from the Lord towards the neighbour.

376²¹. 'The firstfruits of oils' (Amos vi.6)=the externals of good.

—³⁰. The 'oil' (of the Samaritan)=the good of love. 962⁶.

427⁸. The oil with which (kings were anointed on the forehead and hand)=the good of love. Ex.

433²². 'Oil' (Ezek.xxvii.17)=the good of love in the spiritual man.

444¹⁴. 'Oil,' in the Word, =the good of love. 638⁵.

504⁶. The oil from which was the fire of the flame in the lamps=the Divine love.

537¹⁰. 'Oil' (Ps.lv.21)=the good of internal affection.

543⁹. 'Corn,' and 'oil' (Joel ii.24)=the goods of the Church.

617⁷. 'Oil' (Ezek.xvi.13)=spiritual good, or that of the internal man. 619¹¹.

638¹⁹. 'Not to be anointed with oil' (Deut.xxviii.40) =not to enjoy any good and the derivative delight.

684¹⁶. 'To anoint with the oil of joy' (Ps.xlv.7)=to unite Himself by victories in temptations.

—²¹. 'With the oil of holiness I have anointed him' (Ps.lxxxix.20)=the Lord as to the Divine Human, and the union with the Divine Itself . . . and this union is meant by, 'to be anointed with the oil of holiness;' for 'the oil of holiness'=the Divine good of the Divine love; and 'to be anointed'=to be united to the Divine truth which was of the Lord's Human in the world.

695²². 'Oil' (Ps.cix.18)=evils from love.

860. 'To buy oil' (Matt.xxv.9,10)=to procure for themselves the good of love after death.

918⁴. 'In the horn of a son of oil'; oil=(the Spiritual Church) which had truths from the good of charity.

3183. This last state (into which men come as they advance in years) which is signified by 'old men,' is a state of wisdom, in which is the innocence of infancy. Thus the first state and the last are united; and man, when old, as again an infant, but wise, is introduced into the Lord's Kingdom.

3254. 'In a good old age-senectute, old, and full' (Gen.xxv.8)=a new state of representation. 'Old age'=to put off the old-vetus, and to put on the new . . . because with the Angels . . . there is no idea of time . . . but instead they have an idea of states; as . . . instead of old age an idea of a state of wisdom; and as then man passes from the things of time to those of a life without time, and thus puts on a new state, by 'old age' is signified what is new; and, here, a new representative . . .

[A.] 3492. 'Isaac became old' (Gen. xxvii. 1) = when the state was at hand. 'To become old' = the presence of a new state; for 'old age-senectus,' in the Word, = both the putting off of a former state, and the putting on of a new state; and this for the reason that old age is the last of age, when the corporeal things begin to be put off, and, with them, the loves of the preceding age; and thus when the interiors begin to be illustrated . . . and also because the Angels . . . have no longer an idea of any old age; but, instead of it, the idea of a new life; thus, here, the idea that the state (here treated of) was at hand.

4620. 'Old and full of days' (Gen. xxxv. 29) = what is new of life.

4676. 'Because he was the son of his old ages-senectutum' (Gen. xxxvii. 3) = his own life in him: (for) 'old age' = the putting off of a former state and the putting on of a new state; also, what is new of life. For 'old age,' in the internal sense does not = old age, because the internal man, or spirit of man, does not know what old age is; but, as the body or external man becomes old, he passes into what is new of life . . . (Thus) by 'old age,' in the internal sense, is signified life.

4682. 'Old men' (Joel ii. 28) = the wise.

5550. 'To old age-senectutem, and to grey hairs' (Is. xlvii. 4) = to the last of the Church.

5608. 'Old men' (Joel ii. 16) = the wise.

—^e. When man becomes old . . . the innocence of wisdom conjoins itself with the innocence of ignorance which he had had in infancy; and thus, as a true infant, he passes into the other life.

5804. 'A child of his old ages-senectutum, the youngest' (Gen. xlv. 20) = derivative truth which is new. . . 'Old age' = what is new of life.

6257. 'Through old age-senectute' (Gen. xlviii. 10) = because in the end of the representation; (for) 'old age' = what is new of representation; thus the end of the former one.

7661. 'Old men' (Ex. x. 9) = the wise. Refs.

9212. Peter when 'old' = the faith of the Church as it is in its end. E. 195¹⁴. S20⁷.

9404. 'Old men,' in the Word, = those who are in wisdom; thus who are in the life of good from the doctrine of truth.

10071. 'The head' = evil; in like manner 'the old and honoured' (Is. ix. 15).

10087. That then evil and falsity will lead, is signified by 'when thou shalt be old . . .' (John xxi. 18).

H. 278. Man is so created that . . . when he becomes old he may be in internal innocence . . . and therefore when man becomes old he decreases in body, and becomes again like an infant, but wise; thus an Angel . . . Hence in the Word . . . 'an old man' = a wise man in whom is innocence.

295. Other Spirits (are with man) in his old age-senectute. . . In old age, there are present Spirits who are in wisdom and in innocence; thus who communicate with the Inmost . . . Heaven.

330. (Those who die as old men enter the Spiritual World as old men, but the state is afterwards changed.)

E. 270. 'Old men' (Lam. v. 12) = wisdom which is of good; 'elders,' truths which are from good; 'young men,' intelligence. 412²³.

315. 'The old man' (Ezek. ix. 6) = wisdom which is of good.

433. 'To remove the diviner and the old man' (Is. iii. 2) = to remove all intelligence and wisdom.

532. 'Old men' (Is. xx. 4) = wisdom.

555. 'Old man and infant' = wisdom and innocence.

559. 'Old man' = the intelligence of truth; 'the honoured' = the wisdom of good.

624. 'Old men' = those who are in wisdom.

652. 'Old males and old women' (Zech. viii. 4) = the intelligent and the wise. (= those intelligent from doctrine and from the affection of truth. 727⁹.)

—²⁸. 'An old man and full of days' = wisdom.

659. 'Old age-senium' = wisdom.

863. 'Old man' = wisdom. —⁹.

—⁷. 'Old man' = wisdom.

537¹⁷. 'The old cast-reteramenta-elouts and rotten-reteramenta-rags' (Jer.xxxviii.12) with which they drew out Jeremiah, =the vindication of the truth of doctrine and the restitution thereof by means of such goods and truths of the sense of the letter of the Word as have not been perceived and understood, and have therefore been neglected and rejected. These are signified by those 'old things.'

539¹¹. 'The garment which waxes old-veterascentem' (Isa.li.6)=truth destroyed through the falsities of evil.

730³⁶. 'Thy raiment waxed not old . . .' (Deut.viii.4)=that the natural man has not been injured through these afflictions.

Old Church. Ecclesia vetus.

See PRESENT CHURCH ; and under CHURCH, and NEW CHURCH.

A. 2323². In Gen.xix. it treats (also) of the destruction of the Old Church, which is signified by Sodom and Gomorrah . . .

2955^e. When the Old Church expires and becomes night, a new one always rises again elsewhere.

2986². When a new Church is being instaurated . . . this takes place rarely, if ever, with those with whom the Old Church has been . . . Examps.

406c¹. It is always provided . . . that when the Old Church perishes a new one is instaurated.

—⁷. The instauration of a new Church takes place when the Old Church is vastated and rejected. Tr.

4230. When the end of the Old Church and the beginning of the new one is at hand, there is then 'the Last Judgment.'

4231². Then is 'the consummation of the age,' that is, 'the Last Judgment,' and 'the Advent of the Lord ;' consequently then is the Old Church being rejected, and the new one being instaurated.

—³. That the internals and externals of the Former Church will perish ; but that the Word of the Lord will remain. Sig.

4240³. When the Church is being instaurated with the gentiles, and the Former, or Old Church is falling from charity and faith. Sig.

4333. These words describe what the state will be when the Old Church is being rejected, and the new one is being instaurated. The rejection of the Old Church and the instauration of the new one is meant by 'the consummation of the age,' and by 'the Advent of the Son of Man,' and, in general, by 'the Last Judgment.'

4423. How the case is with the rejection of an Old Church . . . scarcely anyone knows. He who is not acquainted with the interiors of man, and the states of these interiors . . . cannot apprehend otherwise than that those who are of the Old Church, with whom good and truth has been vastated . . . will perish, either, like the antediluvians, by a flood, or like the Jews, by being driven out from their land, or otherwise. But the Church, when it has been vastated—that is, when it is no longer in any good of faith—principally perishes as to the states of (its members') interiors, thus as to the states in the other life. Heaven then removes itself from them, and consequently the Lord ; and transfers itself to others, who are adopted in their place.

—². At that time, those who are of the Old Church, and thus removed from Heaven, are in a certain inundation as to the interiors, and indeed in an inundation above the head. This inundation is not apperceived by the man himself while he lives in the body, but he comes into it after death. In the other life this inundation manifestly appears, and indeed like a foggy mist by which they are encompassed, and thereby separated from Heaven. The state of those who are in this foggy mist, is that they cannot possibly see what the truth of faith, and still less what its good is ; for the light of Heaven . . . cannot penetrate into that mist. This is the state of a vastated Church.

4424². Those who are within a vastated Church are almost all such ; they have externals, but no internals ; hence the inundation of their interiors. Sig.

—⁴. 'Berries of olives' (Zech.iv.12)=the holy goods in the Celestial Kingdom: their truths are signified by 'sons of olives.'

R. 493. 'These are the two olives, and the two candlesticks . . .' (Rev.xi.4)=love and intelligence, or charity and faith . . .

—². The reason 'an olive'=love and charity, is that 'an olive-tree'=the Celestial Church; and therefore 'an olive,' which is its fruit,=celestial love, which love is love to the Lord . . . Ill.

649³. But the goods of love to the Lord are meant in the Word by the fruits of trees, especially by olives.

403¹⁰. 'The work of the olive shall lie' (Hab.iii.17)=that there is no celestial good.

638⁷. That such things are signified by 'olive-groves,' 'olive-trees,' and 'olives,' in the Word. Ill.

—¹¹. That 'olive-tree,' and 'olive'=the good of love. Ill.

—¹³. These which are born from this spiritual affection are compared to 'olive plants—plantis olearum' (Ps.cxxviii.3) because through truths are produced the goods of love and of charity, which are 'olives.'

—¹⁵. By 'a leaf' is signified truth, and by 'an olive' (Gen.viii.) the good born thence.

Olive-tree. Olea.

See OIL TREE, and under OLIVE.

A. 2722⁷. Groves of olive-trees signified the celestial things of worship.

4552³. The olive-tree and the derivative oil (in the Ancient Church) signified the things which are of celestial love.

9139⁴. The Celestial Kingdom, which is the Lord's Inmost Heaven, is called 'an olive-tree,' or 'olive-grove; because 'oil'=the good of celestial love.

9277³. 'Two olive-trees near the candlestick' (Zech. iv.)=celestial good and spiritual good, which are at the Lord's right and left hands. 9780³. E.375³⁹.

—⁴. 'The olive-tree' (in the parable of the trees, Judg.ix.)=the internal good of the Celestial Church.

—⁵. As 'an olive-tree'=the good of love from the Lord, and to the Lord, the cherubs . . . were made of olive wood, and also the doors of the adytum (1 Kings vi. 23-33) . . .

9780. See OIL, here.

9780³. 'The two olive-trees, and the two candlesticks' (Rev.xi.4)=the good of love to the Lord and the good of charity towards the neighbour . . .

10261³. That 'an olive-tree'=the perception and the affection of celestial love. Ill.

H. 520². The four ways which lead to the Lord's

Celestial Kingdom appear adorned with olive-trees and fruitbearing trees of various kinds . . . because . . . olive-trees and fruit-trees correspond to the affection of good and its uses.

S. 18³. By 'the olive-tree,' 'vine,' etc., are meant good and truth celestial . . .

23². The olive-tree (with the Ancients) signified the good of love.

R. 43⁴. 'The olive-trees' (Zech.iv.)=the Church as to the good of love.

493². See OLIVE, here.

—^e. As 'an olive-tree'=the Celestial of the Church, the cherubs, doors, and posts were made of olive wood.

M. 42^e. (The angelic husband and wife) were conveyed along . . . between flower-beds, from which rose olive-trees and trees full of oranges.

75². Unless his eyes were opened . . . so as to see (in that forest) olive-trees girt with tendrilled vines, and his steps were directed from olive-tree to olive-tree, the traveller would go astray into Tartarus . . . —³, Des.

183. (In the garden Adramandoni) were olive-trees, and between olive-tree and olive-tree there were running and pensile vines . . .

270⁴. Like things are signified by the three kinds of trees around the palace; the olive-trees, palm-trees, and beeches.

T. 609. These three degrees (of the Heavens and of the mind) are distinguished from each other, as are, in purity and goodness, . . . the olive-tree, the vine, and the fig-tree. Moreover, 'the olive-tree,' in the Word, =celestial good, which is the good of the highest Heaven . . .

E. 313¹². 'An olive-tree' (Isa.xxiv.13)=the good of the Church.

340¹². Therefore it is said, Like olive plants' (Ps. cxxviii.3); 'plants'=truths; and 'olives' goods.

403². In general an olive-tree (as seen in the Heavens) =the Celestial which is of the good of love; a vine, the Spiritual which is of truth from that good; and a fig-tree, the Natural which is derived from the Spiritual, or from the Celestial. . . Therefore also these trees=an Angel or man with whom these things are; but, in a general sense, they=a whole Society . . . But, in the spiritual sense, these trees=the Church: 'the olive-tree,' the Celestial Church; 'the vine,' the Spiritual Church; and 'the fig-tree,' the Natural Church, which is the External Church corresponding to the Internal one.

—⁸. 'Olive-trees' (Amos iv.9)=celestial goods and truths.

—⁹. By 'the olive-tree-arborem oleae' (Hag.ii.19) is signified the perception of celestial good and truth.

532⁷. A comparison is made with 'the shaking of an olive-tree' (Isa.xvii.6), because by 'an olive-tree' is signified the Church as to the good of love . . . 'A fruitful olive-tree'=those in the Church who are in good as to life.

—³. The reason 'an olive-tree'=the Celestial Church, is that by trees in general are signified perceptions and Knowledges; and every Church is a Church from the Knowledges of truth and good, and according to the perception of them; and, as 'oil'=the good of love, therefore 'an olive-grove,' and 'an olive-tree'=the Church in which this good reigns.

— . There are three trees which principally=the Church, namely, the olive-tree, the vine, and the fig-tree; 'the olive-tree,' the Celestial Church; the vine, the Spiritual Church; and the fig-tree, the External Celestial and Spiritual Church. Ex.

—⁶. (Thus) the witnesses are called 'olive-trees,' because by 'olive-trees' are meant all who constitute the Lord's Celestial Church; that is, who are in the good of love to the Lord, and in the good of love towards their brothers and companions. —⁷, Ill.

—⁷. By 'the two olive-trees,' and 'the olive berries' (Zech.iv.) are signified celestial goods, which are [those] of love to the Lord, and of love towards a brother and companion: the latter good is signified by the olive-tree seen near the left hand of the bowl; and the former good by the olive-tree at its right hand. The truths of this good are meant by 'the sons of the olive-tree standing near the Lord of the whole earth' . . .

—⁸. As 'olive-trees'=these goods, the cherubs, doors, and posts were made of olive wood, because (these things) signified a guard lest the Lord should be approached otherwise than by the good of love . . .

—¹¹. That 'olive-tree,' and 'olive'=the good of love. Ill.

—¹². It is said, 'As a green olive-tree in the house of God' (Ps.lii.8), because by 'a green olive-tree' is signified the good of love being born through the truth of the Word . . .

—¹³. See OLIVE, here.

—¹⁷. Here the house of Judah and of Israel is called 'a green olive-tree beautiful with fruit of form' (Jer.xi.16), because by 'the olive-tree' and its 'fruit' is signified the good of love; and by 'green,' and 'beautiful in form,' is signified the truth of this good, from which is intelligence . . .

—¹⁸. 'As the stripping of an olive-tree' (Is.xxiv.13) is said of the vastation of the Church as to celestial good . . . 919².

—¹⁹. 'An olive-tree'=the Celestial Church; hence

... by 'an olive-tree' is signified the good of the Church.

—'Thou shalt have olive-trees in all thy border' (Deut.xxviii.40)=that the goods of love from the Lord through the Word, and through preachings from the Word, shall be in the universal Church; 'but thou shalt not be anointed with oil'=but still no fruition of any good and the derivative joy; 'because thy olive-tree shall be shaken off'=that that good will perish.

—²⁰. 'Olive-trees' (Amos iv.9)=the goods of the Church.

—²³. These words of Jotham (Judg.ix.) signified that the citizens of Shechem were not willing that celestial good, which is 'the olive-tree' . . . should reign over them.

1145². The wood of an olive-tree=celestial good.

See under OLIVE-TREE.

A. 1069³. 'Olivegroves' (Amos iv.9)=the celestial things (of the Spiritual Church).

9277². That 'an olivegrove'=the Celestial Church, and thus celestial good. Ill.

9841³. The things which are of life are represented in Heaven by olivegroves, etc.

E. 617¹³. 'An olivegrove'=the Church as to good.

638⁵. 'An olivegrove'=the Celestial Church, or the Church which is in the good of love to the Lord.

—⁶. In the Inmost Heaven . . . olivegroves and fig-trees constitute their paradises and forests.

—⁷. That such things are signified by 'olivegroves,' etc. Ill.

—⁹. As 'an olivegrove,' and 'an olive-tree'=the Church which is in love to the Lord . . .

—¹⁴. By 'vineyards and olivegroves' (Deut.vi.11) are signified all things of the Church as to truths and goods.

—¹⁶. The Angels of the Third Heaven dwell in the east upon mountains, where olivegroves flourish more than all other trees.

A. 7847^e. 'Olive-wood' (lit. 'wood of oil') (1 Kings vi.31,33)=the good of truth, or the good which is of the Spiritual Church.

10261⁵. 'I will give in the desert . . . the wood of oil' (Is.xli.19)=celestial good. E.294².

M. 77². (The sacred edifices of the people of the Copper Age are built of olive-wood.)

103³. The posts of these windows were of olive-wood.

155a². He led me to houses built of olive-wood-lignis oleae.

E. 277⁵. By 'the olive-wood' of which the cherubs were made (1 Kings vi.) is signified the good of love.

Omen. See FOREBODE.

Omer. Omer.

See HOMER.

A. 8468. 'An omer for a head' (Ex.xvi.16)=as much as is sufficient for every one. 'An omer'=as much as is sufficient . . . because it was the tenth part of an ephah . . . and 'ten'=what is full; hence a tenth part=as much as is sufficient. . . 'An omer' is mentioned only in this chapter; elsewhere 'a homer,' which was a measure containing ten ephahs, and thence=what is full. Ill.

S473. 'They measured with an omer' (ver.18)=the power of the reception of good; (for) 'an omer'=as much as is sufficient; thus also power.

S490. 'Two omers for one' (ver.22)=the power then. . . Here, 'an omer'=as much as is sufficient, and the power for conjunction.

S525. 'Fill an omer with it' (ver.32)=the highest degree of power . . . As 'an omer'=as much as is sufficient, or as much power as a single one has, so also in it there is the highest degree of power.

S540. 'An omer is the tenth part of an ephah' (ver.36)=the quantity of the good then.

10262⁴. The measures for dry things were called 'homer,' and 'omer' . . . The homer contained ten ephahs, and the ephah ten omers.

Omit. Omittere.

2572⁴. There is a communication between the Infinite and the finite by the Divine omnipotence.

2921. When it treats of the Divine power or omnipotence of good, He is called 'Jehovah Zebaoth,' and also 'Lord.'

—³. He is called 'Lord Jehovih' especially when the aid of omnipotence is sought for. Ill.

—⁵. Here, (Rev.iv.8) 'Lord God Almighty' is said instead of 'Jehovah Zebaoth,' as in Isa.vi.3.

3934. 'Behold a troop cometh,'=in the supreme sense, omnipotence and omniscience . . . because 'a troop,' here, means a multitude, and 'a multitude,' when predicated of the Lord's Divine, is an infinite multitude, which is nothing else than omnipotence and omniscience; but omnipotence is predicated from the quantity of magnitude, and omniscience from the quantity of multitude; also, omnipotence is predicated from infinite good, or, what is the same, from the Divine love, thus from the Divine will; but omniscience from infinite truth, or, what is the same, from the Divine intelligence . . . The good of charity corresponds to the Lord's Divine omnipotence; and the truth of faith to His omniscience.

4592. 'To sit at the right hand of God'=a state of power through the truth which is from good, which, when predicated of the Lord, is omnipotence . . . 4933^e. 7281.

4609. 'Gad,' in the supreme sense, = omnipotence and omniscience.

— . That the Divine truth was in its omnipotence when the Lord in the world had conquered the Hells, and had reduced into order all things there and in the Heavens. Sig.

9809³. 'Sit at My right hand'=the omnipotence of Divine good through Divine truth, which the Lord then was, and from which He fought and conquered.

10082². When the palms of the hands are predicated of the Lord, and of the Divine truth proceeding from His Divine good, omnipotence is signified; (thus there is here) signified the acknowledgment of the Lord's omnipotence . . .

T. 49. Concerning the omnipotence, omniscience, and omnipresence of God. Chapter.

— . These three proceed from the Divine love and the Divine wisdom scarcely otherwise than as the power and presence of the sun (do) through the heat and light

. . . (Thus) as infinity, immensity, and eternity pertain to the Divine Esse, so do omnipotence, omniscience, and omnipresence to the Divine Essence.

50. That omnipotence, omniscience, and omnipresence are of the Divine wisdom from the Divine love. Gen.art.

52. That the omnipotence, omniscience, and omnipresence of God cannot be Known unless it is Known what order is . . . Gen.art.

56. That the omnipotence of God, both in the universe and in each and all things of it, proceeds and operates according to the laws of His order. Gen.art.

— (Thus) His omnipotence proceeds and operates within the sphere of the extension of good, which is infinite . . .

—². (Thus) the Divine omnipotence cannot possibly from itself go out to contact with anything evil, nor promote it from itself; for evil averts itself . . .

57. (The idea) that the omnipotence of God is like the absolute power of a king . . . From this absurd opinion . . . concerning the Divine omnipotence, as many falsities . . . have inflowed into the Church, as there are changes . . . therein . . . what need is there of more than the two words, omnipotence and faith . . .

—². If the extension of the Divine omnipotence were equally to do evil as to do good, what difference would there be between God and the devil? . . . Who is not able to know that good and evil are opposites, and that if God from His omnipotence could will both . . . He could do nothing at all. Ex.

58. (Argument showing the absurdity of the idea that) the omnipotence of God is absolute for doing evil as well as good.

63^e. As the universe is the fulness of God, by omnipresence He perceives all things; by omniscience He provides all things; and by omnipotence He operates all things. Whence it is evident that omnipresence, omniscience, and omnipotence make a one; or that the one implies the other; and thus that they cannot be separated.

68. That man is in power against evil and falsity from the Divine omnipotence . . . in proportion as he lives according to Divine order. Gen.art.

— No one can act against this monstrous giant, or Hell, except God, because He is omnipotent; from which it is evident that man, unless he goes to the omnipotent God, has no power (whatever) against the evil and falsity thence . . . —².

72. (An argument in favour of imputation and predestination, based on the omnipotence of God. Refuted by one of the simple good.)

73. (Some of them come to Swedenborg, and ask,) What is the Divine omnipotence, if it is tied to laws? (Seeing their mental distress, he explains the subject to them by reference to the laws of order.) (A second long argument on the same subject. 74.)

84^e. Jehovah, such as He is in Himself, from His omnipotence cannot touch any devil . . . unless He is in ultimates . . .

89. Therefore the omnipotence of God in the universe . . . proceeds and operates according to the laws of His Divine order. Ex. 90.

123². I have seen, and do see every day, the Divine omnipotence of the Lord in (reducing all things in Heaven and Hell into order).

136⁴. By 'to sit at the right hand' is meant the omnipotence of God by means of the Human which He assumed in the world . . .

341². This is contrary to order, and consequently contrary to His omnipotence, which cannot proceed except by the way of justice; and the laws of justice are Truths, which cannot be changed.

500. (Argument concerning omnipotence and free-will.)

502. The man who through falsities . . . has become natural, cannot think of the Divine omnipotence except as being above order, and thus as apart from order. (This idea refuted by a reductio ad absurdum.)

328⁶. The primary thing is to acknowledge the Lord . . . and His omnipotence to save the human race . . .

— The Lord so often said, 'Be it according to thy faith,' in order that they should first believe that from the Divine Human He had Divine omnipotence; for without this faith the Church could not be commenced, and without it they would not be conjoined with the Divine; but would be separated from it; and thus they could receive nothing of good from Him.

338. That to Him belong omnipotence, omniscience, and the Divine Providence. Sig. and Ex.

689. 'We give Thee thanks, Lord God Almighty' (Rev.xi.17)=the acknowledgment that all being, life, and ability are from the Lord.

—². The Divine omnipotence does not involve anything of power to act against order; but it involves all power to act according to order ; for all order is from Him . . . (Thus) it is of the Divine omnipotence to lead man according to order, and this every moment from the beginning of his life to eternity ; and this according to the laws of order, which are innumerable ; but this only in proportion as man suffers himself to be led . . . And, as it is of the Divine omnipotence to lead according to order the man who wants to be led, consequently not anyone contrary to order, therefore it is not of the Divine omnipotence to lead anyone to Heaven who wants to lead himself. Ex. . . (Thus) it is not of the Divine omnipotence to save those who do not want to be led according to order ; for to be led according to order, is to be led according to the laws of order ; and the laws of order are the precepts of doctrine and of life from the Word ; and therefore to lead according to these, every moment and continually to eternity, the man who wants to be led, is of the Divine omnipotence ; for there are infinite things every minute which must be seen, which must be removed, and which must be insinuated, in order that the man may be withheld from evils, and be held in goods ; and these constantly in connection according to order. It is also of the Divine omnipotence to protect men from the Hells, in so far as this can be done without injury to freedom and reason ; for against the Divine power of the Lord all the Hells are as nothing. Without this power of the Lord no man can be saved.

[E.]700¹¹. As the Lord has omnipotence from Divine good through Divine truth, miracles were performed by the ark . . .

R. 796. This light is from the Lord, and the Lord is omnipresent by means of it and in it . . . For the Lord is omnipresent in this light, because the Divine love and the Divine wisdom are not in place, but are where they are received, and according to the reception.

949². For the Lord cannot emit anything from Himself, unless it is Himself ; for He is omnipresent with every man according to the conjunction . . .

—^e. God is also omnipresent in Hell.

68. That man is . . . in God from the Divine omnipresence, in proportion as he lives according to Divine order. Gen.art. 70.

70². But in those things which are contrary to order . . . God is omnipresent by a continual struggle with them, and by a continual effort to bring them back to order. Therefore, in so far as man allows himself to be brought back to order, God is omnipresent in the whole of him. —³, Ex.

364³. The Lord is omnipresent; and, where He is present, there He is with His whole essence . . .

716^e. It is evident that the Lord in His fulness, as to both the Divine and the glorified Human, is omnipresent in the Holy Supper.

719. The Lord is present with both the worthy and the unworthy, from His being omnipresent in both Heaven and Hell, and also in the world; consequently with the evil as well as with the good. Ex.

837^e. If, therefore, you form for yourselves an idea of God as being the Sun of the universe, you will surely from that idea see and acknowledge His omnipresence, omniscience, and omnipotence.

D. 4016. Concerning the Lord's omnipresence.

— . The soul of man can be omnipresent everywhere in its little body . . .

E. 283⁵. 'He did fly' = omnipresence in the Spiritual World; 'He was carried upon the wings of the wind' = omnipresence in the natural world.

285². 'The wings . . .' = the Divine Spiritual in primes and in ultimates, and its extension on every side; thus omnipresence.

1216². Concerning the omnipresence and omniscience of the Lord. Ex. 1218². 1219².

1219^e. This is the first reason why man can with difficulty comprehend the Divine omnipresence and omniscience; for, if he wants to comprehend them, he may fall into the error that God is the inmost of nature, and so is omnipresent and omniscient.

1220². That spaces and times must be removed from the ideas, in order that there may be comprehended the Lord's omnipresence with all and each, and His omniscience of present and future things. Ex.

1223³. As men and Angels are . . . only recipients of life from the Lord, and the universal Heaven together with the Church is, before the Lord, as one man, it is evident that the Lord is the life of this man . . . and also that He is omnipresent and omniscient in . . . the most singular things of the Angels of Heaven and of the men of the Church. . . It is evident (from this also) that the life or Spiritual which proceeds from the Lord, is not in space, or extended with the Angels of Heaven and the men of the Church; consequently, that spaces and times are to be removed from the ideas, in order that there may be comprehended the Lord's omnipresence and omniscience with all and each.

1224². Another reason for the Lord's omnipresence in Hell, is that, before the Lord, the universal Hell is as one man . . . and therefore from Heaven is known all that is in Hell . . .

1225². That from the Lord's omnipresence and omniscience, thus perceived, it falls into the understanding how the Lord is the all in all things of Heaven and the Church; and that we are in the Lord, and He in us. Ex.

—^e. (Thus) all who are in a natural idea concerning the Lord cannot understand His omnipresence, except as being intuitive (that is, by view); when yet it is actual; such as is the omnipresence of the Holy Spirit, which is the proceeding Divine.

1226². That the Lord's omnipresence and omniscience can also be comprehended from the creation of the universe: for the universe has been so created by Him that He is in primes and in ultimates; and in the centre and in the circumferences; and that uses are the things in which He is. Ex.

1228². As the Lord has Divine love and Divine wisdom, therefore He has Divine omnipresence and Divine omniscience from both; but omnipresence is principally from the Divine love, and omniscience is principally from the Divine wisdom. Ex.

—³. It is similar with omnipresence and omniscience: in the Lord these are one; but still they proceed from the Lord as two distinct attributes; for omnipresence relates to love; and omniscience to wisdom: or, what is the same, omnipresence relates to good; and omniscience to truth . . . The reason why the Lord's omnipresence relates to love and good, is that the Lord is present with man in the good of his love; and the reason omniscience relates to wisdom and truth, is that the Lord, from the good of the man's love, is omnipresent in the truths of his understanding; and this omnipresence is called omniscience; as, in particular, with one man, so, in general, with all.

De Dom. 46. He is omnipresent in the Holy Supper as to the Human; and omnipresence is Divine.

Ath. 177². Hence His omnipresence in the Holy Supper.

178. The Proceeding Divine is such that in the greatest and the least things it is a Man . . . Hence it is evident what His omnipresence is.

5 M. 17. The Divine love proximately proceeding from Him . . . appears as a Sun; and therefore by means of the light and heat which proceed thence He has omnipresence, omniscience, and omnipotence from the end to the ends of both worlds. D. Wis. xii. 3, Ex.

D. Wis. vii.1. All the Spiritual or Proceeding from the Lord is a Man . . . For the Proceeding Divine is not in itself changeable and extended; and that which is not extended is everywhere such: hence is His omniscience.

Omniscience. Omniscientia.

Omniscient. Omniscius.

See under OMNIPOTENCE, and OMNIPRESENCE.

A. 2569². The Lord, when the Human in Him was united to the Divine . . . had omniscience not only of Divine celestial and spiritual things, but also of . . . rational and natural things . . .

2572. To be in everything where there is good, is to be in omniscience of all Divine, celestial, spiritual, rational, and natural things; and this from Divine love; for the omniscience of all these things is in the Divine love.

4609. 'Gad,' in the supreme sense, = omnipotence and omniscience.

6851. 'To say,' when predicated of the Lord, does not = perception, but omniscience; because the Lord perceives and knows each and all things from eternity.

8688. The omniscience of the Divine good. Sig. and Ex.

R. 271. 'Seven eyes' = the Lord's omniscience, and Divine wisdom. E. 317.

T. 59. That God is omniscient; that is, perceives, sees, and knows each and all things, even to the most minute, which are done according to order: and, from these, those things also which are done contrary to order. Gen.art.

62². (Thus) God is as omniscient in Hell as in Heaven; in like manner with men in the world . . .

68. That man is in . . . wisdom concerning good and truth from the Divine omniscience . . . in proportion as he lives according to order. Gen.art. 69.

69. Because God has omniscience, that is, infinite wisdom.

E. 298. Therefore, 'the right hand,' when predicated of the Lord, = also omniscience.

—¹¹. That from omniscience all things are made manifest to the Lord. Sig.

A. 4821^e. 'Onan' involves what is iniquitous, or evil.

4823. Onan was named by his mother . . . and therefore evil is signified by him.

4824. 'She called his name Onan' (Gen. xxxviii. 4) = the quality of this evil.

4836. 'Onan knew that the seed should not be for him' (ver. 9) = aversion and hatred; (for) 'Onan' = evil . . . and evil is nothing else than aversion and hatred against the good and truth of the Church.

4837. 'Onan,' the second born of Judah, = the evil which is from the falsity of evil, in which that nation was afterwards. . . Evil from the falsity of evil is described by what Onan did, in that he did not want to give seed to his brother . . . This signified what is contrary to conjugal love . . .

6024³. Er and Onan died in the Land of Canaan' (Gen. xlii. 12) = that falsity and evil were extirpated.

One. Unus.

A. 457. Every one is formed from the harmony of many things; and such as the harmony is, such is the one: a thing which is absolutely one cannot subsist; but only a harmonical one. Every Society in Heaven thus forms a one; and all the Societies together a one; and this from the Lord alone, through love. D. 2016.

1013³. Love to the Lord makes a man one with the Lord . . . so does charity . . . This one from love, the Lord describes in, 'I pray that they all may be one . . . that they may be one in Us . . . That they may be one, even as We are one' (John xvii. 21-23).

1285. 'The whole earth was of one lip and one words' (Gen. xi. 1) = that everywhere there was one doctrine in general and in particular.

—². In Heaven there are innumerable Societies, and all different, and yet they are one; for they are all led as a one by the Lord. (Just) as all the viscera, organs, and members, each of which acts in a different way . . . are governed as a one by the one soul. . . That these can thus act as a one, is from the fact that in Heaven there is one only influx, which is received by every individual according to his peculiar quality . . . and notwithstanding that the influx is only one, yet all things obey and follow as a one; and this through the mutual love in which they are. So it was in the first Ancient Church. Ex. . . There is one doctrine when all are in mutual love, or charity. Mutual love and charity make them one, although they are various; for they make a one out of the variety. All . . . have one end . . .

1316. 'The people are one, and they all have one lip' (Gen. xi. 6) = that they all had the truth of faith, and one doctrine.

— . A people is said to be 'one,' and 'their lip one,' when all have for an end the common good of society, of the Church, and the Lord's Kingdom; for thus the Lord is in the end, from whom all are a one. (The contrary state des.)

—^e. Hence the heavenly Societies are as a one; and this solely through mutual love from the Lord.

1322. Evil Spirits . . . act as a one in persecuting truths and goods.

2005. Still, the soul with the body make a one . . .
2018.

2021^e. The principal and the instrumental . . . do indeed appear to be conjoined as if they were a one ; but still they are not a one . . .

2057². Hence the whole Heaven represents as it were one man . . .

2094³. Then man can make a one as to thought with those in Heaven.

2149. That (the Divine) Trinity is a one. Ill.

2181². The Rational and the Natural are to be conformed so as to make a one . . .

2294. The infants did not as yet act as a one.

2324². It is a common thing in the Word for one to represent many states which succeed . . .

2329². That these (Divine Essentials) are one, is known to everyone within the Church.

—⁴. The true men of the Church . . . adore . . . one . . .

—⁵. They said . . . one God ; but thought of three.

2367. There are myriads of myriads of particulars in every little affection, and idea, which appear to man as one.

2682. 'One' (Gen.xxi.15)=so little as to be scarcely anything.

2740. Conjugal love is mutual and reciprocal . . . so that they are as it were one . . . as is evident from . . . 'the two shall be for one flesh ; therefore they are no more two, but one flesh' (Matt.xix.5,6). 10169^e, Ex.

2853². The Lord's Kingdom on earth consists of all who are in good, who, although scattered over the whole earth, are still one ; and, as members, constitute one body.

2930. Man was so created that his will and understanding should make a one . . .

2973⁴. Then the inmosts, the interiors, and the externals (of man) make a one.

2975². If the will and understanding do not . . . make a one, the man has not been regenerated ; that is, if good and truth . . . are not a one.

2982. A New Church which is one in the Lord's Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

— . In ancient times there were many Churches . . . but still they made a one in this : that . . .

— . Then the Churches, however many, make a one ; and each is then a one in the Lord's Kingdom.

— . So the innumerable Societies . . . constitute one Heaven . . .

—². In this case the several Churches do not make a one . . .

3035². For man . . . cannot have an idea of one, unless he first has the idea of a number ; for a one with man is formed from many : or, what is the same, from successive things [is formed] that which is simultaneous.

3241². Yet of these innumerable varieties one Heaven is constituted . . . The one there is constituted of the many varieties so disposed by the Lord that they agree. The agreement or harmony of the many is imparted by the Lord through their all referring themselves to Him. Ex.

—³. The celestial perceive that (the Divine Essentials) are one ; but the spiritual remain in the idea of three, but want to think that they are one.

3350. Although there were many, still they all thought and spoke as one ; thus they all represented as one ; and this because no one wanted to do anything from himself . . .

—². Afterwards were heard many choirs . . . but still they acted as one ; for from the form of various things there resulted a one, in which was heavenly beauty. Thus the universal Heaven . . . can act as a one, by being in mutual love ; for thus they suffer themselves to be led by the Lord.

3405². Myriads of myriads of things, which are perceived distinctly by those in a higher degree, appear as only one with those in a lower . . .

3451². Still the dissent in the doctrinals of faith does not prevent the Church from being a one, if only there is unanimity in willing well and doing well. Examp.

3629^e. For perfection and strength are from the unanimous multitude of many, who act a one in a heavenly form . . .

3641^e. (Thus) Heaven may, as it were, make a one with Hell . . . 3642, Ex.

3642². Although the Hells are outside the Grand Man, they are nevertheless in this way reduced as it were into a one [with it], and are thus kept in order.

3855. External things are images and forms compounded of myriads of internal things, which appear as a one.

3890. The Societies, although innumerable and various, still act a one ; as all things in the body, although various, [are] a one.

3960. For things which are one, are presented as two in the sense of the letter.

4071^e. The supreme sense is such that it appears divided in the sense of the letter, but is one in the supreme internal sense.

4108^e. There is conjunction when (the Rational and the Natural) act a one ; and they act a one when the Natural ministers . . .

4138. These two Kingdoms are most distinct ; but still in the Heavens they act a one.

4145^e. The Lord then inflows into the affections of both (consorts) as into one affection.

4149². Good, regarded in itself, is one ; but it becomes various through truths . . .

[A.4149]^e. For a one is never composed of identities; but of things various in a form; which make a one according to the form.

4167³. These three planes (in man) act as a one with the regenerate . . .

4263^e. Every one consists of things various; and this through heavenly harmony and concord.

4301³. These two faculties (the will and the understanding) constitute a one. 5835.

4330. These Societies (which correspond to the external man and to the internal man) in the Heavens, act a one; as, with man, do the regenerate external and internal man.

4345³. (An Angel) sees and feels innumerable things which he had before (when a Spirit) seen and felt as one.

4453. 'To possess in the land' = to make one; thus to consent.

4766². Although the three are called one, still the thought distinguishes and makes three . . .

4926. Unless (the use formed them and adapted them to itself) each and all the things in man would never conspire so unanimously to a one.

5095^e. (Many) names together present and describe one Thing in the internal sense. Examps.

5131³. When each and all things in man, and each and all things in nature, correspond to each other as do end, cause, and effect, they act a one. Ex.

5263. 'This dream of Pharaoh is one' (Gen. xli. 25) = that which is alike in both, which was foreseen. Ex. 5267.

5291⁴. By the servant who received 'one talent,' are signified those who have received faith alone without charity.

5444. 'One is not' (Gen. xlii. 13) = that the Divine Spiritual a quo does not appear; for Joseph is here the 'one.' 5516.

5598². For in Heaven there are perpetual varieties . . . and yet all are disposed into such a form that together they make a one . . .

6000⁷. At that time the Divine Human was not one with the Divine Itself . . . as when the Lord had made it in Himself altogether one. Ill.

6232³. This variety is more indefinite in the truths and goods which are of the Spiritual World, because one thing in the natural world corresponds to thousands and thousands in the Spiritual World . . .

7191². In all angelic discourse there is a harmony-concentus-as of singing, which in every termination ceases in a monosyllable; thus in a one . . . because each and all things in Heaven have relation to one God, as to their end.

7363^e. The Societies there are all various, but the Lord conjoins all by means of the heavenly form, so that they are a one; for a one is made from things various suitably disposed into a form.

7396². The scattered Societies (which constitute this order on earth) have been collected by the Lord, so that, like the Societies in Heaven, they represent one man.

7401. That there is one God. Sig. and Ex.

8003. 'In one house it shall be eaten' (Ex. xii. 46) = consociations of suitable goods, so that they make one good. . . The reason these (goods of the angelic Societies) make one good, is that every one comes forth not from one, but from many; for from many various but still accordant things is made a form which makes a one through a harmony; in Heaven, through a spiritual harmony, which is the good of love. Refs.

8150². Ordination under generals, effects that the several things act a one . . .

8232. 'There was not left in them even to one' (Ex. xiv. 28) = all and each.

8470³. There is such a communication in Heaven; and hence it is that they are a one; exactly as the organs, members, and viscera in man . . . by means of such communications present a one. Such a communication of goods is possible solely through love, which is spiritual conjunction . . .

8613. 'On this side one, and on this side one' (Ex. xvii. 12) = on every side.

8702². Thus these two (good and truth) are a one.

9037. When, in the Word, 'one day' is said, or 'one week,' or 'one month,' or 'one year,' there is signified an entire period of time, or of state.

9488. 'One and a half' = what is full. 9489. 9508. 9531. 9637.

9530. 'One' = something.

9602. 'One curtain' (Ex. xxvi. 2) = each of the several truths.

9613. 'The habitation shall be one' (ver.6)=the whole Heaven thus completely a one.

— For Heaven consists of myriads of Societies, and still the Lord leads them as one Angel, or as one man. The cause of this is that among them, all is mutual love from the Lord's love: when this love is among all, and in all, then all can be disposed into the heavenly form, which is such that many are a one; and the more there are, the more strongly are they a one. (So) with the innumerable things in the human body, which, although they are distinct and various, still make a one: the reason is that they are in a like form to that in which Heaven is . . .

—³. The conjunction of the angelic Societies into one Heaven has relation to the following laws. 1. That every one in the form of the Heavens comes forth according to the heavenly harmony of a number of consociates. (Five more laws stated.)

9626. 'Thou shalt join together the Tent so that it be one' (ver.11)=the external of Heaven thus completely a one.

9809⁷. For the Lord is in them, but not among them as one and distinct.

10079. It is said, 'one piece of bread,' 'one cake,' and 'one wafer' (Ex.xxix.22,23), because the Divine good, in itself, is one.

10182². One Angel prevails against a thousand from the Hells.

H. 14. Love so conjoins the Angels that in the Lord's sight all are as one.

37. The Lord thus effects that the three Heavens are a one.

56. Every one comes forth from things various; for a one which is not from things various is not anything; it has no form, and therefore no quality. But when a one comes forth from things various, and the various things are in a perfect form, in which each adjoins itself to the other as a friend accordant in a series, it then has a perfect quality. Heaven, too, is a one from things various ordained in a most perfect form. Ex.

63. As Heaven is such, it is ruled by the Lord as . . . a one . . .

64. The reason so many varied things act in man a one, is that there is not anything there which does not . . . perform a use: the whole-commune-performs a use to its parts, and the parts to the whole . . . and therefore they provide for each other, mutually respect each other, and are conjoined in such a form, that all and each relate to the whole-commune-and its good. Hence it is that they act a one.

—². Hence those in the Heavens act a one; but this not from themselves, but from the Lord . . . Sig.

372. Hence two consorts are not called two, but one Angel.

405. Every one is formed from the harmonious consensus of many; and it is such a one as is this consensus. Thus is it that every Society of Heaven makes a one; and that all the Societies of Heaven make a one; and this from the Lord alone, by means of love.

—^c. From this universal and singular regard-aspectu-(all the things in the body) act as a one.

499². The interior thought acts a one with the exterior through correspondence . . . But with those in evil (they do) not act a one . . .

503. The thought then makes a one with the will; and such a one that it scarcely appears (to the Spirit) that he is thinking, but that he is willing; and almost the same when he is speaking.

N. 37. With these, the Internal and External act a one; as do the effecting cause and the effect; or as do the prior and the posterior.

J. 9³. From this order in creation it may be evident that such is the containing nexus from primes to ultimates, that, regarded together, they constitute a one, in which the prior cannot be separated from the posterior . . .

—^c. (Thus) the human race and the angelic Heaven make a one . . .

12. Heaven is of all forms the most perfect; and the more there are in it, the more is there given a direction and consensus to a one . . .

—⁴. The quality of every form is from the ordination together of the varied things therein; and from their mutual respect; and from the consensus to a one; from which every form is considered as a one . . .

M. 42². (At a distance the two consorts appeared as one Angel.)

44⁶. Their love grows every day into conjunction, even so that they are no longer two, but as a one. —⁷.

50. In Heaven two consorts are not called two, but one Angel: this is meant by 'They are no more two, but one flesh.' 177, Ex.

75⁵. I said, Ye two are one; and the man replied, We are one: her life is in me, and mine in her: we are two bodies, but one soul: the union between us is like that of the heart and lungs; she is my heart, and I am her lungs . . .

88. In these two (the truth of good, and the good of truth) there has been implanted from creation an inclination to conjoin themselves into a one. Ex.

158. That conjugal love conjoins two souls and thence minds into a one. Ex.

178. That those who are in love truly conjugal feel themselves a united man, and as one flesh. Ex.

196. To the end that the will of both may become one; and that thus they both may become one man. Ex.

215. That those who are in love truly conjugal continually want to be one man; but that those who are not want to be two. Ex.

482. That the souls of two unite themselves, when love for the sex is restricted to one woman or one man of the sex . . . is clearly evident from the fact, that the lives of both unite themselves; consequently their souls . . .

354. That the truths of faith, however numerous they are, and however diverse they appear, make a one from the Lord . . . Gen.art.

362. That the Lord, charity, and faith, make a one, like the life, will, and understanding in man . . . Gen.art. 576.

D. 4046. The universal human race, from the first creation, must form a one . . .

6027¹⁷. She desired to become one with him as to the body also, which also took place. (See MARRIAGE, here.)

E. 374². 'One' is predicated of good, and 'three,' of truths; and by 'one,' when predicated of good, is signified what is perfect; thus also what is genuine.

992². The origin of these delights is from the fact that the consorts want to be united, as to their minds, into a one, and that Heaven conspires into such a union . . .

—³. The consorts pass the night in each other's bosoms, as if they had been created into one.

1004². Love truly conjugal is not possible except between two; as neither is the Lord's love towards Heaven, which is one from Him and in Him; or towards the Church, which also is one from Him and in Him; for all in the Heavens, and in the Church, must be one through mutual love from love to the Lord: the Angel in Heaven, and the man in the Church, who does not in this way make one with the rest, is not from Heaven, neither is of the Church.

— . The man communicates his soul to his wife by actual love . . . hence the two become one; and then each and all things in the body of the one have regard to their mutual in that of the other. This is genuine marriage, possible only between two. Ex.

—³. When, therefore, the two minds act a one, then also the two bodies are so united potentially, that they are no more two, but one flesh. To want to become one flesh is conjugal love . . .

—⁴. There are consorts in the Heavens who are in such conjugal love, that both can be one flesh, and they are so when they want, and they then appear as one man. I have seen, and I have spoken with them, and they have said that they have one life . . . and are as the pairs (of organs) in man . . .

1136. 'In one hour' (Rev. xviii. 10) = suddenly; here, also, everything; thus, total. Ex.

D. Love ⁱ. That which is thus universal is perceived no otherwise than as a one; and a one without a singular perception of singulars is obscure . . .

One-eyed. Luscus. T. 346.

E. 513⁶. 'Onions,' etc. (Num. xi. 5) = such things as are of the lowest Natural; that is, of the Sensuous Corporeal.

Only. Unicus.

A. 33^e. There can be but one only true love; and therefore one only true life.

868. Not a single evil, or a single falsity, can be . . . abolished.

1742². Not knowing but that such is the only life.

2773. 'Thine only one, whom thou lovest' (Gen. xxii. 2) = the only one—solum—in the universe by which He was to save the human race.

4321. That there is only one life . . .

5816². This is the only truth of the Church; that is, the only one which makes man a Church.

7270^e. The substance, which is substance, is only one—modo unica . . . and in the formations this one only substance reigns . . .

8541. They call Him the one only Lord . . .

9407¹¹. The Divine truth . . . is the one only thing from which are all things; for that which is the first is the one only thing in the sequents and derivatives.

9410⁵. The Divine truth is the one only substantial thing . . .

9863. The good which is from the Lord is the one only thing from which are all truths.

W. 44. That the Divine love and the Divine wisdom are . . . the Itself and the Only. Gen. art.

45. The Only is said of that from which every other thing is. Now as the Itself and the Only is substance and form, it follows that it is the very and the only substance and form . . . It is the very and only love, and the very and only wisdom; thus the very and only essence, and the very and only life.

49. For the Infinite, that is, the Divine, is the one and only.

197. In all these the first thing is singly—unice—regnant in the sequents; nay, it is the one only thing in them; and, as it is the one only thing in them, it is the all in them.

304^e. The spiritual Sun is the one only substance from which all things are.

P. 157. There is one only essence, one only substance, and one only form, from which are all essences, substances, and forms . . . That one only essence, substance, and form, is the Divine love and Divine wisdom . . . The One Only and Itself is omnipresent, omniscient, and omnipotent. And this One Only and Itself is the Lord from eternity. Ex. scriptum.

308. Which two are this one only life.

R. 29. Who is the Itself and the Only from primes to ultimates . . . thus who is the very and only love, the very and only wisdom, and the very and only life in Himself; and thus the very and only Creator, Saviour, and Enlightener from Himself. Sig. and Ex. 38.

541². The one only thing from which man is man, is . . .

M. 185². A thousand things (contrasted with) only one thing.

380¹⁰. A centre which he believed to be the only one.

T. 22. That God is the Itself, the Only, and the First . . .

379. That true faith is the one only one . . . Ex.

380. Which recedes from the true faith which is the one only one . . .

758². There is not a single genuine truth left.

759. As if it only were in the light.

Can. Redeemer x. 5. The Lord is the one and only—solus—God.

Only-begotten. Unigenitus.

A. 2628². The Lord as to the Divine Human is called . . . 'the only-begotten.' Ill. 2827^e.

6716³. For He was His only-begotten Son.

8127². By 'the only-begotten Son' (John i. 18) is meant the Lord as to the Divine truth.

T. 26. The Son born of God through the Virgin Mary in time is the Only Son of God, and the only-begotten.

D. 5841. The Bull Unigenitus. 5844². J. (Post.) 103. 104.

637⁹. 'Make to thee the mourning of an only-begotten' (Jer. vi. 26). Ex.

Onycha. Onycha.

A. 10293. 'Onycha' (Ex. xxx. 34) = the affection of interior natural truth; (for) 'fragrant onycha' = the affection of natural truth: by 'onycha' is signified this truth; and by 'fragrant,' the perception of what is grateful, which is from the affection of truth; thus the affection itself. . . That it is the affection of truth in the Natural which is signified by 'onycha,' is because it is named in the second place . . . Hence it is that by 'onycha' is signified the affection of natural truth, which is interior truth in the natural man . . . The truths which are signified by these spices of the incense belong to the spiritual class.

A. 110. 'There is bdellium and the onyx stone' (Gen.

ii.12) . . . 'The onyx'=the truth of faith from love. Such is the celestial man. 115^e.

[A.] 3858¹⁰. By the two 'onyx stones' which were upon the two shoulders of the ephod, was represented the like, but in a lesser degree, as by the twelve upon the breast-plate . . .

9476. 'Onyx stones, and stones of fillings' (Ex.xxv.7) =spiritual truths and goods in general; (for) 'onyx stones'=the truths of faith which are from love, or spiritual truths; for the truths of faith which are from love are spiritual truths. . . The reason 'onyx stones'=the truths of faith . . . is that they were upon the shoulders of the ephod; and by the shoulders of the ephod are signified truths of faith, or spiritual truths.

9855². The conservation of the good and truth in the Spiritual Kingdom; or, what is the same, the conservation of the Spiritual Kingdom with all work and power, is signified by the two onyx stones placed upon the shoulders of the ephod, in which were engraved the names of the sons of Israel.

9872. 'A beryl, an onyx, and a jasper' (ver.20)=the spiritual love of truth, in which the higher things cease; (for) the signification of these stones is derived from their colours; for the colour of all the stones of this order verges towards a shining white from azure blue.

—³. That 'the onyx,' which is the second stone in this (the fourth) order, =the truths of faith from love, see above.

9873⁷. 'An onyx stone'=the external of the Spiritual Kingdom; and therefore it was this stone which was placed upon the two shoulders of the ephod with the names of the sons of Israel engraved in it.

— . As the onyx and the sapphire, in a general sense, =the externals of the two Heavens, they were placed in the middle of the three stones of the second and the fourth order; for the middle involves the whole. As these two stones involve everything which is signified by the rest of the stones in these orders, it is said in Job: Wisdom cannot be put on an equality with the gold of ophir, with the precious onyx and the sapphire (xxviii.16).

Ad. 3/1303. The sardonyx (Ex.xxv.) is of a flesh colour, pellucid; thus signifying clearness, or life, from love. Ex.

1733. The sardonyx (Ex.xxviii.) is among the less precious stones; its colour is almost fleshy, from reddish to white. The precious kind is pellucid.

E. 431⁴. By 'onyx stones' were signified truths from the good of love.

Coro. 27. 'Onyx stone' (Gen.ii.) =the truth of doctrine.

Opaline. Opalinus.

M. 15^e. Their tunics were of silk of an opaline colour.

136². He gave those who sat on the north, robes of an opaline colour.

208. When I was near, the shower was opaline, like dew.

T. 112⁷. To the right I saw a cloud of an opaline colour.

A. 816^e. They wander about in dark places.

1524. An obscurity like a shady cloud.

1869². The smaller things of nature (are seen) as something opaque . . .

4967². The light with them becomes opaque, like the light of evening or night.

6388^e. Objects which absorb the rays of light appear opaque.

6406². Things which are inordinate are dark and opaque . . .

H. 584. All the Hells, when looked into, appear dark and dusky.

586². In some of the Hells there are dark forests. 587^e.

T. 34^e. Like the influx of light into the opaque things of the earth . . .

Open, To. Aperire.

Opening. Aperitio.

Opening, Aperture. Apertura.

A. 99^e. Then all the man's thoughts and ideas, and even his words and actions, in which there is what is celestial and spiritual, are open, and lie open-potent—even from the Lord.

212. 'Their eyes were opened' (Gen.iii.7)=a dictate from within. III.

1514^e. Except by one whose interior senses have been opened.

1521. If the (spiritual) sight were only opened to anyone . . .

1530. The Lord so appeared to them because their interior sight was opened.

1532. As soon as anyone's interior sight is opened . . . 1619.

1640³. It is perceived whether the idea of their speech is closed, or open.

1763^e. One who has the interior organs of hearing opened . . .

1869. Shown by this: that the ideas of thought were opened. Ex.

— . The things which thus appear visible can be opened again . . .

1880³. When the interior sight was first opened to me . . .

1972. The sight of my spirit has rarely been opened to me so far (as to the Heaven of Angels).

2535. (In prayer) there is a certain opening of the man's interiors towards God . . .

2759. It was perceived that the interiors of (these simple Spirits) could be opened.

3928. When the internal man has been opened towards Heaven . . .

4197⁴. That goods and truths have Power to close and to open Heaven . . .

4402³. Still, these things must be opened.

4527^e. When the Lord opens man's internal sight . . .

5036³. His interiors are then open towards Heaven.

5126². The communication with the interior man has not yet been opened.

—³. From childhood to adolescence the communication to the interior Natural is opened . . . From adolescence to young manhood the communication between the Natural and the Rational is opened . . . and in proportion as he then imbues goods through truths . . . the Rational is opened ; but in proportion as he (does not do this), the Rational is not opened . . .

5246³. The falsities and evils with man are opened by means of temptations . . . When they are opened, that mistiness appears . . .

5370. 'Joseph opened all in which' (Gen.xli.56)=communication from remains. 'To open,' here, = to communicate.

5494. 'One opened his sack' (Gen.xlii.27)=observation. . . That 'to open' it=to observe, is evident from the series . . .

5580. It is these scientifics which . . . open the way to the interiors ; for . . . the external sensuous things are first opened, and then the interior sensuous things, and finally the intellectual things ; and, when the intellectual things have been opened, they are represented in the former . . .

5656. 'When . . . we had opened our wallets' (Gen. xliii.21)=introspection into the exterior Natural. . . 'To open'=introspection ; for he who opens, does so for the sake of introspection.

5715. There appeared a great square aperture . . . In the deep there was seen a round aperture, which was then open, but presently was closed . . .

5849^e. For many reasons the sight of this eye is not opened to man . . .

6203. The Hell which is in such evil is then opened.

6476. The ideas were then open . . .

6619. The ideas of my thought were then opened towards Heaven . . .

—^e. In proportion as his thought is more opened towards Heaven . . .

6620². The quality of the idea of thought when closed, and when open. Des.

6655². The Angels want their minds to be open . . .

6692. With many of them this communication (with Heaven) was open ; but with those who had not lived in the good of charity . . . there was sometimes open communication with evil Spirits.

6695. The interiors of my spirit have been opened to me . . .

6735. 'She opened it, and saw the child' (Ex.ii.6)=investigation into its nature . . .

7161⁴. When these Hells are opened . . .

VOL. V.

7506². The interiors of those who receive, are open to Heaven.

8043. 'The opening—apertura—of every womb' (Ex. xiii.2)=that which is from charity. Ex. 8074. 8088.

8273. The Hells were then for the most part open . . .

8367². When a temptation is finished, communication is opened with Heaven.

8456^e. Hence, with the regenerate, there is what is open even from the Lord . . .

8513. Everything done according to Divine order is open within even to the Lord . . .

8694². With those in good and thence in the affection of truth, the Intellectual of the mind is open into Heaven ; and their soul . . . is in consort with the Angels.

8868³. With the Angels, all things of their discourse are open even to the Lord.

8975^e. When they are not in the good of charity, the internal man is not open—patet ; for good is what opens it.

9075². Hence the internal man cannot be opened . . .

9084. 'When a man shall have opened a pit' (Ex. xxi.33)=if anyone shall have received what is false from another. . . 'To open,' when predicated of falsity, = to receive, here, from another . . .

9128^e. The internal man with those in evil and falsity is closed above, and open below . . .

9144². The Intellectual is then closed above, and is opened below ; that is, it . . . is opened to Hell.

9184². When the internal has been opened by regeneration, good from the Lord inflows through it . . .

9266. 'A present blinds the open in eyes' (Ex.xxiii.2) =that gains cause truths not to appear. Ex. and III.

9279². The externals are opened by the things of the world ; and the internals by the things of Heaven. There are two things which are thus opened ; intellectual things and voluntary things ; intellectual things are opened by the things which relate to truth, and voluntary things by those which relate to good. . . Hence it is evident what those things are which open the life of man. Further ex.

9296². In proportion as he is not carried away by these delights, this (new Voluntary) is opened.

—³. This Voluntary is closed above, and open below ; that is . . . is open to the world.

9594². These degrees of life are opened successively. Ex. . . These are the means through which are successively opened these three degrees of life with man ; thus the three Heavens with him. . . As the good of life opens them, so the evil of life closes them. . . And as the Heavens are successively opened with man according to the good of his life . . . with some the First Heaven is opened and not the Second ; with some the Second Heaven is opened and not the Third ; and with those only who are in the good of life from love to the Lord is the Third Heaven opened.

9707. In proportion as man thinks and wills from Heaven . . . his internal man is opened. The opening is to Heaven, even to the Lord Himself. (But) in proportion as man thinks and wills from the world . . . the internal man is closed, and the external is opened. The opening is to the world, and to self.

[A.] 10156³. So long as man is merely natural, his interiors . . . are closed, and his exteriors . . . are opened . . . But when man becomes spiritual, his interiors . . . are opened . . .

—⁴. When man suffers himself to be elevated by the Lord, Heaven is opened with him . . .

10225⁵. (This state of intelligence) does not exist until the interiors are opened towards Heaven. . . Man becomes intelligent and wise in proportion as the interiors are open; and they are opened in proportion as he lives to Heaven and not to the world.

10227². The ascription of all things to the Lord opens the interiors of man towards Heaven . . .

10276^e. The Word is that which opens Heaven.

10367. Therefore, unless man is in good, his internal man is not opened . . . As Heaven is in the internal man, when this is opened the man is in Heaven.

10429². With those in the good of love and truths of faith, the internal man is open . . .

10483. When there is an aperture to Hell. Sig. and Ex.

—². Every Hell . . . is opened above according to the necessity and need: this opening-apertura—is into the World of Spirits. Ex.

10551⁵. The man with whom the Internal has been opened perceives the Word spiritually; but does not know this while he lives in the world . . .

10629. The Church cannot be instituted with any people, unless their interiors have been opened . . . and the interiors are not open, except with those who are in truths of faith from the good of life from the Lord. But with this people the interiors could not be opened . . . These are the things which close the interiors towards Heaven, and open them towards Hell.

10685. For the internal man is opened and given to man through temptations. Ex.

10751. When their external memory is opened by the Lord . . . But it is not opened except with the Lord's good pleasure.

—^e. The interior sight is then opened to the inhabitants . . .

H. 33. The more open to the Lord the interiors are, the more interior is the Heaven in which they are. . . Those with whom the third degree is open are in the Inmost Heaven; (and so on). The interiors are opened by the reception of Divine good and Divine truth . . .

76. When the sight of his spirit is opened . . .

—^e. 'Open his eyes that he may see; and Jehovah opened the eyes of the young man' (2 Kings vi. 17). R. 36⁵.

171². Such things were seen by them when Heaven was open to them; and Heaven is said to be opened, when the interior sight is opened . . . and, when it pleases the Lord, the eyes of the spirit are opened . . .

208. With those in the Inmost Heaven, the third degree is opened, and the second and first are closed; with those in the Middle Heaven, the second degree is open, and the first and third closed; and with those in the Ultimate Heaven, the first degree is open, and the second and third closed . . .

250. To speak with Angels is granted to those alone with whom the interiors have been opened through Divine truths even to the Lord . . . The reason Divine truths open the interiors of man, is . . . The internal man is not opened except through the Divine truth . . .

267. The reason the Angels can receive such great wisdom, is that their interiors are open . . .

—^e. Those with whom the first degree has been opened, are in the First Heaven; (and so on).

314^e. When the internal of man has not been opened above, but only below . . .

334^e. By which the interiors (of the infants) are opened . . .

351². Thus, and no otherwise, are the interiors of man opened.

—^e. The wise of this kind are those whose interiors are not only open, but also cultivated . . .

352. The interiors of these have not been opened except from below . . .

396². In proportion as these two loves of Heaven are received . . . the interiors are opened . . . But in proportion as these two loves of the world are received . . . the exteriors are opened . . .

519^e. When they come to their own Society, their interiors are opened . . .

533. In proportion as man is conjoined with Heaven, the higher things of his mind are opened; and, in proportion as these are opened, he . . .

553³. At their apertures, which are called 'the gates of Hell,' appears a monster . . .

571. When the Hells are opened, there appears . . .

584. The apertures, or gates, to the Hells, which are beneath the mountains, hills, and rocks, appear like holes and fissures . . . Des. 585.

Life 86⁴. So long as man does not shun evils as sins, the concupiscences of evils . . . are like a black cloud beneath the spiritual mind, and prevent its being opened. But as soon as man shuns evils as sins, the Lord inflows from Heaven, and . . . opens the spiritual mind; and thus intromits the man into Heaven.

W. 138. He is elevated into the heat and light of Heaven, which is effected by the interiors being opened; and, when these are opened, love and wisdom inflow into the interiors of the mind, and the heat and light of Heaven into the interiors of the body . . .

162. Their mind is closed above, and opened below . . .

187. Through the opening of the interior degrees of his mind . . .

236. That these three degrees of height . . . can be successively opened; and, as they are opened, the man is in the Lord, and the Lord in him. Ex.

237. Nevertheless, the second degree . . . is not opened thereby; this one is opened by the love of uses . . . But still the third degree is not opened by these; but this one is opened by the celestial love of use . . .

238. In the world, man knows nothing of the opening of these degrees . . .

— . When he dies, he comes into that degree which has been opened in the world . . .

240^e. For by the opening of these faculties man comes into the higher degrees . . .

245². Still, these forms are not opened until spiritual heat conjoins itself with spiritual light . . . by this conjunction these transparent forms are opened . . .

—^e. The light of winter does not open anything . . .

246². By the love of good and its heat a higher degree is opened: for the Lord inflows from above, and opens it . . .

248. That if the higher degree is not opened, the man becomes natural . . . Ex.

— . The natural degree is first opened; and afterwards, if he shuns evils as sins, and looks to the Lord, the spiritual degree is opened; and finally the celestial one. As these three degrees are successively opened . . . it follows that the two higher degrees may not be opened . . .

—^e. It is not known that a natural man becomes spiritual by the opening of any higher degree, and that the opening is effected by a spiritual life . . .

252. The quality of the natural man with whom the spiritual degree has been opened. Ex.

253. The quality of the natural man with whom the spiritual degree has not been opened, but still is not closed. Ex.

— . For the spiritual degree is opened through the conjunction of love and wisdom . . . If, therefore, genuine truths . . . are not known, love does not avail to open this degree, but only keeps it in the potency of being opened; which is meant by its not being closed . . .

260. That . . . if the higher degrees are not opened, the natural mind acts against them; but if they are opened, it acts with them. Ex. 263.

274². These three degrees are neither opened nor closed in . . . early infancy.

P. 32³. These degrees are opened with man according to his life; in the world actually but not perceptibly . . .

33². That man himself must open the doors, is evident from . . . 'if anyone will open the door, I will come in to him . . .' (Rev.iii.20).

34. These are the degrees which are opened with man according to the conjunction; they are opened according to the love . . .

—^e. For the Lord alone opens the spiritual and the celestial degree; but only with those who are wise from Him.

37. For felicities are exalted . . . as the higher degrees of the mind are opened.

145². When man desists from evils, the door is opened . . .

147. Then the Lord opens the spiritual mind . . .

183². Like a wound, which is not healed unless it is opened.

187². Their understanding is . . . open only below . . .

328⁶. Thus have (these receptacles) been closed above, and opened below . . . when yet from creation they were open in front and closed behind . . .

R. 36⁵. This is effected by the opening of the sight of man's spirit.

82. For the goods of life open the interiors of the mind; and, when these have been opened, truths appear in their own light.

174. 'Who openeth and no one closeth, and closeth and no one openeth' (Rev.iii.7)=who alone is omnipotent to save. Ex. Compare E.206.

176. 'I have set before thee an open door' (ver.8)=that Heaven has been opened to those who are in truths from good . . . E.208.

218. 'To open the door' (ver.20)=to live according to the Divine truth.

469. 'A little book open' (Rev.x.2)=the Word as to the following doctrine therein . . .

529. 'The temple of God was opened in Heaven . . .' (Rev.xi.19) . . . By 'opened' is signified that the Divine Human and the decalogue . . . are now seen.

798. The power of opening and closing Heaven. Ex. 840, Sig. and Ex.

820. 'I saw Heaven open' (Rev.xix.11)=revelation from the Lord, and manifestation then.

M. 13. Approach, and your eyes will be opened, and you will see the garden . . .

30. The eyes of their spirits were opened (when they saw Angels, and the Lord after His resurrection).

39². No Angel or infernal can speak with man unless he has the interiors of his mind opened . . .

101. That two consorts are this form . . . in proportion as the interiors of their minds have been opened. Ex.

203². With some the mind is not closed, but remains half-open above; and, with some, open.

211. Hence love truly conjugal opens the interiors of the minds, as it opens the interiors of the senses; and, with these, the organics of the whole body. . . A man is wise in proportion as the interiors of his mind are opened; for by the opening the thoughts . . . are elevated into higher light, and the affections . . . into higher heat.

263. Then, suddenly, the earth opened . . . 264.

355². In the primeval state of man all the interiors of the mind were open even to the Lord . . .

T. 42. These regions (of the mind) are opened successively; the ultimate region . . . from infancy to childhood, by knowledges; the second region . . . from childhood to adolescence, by thoughts from knowledges; and the highest region . . . from adolescence to young manhood, and further, by perceptions of Truths . . .

[T.] 134. There was a great aperture in the middle of the roof (of the temple).

487². The Angels closed the externals of their minds, and opened their internals . . .

508⁵. So that the understanding is opened above more and more.

— . Falsities close the understanding, and Truths open it.

719. That the Lord . . . opens Heaven to those who approach the Holy Supper worthily . . . Gen.art.

777². In His glorified Human the Lord cannot appear to any man, unless He first opens the eyes of his spirit; and these cannot be opened with him who is in evils and the derivative falsities.

779. The Lord has opened the sight of my spirit . . .

D. 4027. A lucidity appearing through apertures . . .

4350. With those in love truly conjugal, the interiors are opened . . .

4635. Thrust down into Hell through apertures . . .

5634. A long aperture there, which stretches under the earth.

E. 162². Thus is opened the internal spiritual man . . . D.Love xvii⁵.

295⁹. 'To open the hand' (Ps.cxlvi.16)=to gift with good.

303. 'To open the book and loose its seals' (Rev.v.3)=to know and perceive the states of life of all.

352. 'To open the seal' (Rev.vi.1)=to reveal hidden things.

537. 'He opened the pit of the abyss' (Rev.ix.2)=communication and conjunction with the Hells . . .

543³. With every man the interiors . . . are opened successively. Ex.

599. 'A little book open'=the Word manifested. 615.

739³. When homogeneous things . . . approach the spiritual mind, it opens itself. Ex.

—⁴. But the third degree is opened with those who at once apply Divine truths to life . . .

832³. As they are in truths from good, so is the internal spiritual man opened with them . . .

1056². After birth, the sensuous mind is first opened; then the natural mind; and, as he studies intelligence, the rational mind; and, as he studies wisdom, the spiritual mind.

De Dom. 14. The eyes of their spirits were opened (when, after His resurrection, they saw) the Lord as to the body which He had had in the world.

D. Love. xxi³. The heat of this sun (merely) opens the extremes of the body . . .

Open, To be. Patere.

Open. Patulus.

A. It is evident. (A common phrase.)

2034⁵. In the other life the interiors are open. 2049⁴. 5700^e.

4121². The affections there are open.

4126². In the other life all thought is open.

5032². There, the interiors are open; the thoughts, intentions, and ends manifest themselves, and are open as in clear day.

6667^e. Then it is manifest what the man's quality had been interiorly.

H. 131. The interior Angels love all things with them to be open . . .

M. 355⁴. When the interiors of man are open-patula.

Open, To. Retegere.

A. 3798. To open the Word as to the interiors. Sig.

H. 498^e. The exteriors of the spirit are first opened.

507². 'There is nothing covered which shall not be revealed . . .'

J. 69³. Until their interiors are opened.

Open air. Subdialis. E.391²³.

Openly. Palam. H.489⁶.

Operation. Operatio.

Operate, To. Operari.

A. 55³. When the Lord 'blesses,' and 'says,' that is, operates, good and truth increase immensely.

63. The time of combat is the time of the Lord's operation.

1102^e. That he has the internal things through which the Lord operates. Sig.

1285^e. Then, through charity, the Lord inflows and operates . . . according to the genius of each one.

1712². Let him believe that the Lord has operated this with him.

—³. If he (remains in a passive state) he is not a subject into which the Lord can operate.

1717^e. The Lord operating through the internal man.

— . This is done without the man's knowing how; for it is the Lord's Divine operation.

2034⁸. There was (then) no operation of the Divine through rational things into the internal sensuous things of man.

3884. (The four operations of Heaven into man.) D.1613.

4031^e. It is freedom through which the Lord operates . . .

4326. When the operation (of these Spirits) ceased . . . it was shown how far their operation extended itself . . . By these things was signified the quality of the operation of the general involuntary sense . . . D.3861.

4791^e. I felt their operation, not in the interiors, but in the exteriors, of the tongue.

5032³. Heaven can thus operate into the internal man.

5060. When Societies operate, they act into those parts of the body to which they correspond. Des. 5171.

5171. But their influx and operation can be perceived by those only who are in the other life . . .

5717^e. The operation (of these Spirits) is easily derived into the man to whom it is determined.

5893³. The operation of the Angels into the truths of faith with man is rarely effected manifestly . . . For this operation is effected by an imperceptible influx.

7170². I (then) felt . . . a stronger operation thence. —^c.

8329. 'Thou hast worked, Jehovah' (Ex.xv.17)= that which is from the Lord alone; (for) 'to work,' when predicated of regeneration and of Heaven, =from the Lord alone.

8330. 'Thou hast worked, Jehovah' is predicated of good.

10299. From the influx and operation of the Lord's Divine into all and each. Sig. and Ex.

H. 88. The operation of the soul into the body.

576. He who knows anything about the operation of his own mind . . .

589³. Light and shade operate nothing from themselves; but heat by them.

S. 53. The Lord never operates except in what is full.

W. 216. When man operates and does works or deeds.

341. That the influx from Hell operates those things which are evil uses . . . Ex.

345. That the ultimate Spiritual . . . operates this. Ex.

346. That there are two forms into which operation by influx takes place. Ex.

P. 119². Only such operation from the Lord in the interiors, as is that of the Lord in Hell. Ex.

120. Neither does man know how the Lord operates into all things of his mind . . . The operation is continual . . .

175. That . . . man is not to perceive or feel anything of the operation of the Divine Providence . . . Gen.art. 176.

180². In all operation they make a one. Ex.

—⁶. If man knew all the operations of both the brains into the fibres . . .

181². What has been said about the natural operations of the body, is to be said about the spiritual operations of the mind.

186. If man plainly saw the operations of the Divine Providence . . .

207. The Divine Providence is the Divine operation in the man who has removed the love of self.

220³. All the operation of the Lord is from primes and ultimates together; thus in what is full.

331³. There is no operation except into a subject . . .

332. The operation of the Divine Providence to save man . . . 333. 334. 335. 336.

R. 128. Charity and its operation. Sig. and Ex.

649. The operation of the Lord into the (Old) Church. Sig. and Ex.

672. The Lord always operates from innmosts through ultimates, or in what is full.

840. The operation of the Lord into lower things. Sig. and Ex.

875⁷. It is the like with affection, thought, and operation.

962¹¹. As the Lord's Divine operation from His Divine omnipresence is meant by 'the Holy Spirit' . . .

M. 400. All the operations in the universe progress from ends through causes into effects.

I. 1³. The mind, in its operation itself, acts together with the body; but still every operation is first successive and afterwards simultaneous; and successive operation is influx; and simultaneous operation is harmony.

11. In every operation there is an active and a passive . . .

T. 67. Unless heat and light operated upon men . . . they would be empty things; but they become real by influx into them, and by operation in them.

87. The will . . . without the understanding cannot operate . . . As with the operation of the heart and lungs in the body . . .

105. Man does not feel the presence and operation of God; although God . . . operates with man all the good of love and truth of faith.

135⁵. Propitiation signifies the operation of clemency and grace . . .

138. Concerning the Holy Spirit, and the Divine operation. Chapter.

— By 'the Holy Spirit' is meant the Divine operation proceeding from the one and omnipresent God. 139, Ex.

139. For the Divine operation is effected through the Divine truth . . .

142. That the Divine virtue and operation which are meant by 'the Holy Spirit' are, in general, reformation and regeneration . . . Gen.art.

—². But all these operations of the Lord cannot be set forth here . . . The Lord is continually operating these salvations with every man . . .

—^e. Hence the above named operations are mediate ends . . .

143. The operation of these virtues is 'the Holy Spirit' . . .

146. The Divine virtue and operation . . . with the clergy in special . . . Gen.art.

— The Lord's operations. Enum.

— Let them beware of thinking that their zeal is the Divine operation in their hearts . . .

153. That the Lord operates from Himself from the Father . . . Gen.art.

— By operating is here meant the same as by 'sending the Holy Spirit'; because the above named operations . . . are the operations of the Lord. Ill.

166. Like the soul, body, and operation with man. Ex.

[T.] 359. Natural charity is a working for favour . . .

366^e. Man's form . . . varies the operations.

369. Man can think of God's operations, which are principally faith and charity.

374. Like the affection of the mind, and the operation of the body.

616. (The notion that) man's operation is to be excluded.

— As if God alone were to operate on His part, and no power given to man to co-operate.

D. 2392. Concerning the manifest operations of Spirits.

3974. The operation of Spirits into the tongue. Ex.

6050^e. They teach a manifest perception; but not a manifest operation . . .

6085. Concerning the operation of the understanding and the will.

D. Min. 4599. Concerning the operation of those who have a general affection.

E. 802⁵. That God operates goods with man unawares to him. Ex.

— But still God gives man to perceive the things necessary for salvation; for God operates that man may think and speak the things of faith, and will and do the things of love . . . For God operates into those things with man which are from Himself in him . . . The Divine operation itself often takes place unawares to man; but the effects take place with his knowledge . . . If it were not as from themselves the Divine influx and operation would flow through and not be received . . .

806³. Thus the Divine operation reaches to ultimates in the world; whereas otherwise it would reach only to the first in Heaven . . . and if men were to recede . . . the Divine operation with men would cease . . . The Divine operation through His Human is called His immediate influx down to ultimates.

864. For the Lord operates this with man, as if man followed of himself . . .

— For man does not perceive the operation of the Lord into his will and thence thought . . .

1086⁵. For, when the Lord operates, He does not operate from primes through mediates into ultimates; but from primes through ultimates, and thus into mediates. 1087³.

1153⁵. Man is not to see how the Divine Providence operates for good against evil. Ex.

—⁶. Although it operates in the most singular things of man's thought and will which regard his eternal state . . . Therefore the Lord's operation is into man's love, and from it into his understanding . . .

1166³. While the Lord operates through Heaven, it is also from Himself; but it is said mediately, because the Divine operation flows through the Heavens . . .

1170. 'As many as do work in the sea' (Rev. viii. 17) = (those who) confirm by reasonings from the natural man. 'To work there' = to reason and to confirm by reasonings. Ex.

De Verbo 3⁵. The difference of the operations in the Natural, the Spiritual, and the Celestial. —⁸.

—^s. Their operations, which are many—for every one is in some work—are similar. How the spiritual operate cannot be described before the Natural; nor how the celestial operate before the Spiritual; for they differ as do their thoughts, speech, and writings.

12. The Divine operation does not fall into an empty man . . .

D. Wis. vii. 3². That these spiritual operations may inflow into the body . . .

4². (Otherwise) there is not effected any rational operation.

viii³. It is the like with all Divine operation . . . (Thus) all Divine operation goes through to ultimates; and there creates and operates.

xii. 3. The natural sun operates into those things which are beneath it . . . but it does not operate at all into those things which are above it . . . For to operate into lower things is according to order; for this is to operate into those things which are from it . . .

Can. Redemp. viii. 10. All the operation of God is effected from primes through ultimates; thus from His Divine through His Human.

Holy Spirit. The operation of the Holy Spirit is instruction, reformation, and regeneration . . . vi.

i. 9. From the soul through the body proceeds all operation.

Trinity ii. 1. The Holy Spirit is the operation proceeding from both (the Divine Itself and the Human).

Ophir. Ophir.

A. 1245. 'Ophir' (Gen. x. 29) the son of Joktan = a ritual. 1247^e.

9881². 'Gold from Ophir' = spiritual good. Ill.

E. 242²¹. 'In best gold of Ophir' (Ps. xlv. 9) = in the good of love. 298⁷. (= the good of love to the Lord. 684¹⁸.) (= Divine good. 863¹⁴.) 1120².

A. 5721. (Hated) still more those who in any way opposed themselves.

6779. That the teachers who were in evils opposed themselves. Sig. and Ex.

6907. That falsity would oppose itself. Sig. and Ex.

7042. Opposition. Sig. and Ex. . . For the Divine never opposes itself to anyone ; but it is man who opposes himself to the Divine . . .

8744. Hatred and revenge against those who oppose themselves. II. 587². D. 4587.

C.J. 21. The Lord conjoins the Heavens and the Hells by means of oppositions.

Opposite. Oppositus.

Opposition. Oppositio.

See OVERAGAINST.

A. 1151. The reason they signify the opposite, is that all Churches have been changed to their opposite.

1370. These cannot be understood except from the opposites.

1691. The love of self and of the world are the opposites of celestial and spiritual love ; and, as they are the opposites, they are continually endeavouring to destroy . . .

—^e. In the opposite sense.

1834. Almost all significations are also in the opposite sense. 2686⁷. 3300³. 3322, Ex.

2057. Diametrically opposite to mutual love . . .

2327^e. For they are opposites.

3425. The internal and the literal sense appear opposite . . . but are not opposite, but correspond. The reason they appear opposite, is that those who see the Word so are in what is opposite. So with a man who is in what is opposite in himself . . . he sees the things of the internal man as if they were opposite to himself ; when yet he himself as to the external man is in what is opposite ; and, if he were not in what is opposite . . . they would altogether correspond. Examp. —³. (Thus) things which appear opposite are not in themselves opposite ; but they appear so because the men are in what is opposite.

3605². Hatred is the complete opposite of good ; and opposites are never possible in one subject.

3607. All good . . . with the infernals is turned into the opposite.

3913³. The natural man, from himself . . . is completely opposite to the spiritual man. Des. 3927³. 7290².

3928. Man does not know that (these delights) are so opposite.

3938⁶. These delights are opposites, like Heaven and Hell.

4067². The Societies which are in the opposite . . .

4172^e. For good appears more clearly from the opposite than from the non-opposite.

4293. The same words, here, have an opposite sense.

4750². Most things in the Word have a good sense and one opposite thereto ; from their good sense is known the quality of their opposite sense ; for the things which are in the opposite are diametrically contrary to that in the good one. 6762².

—³. Against the good of celestial love in the opposite is the evil of the love of self ; and against the good of spiritual love in the opposite is the evil of the love of the world. 8288².

4818^e. If man had known the good of charity, he would also have known its opposites . . .

494S. The love of self and of the world is opposite to heavenly love.

5268. Most things in the Word have an opposite sense ; for the reason that the same things which take place in Heaven, when they flow down towards Hell are turned into the opposites ; and actually become opposites.

5278². The things which are opposite (in the memory) are separated thence, and hang downwards, and present themselves beneath, and equilibrate those things which are above. This ordination is effected through the good which inflows. This is the case with all the thought of man.

5313¹⁶. Examp. of an opposite sense.

5356². Temptations give the quality of the apperception of good and truth through the opposites which evil Spirits then infuse. From opposites, when perceived, are acquired relatives ; from which is all quality ; for no one knows what good is unless he also knows what non-good is ; nor what truth is, unless he knows what non-truth is.

5702. That which is in the opposite. Sig. and Ex.

579S⁷. When the blessedness inflows into the Societies which are in the opposite—for all the Societies of Heaven have Societies opposite to them in Hell; whence is the equilibrium—the latter feel a change from the presence of Heaven, and then become angry, and break out into evil, and at the same time run into the evil of the penalty.

5864^e. Thus (Heaven and Hell) are in what is opposite.

6193. Thus by means of these opposite influxes, man is kept in . . . freedom.

6391². For (these delights) are opposite.

640S². For these loves are completely opposite.

7074. The Spirits of Mercury object opposite things. Ex.

7075^e. For every Truth appears relatively to its opposites.

729S². Something opposite (to the truth) is then presented. Ex.

7319^e. The quality (of falsity and evil) is made sensible, not from themselves, but from their opposites.

7344². Truths and falsities are complete opposites; and opposites cannot be applied (to each other) unless there are intermediates . . .

8700⁴. For good and evil are opposites, and the one destroys the other.

9320². The latter can never be together with the former; for they are opposites.

9346. Evils and goods are opposites or contraries; and two opposites or contraries cannot be together . . .

10809². What is opposite to the Sun of Heaven. H. 122, Ex.

H. 400³. For these loves are completely opposite; and, when opposite acts into opposite, such a pain is produced.

—⁴. The reason they are opposites. Ex.

536. The relation of Heaven to Hell (is like that) between two opposites, which act against each other; and from the action and reaction of which there results an equilibrium, in which all things subsist.

541. For each Society in Heaven has a Society opposite to itself in Hell; and this for the sake of equilibrium. . . . That to every good there is an opposite evil, and to every truth an opposite falsity, may be known from the fact, that there is not anything without a relation to its opposite; and that from the opposite is known its quality; and in what degree it is; and that hence come all perception and sensation . . .

554^e. These two loves are diametrically opposite to each other.

596. The two infernal kingdoms opposite to the two heavenly Kingdoms. Ex.

C. J. 21^e. Natural love, if not subject to spiritual love, is opposite to it.

Life 70. As evil and good are two opposites, exactly as are Hell and Heaven, it follows that if man shuns any evil as sin, he comes into the good opposite to the evil. Examp. 75. S2.

71. As this good and that evil are opposites, it follows that the latter is removed by the former. Two opposites cannot be together . . . if they were, there would be what is lukewarm . . .

W. 271. That evils and falsities are in all opposition against goods and truths, because . . . Ex.

—². When yet it is the opposite [that is true].

—^e. Although, therefore, everyone acknowledges that evil and good are opposites, still, those who are in evils cherish a contrary idea about this opposition; and none a just one but those who are in goods. Ex.

275. That the three degrees of the natural mind . . . are opposite to the three degrees of the spiritual mind . . . Ex.

—². The Hells are opposite to the Heavens in each and all things. . . The lowest Hell is opposite to the highest Heaven, (and so on). It is the like with the natural mind . . .

— . The reason the Heavens and Hells are in what is opposite in this way, is that their loves are opposite in this way. Ex.

276. That the natural mind which is Hell is in all opposition against the spiritual mind which is Heaven. Ex.

419². If man shuns these evils as sins, he loves the things which are opposite to them . . .

—⁴. Scarcely anyone Knows (these things) until he has removed their opposites. When he has removed the opposites, he is in them . . . Meanwhile there is as it were a covering interposed . . .

424. Natural love separated from spiritual love is opposite to it. Ex.

P. 18. Good and evil, etc., cannot be conjoined; for they are opposites; and opposites fight together so that the one destroys the other. (The case of the lukewarm.)

24. Good is not Known as to its quality, except . . . through the opposition by evil. All the Perceptive and Sensitive is from this; because their quality is from this . . . There must be variety in every Thing . . . and when there is variety in its opposite also . . . then there is relation . . . But it is to be known that an opposite may take away, or it may exalt, the perceptions and sensations; it takes them away when it commingles itself; and it exalts them when it does not commingle itself . . .

38^e. For everything is Known from its opposite.

69. This place in Hell (to which an evil man goes) opposite to a certain place in Heaven; for Hell is in the opposite against Heaven. . . For the two opposites are held together in connection ordained in a like situation against each other.

100. The Lord cannot enter unless evils and falsities are removed; for evil is opposite to good, and falsity is opposite to truth; and two opposites can never be commingled; but when the one accedes to the other, a combat takes place, which lasts until one gives place to the other . . . In such an Opposite are Heaven and Hell . . . This opposition is meant by the words of Abraham to the rich man . . .

233². For evil is opposite to good, and good is opposite to evil, and two opposites cannot be together.

[P. 233²]. Two opposites are not possible in one substance or form together. Ex.

299. That the Lord rules Hell through opposites . . . Gen.art. R.62^e.

M. 17^e. (When good progresses down to its least till it perishes, the opposite begins . . .)

138. Conjugal love cannot be Known, except indistinctly, unless its opposite appear . . .

147². Two opposite heats cannot be together . . .

261³. The universals of Hell are diametrically opposite to the universals of Heaven. Enum.

262. I was not allowed to examine the one love without the other, because the understanding does not perceive the one love without the other; for they are opposites . . .

423. Concerning the Opposition of Scortatory Love, and of Conjugal Love. Title.

425. That scortatory love is opposite to conjugal love. Ex.

— . There is nothing in the universe which has not its opposite; and opposites are not relatives to each other, but are contraries. Relatives are between the greatest and the least of the same Thing; but contraries are, from what is opposite, against them; and the latter are relatives among themselves; and therefore the very relations themselves are opposites. That each and all things have their opposites, is evident from (these examples): The opposite of light is thick darkness; the opposite of heat is cold; of the times of the world, the opposites are, day and night, summer and winter; of affections, the opposites are, joys and mourning, gladnesses and sadnesses; of perceptions, the opposites are, goods and evils, and truths and falsities; and of sensations, the opposites are, things delightful and things undelightful. Hence it may be concluded that conjugal love has its opposite; and, that this is adultery, everyone can see . . . Say, if you can, what else is its opposite . . .

—². That marriages and adulteries are opposites (shown by experience).

—³. That the opposition of scortatory and of conjugal love is unknown, is owing to the delights of the flesh . . . (Hence) adulterers will say that conjugal love has no opposite . . .

426. That scortatory love is opposite to conjugal love, as the natural man, regarded in himself, is opposite to the spiritual man. Ex.

436². The reason these two spheres do not conjoin themselves, is that they are opposites; and opposite acts upon opposite no otherwise than as do enemies . . .

444⁸. Goods and truths descending from Heaven into Hell were progressively turned into their opposites; the good into evil, and the truth into falsity. T.492. D.2620.

T. 62. The perception of opposites differs from that of relatives; for opposites are things outside, and are against the things within; for an opposite arises when one thing completely ceases to be, and another then arises with the endeavour to act against the former one; like a wheel which acts against a wheel; and a stream against a stream . . .

— . There are, therefore, relatives in each opposite . . . but the relatives in Hell are all opposite to those in Heaven. Now, as God perceives . . . all the relatives in Heaven . . . and thereby perceives . . . all the opposite relatives in Hell, it is evident that He is omniscient . . .

569³. Hell, as the opposite of Heaven, is ordained according to all the varieties of the love of evil. It is on account of this opposition, that between Heaven and Hell there is a gulf which cannot be passed over . . .

713. There are three universals opposite to these; which are, the devil, evil, and falsity. The devil, or Hell, is in the opposite against the Lord; evil is in the opposite against good; and falsity against truth . . . As they are opposites, they are completely separated; but still they are held together in connection by a wonderful subjection . . .

763. For quality is perfected by relative differences of the more and the less opposite. Examps.

D. 1427^e. If they knew Truths [only], they would not have the opposites; and thus thought also would perish; which is varied, acts, and lives, from opposites.

2443. There is never anything to which there does not answer [something] from its opposite; and opposites to the intermediates . . .

3641^e. For there is an equilibrium of all things by opposites.

4585. For there are opposites to every Society in Heaven.

4636. On the Hell of those who are opposite to inmost celestial love.

D. Min. 4750. According to the perception of opposites.

E. 1043². So the Hells are distinguished into two kingdoms opposite to these . . . because the Heavens and the Hells are opposite to each other; and opposite must correspond exactly to opposite, that there may be equilibrium . . . It is continually ordained by the Lord, that all the genera and species of good and truth in the Heavens should have opposite to them evils and falsities of kinds corresponding to them by what is opposite in the Hells. Ex.

1143⁴. As the two loves of Hell are opposite to the two loves of Heaven, Hell and Heaven are in what is opposite to each other. Des.

Can. God vii. 14a. God continually provides that opposite ends from opposite loves do not prevail.

viii. 11. Opposites are not taken away . . . because evils . . . do not penetrate to the Divine things which are within.

Opposition. Adversatio.

1861¹³. 'To deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor' (Jer.xxi.12)=to do the good of charity.

2417⁸. ('The oppressed,' a class of the good.)

4844⁵. Some of those who (are being instructed by the Lord in truths, and are being led to good) are called 'the oppressed' (Ps.exlvi.7).

6639³. These are the things which are described by the sons of Israel being oppressed by the Egyptians . . . 6657^e.

6863. 'I have seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them' (Ex.iii.9)=on account of the endeavour to subjugate . . .

9196. 'A sojourner thou shalt not afflict, and shalt not oppress' (Ex.xxii.21)=that those who want to be instructed . . . are not to be infested . . . 'To afflict'=to be infested with falsities; 'to oppress'=to be infested with evils . . . 9268.

E. 328¹⁵. 'To redeem from the oppression of man' (Ps.exix.134)=to deliver from the falsities of evil. . . 'The oppression of man'=the destruction of truth through falsities.

—¹⁶. 'To oppress for nought' (Is.lii.4)=falsification; for falsities are nought.

355³⁵. By 'oppression upon the loins' (Ps.lxvi.11) is signified that there is no perception of the good of love.

386²⁰. 'Who doeth judgment for the oppressed' (Ps. exlvi.7). By 'the oppressed' are here meant those who are in falsities from ignorance. Their oppression is by Spirits who are in falsities.

600¹¹. By 'the waters of oppression' (Is.xxx.20) are signified temptations as to the truths of faith. . . 'Straitness,' and 'oppression,'=states of temptations.

654⁹. 'They shall cry unto Jehovah because of the oppressions' (Is xix.20)=their grief because of the defect of truth and thence of spiritual good . . .

811²⁰. They who are called 'the oppressed' (Jer.i.33) are the nations who are in truths and goods from the Lord, who . . . are detained by those who seduce them and exclude truths from them.

Option. Optio.

P. 223². When the option is given them, as is done with every one, they let themselves into a state of insanity . . .

Coro. 28^e. The option of turning to either higher or lower things is given to man.

Opulence. Opulentia.

Opulent. Opulentus.

See under AID, and RICHES.

A. 1774. For the sake of acquiring dignity or opulence.

3913³. The natural man is in his bliss when he is opulent above others, and possesses the wealth—opes—of the world; but the spiritual man . . . when in the Knowledges of truth and good, which are his opulence . . . Nor does he spurn opulence, because by its means he can be in exercise, and in the world. See 5159³.

3951². (The idea) that spiritual good is not possible in worldly opulence. (See RICHES, here.)

4459⁴. He who believes from the heart that of himself he possesses nothing, knows nothing, is not wise, and has no power, in Heaven is rich and abounds; for the Lord gives him all wealth; for he is wiser than all others, and richer than all others; he dwells in most magnificent palaces, and in the treasures of all the riches of Heaven.

4508. 'All their wealth—opes' (Gen.xxxiv.29)=all the scientifics which they have acquired for themselves. 'Wealth'=scientifics; for spiritual wealth is nothing else.

5120¹³. The profane things which they conceal beneath their external sanctity, are that they intend nothing else than to become the greatest and most opulent of all . . .

5135⁵. In the spiritual life there are no other riches—opes—than the Knowledges of good and truth; and no other possessions and inheritances than the felicities of life which are from goods and the derivative truths.

5573². Who are in Heaven, and yet had been opulent, and some of them among the most opulent.

6481. The Divine Providence has as its end the eternal salvation of man; thus not . . . his eminence and opulence . . . (for) eminence for the most part begets the love of self, and opulence the love of the world . . . and therefore such things are given to the evil; and also to the good if they are not out of place for them and do not lead them away from Heaven.

[A.] 7007³. Besides, in eminence and opulence there is worldly, but not eternal happiness; hence they are for the wicked as well as the good; and if not [given] to the good, it is to prevent them from being turned away from good.

7217². They place nothing real in faith and charity . . . but solely in opulence and eminence . . .

7820. (Thus) those who are in eminence and opulence above others, can look above themselves to the Lord equally with those who are not in eminence and opulence; for they look above themselves when they have eminence and opulence as means, and not as the end.

8118². It then never came into anyone's mind to attack the inheritance of another, and thence to acquire for themselves opulence and dominion.

8318³. Those who are in evil from the love of the world . . . estimate the neighbour solely from his opulence; thus his wealth-opes; and not himself.

8478³. Those who trust in the Divine . . . if they become opulent, do not set the heart on opulence.

8908². He who has opulence as the end . . .

10409². (The idea that) man comes to opulence not from any Divine aid . . .

10776. That eminence and opulence in the world are not real Divine blessings . . . They seduce many, and turn them away from Heaven. N.270.

361. The rich in Heaven are in opulence above the rest. Des.

— . Such as had been their uses in the world, such is their opulence.

N. 276. That opulence and eminence . . . are not regarded by the Lord as blessings; but only as means for man's life in the world. Refs.

P. 183⁴. The Lord leads man to regard (opulence) not for the sake of himself, but for the sake of use; thus that it belongs to uses, and thence to himself; and not to himself, and thence to uses.

185. Most of those who in the natural world had become great and opulent, and in their honours and riches-divitiis-had looked to themselves only, at first speak about God . . . But as they then manifestly see the Divine Providence, and, from it, their final lot . . . they conjoin themselves with devils . . .

216. When he sees the evil in glory and opulence . . .

250². Besides, what is . . . opulence greater or less? Is it in itself anything but an imaginary affair?

M. 250. (Inequality as to opulence, a cause of cold between consorts.)

—^e. Opulences in Heaven are the endowments of being wise; according to these wealth-opes-is given them in sufficiency.

T. 533². These two (evil) loves may reign more . . . with the poor than with the opulent . . .

D. 4427. The Angels are . . . most opulent. Des.

E. 644¹². 'Fat and opulent' (Is.xxx.23)=full of the good of love and the derivative truths; for . . . 'opulent' is said of truths.

1185². The tenth law of the Divine Providence is,

That man, from his Own prudence, has led himself to eminence and to opulence, although these seduce. . . Gen. art.

— . There are two things which principally affect the lower minds of men: eminence and opulence . . . opulence is of the love of money and possessions. (Continued under EMINENCE. 1187³. 1190². 1191². —^e.)

Ordain. See ORDINATE; and under DECREE —sancire, and INAUGURATE.

Order. Ordo.

See under LAST, LAW, ORDINATE, and SUCCESSIVE.

A. 121. Heavenly order, or the order of life (shown by the four rivers).

637². The order of man should be for one to love another as himself . . . The order of the brutes is that according to which they live; thus they live altogether according to the order in which they are, and man altogether contrary to order . . .

842². When such Spirits are driven away a serenity takes place, which is the beginning of the disposition of all things into order.

—³. Before anything is reduced into order, it is very common for things to be reduced into a confused mass, as it were a chaos; and thus the things which cohere badly are dissociated, and then the Lord disposes them into order.

911. The order is for celestial things to rule spiritual ones; through these, natural ones; and, through these, corporeal ones. But when corporeal and natural things dominate over spiritual and celestial ones, order is destroyed; and, when order is destroyed, there is an image of Hell; and therefore order is restored by the Lord through regeneration; and, when it has been restored, there is made an image of Heaven.

—². In Heaven the order is such that . . . and there is also such an order with everyone who is in Heaven.

—^e. Thus order is utterly destroyed.

987². Wild animals are born into a certain order of nature . . .

1055^e. For man has destroyed in himself the order of nature; but, when he can be regenerated, or be restored to order again . . . there is conjunction by charity. Tr.

1450. The order was that the Lord should first of all be imbued with the celestial things of love.

—^e. The Lord was introduced, according to order, into celestial things . . .

1475. This is contrary to order . . . order itself is that the Celestial, through the Spiritual, should enter into the Rational, and thus into the Scientific . . . and, unless this order is observed, there is never any wisdom.

—². How the Lord was instructed . . . according to all order. Tr.

1480. These foods succeed each other in this order. Enum.

1486². Thus they are subordinated . . . in order; and thus all things, according to order, are subordinated to the Lord.

1495². Something shall be said concerning order.

Order is, that the Celestial inflows into the Spiritual . . . the Spiritual into the Rational . . . the Rational into the Scientific . . . and when man is being instructed in earliest childhood, there is a like order, but it appears different; namely, that he progresses from scientifics to rational things, from these to spiritual, and thus finally to celestial. Ex.

1554. According to order. Sig. and Ex.

— . The Lord progressed according to all Divine order . . . According to such an order are all carried along who are being created anew; yet this order is various with men, according to the nature and genius of each. But the order in which man is carried along, when being regenerated, is known to no mortal . . .

1685. The same kings are here enumerated in a different order . . .

1712². Such is order, that man should do good as if from himself. . . To remain in a passive state is contrary to order.

1728. Divine truth is the order itself of His universal Kingdom . . . Divine good is the essential itself of order . . .

1834². Provided it was not contrary to Divine order; that is, to the precepts of the decalogue.

1902. For this would be according to the order of influx.

— . If order had not been destroyed in man.

—². Thus inflowing through the external way, and thus in inverted order.

1919³. For such is the order, connection, and influx . . .

—⁴. Jehovah the Lord was then above . . . the order which is in the Heavens . . . It is Jehovah from whom is order; hence it may be said that Jehovah is order itself; for from Himself He rules order; not in the universal only, but also in the most singular things . . .

2057. That the love of self . . . is destructive of heavenly order itself . . . —⁴.

2219². This is the order into which man was created . . . This also is the order of Heaven, in which he should be while he lives in the world . . .

—³. From the love of self there spring . . . all heinous things against the order of human society, and against the order of heavenly society.

— . For the truths of faith are the very laws of order in the Lord's Kingdom.

2258². There are two things which constitute the order of the universal Heaven, and thence in the universe; namely, good and truth. Good is the essential of order . . . truth is the secondary of order . . .

2447². All order is from Jehovah . . . according to which each and all things are ruled by Him. . . These things are from the laws of order as to good . . . The man then casts himself into the laws of order which are of truth separated from good. —³. —⁴.

—^e. For all the laws of order are from the Divine Itself, the Divine Human, and the proceeding Holy of the Lord.

2477². They knew that what they said was true, because it was from Divine order.

[A.] 2556. With the man who is regenerate, all things are disposed into order, such as is in Heaven, and this from influx.

2571². According to the order by which man also becomes spiritual and celestial.

— . The Lord's thought was then . . . also according to order.

2588⁸. From truths to enter into rational and scientific things, is according to order; but from scientific and rational things to enter into truths, is contrary to order . . .

2592. (The idea of Cicero about order.) H. 322.

2634. 'As God commanded' = according to Divine order. . . The precepts of God . . . are each and all things of Divine order; insomuch that Divine order is nothing but the perpetual precept of God; and therefore to live according to the precepts of God . . . is to live according to Divine order, and in Divine order.

— . It was according to Divine order that . . .

—². (This) is according to Divine order.

—^e. In proportion (therefore) as man lives in Divine order, all things with him are disposed by the Lord according to the order which is from Him in the Heavens . . .

2733². He might know that to violate marriage was . . . contrary to order both Divine and human.

2795^e. The Lord could thus . . . reduce all things into order.

2888. Life diffuses itself . . . in an order and series incomprehensible.

2953^e. The spiritual and celestial things in the Word follow one another disposed into the most exact order.

2973³. The things which proceed in order from inmost to outermost . . .

3017. When all things were disposed by the Lord into Divine order. Sig. and Ex.

— . Man is thus enriched when the things with him are disposed by the Lord into spiritual and celestial order; thus into the image and likeness of Divine order.

—². What is meant by all things being disposed by the Lord into Divine order in His Human . . .

3086. That the Divine good inflowed into the natural man . . . and (thus) disposed into order all things therein; for all . . . the order in the natural man is from influx from the Divine . . . Tr.

3141. For such is the Divine order, according to which is all regeneration; thus according to which was the Lord's glorification.

3147⁷. Then the Lord . . . disposes the natural man into order . . .

—⁸. All things are then disposed into order through the influx of spiritual things from the Lord.

3167². By the fall, the natural man . . . thus inverted Divine order itself.

3219^e. It is contrary to order for the posterior to influx into the prior . . .

3316². This (chaos of doctrinals) is to the end that they may be reduced into order; for whatever is to be reduced into order is in the beginning such. Sig.

— . These things are not reduced into order of themselves; but by the good which inflows into them . . .

3318³. The vessels (then) harden themselves against the heavenly order according to which life acts.

—⁵. But the Lord . . . by the most grievous combats . . . reduced all things in Himself into Divine order.

3332². When man is in the good of life, the order is inverted.

3345. There are interior speeches, in order. Enum.

3490². The Lord (did this) according to Divine order . . .

3508. It is according to order that . . .

—^e. From the order of the things which inflow, and from the order, among themselves, of the things which are there, goods are effected.

3563. That these things are of inverted order, is evident from the fact, that it is according to order for good to be within, and truth without.

—³. According to order it is done in this way, that . . . The influx is then according to order . . .

— . As this is not according to order, it is said to be of inverted order; but still, relatively to this (fact), it is according to order.

—⁴. Then the good and the truth of the Natural . . . are, relatively, in inverted order; that is, the Voluntary is without, and the Intellectual within.

—⁵. This is the genuine order; and the former order tends to the forming of this order.

3565^e. The Lord acts by ends, and, through these, successively disposes the intermediates into order.

3597³. That he inverts order. Sig.

3599². The natural good of the Lord's infancy . . . could not be at once in such an order that it could receive the Divine . . . but had first to be reduced into order . . .

3600^e. This is the inverse of order.

3603³. When man is in this state, the order is inverted . . .

3632. Divine order, and the derivative heavenly order, is not terminated except with man, in his corporeal things; namely, his gestures, actions, expressions of face, speech, external sensations; and in their delights. These are the extremes of order.

3642^e. The Hells . . . are thus kept in order . . .

3702. Through man . . . the very ultimate of nature would have lived from the Divine, if man had lived according to Divine order.

3703¹⁸. As the Israelitish people represented . . . the heavenly order . . . they were distinguished into tribes, families, and houses . . . and according to this order they measured out the camp; and also journeyed according to a like order . . .

3726. The order in which the Lord made His Natural Divine. Tr.

— The ascent from the ultimate of order. Tr. Here, that it is truth which is the ultimate of order.

3739. The Lord's Kingdom in the ultimate of order. Sig. and Ex.

— That higher things are in the ultimate of order as in their house. Ex.

3849³. Affections are what . . . dispose truths into order; genuine affections . . . into heavenly order; and evil affections . . . into infernal order, that is, into what is opposite to heavenly order.

3855. As external things are further from the Divine . . . they are relatively without order—inordinata; nor do they suffer themselves to be reduced into order as do internal things. Examp.

3902. This in the order in which it takes place with a man who is being regenerated.

3928³. The representation of the sons of Jacob is according to the order in which they are enumerated. 3939². 4603⁹. 4605. 6337, Ex. 6640, Ex.

3986³. Where the Divine is within, all things are disposed into such an order that . . .

3993¹². This order is infernal order itself.

—¹³. Evils with which goods, and falsities with which truths, are mixed, are wonderfully disposed into order by the Lord. Ex.

4009⁹. In the Sensuous, as in the ultimate of order, prior things are together . . .

4065⁹. The Divine Itself has no need of anything, (but) He willed that all things should be done according to order. 4075.

4075. He thus reduced into order both Heaven and Hell . . . 4287². 4295³.

4129². Societies . . . are adjoined to man, and separated from him . . . according to the order there.

4156³. The same light . . . disposes the scientifics into order . . .

4236. Truths and goods are disposed by the Lord according to the heavenly order; hence . . . the heavenly order itself, which is Heaven, is 'a camp.' This 'camp,' or order, is such, that it cannot possibly be infringed upon by Hell . . . It is this very order which was represented by the encampments of the sons of Israel. Further ill. 4250.

4250². When good inflows, as takes place when the order is being inverted . . . Hence an entirely different order is made from what there was before . . .

4251. Lest order should perish in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. For the Lord, from His Own power, disposed and reduced all things in Himself into Divine order.

4255. How the Lord made the Human in Himself Divine, according to order.

4302. That truths were not yet disposed into such an order that . . . Sig. and Ex.

—³. Concerning the order in which truths must be so as to be able to enter into good. . . All truths, like goods . . . are in Heaven disposed into such an order

4345. An order from more general things . . . Sig. and Ex.

4360⁹. As truths are conjoined with good according to an order from more general things.

4402. For the Lord glorified Himself according to Divine order; and according to such order He regenerates man. 4964³, Refs.

4543⁹. When spiritual good begins to act as first in the natural mind, it disposes into order the truths there.

4585². The Lord progressed in a like order to that in which He makes man new . . . namely, from what is external to interior things; thus from the truth in the ultimate of order, to good . . .

4594². (Made) His Human Divine according to order from the lowest degree to the highest; and thus (disposed) into order all things in the Heavens and Hells.

4603². The sons of Jacob are now named in a different order . . . because it here treats concerning the order in which are truths and goods in the Natural, when this had been made Divine . . .

4612³. Hence the order of goods and truths in the Natural is inverted, or opposite to the heavenly order.

4839. That it was against Divine order. Sig. and Ex.
— All that evil is against Divine order which flows forth from evil interiorly; that is, from an intention of evil . . .

—². That evil is against Divine order, and good according to it, may be known to everyone; for Divine order is the Lord Himself in Heaven; for the Divine good and truth which are from Him constitute order, insomuch that they are order; Divine good is its essential, and Divine truth its formal. When Divine order is represented in a form, it appears as a man . . . And in proportion as Angels, Spirits, and men . . . are in good and truth—thus in Divine order—they are men.

—^e. Evil Spirits . . . appear as monsters . . . because evil itself is against order; thus is against the human form . . .

4939. How the Celestial, which . . . is the first of order, inflows into the Spiritual, which . . . is the second of order; and finally into the Natural, which is the third of order.

[A. 4939]^e. Nature, from influx, subsists according to this order.

4961. As (the Lord made His internal man Divine) according to Divine order; this order is here (Gen. xxxix.) described.

5008^e. From natural light to see the things of spiritual light is against order; but it is according to order to see from spiritual light the things in natural light.

5013. Both in life and in doctrine (such) are in inverted order . . . when yet it is according to order for the Spiritual to dominate . . .

5076. Inverted order. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. 'To sin' = to act against Divine order; whatever is against it, is sin. Divine order itself is Divine truth from Divine good: in this order are all who are in truth from good . . . But against this order are those not in truth from good . . .

—^e. That the external sensuous things were in inverted order relatively to interior things. Tr. 5077².

5114. The first in order is the Intellectual; and the last is the Sensuous.

5122². At last the order is inverted, and what was last becomes first. Ex.

5125. That the things of the (intellectual) Sensuous would be reduced into order. Sig. and Ex. 5165, Ex.

5126². By external innocence, the Lord reduces into order the things which enter through the Sensuals.

5127. From the law of order. Sig. and Ex.

5128⁶. Sensuous things are then disposed into order. Ex.

5159. With the man who is being regenerated, a new state begins when the order is changed. Ex.

5208. That, in the general light, truths may be there replaced in their order.

5223^e. Magic was nothing else than a perversion . . . of the order there.

5229. To be conjoined with the things of inverted order. Sig. and Ex.

5343. All truths joined to good are . . . thus in order. Ex.

5396^e. How the Lord rules things inordinate from what is peaceful in the middle, by which (they) are reduced into order.

5608². (These successives) when they come forth simultaneously, place themselves in the same order. Ex.

5700. Separation of the scientifics which are in inverted order. Sig. and Ex.

—². Scientifics are said to be in inverted order, when they abuse heavenly order to do evil; for heavenly order consists in good being done to all . . .

—^e. When scientifics are in order, they are disposed by the Lord into the form of Heaven.

5703². When the Lord is present, all things are disposed into order by His presence itself. The Lord is order itself; and therefore where He is present there is order; and where there is order He is present. Order itself is described in what follows, which consists in truths being rightly disposed under good.

5726. Sin is all that which is against Divine order, (and thus causes death and disease).

5798⁷. When the Lord reduces into order Heaven and the Societies there, which is continually being done on account of new comers (it causes the infernals to be punished). Ex.

5850. There is general influx into the things in order; particular influx into those not in order. Animals . . . are in the order of their nature . . . But men are not in order; nor in any law of order . . .

—². The order into which man was created, was to love his neighbour as himself . . .

—^e. As man's life is completely contrary to heavenly order, he is ruled by separate Spirits and Angels . . . 5993.

6013. The interior things which vivify truth, succeed in the following order . . .

—². These things must be in the same order with man (as they are in the Heavens).

6272. 'He crossed his hands' = not according to order. Ex.

6322². Influx from internals into externals is according to order.

6323³. If man were in the order into which he was created; namely, in love towards the neighbour, and in love to the Lord . . . he would be born into scientifics, and into all spiritual truths, and celestial goods . . . But, as he is born not into order, but contrary to his order, he is born into ignorance of all things.

6338. (This universal) reduces into order all things in the Heavens . . . When this universal acts, it appears as if goods and truths ordinate themselves, and thus spontaneously flow into order. This is the case with the universal in Heaven, which (latter) is in order, and is continually kept in order, by the universal influx from the Lord; and it is likewise the case with the Societies . . . for as soon as Angels or Spirits are congregated, they are at once disposed into order as of themselves . . . which would never take place unless the universal which proceeds from the Lord contained in itself the veriest singulars of all, and unless all these were in the most perfect order . . .

6366. When celestial love . . . inflows into spiritual truths . . . it disposes them into order, and thus submits them to the Lord. Ex.

—². It is from this order that the Lord inflows through the Celestial Kingdom . . . The influx is such in order that the Spiritual Kingdom may be kept in order through the Celestial . . .

6367⁶. For it is heavenly order which was represented by the tribes in their encampments, and which Balaam saw in spirit . . . This order is from Divine good through Divine truth . . . In this order is all power. Sig.

6370². In each Hell there is order; and this order is conserved by the Lord, both immediately, and mediately through the celestial Angels; and sometimes Angels are sent there to reduce into order the inordinate things there.

[A.] 6373. When the Divine was presented through the Celestial Kingdom . . . the things in Heaven and in Hell could not be reduced into order thereby. Ex.

—². Through the Human, the Lord reduced all things into order; first those in Heaven, and then those in the Hells.

640². When man is being regenerated, the order is thus changed.

645¹². In man (these things) succeed in order; (and) according to the order in which they succeed, they also inflow. Enum. . . And, as interior things inflow according to order even to the ultimate, it is evident that the interior things are together in the ultimate in the following order . . . The former order is called successive order; and this simultaneous; and the latter arises from the former . . .

6470. Unless all (thought and spoke) from One, no order of lives could come forth in Heaven; in which however the order is such that . . .

6473. (For) order is from the Lord, being successive from primes to ultimates; and in order itself there is nothing but the Divine . . .

6487^e. All things which are from the Lord are most essential; but they do not follow in order from necessity. Ex.

6559. Such is the order there that evil itself has the penalty with it . . .

6573. That this is according to the order from eternity. Sig.

— . 'To do,' when said of the Divine, = order; for whatever the Divine does is order.

6692. By their hieroglyphics . . . they perverted Divine order.

—². Magic is the perversion of order . . . order is that the goods and truths which proceed from the Lord be received by man; when this is done, there is order in each thing man intends and thinks. But when man does not receive them according to order, which is [to do so] from the Lord; but believes that all things flow blindly . . . he perverts order; for he applies to self the things which are of order . . .

6716³. As the Lord progressed according to Divine order, He (first) made His Human Divine truth . . .

7007³. The Divine Providence regards . . . especially that all things be in order in Heaven and Hell.

7186. It is according to order that the evil be removed by degrees . . .

7206. According to the laws of order from the Lord's Divine Human. Sig. and Ex. 7279.

7256. All things . . . which are according to Divine order, relate to good and truth; and all things . . . which are against Divine order, relate to evil and falsity. The reason is that the good and truth which proceed from the Divine make order, insomuch that they are order.

7270³. He who knows not how it is with order in successives, cannot know how it is with influx. Ex. . . Such is the successive order down to the (Third) Heaven . . . (Such) is the Divine order of successives . . .

7273². The order according to which (the evil) are explored, is the order of truth Divine . . . The order of truth Divine for the evil who are damned, differs from the order of truth Divine for the good who are saved. Ex. . . By degrees, as the evil are explored according to order, so are they judged, and damned.

7296. An abuse of Divine order. Sig. and Ex. 7388.
—^e. There is an abuse of order . . . when the things of order are . . . applied to evil ends . . . For the end of order is salvation . . .

7297. The like by perverting the ends of order. Sig. and Ex.

— . For the things which flow from order are not varied by abuse, but appear alike as to the external form; but not as to the internal form, because they are contrary to the ends of order.

7298. Power from order to make dull as to the apprehension of truth. Sig. and Ex.

— . (This is done) by an abuse and perversion of order.

—². It is according to the laws of order that . . .

7299. The power to abuse order taken away. Sig. and Ex.

7337. Divine miracles . . . progress according to order.

—². The reason magical miracles appear like Divine ones, is that they flow forth from order; and order appears alike in ultimates. Examp.

7426. An endeavour to pervert Divine order. Sig. and Ex.

7884. The worship of the Lord according to the order of Heaven which is for the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

7899. Worship from faith and charity according to Divine order. Sig. and Ex.

7931². By (this) order is meant the order which was in Heaven from the time when the Lord began to dispose all things from His Divine Human . . . According to this order those of the Spiritual Church could be elevated into Heaven . . . but not according to the former order . . .

7995. The laws of order for those delivered from damnation . . . Sig. and Ex.

— . All the statutes . . . were laws of order in an external form, (and represented) the laws of order in the internal form. The laws of order are truths from good. The complex of all the laws of order is the Divine truth . . . (Thus) the Divine Itself of the Lord in Heaven is order; Divine good is the essential of order, and Divine truth the formal.

8150. Reduced into order under generals. Sig. and Ex.

8226. (This=) according to the general state and order in Hell; for in the Hells there is order equally as in the Heavens. Ex.

8237². (Order is maintained in Hell by Angels.)

8357. Truth of order then revealed. Sig.

8510. He who acts from truth is not yet in the order of Heaven; but he who acts from the good of charity is in that order ; for the order in which man is led by the Lord, is through the willing of man . . .

[A.] 8512. When he lives according to the Divine precepts, he lives according to Divine order ; for they are the truths and goods which are from order ; and, when he lives according to order, he lives in the Lord ; for the Lord is order itself. . . By to live according to order, is here meant to be led by the Lord through good ; but to live not as yet according to order, is to be led through truth . . .

8513. That they did not act according to Divine order. Sig. and Ex.

— . What it is to act according to Divine order, and not to act according to it . . . All that is done according to Divine order is open within even to the Lord, and has Heaven in it ; but all that is not done according to Divine order is closed within . . . Therefore Divine order is for the Lord to inflow through the interiors of man into his exteriors ; thus through his will into his act ; which is the case when man is in good . . .

—³. How we are to live so that it is according to order, is taught by the Word . . .

8516³. All in Heaven are thus led ; for this is according to Divine order . . .

8553. When man is such, the order of life is inverted with him . . .

8559. According to the order of life for receiving the life of Heaven. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. When man is in good . . . he is elevated into Heaven ; for he is in the order of Heaven.

8603. Divine truths in successive order. Sig. and Ex.

—². All things in nature come forth from interiors in order . . .

—³. All these things are in successive order.

— . How the case is with derivatives in successive order.

— . In the animal kingdom (also), there are exteriors, interiors, and inmosts, in successive order.

— . As the recipient forms of life are in successive order, so are the lives which result . . .

—^e. The transits from one to the other in successive order are called degrees.

8610. Correspondence with truth in the first of order. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'Moses' = truth in the first of order . . . When truth in the ultimate of order corresponds to this truth, the latter is supported . . .

8643^e. When truths are confirmed, they are reduced by the Lord into order ; and, when they are reduced into order, they enter the second state . . .

8661. Goods Divine in order. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. Goods in order are goods interior and exterior in order successively according to degrees. Refs.

8700. Not possible, because not from order. Sig. and Ex.

—². For in the other life everything is possible which is from order. The Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord is what makes order, and is order itself ; and therefore everything which is according to Divine truth—being according to order—is possible ; and everything which is contrary to Divine truth—being contrary to order—is impossible. Examps. 8988³.

8717². For God . . . holds, from Himself, all things in their order.

8731. After all things have been reduced into order, that is, accommodated . . . it is the end of that state. Sig.

8765^e. This is impossible, because contrary to order ; consequently contrary to Divine truth ; and thus contrary to God Himself, who is order.

8894. 'To bless' = to dispose into heavenly order.

8988. The state into which he then enters according to Divine order. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'God' = Divine order. —³, Ex.

8999. That this is contrary to the laws of Divine order. Sig. and Ex.

9049³. The law of order from which these things flow. Ill.

— . Order is from the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord : the laws of order are truths from good, in Heaven ; and truths separated from good, in Hell.

9163. Each and all things are conjoined there according to the reception of truth Divine . . . thus according to the reception of order which is induced upon each and all things through the Divine truth . . .

—⁴. To destroy the truths from the Divine which are last in order. Sig.

— . The Lord was Divine truth itself in both the first and the ultimate of order.

9184. When man is being regenerated, the order of his life is inverted.

—^e. When man is in such an order of life, gains and honours are blessings to him ; but, if he is in inverted order, they are curses. That all things are blessings when man is in the order of Heaven. Sig.

9278². It is Divine order for Heaven to rule the world with man . . .

9290. According to the laws of order. Sig.

9336. Removal by degrees according to order. Sig. and Ex.

— . It is said by degrees according to order, because with the man who is being regenerated, all things are disposed according to the order of Heaven ; (for) in him there is a like order to that which is in Heaven.

—². (Thus) the order of man's life from birth, and from actual life, is opposite to the order of Heaven.

—⁴. What is properly meant by removal from evils and falsities by degrees according to order. Ex. . . The Divine truth . . . disposes all things into order in Heaven ; and therefore that Divine truth in which there is good from the Lord is order itself. (Refs.) According to this order come forth all things there, and according to it they subsist ; and therefore for Heaven to come forth in man, it is necessary for him to receive the Divine truth in good from the Lord ; and this cannot be done except by degrees according to a like order to that in which the Lord ordines Heaven . . . It is this successive ordination which is here meant by order according to degrees.

9528^e. That the Lord . . . thus disposed Heaven and Hell into order. Refs. 9715.

9596. In such an order do spiritual and celestial things follow with man, and with an Angel in the Second Heaven. Sig.

9666². Things are said to be less perfect, which can be more easily wrested from their order.

9683. This is the successive order of goods from the inmost.

—². Immediate influx is received according to the order in which the man or Angel is . . .

— . Order itself with man is that he live in the good which is from the Lord . . . This influx is continuous, and is adjoined to each and all things of man's will, and it then directs as much as it can to order . . . His voluntary things continually lead away from order; but his involuntary things continually lead back to order. Ex.

9788. 'The statute of an age' = Divine order.

9864. 'Four orders of stone, the order' (Ex.xxviii. 17) = the conjunction of all the truths from good.

— . 'Orders of stone' = truths from good in their order.

9987⁵. 'The Word' = the law of order, because the Divine truth . . . makes order in the Heavens, inso-much that it is order there; and hence the laws of heavenly order are divine truths. Refs. 10119.

—^e. That this is especially a law of order, is because the Lord as to the Divine Human is order in the Heavens; and because everyone who is being regenerated is reduced to this order; and therefore those who are in this order are in the Lord.

10206². For all things follow in order according to the series in which they are described.

10236⁴. For (to enter from the Sensuous into the things of Heaven) is contrary to Divine order.

—⁵. For thus all things progress according to order.

10252. Celestial truths and goods in their order. Sig.

—³. As celestial good thus comes forth through truths in their order, so it afterwards subsists in a like order by the same truths. 10266², Ex.

10614². Thus interior things are in the external in order. Ex.

10634². Everything which is from the Divine . . . progresses according to order even to the ultimate end . . . for the ultimate of Divine order is in the nature of the world. . . In such an order comes forth, and in such a one subsists, everything created in the world; and in such an order also is the man of the Church who has been regenerated by truths . . . In such an order also is the Word . . .

10657. 'Which I commanded thee' = according to Divine order.

10659⁴. Immediate mercy . . . is contrary to Divine order, and what is contrary to Divine order is contrary to God; for order is from God; and His Divine in Heaven is order. To receive order into one's self is to be saved, and this is effected solely by living according to the Lord's precepts. Man is regenerated to the end that he may receive into himself the order of Heaven . . . He who has order in himself is in Heaven . . . but he who has not, is in Hell.

10789. There are two things which must be in order with men: the things of Heaven, and those of the world . . .

10790. Order cannot be kept in the world without prefects, who must observe all things which are done according to order, and contrary to order; and who must reward those who live according to order, and punish those who live contrary to order.

10792. Therefore there must be prefects, who must keep the assemblages of men in order . . . Among the prefects also there must be order, lest anyone, from his pleasure, or want of knowledge, permit evils contrary to order, and thus destroy it . . .

10837^e. They said that (to have more wives than one) is contrary to Divine order.

H. 29. In such an order (as that of the three Heavens) is the Divine which proceeds from the Lord. Hence, from the necessity of order, Heaven is tripartite.

30. The interiors of man . . . are in a like order . . . for into man all things of Divine order were collated, inso-much that he was made Divine order in form . . . Refs.

57^e. For the Lord is everywhere in His own Divine order; for God is order. Refs.

107. All that is Correspondent, which, in nature, comes forth and subsists from Divine order. Divine order is made by the Divine good which proceeds from the Lord: it begins from Him; it proceeds from Him successively through the Heavens into the world; and is terminated there in ultimates. The things, there, which are according to order, are correspondences. According to order, there, are all things which are good and perfect for use . . . Hence it is that all things which . . . are in Divine order relate to good and truth.

108⁴. The reason is that animals are in the order of their life . . . But man has perverted this with himself by a life contrary to order . . . therefore he must be born into ignorance, and then, by Divine means, be brought back into the order of Heaven.

112. In nature . . . all things which come forth according to order are forms of uses . . .

113. As all things according to Divine order correspond to Heaven, so all things contrary to Divine order correspond to Hell.

201^e. To say the form of Heaven, or in the order of Heaven, comes to the same thing; because the form of every Thing is from order, and according to it.

296. The reason man is ruled through Spirits, is that he is not in the order of Heaven; for he is born into evils of Hell, thus entirely contrary to Divine order; and therefore he must be brought back into order; and he cannot be brought back except mediately through Spirits. It would have been otherwise had man been born into the good which is according to the order of Heaven; in that case he would not be regenerated through Spirits, but through order itself; thus through general influx. Man is ruled through this influx as to the things which proceed from thought and will into act; for speech and actions flow according to natural order, with which the Spirits and Angels adjoined to man have nothing in common. Animals, too, are ruled through general influx . . . because they are in the order of their life.

[H.] 297. The Lord Himself inflows with every man according to the order of Heaven; both into his inmosts and into his ultimates . . . This is called immediate influx.

304². In man is the ultimate of Divine order. Ex.

315. He who is instructed about Divine order can understand that man is created to become an Angel, because in him is the ultimate of order . . . Divine order never subsists in the middle . . . but it goes to the ultimate; and then it forms [things]. J. 20.

352³. Animals are in the order of their life; but not man, and therefore he must be led into order through Knowledges. But if man were born into the order of his life, which is to love God above all things, and the neighbour as himself, he would be born into intelligence and wisdom, and thence into the belief of every truth in proportion as the Knowledges accede.

389. All things in the Heavens are instituted according to Divine order, which is everywhere guarded by administrations by Angels . . . These are subordinated, precisely as uses are, in Divine order.

499². With these, order is inverted; for good is without, and evil within.

—³. This is the order into which man was created.

523. The Lord never does anything against order, because He is order itself; the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord is what makes order; and Divine truths are the laws of order, and according to these the Lord leads man; and therefore to save man from immediate merey is against order; and that which is against Divine order is against the Divine. Divine order is Heaven with man; man has perverted it with himself by a life against the laws of order, which are Divine truths: man is brought back into this order by the Lord of pure merey, through the laws of order; and, in proportion as he is brought back, he receives Heaven into himself; and he who receives Heaven into himself comes into Heaven.

N. 279. (Refs to passages on the subject of order).

J. 9. Into man have been collated all things of Divine order from primes to ultimates; into his inmosts, those things which are in the primes of that order, into his ultimates, those in its ultimates; so that man was made Divine order in form . . .

20^e. 'To create in the image and likeness of God' = to collate into him all things of Divine order from primes to ultimates . . .

73². For all things in the Heavens and Hells have now been reduced into order . . .

W. 205. That in successive order the first degree makes the highest, and the third the lowest; but in simultaneous order the first degree makes the inmost, and the third the outermost. Gen.art.

— . There is successive order, and there is simultaneous order. The successive order of these degrees is from the highest to the lowest, or from the top to the bottom: the angelic Heavens are in this order . . . In a like successive order are the states of love and wisdom there, of heat and light, and of the spiritual atmospheres. In a like order are all the perfections of the forms and forces there.

—². When discrete degrees are in successive order, they may be compared to a column divided into three steps . . .

—³. But simultaneous order, which consists of like degrees, is different in appearance: in this, the highest things of successive order, which are the most perfect and beautiful, are in the inmost, (and so on) . . . It is like that column subsiding into a plane . . .

206. As the highest of successive order becomes the inmost of simultaneous order . . . therefore in the Word what is higher = what is more interior . . .

207. In every ultimate there are discrete degrees in simultaneous order. The motor fibres in every muscle; the fibres in every nerve; and the fibres and little vessels in every viscus and organ, are in such order . . . There is a like order of these degrees in every seed, fruit, metal, and stone . . .

298^e. Those things are called uses which . . . from creation, are in order; but those things are not called uses which are from the proprium of man; for . . . they are against order.

310³. In ultimates are all prior things together, in their order.

432³. The compages of this little brain interiorly, as to situation and fluxion, was in the order and form of Heaven; and its exterior compages was in the opposite against that order and form.

P. 83⁶. With him who is being regenerated, the order of life is turned . . . for the Natural separated from the Spiritual is against order, and the Spiritual is according to order . . .

180⁶. That man would (in that case) pervert and destroy all the order and tenor of the Divine Providence. Ex.

279⁵. Evil is the delight of the concupiscence of acting and thinking contrary to Divine order; and good is the delight of the affection of acting and thinking according to Divine order . . .

331². It may be said that the Lord is Providence, in the same way as it is said that God is order; for the Divine Providence is Divine order primarily regarding-circa-the salvation of men; and, as there is no order without laws; for laws make it; and every law derives from order the fact that it also is order; it follows, that as God is order, He is also the law of his own order . . .

menced to reduce into order all things in the Heavens and upon the earth. Sig. and Ex.

M. 85. The order in which each and all things of the universe have been created, is that one is for the sake of another . . .

130³. When these three things follow in their order, man is perfect man . . .

283. As magistrates (must) see that order is preserved in a compound society, so (must) consorts in their single one. But this order is not possible, if the husband and wife disagree . . . And therefore, to preserve order . . . necessity demands that the master and mistress agree . . .

311. That this is the order of conjugal love . . . from its first heat . . . Ex.

—². That all order proceeds from primes to ultimates; and that the ultimates become the primes of some following order; also that all the mediates of order are the ultimates of the prior one, and the primes of the posterior one . . .

—^e. Such as is the order of this love from its first heat . . . such for the most part is it in its progression . . .

312. That conjugal love precipitated without order . . . burns up the marrows . . . Ex.

313. That the states of the minds of both (consorts) proceeding in successive order, inflow into the state of the marriage . . . Ex.

314. That there is successive order, and simultaneous order; and the latter is from the former, and according to it. Ex.

—³. It is the like with the successive order to marriage, and with the simultaneous order in marriage . . .

— . He who knows the influx of successive order into simultaneous, can comprehend the reason why, in the hand of a man, the Angels can see all the thoughts and intentions of his mind; and also why wives, from the hands of their husbands on their breasts, feel their affections . . .

I. 2. All that which is from order is Truth.

B. 52². The Lord cannot act against His own Divine order; and His order is, that man explore himself, see his evils, resist them, and all this as of himself, although from the Lord.

117. He assumed the Human to the end that He might bring back into order all things in Heaven, in Hell, and in the Church. T. 3.

T. 52. That the omnipotence, etc. of God cannot be known, unless it is known what order is . . . that God is order, and that together with creation He introduced order into the universe, and into each and all things of it. Gen.art.

— . The absurdities . . . from their not understanding the order into which God created the universe . . .

— . We will first open order by a certain general definition of it, which is this: Order is the quality of the disposition, determination, and activity of the parts, substances, or entities, which make the form whence is the state, the perfection of which is produced by wisdom from its love, or the imperfection of which is hatched by the insanity of reason from cupidity.

53. That God is order, is because He is substance itself and form itself . . .

— . As wisdom from love makes form, and the state and quality of this is according to the order therein, it follows that God is order itself, consequently, that God, from Himself, introduced order into the universe . . . and that He introduced the most perfect order . . . as we read in the Book of Creation.

54. The nature of the order into which the universe was created, will be exhibited in the following Lemma.

— . Bear in mind that each and all things in the universe, in order that they might subsist by themselves, were created into their own orders; and, from the beginning, so that they might conjoin themselves with the order of the universe; to the intent that the singular orders might subsist in the universal order, and thus make a one. Examps.

56. That the omnipotence of God . . . proceeds and operates according to the laws of His order. Gen.art.

58. This (would be) contrary to the laws of His order . . . — .

59. That God . . . perceives and sees each and all things which are done according to order; and, from them, those things also which are done against order. Gen.art. 61.

60. The reason is that order is universal from the veriest singulars . . . It is from this quality of order in the universe that there is the like in all created things. Examp.

63. That God is omnipresent from the primes to the ultimates of His order. Gen.art.

— . Through the spiritual Sun, order was made . . .

— . According to the order impressed on them from creation.

—². Therefore the universe, as to essence and order, is the fulness of God.

65. That man was created a form of Divine order. Gen.art.

— . As God is order itself, man was created an image and likeness of order. There are two things from which order has come forth, and through which it subsists: the Divine love and the Divine wisdom; and man was created a receptacle of them; and therefore he was created into the order according to which these two act in the universe, and . . . in Heaven. Hence the whole Heaven is in greatest effigy a form of Divine order . . .

— . An image of God is a form of Divine order.

66^e. This is why man was created a form of Divine order.

67^e. That he may do the uses of God, man was created an image and likeness, that is, a form of Divine order.

68. That man is in power against evil and falsity from the Divine omnipotence; is in wisdom concerning good and truth from the Divine omniscience; and is in God from the Divine omnipresence, in proportion as he lives according to Divine order. Gen.art.

—². (Thus) unless man lives according to Divine order; that is, acknowledges God, His omnipotence, and protection against Hell, and on his part fights with the evil in himself—for the latter together with the former belong to order—he cannot but be immersed in Hell . . .

[T.] 70. Man is in God in proportion as he lives according to order, because . . . where God is in His Divine order, He is as in Himself, because He is order . . . and as man was created a form of Divine order, God is in him ; but fully, in proportion as he lives according to Divine order. But if he does not live according to Divine order, God is still in him, but in his highest things . . . (and) in proportion as he lives against order, he closes the lower things of his mind . . . Thus God is in him, but he is not in God.

—². Man is in God by a life according to order, because God is omnipresent in each and all things of the universe, in their inmosts, for these are in order. As for the things contrary to order—which are those only which are outside the inmosts—God is omnipresent in them by a continual struggle with them, and by a continual endeavour to bring them back into order ; so that in proportion as man suffers himself to be brought back into order, God is omnipresent in the whole of him . . .

71. The Spirit cried, Where is he who speaks and writes about the order with which God has bound Himself? . . . He came to me . . . and said, Are you the man who thinks and speaks about order? Tell me, in brief, what order is, and some things which belong to order. I replied, I will tell you the summaries, but not the particulars . . . I. God is order itself. II. He created man from order, in order, and into order. III. He created his rational mind according to the order of the whole Spiritual World ; and his body according to the order of the whole natural world . . . IV. Hence it is a law of order, that, from his little Spiritual World, man should rule his little natural world ; just as, from His Spiritual World, God rules the natural world . . . V. It is a sequent law of order that man must introduce himself into faith by Truths from the Word ; and into charity by good works ; and thus reform and regenerate himself. VI. It is a law of order that man must purify himself from sins by his own work and power . . . VII. It is also a law of order that man must love God from his whole soul, and from his whole heart ; and his neighbour as himself ; and must not wait and expect that these two loves will be put into his mind . . .

72². You are quite unaware that the omnipotent God is order itself ; and that the laws of order are myriads, being as many as the Truths in the Word ; and that God cannot act contrary to them . . .

73. (The amazement of some Spirits on hearing) that as omnipotence is Divine, so is order Divine ; nay, that God Himself is order . . .

—². I said, The omnipotent God created the world from the order in Himself ; thus into the order in which He is, and according to which He rules ; and He stamped upon the universe its own order ; on man his ; on beast its ; on bird and fish its ; on worm its ; on every tree and grass its . . . The laws of order appointed for man, are that he must acquire for himself Truths from the Word, and think them naturally, and, as far as he can, rationally, and thus procure for himself natural faith. The laws of order on the part of God then are, that He should approach, infill the Truths with His Divine light, and thus infill his natural faith with the Divine essence . . . So with charity.

—³. (Thus) you may see that the Divine omnipotence is in order ; and that its government, called Providence, is according to order ; and that it acts continually and to eternity according to the laws of its order ; and that it cannot act contrary to them, nor change them . . . because order with all its laws is Himself.

74. Some were of the ecclesiastical order, and some of the civil order . . . They said, that . . . if the Divine power progressed according to any laws which had been made of order, it would be limited . . . I said, Learn the laws of Divine order . . .

—³. They heard a voice (from Heaven) : Listen . . . to what the order is according to the laws of which the omnipotent God acts. And I said, God from Himself as Order created the universe in order, and for order ; and likewise man, in whom He fixed the laws of His order, from which he was made an image and likeness of God ; and which laws, in sum, are . . .

—⁴. God from His omnipotence created the universe, and at the same time introduced order into each and all things of it ; God, also, from His omnipotence . . . guards the order there with His laws in perpetuity ; and, when anything lapses from order, He brings it back . . . God from His omnipotence instaurated the Church, and revealed the laws of its order in the Word ; and, when it lapsed from order, He restored it . . .

—^e. These (catastrophes) would happen, unless God were order, and omnipotent in order.

89. That God assumed the Human according to His Divine order. Gen.art.

—². This was done, because it is Divine order that man prepare himself for the reception of God . . .

—^e. The Lord progressed according to this order even to union with His Father.

90. They who do not know that the Divine omnipotence proceeds and operates according to order . . .

91. The Divine miracles also were done according to Divine order ; but according to the order of the influx of the Spiritual World into the natural.

95². By these acts the Lord made Himself justice ; for justice is to do all things according to Divine order ; and to bring back into order the things which have lapsed from order ; for Divine order itself is justice.

105. (This) is according to Divine order, which is unchangeable. Divine order is that man dispose himself for the reception of God . . . According to this order must every man progress, from natural to become spiritual. In like manner the Lord . . .

110⁴. That the Lord humbled Himself before the Father, was according to the order established from creation, which is unchangeable, according to which everyone must progress to conjunction with God. This order is, that as man by a life according to the laws of order . . . conjoins himself with God, so God conjoins Himself with man . . . In like manner did the Lord unite Himself to His Father . . .

—⁵. This same order is inscribed from creation on every man . . . To prepare one's self for the reception of God, and for conjunction, is to live according to Divine order; and the laws of order are all the precepts of God: these the Lord intilled . . .

123². How the Lord afterwards brought back into order all things in both Heaven and Hell. Ex.

134³. Is it not contrary to the Divine essence to change the order established from eternity . . .

—⁴. As yet the Christian world is ignorant that order exists; and still less what the order is which God introduced when He created the world; and that God cannot act against it, because He would then be acting against Himself; for God is order itself.

341². This is against order, thus against His omnipotence . . .

343. In its ecclesiastical order.

500. They who do not understand Divine omnipotence, may opine, either that there is no order, or that God can act equally against order and according to it; when yet without order no creation is possible. The primary thing of order is that man is the image of God . . .

— . For there is an order, from which, and according to which, the whole world was created . . . and therefore God is called order itself; and therefore it is the same whether you say to act against Divine order, or to act against God; in fact, God Himself cannot act against His own Divine order . . .

502. The (natural) man cannot think otherwise of the Divine omnipotence than that it is above order; thus that the Divine omnipotence is devoid of order . . .

—². But . . . the Divine omnipotence is not without order; God Himself is order; and, as all things were created from God, they were created from order, in order, and to order. There is an order into which man was made, which is, that upon free will in spiritual things depends his blessing or his curse.

599. After His universal redemption, the Lord brought back into order all things in Heaven and in Hell. In like manner with man after temptation, He brings back into order all things of Heaven and the world with him.

679. The consistence of all things depends on order; and orders are manifold, general and particular; and there is one which is the most universal of all . . .

680. What is order without distinction . . . For without knowledge of qualities order is not known as order . . .

2766. That brute animals live in the order of nature. Ex.

2839. Man goes more and more against order . . . The more he goes against order, the more force is required to reform him, consequently the more Spirits; while those who are led more according to order have need of fewer Spirits with them; just as all things in the body which follow according to order . . . have no need of the immediate aid of Spirits.

3852. Order is terminated in material things . . .

4268. How Souls and Spirits are reduced (or brought back) into order. Ex.

4432. On order: that, on account of order, they cast the blame of evils on the Lord. Ex.

4829. One who thought that all things flow according to Divine order; and (therefore) that all things would still have flowed according to order, if the Lord had not assumed the Human . . .

4847. Through the Divine Human order has been restored even to the ultimate of life, which is the Sensuous; for Divine successive order perishes in ultimates.

4911. As to desire and get honours and riches from Own intelligence is an abuse of the laws of order in the natural world . . . for they proceed in inverted order and from themselves; therefore . . . in the other life they become magicians, and learn such things as are of the laws of order there, which they abuse wherewith to do evil. They cannot receive that they should follow the laws of order from Divine influx . . . In a word, there is with them an inversion of order in both worlds . . .

283⁴. 'To lie among the orders' (Ps.lxxviii.13)=to live in the statutes.

306. For the angelic Heaven to come forth and subsist, all things there must be in order . . . Besides, unless Heaven were in order, the world—that is, men on earth—could not come forth and subsist.

349⁵. Cannot subsist . . . except in successive order from the First.

— . (The idea that) man learns to think by the influx of interior nature and its order; and not from God . . . from whom is all the order of both worlds, according to which life inflows . . . eternal with those who can be disposed to receive life according to Divine order; and the opposite with those who . . . live against Divine order. The Divine good which proceeds from the Lord is that from which is order; and Divine truths are the laws of order.

431¹³. Balaam saw the order of Heaven in their encampment . . .

— . The representation of Heaven and the Church falls according to the order in which the tribes are named . . .

726⁵. Hence these are called the ultimates of Divine order . . . They coexist there in order, which is called simultaneous order.

[E. 726]⁷. The Lord came that, through ultimates from primes, He might bring back all things into order . . .

798³. (Solifidians) invert the Divine order . . .

— . As the order has been inverted from birth with all . . . Still, he is by degrees brought back to order, and, from charity, lives faith . . .

9786. 'Aaron and his sons shall order it' (Ex.xxvii. 21)=perpetual influx from the Lord. 'To order,' or 'ordinate,' when predicated of the Lord,=influx . . .

9787^e. For everything which the Lord ordinates, that is, provides, is eternal. (Thus) 'the ordering,' or 'ordinating,' of the lamp from evening to morning=the perpetual influx of good and truth from the Lord constantly in every state.

10048. That interior things are to be ordinated distinctly. Sig. and Ex.

—². With those being regenerated, the interiors and exteriors are ordinated by the Lord for all the sequent states. Ex.

— . Hence it is that whatever the Lord disposes and ordinates is eternal.

—^e. There are in man external, internal, and inmost things: all these are disposed and ordinated together and successively for the reception of sequent things to eternity. Ex.

10051. The ordination of the exteriors under the interiors and inmosts. Sig. and Ex.

10217. As to ordination and disposition. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'To number,' when predicated of the things of the Church,=the ordination and disposition of them . . . For 'to number' involves a survey; and what is surveyed by the Lord is also ordinated and disposed. III.

—³. As it belongs to the Lord alone to ordinate and dispose the truths and goods of faith and love . . . therefore when this is done by man, as by David, there is signified the ordination and disposition of such things by man and not the Lord; which is not to ordinate and dispose; but to destroy.

10225⁸. For with these the truths and goods of faith and love can be ordinated and disposed by the Lord; for the Lord inflows into their Intellectual and Voluntary, and ordinates and disposes.

10810. Those at the right were ordinated according to the quality of the good; and those at the left according to the quality of the evil, with them . . .

J. 12⁴. The quality of every form is from the ordination among themselves of the various things therein . . .

C. J. 20. The Reformed . . . are ordinated there according to their countries . . .

[C. J. 20]². But there is a different ordination of all in Heaven, and in Hell.

21. All the ordination of the Societies in that World is an ordination according to the differences of love . . . The Lord, who is Divine love itself, ordiates them according to the receptions of it . . .

H. 50. Although these live dispersed, they are ordiated in a similar way. Ex.

149^e. Still, the ordination of the whole Heaven differs from the ordination of a Society, as the general from the particular . . .

477. For (the loves) are thus ordiated with man ; although man knows nothing whatever of their ordination ; but something of it is manifested to him in the other life ; for he has extension of thought and affection there according to their ordination . . .

513. The places of instruction . . . are ordinate and distinct according to the genera and species of celestial goods.

514. The ordinations (in the places of instruction) are, in general, as follows . . .

588². The Hells are so ordinately distinct according to the differences of each evil, that nothing is more ordinate and distinct.

594. How all things are ordiated in the Heavens and the Hells so as . . . to be in equilibrium . . . All the Societies of Heaven are most ordinately distinct according to goods . . .

—². Some of the means relate to the ordination of those who are in Hells.

L. 3⁵. That the Lord at the same time ordiated Heaven, so that it should make a one with the Church.

W. 202. Ordinated according to degrees of height.

P. 302. The ordination of affections in Heaven, and of concupiscences in Hell, is marvellous, and known to the Lord alone . . .

R. 153². All the Societies . . . are marvellously ordiated according to natural affections . . . The Societies ordiated according to good natural affections communicate with Heaven ; and those ordiated according to evil natural affections, with Hell.

225. A manifestation concerning the ordination of the Heavens for the Last Judgment . . . Sig. and Ex. 233. E.258.

799². By the ordinations of ministries.

M. 36^e. The universal Heaven is ordiated according to all the varieties of the affections of the love of good ; and the universal Hell according to all the affections of the love of evil. E.430².

324. The (Angels) have been ordiated, and are being ordiated, by the Lord into one form . . .

T. 75⁴. Three degrees . . . according to which the angelic Heavens are ordiated ; and according to which human minds are ordiated.

S4. Redemption was . . . the ordination of the Heavens . . . 86. 115, Gen.art. 117. 118^e.

123². The ordination of the Heavens and Hells has gone on from the Last Judgment to the present time.

160. The Societies of Heaven are ordiated according to . . . 569.³

351². This organization is an ordination of all things in series . . .

—^e. Unless there were such an ordination of substances in the human mind, man would have nothing analytic of reason, which everyone has according to the ordination . . . and the ordination is according to the use of reason from freedom.

597. The affections of good and truth are so ordiated that . . .

646. Similarly is the Church ordiated . . .

665. The Angels ordiated them all into four companies . . . To whom, thus ordiated, we said . . .

678. All (there) are most distinctly ordiated in general and in every part . . . On this distinct ordination the conservation of the universe depends.

680². What are these ordinations without signs . . .

D. 1713. The ordination of all (the viscera) to uses.

4087. The Divine ordination of the Societies effects that . . .

5048. This is effected by the ordination of (the internals) by the Lord.

5789² One who knew how to ordinate these Societies according to order . . . The ordination of them was into a form opposite to that of Heaven.

5821. The ordination of the Heavens at the Last Judgment. Ex.

D. Min. 4573. Which they read daily, according to the ecclesiastical ordination.

E. 258. In (Rev.iv.) it treats of the ordination of all things before the Judgment.

306². This ordination (of the Heavens) depends on the infinite wisdom of the One who knows all things. He Knows and explores all things ; and thence disposes and ordiates all things.

410². This ordination is to the end that all may be kept in connection by influx : such is the co-ordinate and subordinate disposition through the whole Spiritual World.

422⁷. All are ordiated (there) according to the quarters.

— . What is signified by the ordinations according to the quarters in the Word.

431¹¹. The ordinations of the tribes represented the ordinations of the Societies in the Heavens.

629¹⁰. The ordination of all things in the Heavens from Own power through Divine truth. Sig.

659^e. Such is the ordination of the universal Heaven ; in each Society there ; in each city there ; and also in each house.

702². Such is the ordination there, that the Heavens are like expanses, one above another ; beneath the Heavens is the World of Spirits ; and beneath this the Hells, one below another. The influx from the Lord takes place according to this successive ordination . . .

—³. But this ordination of the Heavens and Hells has undergone changes from one Judgment to another. Ex.

790³. The universal Heaven is ordained into Societies according to . . . 1093².

827. An ordinance appointed, that . . . Sig. and Ex. 833.

— . To make a statute, or ordain that . . .

988⁶. From this ordination comes forth the form of Heaven.

1029². (The Babylonians) ordained that . . .

— . Believing the things they ordained were accepted.

1133⁷. The ordination of so many various affections (of) men from the first creation . . .

J. (Post.) 170². He was permitted to ordinate those in that small Society, and ordained them as a spider does its web . . .

Coro. 16. There is a most perfect ordination of all in the Heavens and in the Hells. Ex.

Organ. Organum.

Organic. Organicus.

Organically. Organice.

Organize. Organizare.

Organization. Organizatio.

Organism. Organismus.

A. 149². Man is only an organ of life ; but such as is the organ, such is the affection of life.

444. There can be no bodily sight without an organ . . . and must not thought have an organic substance ? . . . He had supposed the spirit to be mere thought, without anything organic . . . But the whole brain is the Organic of the interior senses . . . It might have been evident to him that the spirit is organic, or an organic substance.

1378. Spirits, as to the organics which constitute their bodies, may not be in the place where they are seen . . .

1387. Thus they would be organs without life.

1533⁹. Unless Spirits were organic, and Angels were organic substances, they could neither speak, see, nor think.

1563. Unless the organic vessels (of the external man) are opened . . .

1594⁵. The spirit or soul . . . is organic . . .

1603. The external man is merely an organic thing, having no life in it . . .

—². He thus purified the organic things of the Human Essence . . .

1635. Influx into the internal organs of hearing.

—^e. The speech of Spirits enters by an internal way into the same organs . . .

1761. They regard man as their organ.

1763⁹. They are heard as sonorously by one who has the interior organs of hearing opened . . . but not at all by one in whom these organs are not opened.

1900³. These are the genuine vessels in the organic forms of both memories . . .

2487. The exterior memory . . . is nothing but an organic something . . . So the interior memory is an organic thing, but purer . . .

2658². His Human, when made Divine, was no longer an organ of life ; but was life itself.

— . Man is not life, but an organ, or recipient, of life.

2889. Evil Spirits cannot apprehend that . . . they are only organs of life . . .

3001². Illustrated by the motory and sensory organs . . .

3241². Like the organs, members, and viscera (which which are all different, and yet make a one).

3318². Man is nothing but an organ or vessel which receives life . . .

3484. This correspondence is that of the organs with their life ; but such as are the recipient organs, so do they live.

3624. On the correspondence of all the organs and members of both the interiors and exteriors of man, with the Grand Man. Gen.art.

3628². The atmosphere . . . keeps in connection its organ, which is the ear . . . The ether its organ, which is the eye . . .

—³. This is manifest from the organ of hearing : unless there were interior modifications . . . there would be no hearing ; and also from the organ of sight . . . and so with all the other organs and members . . . there are forces acting outside which are natural . . . and forces acting within, in themselves alive, which hold together every organ, and cause it to live ; and this according to the form which has been given it for its use.

3629. When the Spiritual inflows into the organic forms of the body, it presents their living operations.

— . What Societies inflow into this or that organ . . . and member . . . There are very many inflowing into each organ and member.

3630. The several viscera and members, or motory and sensory organs, correspond to Societies . . .

3639^e. It is Known from the very situation . . . to what provinces of man's organs and members the Societies belong.

3679³. The eye is only an organ of the body, through which the internal man sees . . .

— . He thinks that the larynx and interior organs speak by aspiration from the lungs ; when yet it is the thought which speaks through these organics . . . So all the apparent life in the external man is the life of the internal man in it, as in its material and corporeal organ.

3702². Whatever invisible thing floats in the air, is in the organ of smell ; and whatever invisible thing is in fluids, is in the organ of taste . . . and still more recondite things would be perceived in man's interior organs, if his life were according to order.

[A.] 3744. Just as in the relation-ratio-in which are the organs, members, and viscera in man, which are all forms . . . recipient of life from their soul . . . and yet, although in such variety, they constitute one man.

3745. (For) no two organs and members are alike; the organ of sight is not like the organ of hearing: so with the organ of smell, and the organ of taste; also the organ of touch, which is diffused through the universal body. . . So with the viscera, as those of the head . . . with all their organules . . .

3747. Brutes appear like man as to organs, viscera, senses, appetites, and affections.

4149². Truths may be compared to the fibres which compose some organ: the organ is according to the form of the fibres; and so is its operation . . .

4206². The life inflows and acts into the various sensory and motory organs . . . and into the various members and viscera; and everywhere presents variety.

4215². For there is a correspondence of Heaven with all the organs and members.

4218. Man is in connection with Heaven . . . as to the organic forms also, both interior and exterior.

4222. The correspondence of the Grand Man is with all man's organs, members, and viscera, insomuch that there is not any organ or member, nor any part in an organ or member, nor any particle of a part, with which there is not a correspondence. Ex.

4223. These Heavens correspond to the organic forms themselves . . . but still they correspond principally to the functions of these viscera or organs: just as with these organs or viscera themselves—the functions constitute a one with their organic forms . . . For example, the eye is the organic form from which and through which is sight; the lung is the organic form from which and through which is respiration. It is therefore the functions to which the heavenly Societies principally correspond; and, as it is the functions, it is also the organic forms; for the one is inseparable from the other, insomuch that whether you say the function, or the organic form through which and from which is the function, it is the like. Hence there is a correspondence with the organs, members, and viscera, because there is one with the functions; and therefore when a function is produced, the organ also is excited: just so in everything man does: when he wants to do this or that, and thinks it, the organs move themselves accordantly; thus according to the intention of the function, or of the use; for it is the use which commands in the forms. From this it is evident that the use existed before the organic forms of the body came forth; and that the use produced and adapted them to itself: but when the forms have been produced, or the organs adapted, the use proceeds thence; and it then appears as if the forms or organs were prior to the use . . . 4926.

4224. Organic forms are not only those which appear to the eye, or which can be detected by the microscope; there are also organic forms still purer . . . as the forms of the internal sight; and, finally, those of the understanding . . . These interior forms present the internal senses, and produce the interior affections. The interior Heavens correspond to these forms . . .

4225. (Evil Spirits) do not correspond to any organs or members . . . but to the various vitiations and diseases induced on them.

4330. As all the members, viscera, and organs . . . according to their functions and uses, correspond to the Grand Man . . . it follows that the things of the internal man also correspond to it. The Societies . . . to which the things of the internal man correspond are chiefly from other Earths . . .

4364⁴. There is something interior . . . of which the body is the instrumental or organ: the spirit is the man himself, who acts and sensates through these organics.

4407. The eye is the most noble organ of the face, and communicates more immediately with the understanding than do the other sensory organs . . .

4523². Not only the sensory organs, but the motory ones also, and all the viscera, as to their corporeal and material things, correspond to the things in the nature of the world; so that the whole body is an organ composed of all the most arcane things in the nature of the world . . .

4625. The more universal Societies are those to which an entire member, organ, or viscus, corresponds; the less universal are those to which their parts, or parts of parts, correspond.

4652. Most (suppose) that all sense is in the organs of the body; and that when these organs shall fall down in death, nothing of sense will remain . . .

—². It is the spirit which speaks and hears; (for) when the speech of Spirits was communicated to my spirit, it fell into my interior speech, and thence into the corresponding organs, and there ceased in a conatus.

5171. The angelic Societies inflow into . . . that organ or member in which they are.

5779^e. The senses placed in the body are nothing but organs or instruments inservient to the internal man.

5786. The external man is only the organ or instrument of the internal.

5947^e. For the internal man is nothing but the organ of the Lord's life . . .

5948³. The Essential acts through another, as through its instrument, or organ.

6322. By the influx from within, all the fibres . . . which are very numerous about each sensory or organ of sense, are determined accordantly in an instant . . . nay, a conformable state is in a moment infused into the organ itself.

6698^e. Myriads (of Angels) correspond to each member, organ, and viscus.

6987². Thought speaks in its own way; and, by the activity of its speech, it excites the corresponding organs . . .

8470³. Such is the communication in Heaven . . . just as the organs, members, and viscera . . . although various, present a one through such communications.

H. 418. There is correspondence not only with the several members, organs, and viscera in general, but also in particular and singular with the viscerules and organules within them; nay, with the several vessels and fibres; and . . . also with the organic substances which interiorly receive the influx of Heaven . . .

434. Man cannot see without an organ . . . nor hear without an organ . . .

W. 143. The life turns its receptacles, which are called members, organs, and viscera . . . to that Society where its love is.

190². (There are three discrete degrees in the muscles and nerves; and also) in the rest of the compaginations, confasciulations, and congregations, from which are the organs and viscera . . .

192. The organic substances, which are the receptacles and dwellings of the thoughts and affections, from the simplest (up) to the brain, are homogeneous.

207. The fibres and little vessels in every viscus and organ are in simultaneous order . . .

316³. A like progression from primes to ultimates, and from ultimates to primes, is exhibited in the forms, most purely organic, of the affections and thoughts. Examps.

324. There is nothing in the universe which has not correspondence with . . . the viscera and organs of the body; not with them as substances, but as uses.

370. The very forms of the members, organs, and viscera, as to their contexture itself, are from fibres originating in their beginnings in the brains; but they are fixed by such substances and matters as are in earths, and from earths in the air and ether, which is done by means of the blood.

373. As the will and understanding are the receptacles of love and wisdom, they are organic forms, or forms organized from the purest substances . . . It is no objection that their organization is not patent to the eye; it is within its sight . . . As animalcules-insectula-are invisible . . . and it is not denied that they are organized . . . how can it be said that the two receptacles of love and wisdom . . . are not organic forms . . . Is not the brain, where thought comes forth, a plenum? and is not everything organized there? The organic forms themselves there appear before the naked eye . . . Think not about these things from the idea of a vacuum.

P. 65. Heaven is distinguished into as many general Societies as there are organs, viscera, and members . . . and each general Society into as many particular ones as there are greater parts of each viscus and organ. 68.

279⁶. The affections are mere changes and variations of state of the purely organic substances of the mind; the thoughts are mere changes and variations of their form; and the memory is the permanent state (thereof). Ex. 319, Ex.

—⁷. (Thus) the operations of the purely organic substances of the mind are like these; with the difference that the operations of the organic substances of the body are natural . . .

—⁸. The changes of state and form in the organic substances of the mind, which are affections and thoughts, cannot be shown to the eye; but they may be seen . . . from those in the lungs in speaking and singing. . . This is done by changes and variations in the state and form of the organic substances of the lungs, etc. . . (Thus) the mere changes and variations of the state of the organic forms, successively continued, produce tones and their articulations . . .

—⁹. All the changes and variations of state in organic substances are such that, once imbued, they are permanent. (Hence memory.) These changes and variations are infinitely more perfect in the organics of the mind . . .

319. (Hence man) may be called the organ of his life's love.

—². There are like changes and variations in the organic forms of the mind, which are the subjects of the affections and thoughts. Des.

—³. In the good, these purely organic substances and forms are spirated forward, but in the evil, backward; (the former) being turned towards the Lord, and receiving influx from Him; and (the latter) being turned towards Hell, and receiving influx therefrom.

—⁴. From this may be evident what kind of a form, or organ, an evil man is; and what kind of a form, or organ, a good man is . . .

320. The appearance that wisdom and prudence . . . do not inflow according to the state of the organization of the mind.

326⁵. Those who deny God . . . become organized according to the above description; and the organization induced in the world is permanent to eternity.

—¹⁰. The skins, bones, etc. are alive in a less degree than the organized forms themselves . . .

R. 875¹¹. Because man is born such an organ (recipient of life).

916². There is a nexus of spiritual Truths like that of all the members, viscera, and organs of the body . . .

M. 134². By birth, man is an organ which lives solely in the external senses . . .

155a⁴. Therefore we are called by our husbands the sensory organs of chaste conjugal love and its deliciousness.

310. The mind speaks through its organ, and also acts through its organs in the body.

— . Therefore the bodies of men, interiorly regarded, are nothing but the forms of their minds exteriorly organized . . .

—². The form of the mind is interiorly the form of the body, with the sole difference, that the latter is exteriorly organized . . .

380⁶. What is the human body but an organ of life? Are not each and all things there organically formed to produce the things the love wills and the understanding thinks? Are not the organs of the body from nature, and love and thought from life?

524³. No one's life can be changed after death, because it has been organized according to his love . . . If changed, the organization would be torn to pieces . . . A change of the organization is possible solely in the material body, and is quite impossible in the spiritual body after the former one has been rejected. B. 110.

I. 12⁵. It is believed that the perceptions and thoughts . . . inflow naked, and not through organized forms. Thus dream those who have not seen the interiors of the head, where the perceptions and thoughts are in their beginnings . . . and do not know that man thinks and wills sanely or insanely according to the perfect—integrum—or perverted state of all these [organs]; consequently, that he is rational and moral according to the organic moulding of his mind. For man's rational sight . . . without forms organized for the reception of spiritual light, would be a thing of no predication . . .

13. Man is an organ recipient of life . . .

T. 34. (Thus) man is an organ recipient of God; and is an organ according to the quality of the reception.

—². The human mind, organized according to these three degrees, is a receptacle of Divine influx; but the Divine goes no further than man opens the door.

38³. (Thus) the human mind is organized, interiorly, of spiritual substances; exteriorly, of natural, and, finally, of material ones . . .

147². The spiritual organism of the mind (is in a triple series).

224². Thus the human mind . . . is nothing else than a form of Divine truth and Divine good spiritually and naturally organized: the human brain is this form . . .

351². He who knows not that the human mind is organized; or that it is a spiritual organism ceasing in a natural organism . . . But everyone knows that the brains are organized . . . What, then, is the nature of this organization? It is the ordination of all things into series, as it were into bundles. Ex.

362. These things are unknown: That man is a mere organ of life . . .

364. By (these things in Genesis) is described, that man is an organ of life, and not life.

461⁵. All things felt in the organs of the senses inflow from without, and yet are felt in them. So with the organs of the internal senses . . . In a word, man is an organ recipient of life from God . . .

—⁶. This life is varied and modified according to the organization induced by the love.

472³. The whole man is nothing else than a form organized for the reception of (light and heat, both spiritual and natural).

504⁵. See LIFE, here.

577³. There is such co-operation in every sense . . . light acts on the eye, (and so on), and the organs adapt themselves, whence is sensation. (And so also) if there were not such action and co-operation with the influent life in the spiritual organism of the brain, thought and will could not come forth.

578. If the delight of charity . . . were to inflow into the spiritual organism of the mind of those who are in the delight of evil, they would be tortured.

644. This faith is seated in their memory . . . as if organized there.

665³. Diseases infest the organics of the body, and also the organics of the head; consequently the mind, because this is seated in the organs of the brain, like a spider in the middle of its web . . .

Ad. 644. They are only instruments of life, and are therefore called organs . . .

D. 1625^e. Unless the universal Heaven were organic.

1708. Because I said that men, Spirits, and Angels . . . are only organs of life.

1709. As they are organs, the life must be according to the forms . . .

1741². From the membranes are the organic forms, which are actuated by the blood and spirit, which are also organic forms, but relatively active . . .

1750. For man is an organ, and his interiors are organic forms, which cannot possibly be occupied by the organic forms of another, nor be changed into them.

2221. Merely from the faculty of reflecting possessed by Spirits, it may be evident that they are only organic powers. Ex.

—^e. We are only organic powers, and reflection is given by the Lord.

2225. As men, Spirits, and Angels are only organic powers . . . everything is from mercy.

2325. Thus they are mere organic substances, and the Lord alone is life.

2326. When the Lord's life inflows into the Heavens and the World of Spirits, the organic forms or substances receive life, each according to its form.

2329. Whence come all the objects of thoughts . . . seeing that (Angels, Spirits, and men) are only organic substances? Ex.

2688². Natural things are as it were vessels, instruments, and organics . . .

3215. It was shown that all are only organs of life, and that . . . the influent life is varied according to the quality of the organs.

3419. That the whole Grand Man is organic . . . Ex.

3470². Can sight come forth without an organ? . . . Could he therefore conceive of thought . . . without organics, or organic substances?

—^e. He had supposed the spirit to be only thought, and not organic; but he now perceives it to be organic.

3471. The learned abstract thought from its organic . . . If the spirit were only thought, what need would man have of so large a brain, seeing that the whole brain is the organic of the internal senses? . . . It might be evident to them from this that the organics of thought are in the brain, and that invisible fibres flow thence, through which the thoughts are brought from the senses into the organics, and from the organics into the muscular acts.

3484². The things within these forms are living from the Lord, but still are organic, because, like the forms within nature, they have nothing of life in themselves.

3576. As uses and ends can never come forth except from organics, and as the uses and ends are the lives of the organics, it is evident that the universe . . . is organic, and that the Lord alone is life.

3577. (Thus) use in the universe can never be separated from organics, and therefore the uses of the ultimates in nature flow from the uses of the exterior organics . . .

3940. We are truly dead, because organic, and all life is from the Lord.

Orphan. Orphanus.

A. 3703¹⁹. (Thus) by 'orphans-orphanos seu pupillos;' that is, those who are without a father; are signified those who are in a state of innocence and charity, and who long to know and to do what is good; and are not able. In such a state especially are those who are outside the Church; of whom the Lord takes care; and, in the other life, adopts them as sons . . .

4844¹¹. As it is the Lord alone who instructs, and leads to good and truth, it is said, 'Leave thine orphans, I will vivify them' (Jer. xlix. 11). And in Moses: 'Jehovah executeth the judgment of the fatherless and the widow' (Deut. x. 18).

9198. 'Orphan,' in the celestial sense, =those who are in good and long for truth.

9199. 'And an orphan' (Ex. xxii. 22)=those who are in truth and not yet in good, and yet long for good; for 'an orphan'=those who are in truth and long for good. The reason these are signified by 'orphans,' is that sons bereaved of father and mother—thus who are deprived of interior good and truth—are orphans. Ex.

— . Sons are meant here by 'orphans,' and not daughters. Shown.

— . The reason orphan sons=those who long for good, is that the Lord is then in place of their father. Ill.

—². That 'orphans'=those who are instructed in the truths of faith of the Church from the Word, and by means of them are afterwards led to good, is evident from: 'I will not leave you orphans; I will come to you' (John xiv. 18).

—³. That those are 'orphans' who are in truths and long for good, may be evident from (the fact that) 'to send the Comforter'=to illustrate and instruct in the truths of faith; and 'to come to them'=to lead into good; and therefore He says, 'I will not leave you orphans.'

9200. 'The sojourner,' 'the orphan,' and 'the widow' . . . when mentioned together, fall into one sense . . . namely, that with those in the Church good and truth must be conjoined according to order; thus, reciprocally, truth with good, and good with truth; for 'a sojourner'=those who want to be instructed in the things of the Church; 'widows'=the conjunction of good with truth; and 'orphans'=the conjunction of truth with good, which conjunction is reciprocal.

9207. 'Your sons shall become orphans' (Ex. xxii. 24)=that at the same time truths will perish. 'Orphans'=those who are in truth and not yet in good, and still long for good; here, those who are in truth, but do not long for good; thus those with whom truths are perishing; for it is here said of the evil that 'their sons shall become orphans.'

These three are named together . . . in the Word, because, in the internal sense, they constitute one class; for by them taken together are signified those who want to be instructed and to be led to good and truth.

—⁶. 'A father of the orphans . . . is God' (Ps. lxxviii. 5). 'The orphans'=those who, like infants, are in the good of innocence, but not yet in truth, whose father is said to be the Lord, because as a father He leads them, and this through truth into good, namely, into the good of life or of wisdom. . . Good without truth, which is 'the orphan,' becomes the good of wisdom by means of the doctrine of truth. Further ill.

10628^e. What it is to be outside the External, and not within. Sig. and Ex.

H. 156. For the things which are without the Angels receive an appearance according to the things within them.

186. The things outside their houses correspond to the truths which are from good, and also to perceptions.

440^e. Whether in the body or out of the body.

W. 391³. I was then in the spirit outside the body.

D. 5597. When the celestial hear rational things, they see them outside of themselves; thus from others; and not within themselves, as do the spiritual.

E. 283². That which is below, is also outside . . .

De Verbo 13. That which enters into the understanding with a man whose will is in evil, is not within, but without him: it is only in the memory . . . and that which is outside a man, and not in his life, disappears by little and little . . .

Can. God iii. 13. It is vain to think of what . . . is outside the world; because . . . outside the world there is no space.

viii. 11. Evils are not taken away . . . because they are outside the subjects, and outside created things . . .

Outside. Extus.

A. 3563. Good, which is of the will, is within; and truth, which is of the understanding, is without.
—⁵.

D. 4574. On the Hells of those who are deceitful within, and good without. 4589.

Outwardly. Extrinsecus. T.435².

Outworks. See BULWARK.

Oval. Ovalis.

R. 463². They make as it were an oval plane.

961. A bright light in an oval form.

D. 4418. An oval window in the palace of Augustus.

Ovary. Ovarium.

A. 5054. These constitute the province . . . of the womb with the ovaries. D.3152. De Conj. 106.

D. 2242. A continuous ovary seen.

Ovation. Ovatio. A.4215².

Oven. Clibanus.

A. 7356. 'Into thy ovens,' etc. (Ex.viii.3)=into the delights of cupidities. 'Ovens,' because bread is prepared in them, = exterior goods; (thus) delights . . . These are signified by 'ovens' in a good sense; but in the opposite, as here, by 'ovens' are signified the delights of cupidities; that is, delights from the loves of Hell, which loves are the loves of self and of the world.

—². That 'an oven'=the delight of the affections which are of charity and faith; and, in the opposite sense, the delight of the cupidities which are of the love of self and of the world. III.

E. 386¹⁵. 'To be black like an oven' (Lam.v.10)=to be in their evil from falsities. 655⁶. 863⁴.

481⁶. 'To be hot as an oven' (Hos.vii.7)=to desire what is false from the love of it.

504⁸. It is said, 'His oven in Jerusalem' (Is.xxxi.9), because by 'Jerusalem' is signified the Church in which is the truth of doctrine . . . and the truth of doctrine is (relatively to a fire-hearth) like an oven, in which bread is prepared.

540³. By 'an oven' (Mal.iv.1) is meant the Hell where are those who by doctrine confirm themselves in falsities, and by life in evils from earthly and corporeal loves.

—⁴. That from their loves they have perverted goods and truths, is signified by, 'They are all adulterers as an oven heated by the baker' (Hos.vii.4) . . . This is compared to 'an oven heated by the baker,' because they compact together as into a mass of dough the falsities which favour their loves. . . That thus there is nothing but the evils of those loves which are favoured by falsities, is signified by: 'their baker sleepeth all the night; in the morning he burns as a flame of fire; they are all hot as an oven' (ver.6,7). They are compared to 'a baker,' and 'an oven,' because they compact doctrine from falsities, as a baker makes bread and cakes in an oven.

[E.540]⁵. 'Our skins are blackened as in an oven' (Lam.v.10)=that the natural man is without the light of truth, and is thence in the darkness of falsity. Here, too, 'an oven'=the making up of doctrine from falsities, and not from truths.

—¹¹. By 'an oven' (Is.xxxi.9) is signified truth from that good; thus the truth of doctrine.

675¹². See FURNACE, here.

Over. See ABOVE.

Over and above. Insuper. M.310².

Over, To set. See GOVERN—praeficere.

A. 1831. 'Overagainst'=parallelism and correspondence. Ex.

2684. 'Overagainst' (Gen.xxi.16)=not to behold, and yet still to behold. 2688.

4018. 'Overagainst the flocks' (Gen.xxx.38)=that they might be conjoined; namely, truths and goods to the natural; because it involves view, and thence excited affection . . .

8131. 'Ye shall encamp overagainst it near the sea' (Ex.xiv.2)=an influx of temptation thence. 'Overagainst'=near so as to be in view; in the internal sense, that there may be influx thence. Ex.

10609. 'Also the flock and herd shall not pasture overagainst this mountain' (Ex.xxxiv.3). Ex.

Overcome. See CONQUER.

Overflow. See REDOUND.

Overlay. Obducere.

Overlaying, An. Obductio.

A. 8869⁶. 'Overlays it with gold' (Is.xl.19). Ex.

9490. 'Thou shalt overlay it with pure gold' (Ex.xxv.11)=all to be founded upon good. 'To overlay,' when said of Heaven, . . . =to found. . . The reason 'to overlay'=to found, is that the good proceeding from the Lord as a Sun encompasses not only Heaven in general, but also the heavenly Societies . . . in particular; and likewise every Angel in the singular; and thus protects them from the irruption of evil from Hell. In Heaven, that which encompasses, also founds; for it presses on it as a house does on its foundation . . . (Thus) by 'to overlay' is signified to found; and by 'to overlay with gold,' to found upon good.

9497. 'To overlay'=to encompass; thus on every side.

9532. 'To overlay with gold'=a representative of good. 9667.

9722. 'Thou shalt overlay it with brass' (Ex.xxvii.2)=a representative of good. . . The overlaying and induction with brass is a representative of natural or external good.

10183. 'To overlay with gold'=to found upon the good of love.

E. 283⁴. 'The wings of a dove covered with silver' (Ps.lxviii.13)=spiritual truths.

Overseer. See under PRESIDENT.

Overtake. Assequi.

A. 4127. 'Laban overtook Jacob' (Gen.xxxi.25)=something of conjunction.

5744. 'To overtake'=adjunction. 5745.

8155. 'They overtook them encamping near the sea' (Ex.xiv.9)=communication around (that) region of Hell. 'To overtake'=communication; for 'to overtake,' in the spiritual sense, is influx, through which there is communication.

8291. 'I will overtake' (Ex.xv.9)=subjugation. Ex.

E. 802. They are not a match for the combinations . . .

Overthrow. Strages. C.164².

Overthrow. Subruere. D.5039.

Destroyer. Eversor.

A. 2449. 'He overthrew those cities' (Gen.xix.25)=that all truths were separated from them . . . 'Cities'=doctrinals . . . which are said to be 'overthrown,' when there are falsities instead of truths . . .

10642. 'Their altars ye shall overturn' (Ex.xxxiv.13)=that the evil of that religiosity and the derivative worship are to be rejected. . . 'To overturn'=to reject.

H. 229. If anything resists . . . the Angels cast it down and overturn it by a mere effort of will, and a look. I have seen mountains . . . thus cast down and overturned . . .

E. 193⁶. Evils are here called 'destroyers by night' (Obad.5). (=both falsities and evils. 919^e.)

357¹⁷. 'The overthrow of God' (Is.xiii.19)=damnation to Hell. 1029¹⁴.

400⁹. Occurs.

411²⁵. 'To be overturned' (Nahum i.6)=to perish.

Overwhelm. See SUBMERGE.

Ovid. Ovidius.

De Verbo 7³. (The fabulous things of the oldest writers in Greece, which were collected by Ovid in his Metamorphoses, were all correspondential.)

Ovule. Ovulum.

A. 1815. The soul begins to clothe itself in a little bodily form in the ovule. Whatever is afterwards added, whether in the ovule or womb, is of the mother.

SS47². Serves for conception ; that is, for the impregnation of the ovule.

Ovum. See under Egg.

Owl. Bubo.

H. 527^e. It would be more easy to turn a night-owl-noctua-into a dove, or a horned-owl into a bird of paradise . . .

P. 338⁷. It would be more easy to turn an owl into a turtle-dove . . .

—⁹. Instantaneous reformation . . . would be like the turning of an owl into a dove.

R. 312. Devils . . . abominate truth as horned-owls do the light of the sun . . . Satans do not abominate truth, but are averse to it ; and therefore they may be compared to night-owls-noctuis, when the former are compared to horned-owls.

566⁵. Some seemed like night-owls-noctuae . . . some like horned-owls.

T. 61^e. He becomes like a night-owl, and at last like a horned-owl.

642. A man not born again, as to his spirit, is like a panther or an owl . . . and how can an owl be turned into a dove . . . M. 526².

Coro. 30². The natural man separated from the spiritual is like an owl beside a peacock.

Owl. Noctua.

See under Owl-bubo.

A. 866. Gross and dense falsities are described in the Word by 'owls,' and 'ravens ;' by 'owls,' because they live in the darkness of night . . . as in, 'The owl and the raven shall dwell therein' (Is.xxxiv.11) ; where it treats of the Jewish Church, that there are nothing but falsities there, which are described by 'the owl and the raven.'

1326³. The internal of the Babylonish worship is described by . . . 'the daughters of the owl,' etc. (Is.xiii.21).

3438². Man . . . is like an owl, which, because it flies in the shade of night, supposes itself to be in the light ; but when in the light of day, it supposes itself to be in the shade. Ex.

4967². Such Spirits, and hence such men, see like owls, clearly by night and obscurely by day ; that is, falsities clearly, and truths obscurely ; and thence the things of the world clearly ; and obscurely, if at all, the things of Heaven.

5044⁷. 'The cormorant,' 'bittern,' 'owl,' and 'raven' (Is.xxxiv.)=the genera of falsity which come forth when the Divine truths which are in the Word are made of no account.

8628. They who have used the sciences (or knowledges) as means for annihilating the things of faith, have completely destroyed their Intellectual, and see in thick darkness like owls, falsity for truth, and evil for good.

8869⁴. 'The ziim and ijim, and the daughters of the owl, shall dwell there' (Jer.l.39)=evils and falsities, thus the things which are of death, within.

H. 102^e. The Angels liken such (naturalists) to owls, which see in the darkness, and nothing in the light. P.117^e. I.10⁴.

487². The falsities of evil are darkness, and also correspond thereto ; and therefore those who are in them . . . shun the things which are in light like owls.

P. 167². As with owls and bats, which see objects in the night [and] evening as clearly as other birds see them in the day ; for their eyes are formed for the reception of their own light.

R. 566². Fatuous light is the light of the confirmation of falsity ; and this light corresponds to the light in which are owls and bats, to whom darkness is light, and light darkness. (From experience.)

—³. Those in that abyss . . . and those who are like them, are called owls and bats. T.162³.

601³. Those who are in falsified truths and adulterated goods appear like owls and bats.

T. 7^e. All such . . . at last acquire a sight like that of owls, and see in darkness.

42^e. The thoughts of these are represented by night-owls, and their speech by screech-owls-ululus.

334⁴. An owl is in fatuous light ; for within its eyes there is the cupidity of pursuing and devouring birds ; and this light causes its eyes to see in the night time, exactly as with cats . . .

759. Those who see by confirmations are not unlike owls, which see light in the shade of night ; and by day see the sun and its rays as thick darkness.

E. 518⁶. By 'the daughters of the owl,' etc. (Is.xliii.20) are signified those who know truths and goods from the memory only, and do not understand and perceive them. These speak truth without any idea of truth, depending solely upon others.

586⁵. These corporeal and merely natural concupiscences, from which flow forth falsities and evils of every kind, are signified by 'the owl,' etc. (Is.xxxiv.)

—⁶. By 'the daughters of the owl' (Is.xiii.) are signified Falsities.

587¹⁰. When reputation, glory, and gain, dominate, Heaven cannot inflow with its light, and open the sight, and illustrate ; and therefore they see like owls, moles, and bats, in the darkness, according to . . . Jer.l.39 ; (where) 'the daughters of the owl'=affections of falsity.

650³⁵. By 'the daughters of the owl' (Is.xliii.) are signified sensuous affections ; for the Sensuous is affected with truths, and sees them in darkness, as owls see objects in the night.

714¹⁸. The devastation of all good and truth is signified by 'an abode of dragons,' and 'a court of the daughters of the owl' (Is.xxxiv.13). 'Owls'=those who see falsities for truths ; and their 'daughters'=the concupiscences of falsifying truths.

—²⁰. Lamentation over devastated truth is signified by 'to make a mourning like the daughters of the owl' (Micah i.8).

1029¹⁴. Falsified truths are 'the daughters of the owl' (Is.xiii.).

1100²². There are many kinds of falsities . . . named in the Word: as 'screech-owls' . . . 'night-owls,' 'horned-owls,' etc.

[E.] 1129². As 'mourning' relates to falsity, it is said, 'I will make a mourning like the daughters of the owl' (Micah i.). 'The daughters of the owl' = those who are in Falsities and their pleasantnesses. 'Owls' = falsities, because they see in darkness and not in the light.

Owl. Ulula.

M. 233⁷. In the cloud flew owls and bats, (which) were appearances of their thoughts . . . For confirmations of Falsities so complete that they appear as Truths, are there represented under the forms of birds of night, whose eyes are illuminated by fatuous lumen, by which they see objects in the dark as though in light . . .

T. 42^e. See OWL-noctua, here. E. 1100²².

71. See SCREECH, here.

E. 714²². The daughters of the owl (Job xxx. 29) = those who have falsified truths and perverted them into falsities.

Own. See under PROPRIUM.

Own. Suus.

A. 79. As the celestial man is the Lord's . . . it is not conceded to him to possess these things as his own.

123. Whatever is with the worldly and corporeal man, he calls his own . . .

1377. All Spirits appear constantly in their own places.

1419². It is the Celestial of love not to want to be one's own; but to belong to all; so that it wants to give all things which are its own to others . . .

1577⁴. Disposes (the Natural) as its own.

1661³. Every man (then) thinks that the good and truth from which he combats are his own . . .

1813². What is the Lord's he makes his own.

1947². When anyone worships the Lord from non-freedom, he worships from nothing of his own.

2880. Nothing appears to man as his own; or, what is the same, as his proprium; than that which flows from freedom. Ex.

3603⁵. For man perceives nothing else in himself than what is his own . . .

—^e. Thus man makes evils his own, or proper to him.

4151. For the truths which had appeared to him as his own, when goods were conjoined, were apperceived as if taken away. Ex. —².

—³. No one has any good and truth which are his own . . . but still it appears as if good and truth were his own; and this for the reason that they may be appropriated to man, until he comes into such a state that he knows, then acknowledges, and at last believes, that they are not his-ejus, but the Lord's.

5135. 'Theft' = . . . when it attributes to itself, and makes its own, the goods and truths . . .

6138. The man who is being regenerated, is at last so far reduced . . . that he no longer wants to be his own, but the Lord's.

—². The Lord . . . wills a total submission, that is, that man should not be partly his own, and partly the Lord's. Ex.

9310. It is proper to love that all its own be from itself in others.

H. 556². He who loves himself, loves also those who belong to him . . . whom he calls his own.

597². This freedom . . . together with life, is given to man as his own . . .

W. 47^e. To love what is one's own . . . in another, disjoins . . .

115². Who can want to be wise, unless he feels and perceives that which he loves, learns, and imbibes, as his own? Who can otherwise retain it? Ex.

116. How an angel perceives and feels as his own; and thus receives and retains; when yet it is not his-ejus—for an Angel is not an Angel from what is his own . . . Ex.

P. 42. That the more closely man is conjoined with the Lord, the more distinctly he appears to himself as if he is his own . . . Gen.art.

43. Whatever man thinks, wills, speaks, and does, from freedom, he perceives as his own . . .

—^e. For anything to which anyone is compelled does not appear as his own; and that which does not appear as his own cannot become of his love, and so be appropriated to him as his own.

200. How can man claim for himself what is Divine merely because these few outermost things appear to him as his own?

298⁶. Intelligence appears as his own and proper to him both with a good man and an evil one . . .

R. 875¹². Whatever man acts from the will as his own according to the understanding as his own . . . remains permanently. By this the Lord brings man into a state of conjunction with Himself; and in this He reforms, regenerates, and saves him.

T. 607^e. This is what is meant by . . . 'being gathered to their own.' E. 659¹⁷, Ex.

D. 6003². This is given to man as his own . . .

Own Intelligence. Propria intelligentia.

A. 2761^e. 'A horse' = Own intelligence.

3574². 'Ephraim,' here, = Own intelligence; that is, those who believe and want themselves to be wise not from the Lord.

4419. He was troublesome to them, because he wanted to rule them from his own intelligence. . . I spoke to him about intelligence from proprium, saying that in the Christian world it prevails so greatly that it is believed that all intelligence is thence. . . The sphere of his intelligence infested me; but, as he was in the persuasion that he was more intelligent than others, he would not go away. He was then shown by the Angels what the quality of intelligence from proprium is, and what that of intelligence from the Divine; and this by lights. Des.

S783^e. This is induced by human erudition with those who trust in their own intelligence—suae intelligentiae.

8869. 'Thou shalt not make unto thee a graven image'=not from Own intelligence; (for) 'a graven image'=that which is not from the Lord, but from the proprium of man . . .

—². In the things which are hatched from Own intelligence there is nothing of spiritual life. Sig.

—⁵. The art of hatching by reasonings from Own intelligence. Tr.

— . For within all things which go forth from Own intelligence there are no truths and goods, but falsities and evils. Sig. and Ex.

S932⁴. By reasonings from Own intelligence.

S941. 'Thou shalt not build them hewn'=not from Own intelligence; (for) 'hewn stones'=such things as are from Own intelligence. Ex. . . For the things hatched from proprium, or from Own intelligence, have life from man . . . E.391²¹.

—². The things from proprium, or from Own intelligence, are called truths, but are not truths; they only appear as truths in the external form . . . but in the internal form are falsities.

—³. There are two religiosities in the world which are from Own intelligence. Ex.

— . The figments from Own intelligence . . .

—⁴. By 'hewn stone' is signified that which is from Own intelligence in the following passages. Ill.

—⁶. That religion is to be formed from truths from the Lord . . . and not from Own intelligence. Sig.

—^e. A religiosity which is hatched from Own intelligence, and not from the Word, is meant by 'idols,' 'strange gods,' 'molten images,' and 'graven images;' for the things from proprium are nothing else, being in themselves dead; and yet they are adored as if they were alive.

S942^e. By these instruments are signified such things as are of Own intelligence . . .

S943. For that which is from Own intelligence is in itself devoid of life; nay, is spiritually dead; for the proprium of man is nothing but evil.

—^e. (Thus) from the things of the Word comes forth worship truly Divine; and by no means from those of Own intelligence. Sig.

S944. It is believed that from the lumen of nature, thus without revelation, man can know many things which belong to religion . . . and yet these are the things which are from Own intelligence . . .

— . Hence was evident the quality of the lumen of nature without revelation; consequently the quality of that which is from Own intelligence.

9188^s. 'Diviners,' 'augurs,' 'sorcerers'=those who destroy the truths and goods of the Church . . . from Own intelligence, etc.

9391¹⁴. See IDOL, here. 9424⁷.

9714⁷. Worship from Own intelligence. Sig.

9802. Those who are in . . . the persuasion of intelligence and wisdom from self—a semet, are in such . . . thick darkness.

10227⁴. Those who trust in their own intelligence—suae propriae intelligentiae. Sig.

—¹⁸. 'Faculties,' here, =all things which are from Own intelligence . . . and therefore 'to deny all one's faculties' is to attribute nothing of intelligence and wisdom to self. He who does not do this cannot be instructed by the Lord. Sig.

10362². 'To prepare food'=to teach self from own intelligence.

10406. 'Formed it with a graving tool'=from own intelligence; (thus) to prepare false doctrine from own intelligence, which is done by the application of the sense of the letter . . . to favour the loves of self and of the world; for when these loves reign, the man is not in any illustration from Heaven, but takes all things from Own intelligence, and confirms them from the sense of the letter . . . Ex.

—⁴. 'An artificer'=the man who forms it from Own intelligence.

—⁵. How false doctrinals are formed so as to cohere . . . from Own intelligence, under the leadership of pleasure, cupidity, and love. Sig.

—⁶. 'A graven thing,' here, =what is from Own intelligence . . . for it is said, 'Every man is made a fool by knowledge' . . . Here 'knowledge'=Own intelligence . . .

—¹⁰. As the falsities and evils of doctrine which are signified by 'graven and molten things' are fabricated by man's own intelligence under the leadership of his love, they are called 'the work of man's hands,' etc. Ill.

10492⁴. See INTELLIGENCE, here.

H. 82. It is implanted in every man . . . to think of God under a human form . . . but this has been extinguished by all who through Own intelligence have removed the influx from Heaven: (such) want to have an invisible God.

C. J. 19^e. Those who had been in the conceit of Own intelligence were seen black.

S. 13³. 'Abaddon or Apollyon'=that their falsities were from the Hell where they are merely natural, and in Own intelligence.

60^e. The proprium of man is the love of self, and the derivative conceit of Own intelligence.

118. After death, those who ascribe all things to Own intelligence . . . first become like drunkards; afterwards like fools; and finally stupid, and they sit in darkness. Beware, therefore, of such a delirium. T.276^e.

Life 30². Thus is described Own intelligence. Tr.

F. 49². The other religiosity, which falsifies the truths of the Church, originates from the conceit of Own intelligence . . . (and) is meant by 'Philistia.'

52^e. Goliath smitten by David, represented their conceit of Own intelligence.

53^e. 'From the root of the serpent went forth a basilisk'=from the conceit of Own intelligence the destruction of all truth with them.

[F.] 60^e. 'It is the number of a man'=the quality of Own intelligence.

67. 'The horn between his eyes'=Own intelligence.

—'. 'The great horn of the he-goat broken'=no appearance of Own intelligence.

W. 267. If the understanding (of an evil man) sees truths opposed to . . . the principles of his own intelligence, he either falsifies them, or passes them by . . . or retains them in the memory to serve as means to his life's love, or to the conceit of his own intelligence.

P. 170^e. They had no faith . . . (and were such) as had been in Own intelligence.

197. Therefore, if man's life's love is the love of self, he comes into the conceit of Own intelligence . . .

206. When the love of self inspires its consort the understanding with its own love, this in the consort becomes conceit, which is the conceit of Own intelligence. Hence is Own prudence.

—'. Therefore the concupiscences of evil . . . the perceptions of the concupiscences . . . and the delights of the concupiscences . . . and their thoughts . . . are actuated by the love of self through the conceit of Own intelligence.

242^e. Those who are in faith separated from charity are in Own intelligence . . .

297. That the evil cannot be completely withdrawn from evils by the Lord, and be led into goods, so long as they believe Own intelligence to be everything, and the Divine Providence not anything. Gen.art.

298. That Own intelligence, when the will is in evil, sees nothing but falsity . . . Ex.

—'. From Own intelligence he believes himself to be a deity . . .

—³. That if Own intelligence sees truth then, it either averts itself, or it falsifies it. Ex.

—⁴. Own intelligence can induce the human form in externals only; but the Divine Providence in internals . . .

—⁶. Intelligence appears to be his own-sua atque propria-with both a good man and an evil one; and moreover a good man is equally bound to act from intelligence as if his own . . . but he who believes in the Divine Providence is withdrawn from evil; whereas he who does not believe in it, is not withdrawn . . . The difference between these two intelligences. Ex.

301^e. The imaginations of falsity are from Own intelligence.

314. The quality of those who are infatuated from Own intelligence. Des.

321^e. The proprium of his understanding is the conceit of Own intelligence . . .

R. 90³. Through his rationality he comes into the conceit of Own intelligence. Sig.

149. 'The vessels of a potter'=the things of Own intelligence, which are all false, and, in themselves, of no account.

387². The satanic kingdom consists of those who are in the love of dominating from the conceit of Own intelligence, and are thence in insanity . . .

408. The appearance of Own intelligence from conceit which originates from infernal love. Sig. and Ex.

—'. All Own intelligence burns from conceit; and its conceit arises from infernal love.

410. The infernal falsity from which is their own intelligence, through which all the truths of the Word have been falsified. Sig. and Ex.

450. Their imaginary and visionary argumentations from infernal love and Own intelligence. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. The Church which through reasonings from Own intelligence had falsified the truths of the Word. Sig.

452. That in their thoughts and discourses, interiorly regarded, there is nothing else . . . than . . . the conceit of Own intelligence which is the proprium of the understanding, etc. Sig. and Ex.

—'. 'Smoke'=the conceit of Own intelligence, which is the proprium of man's understanding, going forth from the love of self and of the world like smoke from fire.

—². 'Sulphur'=the concupiscences from infernal love flowing forth through the conceit of Own intelligence. Ill. 636.

502. 'Egypt'=. . . the love of reigning from the conceit of Own intelligence, which is in (that) Church.

571. The doctrine of the Church not from the Word, but hatched from Own intelligence. Sig. and Ex.

724. See HEAD, here.

793³. By 'the work of an artificer,' in the opposite sense, is signified that work which is done from Own intelligence, from which nothing else can be produced than what is false. Ill.

846. That they were rejected by those who are in falsities from Own intelligence. Sig. and Ex.

889. 'To give gratis'=from the Lord, and not from any intelligence proper to man.

919. That the men of the New Church will not be in the love of self and in Own intelligence, and thence in merely natural lumen; but in spiritual light from the Divine truth of the Word from the Lord alone. Sig. and Ex.

—'. 'The sun and moon'=the love of self, and Own intelligence.

940. That in the New Jerusalem . . . men will not be in Knowledges about God from the natural lumen which is from Own intelligence . . . Sig. and Ex.

M. 88². This love (of wisdom), if it remains with the man . . . is called the conceit or love of Own intelligence; (but) this love was taken out of the man, lest it should destroy him, and was transcribed into the woman, in order to become conjugal love . . . 353.

193². Hence no one can ever love his consort truly conjugially who is in the conceit of Own intelligence from the love of self.

208⁴. Husbands grow cold when they are in conceit from own intelligence.

269⁶. Hence atheists who are in the glory of reputation from the love of self, and thence in the conceit of own intelligence, enjoy a more lofty rationality . . .

331. Whether a man who loves himself from his own *-sua-*intelligence can love his wife. (Continued under INTELLIGENCE.)

353. Therefore the wife continually attracts to herself her husband's conceit of Own intelligence, and extinguishes it with him, and vivifies it with herself, and thus turns it into conjugal love, and infills it with pleasantnesses beyond measure. This has been provided by the Lord, lest the conceit of Own intelligence should so infatuate the man that he would believe himself to be intelligent and wise from himself, and not from the Lord, and would thus want to eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, and so believe himself to be like God . . . as the serpent—which was the love of Own intelligence—said and persuaded . . .

354. The two priests and the ambassador all believed at heart that intelligence and wisdom and the derivative prudence are from man, because they are in man . . . But the priests . . . said, There is nothing of (them) from man. . . It was then said to the ambassador, Put on the garments of a priest (and) he then declared that nothing of (them) can ever be possible except from God . . . The voice from Heaven then said to the two priests, Put off your own garments, and put on those of political ministers. . . They then thought from their interior selves, and spoke from arguments which they had inwardly cherished in favour of Own intelligence . . . At that moment there appeared a tree . . . and they were told, It is the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; beware lest you eat of it. Yet those three, infatuated with Own intelligence, burned with the cupidity of eating of it; and said to each other, Why not? Is not the fruit good? and they went to it, and ate. Instantly then, those three, because they were in like faith, became bosom friends; and entered together into the way of Own intelligence which tended into Hell . . .

T. 165². Everyone who does not read the Word under the Lord's auspices, reads it under the auspices of Own intelligence; and this is like an owl in such things as are in spiritual light . . . In a word, to read the Word under the auspices of Own intelligence, which is done by all who do not acknowledge the Lord as the God of Heaven and earth, and thence does not approach and worship Him alone, may be likened to . . .

—³. The man who . . . reads the Word under the auspices of Own intelligence, believes himself to be lynx-eyed . . . yet inwardly does not see a whit of truth . . .

276. Those who believe themselves to be able, from Own intelligence, to procure for themselves Knowledges about God, Heaven and Hell, and the spiritual things of the Church, do not know that, regarded in himself, the natural man is against the spiritual . . . They may be likened to . . . Their lot after death.

508³. How dangerous it is to enter intellectually into the dogmas of faith which have been manufactured from Own intelligence, and thence from falsities . . .

759. Have made for themselves a morning light from Own intelligence, and an evening light from the Word.

810. The reason these preachers were deprived of the priesthood, was that they did not fashion their sermons from the Word . . . but from their own rational lumen . . . selecting something savoury from their own intelligence . . .

D. 4901. Concerning those who are in Own intelligence. 4909.

—². Opulence and dignity do also come to those who act from Own intelligence; but to them these things are not a blessing, but a curse . . .

4910. Those who have entirely believed themselves to owe all things to Own intelligence, appear to sit at a table, and to write there . . . They have a hat down to the eyes, under which, as it were, they think. They are most malicious, and are sent away to that infernal den where is Charles XII.

4911. As to seek eagerly for honours and riches, and to acquire them, from Own intelligence, is an abuse of the laws of order in the natural world, thus also an abuse of the rational things of the mind—for they proceed in inverted order and from self—therefore those of them who by arts . . . bring themselves to it, in the other life become magicians . . .

D. Min. 4728. There was a Spirit with me who was in Own intelligence and wisdom, and on that account was such that he believed he knew and saw all things, and therefore also ruled all things. (Continued at A.4419,above.)

E. 141¹⁰. 'Graven images,' and 'idols'=the falsities which are from Own intelligence.

177. 'The vessels of the potter'=such things in the natural man as are from Own intelligence . . .

— . Those who think from Own intelligence, think from the world. Ex.

—². As these loves belong to man's proprium, the things which man sees and perceives from them are from Own intelligence.

—³. These are they who do not think from Own intelligence when they read the Word. The chief cause (of this) is that their interior mind looks to the Lord, and the Lord elevates it to Himself, and the lower mind at the same time, and thus withdraws it from the proprium of man, which cannot be done with those who principally regard themselves and the world.

—⁴. (Thus) man from Own intelligence perceives nothing but evils, and sees nothing but falsities.

—⁵. A figment is that which is from man's Own intelligence.

376³¹. Those who are insane in spiritual things from believing that they are intelligent from themselves. Tr. . . The glorying of the intelligence or erudition thence is meant by 'the crown of pride.'

—³⁷. Those who make for themselves doctrinal things from Own intelligence, and not from the Lord. Tr.

381³. Those who, from Own intelligence, want to acquire love and faith. Tr.

[E.] 388¹¹. Own intelligence, which confirms falsities and evils by reasonings from scientifics, and by applications of the sense of the letter. Tr.

—¹². Glorifying from Own intelligence. Sig.

411¹⁸. The Judgment upon those who, from Own intelligence, believe themselves wise in Divine things. Tr.

— . That they are from Own intelligence, is signified by, 'which your own hands have made for you.'

455¹⁰. 'The elations of man'=the conceit of Own intelligence.

—¹⁶. 'Burning coals'=the conceit of Own intelligence; 'fire,' the love of self.

—¹⁷. Said to be 'set on fire' from the conceit of Own intelligence, whence are falsities.

510. 'A great mountain burning with fire'=the love of self and the derivative Own intelligence. . . For all Own intelligence is from the love of self.

520³. Thus are the truths of the Word falsified by all those who are in the conceit of Own intelligence from the love of self. Ex.

537¹³. 'Broken pits which hold no water'=to hatch from own intelligence doctrinal things, which, because they are from proprium, are false; for the proprium of man is nothing but evil; and, because it is evil, falsity is produced from it.

587. 'Idols of gold, and of silver, and of brass, and of stone, and of wood'=false doctrinal things, which are from Own intelligence, favouring the loves of the body and the world, and the principles taken up thence. Ex. and Ill.

—². See IDOL, here. —³.

—⁵. That there is not any spiritual life in . . . the things of Own intelligence. Sig.

—⁷. By this whole description of a graven image is meant the formation of doctrine from Own intelligence. (Ex. in detail.)

617¹⁰. 'Buy wine and milk without silver, and without price'=that Divine truth spiritual and Divine truth natural are to be procured without Own intelligence. . . By 'silver' is here signified truth from proprium, or Own intelligence; in like manner by 'labour.'

627¹¹. The confidence of Own intelligence. Tr.

—¹².

637¹⁷. The loss and dissipation of the affections of good through the conceit of Own intelligence. Sig.

650³. The reason these Hells are more malignant than the rest, is that in proportion as man is in the love of self, and at the same time in the love of Own intelligence, his natural lumen is in a certain quasi splendour; for the love of self is like a fire, which kindles this lumen. Hence it is that they can think and reason cleverly against the Divine, and against all things of Heaven and the Church.

—²⁸. The falsities of the thoughts, and the evils of the cupidities, which he had because he was 'elated in height,' that is, because he was proud from the love of Own intelligence. Sig.

—⁵⁷. 'Saying in her heart, I and none besides me'=the falsity of Own intelligence.

654. As the falsities which flow forth from the evils of the love of self are attended with conceit, for the man then thinks from the proprium, therefore by 'Egypt' is here signified the conceit of Own intelligence. (See EGYPT, here, and at —⁴³. —⁴⁸.)

—³⁵. The conceit of Own intelligence from knowledge. Sig.

—³⁶. 'The sons of man'=those in Own intelligence.

—³⁷. No longer any understanding of truth, or perception of the Knowledges of good, on account of the conceit of Own intelligence. Sig.

—⁴². The state of those who want to be wise from themselves, thus from Own intelligence, in the things of Heaven and the Church. Tr.

—⁴³. The destruction of (the truths and goods of the Church) through the conceit of Own intelligence. Sig.

— . Own intelligence and its falsities endeavouring to destroy the truths of the Church. Sig.

—⁵¹. The natural man deprived of all truth and good through conceit from knowledge and thence from Own intelligence. Tr.

— . By 'the river' is signified Own intelligence.

— . These words involve the conceit of Own intelligence.

—⁵⁵. 'The pride of Israel'=the conceit of Own intelligence in such things as are of the Church.

—⁵⁹. That there will be no faculty to resist evils from Own intelligence. Sig.

714⁴. Those who from Own intelligence have hatched for themselves dogmas from the Word, constitute the body of the dragon. —¹⁰, Ex.

—¹⁰. All who study the Word, and are in the love of self, are also in the conceit of Own intelligence; and all who are in this conceit, and at the same time excel in cleverness from natural lumen, hatch for themselves dogmas from the Word. This is the origin of all the heresies, and all the falsities, in the Christian world.

— . Intelligence from proprium is from self; but intelligence not from proprium is from the Lord. All those have intelligence from proprium who are in the love of self; for the love of self is the very proprium of man; and those are in the love of self who read the Word and collect dogmas thence for the sake of reputation, glory, and honours . . .

825². The conceit of Own intelligence is with all who confirm falsities even to the destruction of Divine truth. . . . For those are in this conceit who regard themselves alone . . . in their writings and preachings; for they are in the love of self; and everyone who is in the love of self is in conceit while he is writing and preaching; and conceit derives all things from man's proprium. Hence it is that it is called the conceit of Own intelligence. The love of self resides in the will, and the conceit of Own intelligence in the derivative thought. These, therefore, while they are thinking anything from themselves, cannot think anything but falsities . . .

1186³. Own intelligence. Des. (in the Word.)

De Conj. 83. They who read the Word without doctrine . . . and are at the same time in the conceit of Own intelligence thence, produce adultery as of a father with his daughter-in-law.

Can. Redemp. i. 10. Intelligence from proprium one of the causes why falsities flow into the primates of the Church, and flow forth from them.

Ox. Bos.

A. 1361². 'Oxen,' etc., when sacrificed, = lower celestial things.

2137. That the Lord put on also a conformable Natural, is signified by 'the son of an ox' (Gen.viii.7).

2179². When oxen and bullocks appear in the World of Spirits, they know that the Angels are discoursing about natural goods.

2180. 'Abraham took the son of an ox tender and good' = the Celestial Natural which the Rational received to itself, in order that it might conjoin itself with perception from the Divine. 'A bullock,' or 'son of an ox,' in the Word, = natural good.

2183. The Celestial Natural is signified by 'the son of an ox.'

2184. 'The son of an ox' = the Natural corresponding.

2276⁵. The sacrifice of an ox represented natural good.

2781. Voluntary things, which are of good, are signified by oxen, etc.

—⁴. 'To send the foot of the ox and the ass' (Is. xxxii.20) = natural things which will serve (for instruction). 'The ox' = the Natural as to good.

—^c. 'The ox and the ass' = natural good and truth. III.

4244. 'I had ox and ass . . .' (Gen.xxxii.5) = acquisitions in their order there. 'An ox and ass,' etc. = exterior goods and truths which are of service . . . 'An ox' = exterior natural good; and 'an ass,' exterior natural truth.

4502². 'In their good-pleasure they hamstrung an ox' (Gen.xlix.6) = that in evil of purpose they extinguished the good of the Church. (=that from a depraved will they completely debilitated the external good which is of charity. 6357. E.443⁶.)

4926². 'Flocks,' and 'oxen' (Ps.cxliv.13,14) = goods internal and external.

5198. 'Cows,' or 'heifers,' = the truths of the Natural; (for) 'oxen,' and 'bullocks' = the goods of the Natural . . .

5642. 'An ox,' and 'a bullock' = the goods of the Natural (Refs.); here, the goods of the exterior Natural . . .

5895. 'To plough' = preparation by good for the reception of truths; for the oxen with which the ploughing was done = goods in the Natural. Refs.

—². Hence it was forbidden 'to plough with an ox and an ass together' (Deut.xxii.10) . . . because 'to plough with an ox' = good in the Natural. (Continued under Ass.)

6357. 'An ox' = the natural or external good of charity. Refs.

7176. The oxen and cows (in Mercury) do not differ much from those in our Earth, but are smaller; and in a certain way approach a species of deer. D.3262.

7601⁸. 'An ox' = the good of the Natural . . . That they were not to plough with an ox and an ass together = that they were not to be in both states together; namely, in good, and thence look to truth; and at the same time in truth, and thence look to good.

8912. 'An ox' (in the tenth commandment) = the affection of natural good; (which) is not to be 'coveted,' that is, taken away from anyone, or injured.

9065. 'When an ox shall gore a man or woman' (Ex. xxi.28) = if the affection of evil in the Natural shall injure the truth or the good of faith. . . 'An ox' = the affection of good in the Natural; hence, in the opposite sense, the affection of evil in the Natural. 9069.

9070. 'If the ox is a goring one from yesterday the day before yesterday' (ver.29) = if there has long been the affection of evil.

9074. 'The ox shall be stoned' (id.) = the penalty of destroyed truth.

9081. 'If the ox gores a man-servant, or a maid-servant' (ver.32) = if the affection of evil shall destroy truth or good in the Natural. 9079.

9083. 'The ox shall be stoned' (id.) = the penalty of destroyed truth and good in the Natural. . . In the Natural, because it is an ox which shall be stoned, by which is signified the affection in the Natural which has committed destruction.

9086. 'And an ox or an ass has fallen (into the pit)' (ver.33) = (the falsity) which perverts the good or truth in the Natural. 'An ox' = the affection of evil in the Natural; thus evil there.

9088. 'An ox' = good in the Natural.

9090. 'When a man's ox has struck a companion's ox a blow' (ver.35) = two truths of which the affections are diverse, and that of the one has injured that of the other. . . 'An ox' = the affection of good; and, in the opposite sense, the affection of evil, in the Natural; and 'a man' = truth. . . The reason diverse affections are signified, is that it is oxen—by which affections are signified—which injure one another; for the things which are diverse injure one another; but not those which are not diverse.

—³. In the Spiritual World . . . when the affections of good in the Natural are presented to view in an animal form, they appear as gentle oxen; and the affections of evil, as fierce oxen.

9091. The ox which died from the blow struck by the other ox = a good affection.

9092. 'They shall sell the live ox' (id.) = that the affection of the one which injured that of the other shall be alienated.

9094. 'The dead one also they shall divide' (id.) = also the injuring affection. . . By 'the dead ox' is signified the affection of evil and falsity in the Natural; thus the injuring affection; for evil injures through falsity. Ex.

9095. 'If it was known that the ox was a goring one from yesterday the day before yesterday' (ver. 36)=that it was known before that such was the affection.

[A.] 9097. 'Repaying he shall repay ox for ox' (id.)=restitution to entirety. . . 'An ox'=an affection in the Natural.

9097a. 'The dead one shall be his own' (id.)=for the injuring affection. 'The ox'=the affection of evil.

9099. 'When a man has stolen an ox, or a small cattle' (Ex.xxii.1)=him who takes away from anyone his exterior or interior good. . . 'An ox'=the affection of good in the Natural; thus exterior good. Refs.

9102. 'Five oxen shall he repay for the ox (id.)=a corresponding penalty to a great extent.

9134. 'From an ox even to an ass' (Ex.xxii.4)=from exterior good or truth. 'An ox'=the good of the Natural.

9162. 'When a man has given to his companion an ass or an ox . . . to keep' (ver. 10)=exterior and interior truth and good . . .

9225. 'So shalt thou do with thine ox, with thy flock' (ver. 30)=that [this attribution to the Lord extends] to exterior and interior good.

9255. 'When thou meetest thine enemy's ox, or his ass, going astray' (Ex.xxiii.4)=good not genuine, and truth not genuine, with those outside the Church. . . 'An ox'=the good of the external man.

9262⁵. 'An ox'=the good of the external or natural man. Refs.

9272⁶. 'To send forth the foot of the ox and of the ass'=to be instructed in external goods and truths.

9280. 'That thine ox may rest, and thine ass' (ver. 12)=the tranquillity of peace [enjoyed by] external goods and truths at the same time.

9391¹¹. 'An ox' (Ps.evi.20)=good in the Natural; thus in the external form.

9990². The purifications of the external man were represented by burnt-offerings and sacrifices of oxen, bullocks, and he-goats. 10042⁸.

10184⁰. 'An ox' =good.

10235⁶. 'The twelve oxen' (1 Kings vii.25)=all the goods of the natural and sensuous man in the complex, because they were in the place of bases.

10236⁵. 'The oxen' (ver.29)=protection lest goods should enter; for 'oxen'=goods in their power. Ref.

10669⁵. 'To plough with an ox' (Deut.xxii.)=to prepare by means of good. Ex.

H. 110. Oxen and bullocks correspond to the affections of the natural mind.

S. 18³. An ox, etc. =natural affection.

23. In Egypt . . . there were images of calves, oxen, etc., because calves and oxen signified the affections and forces of the natural mind.

W. 346². The perfect animals are oxen, etc.

T. 325. 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's . . . ox, etc.' Ex.

E. 304¹². 'An ox'=natural good.

316²³. 'The first-born of an ox, honour is his' (Deut. xxxiii. 17)=the good of spiritual love.

340²⁶. 'To sacrifice an ox' (Is.lxvi.3)=worship from those things which represented natural good.

355³⁴. 'Shall one plough with oxen?' (Amos vi. 12)=is there any perception of good?

430¹². 'The twelve oxen'=all the goods and derivative truths upon which they are founded.

443⁷. 'An ox,' in the Word, =moral and natural good.

519⁶. 'Oxen ploughing'=the will of good.

537⁶. 'An ass and an ox' (Luke xiv. 5)=the truth and good of the natural man.

548⁵. 'Oxen,' in the Word, =natural affections; and 'five yoke of oxen' (Luke xiv. 19)=all these affections, or the cupidities which draw away from Heaven.

—7. 'An ox' (Ex.xxii.1)=the good of the natural man: that he shall 'repay five oxen for the ox'=that he shall sufficiently amend the things he has perverted and extinguished.

600¹⁴. That 'the face of an ox' was seen 'on the left' (Ezek.i. 10)=the good of truth in obscurity; for by 'an ox' is signified the good of the natural man which is in obscurity with those who dwell in Heaven at the north.

617²⁶. 'To kill an ox and slay a small cattle' (Is.xxii. 13)=to extinguish natural good and spiritual good.

65037. 'The herds of the ox' (Joel i. 18)=those things which are of the natural man in the whole complex.

652¹⁹. 'Well-laden oxen' (P.exliv. 14)=natural goods and their affections.

700²⁰. The ark being brought upon a new cart to which oxen were attached (2 Sam.vi.) represented the doctrine of truth from the good of love . . . 'Oxen'=the good of love in the natural man.

781¹⁷. 'The lion shall eat straw like the ox' (Is.xi.7)=that infernal falsity burning to destroy the truths of the Church will do no harm to the affection of good of the natural man; neither with a man in himself, nor with men among each other; and neither will it do harm to the Word. Ex.

1022². 'The ox and ass' (in the tenth commandment) =the affection of natural good and truth.

1200². In the World of Spirits are seen oxen, etc.

Paddan Aram. Paddan Aram.

A. 3664. 'Go to Paddan Aram' (Gen.xxviii.2)=the Knowledges of such truth; (for) 'Aram,' or Syria, = Knowledges. The reason 'Paddan Aram'=the Knowledges of truth, is derived from the fact that it was in Syria of Rivers, where were Nahor, Bethuel, and Laban. 3675.

3685. 'And (Jacob) went to Paddan Aram' (ver.7) = to imbue the Knowledges of that good and truth . . . which are signified by 'Paddan Aram.'

4107. 'Which he acquired in Paddan Aram' (Gen. xxxi.18) = the Knowledges of good and truth in the Natural. 'Paddan Aram' = the Knowledges of good and truth.

4395. 'In coming thither from Paddan Aram' (Gen. xxxiii.18) = after the former state. . . 'Paddan Aram' = the Knowledges of good and truth, but exterior Knowledges, which subserve for the introducing of genuine goods and truths; for Laban was there, by whom is represented the affection of such good.

4567. 'God appeared to Jacob again in his coming from Paddan Aram, and blessed him' (Gen. xxxv.9) = interior natural perception. . . 'Again in his coming from Paddan Aram' = after he had imbibed the Knowledges of good and truth.

4610. 'These are the sons of Jacob which were born to him in Paddan Aram' (ver.26) = their origin and state at this time. . . Their origin is signified by their being born in Paddan Aram, or from the Knowledges of truth and good. 6024².

6025. Their being born in Paddan Aram represented that the man of the Church must be regenerated by means of the Knowledges of good and truth.

6242. 'In my coming from Paddan' (Gen. xlviii.7) = from a state of Knowledges; (for) 'Paddan Aram' = the Knowledges of truth and good. Refs.

1763. These Spirits . . . induce a pain in the head, as if from the suction of an air-pump. 5180.

1974². The envy was such that it caused in them . . . anguish and interior pain . . . They were led through varieties of envy even so as to ache at heart.

2318^e. The grief and intercession of the Lord for those in evil, but in some good and truth. Tr.

2598. When this Gentile Spirit heard of the grief of Micah on account of the loss of his graven image, grief came over him also, insomuch that he scarcely knew what to think for interior grief. His grief was perceived, and the innocence in every one of his affections . . .

2660. The Lord's state . . . was a state of grief from love. Sig.

2684. A solitary state, such as is that of thought in grief and despair. Sig.

2688. The state of thought was increased to the last degree of grief. Sig.

2689. A further degree of grief. Sig. and Ex.

—, Those who cannot be reformed do not at all know what it is to grieve on account of being deprived of truths.

—², It is known that all anxiety and grief arise from being deprived of the things we love. They who are affected solely with corporeal and worldly things . . . grieve when they are deprived of them ; but they who are affected with spiritual goods and truths . . . grieve when they are deprived of them . . . (Thus) the state of grief (of those who are being desolated as to the goods and truths which they love) is more grievous, because more interior. . . It is their state which is here described.

[A.] 2694. See DESPAIR, here. 2698.

2873. When the Angels merely think about such freedom . . . they are seized with internal pain . . .

2910. The Lord's state of grief on account of the night as to the truths of faith in the Church. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'To mourn' regards the grief on account of the night as to the goods ; and 'to weep,' as to the truths.

2912. Elevation from grief. Sig.

3471. That hence at first there was grief. Sig. and Ex.

—². That there was grief at first, was because when truths are being introduced to natural good, they at first cause pain ; for they aggravate the conscience, and induce anxieties . . . but this first grief diminishes by degrees . . . It is as with a sickly body, which is to be restored to health by painful things : when in this state, it at first has grief.

4444. 'The men grieved, and were very wroth' (Gen. xxxiv.7)=that they were in evil against the truth of the Church with the Ancients.

4496. 'When they were in pain' (ver.25)=cupidities. Ex.

— . When man is being purified from these loves . . . he is in pain and anxiety ; the cupidities . . . are what grieve and suffer.

5034^e. See ANGER, here.

5059. When those who had lived in . . . adulteries approached me, they infused a pain in the loins . . .

5060. Those who are in contraries to conjugal love inflict pain in the testicles. Des.

— . The infernal Societies, which are in contraries, act by a severe and painful influx ; but their influx is not perceived except by those who have the interiors open . . .

5127³. When he is in any grief from misfortunes or diseases, he can see (these truths).

5132^e. The appearance of mercy with the evil, is grief on account of what they themselves suffer (by seeing their friends suffer).

5145⁴. They sometimes appear to have a pain as of conscience ; but . . . it is a pain from the privation of their delight . . .

5352. The removal of the evils which occasioned the grief. Sig.

5353^e. In like manner in temptations, which are spiritual griefs, and thence interior miseries, and despairs, evils are removed . . .

5563. Pains are sometimes felt in the skull, now in one part, now in another . . . such things come forth from the falsities which are from cupidities. . . Such nuclei, which are indurations, are broken and reduced to softness . . . by severe influxes of Truths, which is effected with interior pain ; and also by actual readings, which is effected with exterior pain.

5714. When the sphere of life (of this aged adulterer) was communicated to me, it inflicted some pain on the periosteum and the nerves there, as on the toes of the left foot ; and, when he was permitted to emerge, on the parts where he was, especially on the periosteum in the loins, and on those of the breast beneath the diaphragm, and likewise on the inside of the teeth. When his sphere was operating, it induced also a great oppression in the stomach.

5715^e. Spirits from many Hells have been with me, through whom was communicated the sphere of the exhalations thence, which, as it was permitted to act into the solid parts of the body, so was I seized with a heaviness, with pain . . . which ceased in a moment when those Spirits were expelled.

5720. When (these hypocrites) were allowed to inflow into the parts of the body to which they corresponded from the opposite, they injected a pain into the teeth ; and, at their close presence, so grievous a one, that I could not endure it ; and in proportion as they were removed, in the same proportion the pain ceased.

—^e. One whom I had known (thus) inflicted pain on my teeth and gums. When he was lifted upwards to the left, the pain attacked the left jaw, and the bone of the left temple, even to the bones of the cheek.

5721². When (such lovers of self) are applied to a man, they induce a great pain through weariness, which they insufflate, and continually increase . . .

5887. 'Let it not be for grief to you' (Gen.xlv.5)=anxiety of the heart or will.

6097. All temptations appear evil, because they are interior anxieties and pains . . .

6393². If they see others more blessed than themselves, they grieve . . .

6432⁶. To be in grief on account of lost good. Sig.

— . To be in grief on account of lost good of truth. Sig.

6502. For evils and falsities . . . induce sicknesses of mind ; and at last pains.

6539. 'They mourned there a great and very grievous mourning'=grief. . . The grief here signified is the grief of initiation ; for before the Knowledges of good and truth . . . can be implanted in good . . . there is grief ; for another state must be induced on the Natural . . .

6540. The end of the grief. Sig.

6541. The apperception of the grief by the good of the Church. Sig.

6559^e. That the end of the good Spirits is not to speak or do evil . . . is perceived from . . . their grief.

6800. Grief on account of the endeavour to subjugate the truth of the Church. Sig.

6853. 'I know their griefs' (Ex.iii.7)=foresight as to how much they were immersed in falsities. . . 'Griefs'=immersion in falsities.

7198. 'The groaning of the sons of Israel' = their grief from combat.

7564². The truths and goods which are not the Lord's, are . . . those which the man does in a state of misfortune, sickness, grief, and fear . . .

7768². Like painful ulcers . . .

—^o. After they have rejected the things which had been of faith, they feel pain at the least breath of good and truth.

7803. The chastising Spirits of Jupiter . . . chastise with a pain in the joints of the feet or hands, or with a pain near the epigastric region.

—^e. He said that he chastises (the man) with various pains.

8164. These cannot be called temptations, but griefs. Ex.

8313. 'Pain has caught hold of the inhabitants of Philistia' (Ex. xv. 14) = despair of enlarging dominion . . .

—². The reason 'pain' here = despair, is that the highest [degree of] pain is meant, such as that of women in labour. The word in the Original Language means such pain. Ill.

8352². When truths are deficient the spiritual life labours and suffers; hence are pain and anxiety. Ex.

9422². 'To sit there' = permanence in a state of grief.

10382². (This chiding Spirit) induced something of pain in the region of the abdomen.

10535. Their grief on account of no eminence above others. Sig. and Ex.

H. 299. See ANXIETY, here.

— (a). What pain of conscience is. Refs.

400. In proportion as they approach, they come into anguish and pains.

—³. When opposite acts upon opposite, such pain is produced.

464⁶. The Angels grieve most deeply that the learned ascribe all things to nature . . .

526². The Angels grieve that they do not know that faith alone is not possible . . .

N. 187. Spiritual temptations are pains (or griefs) of mind with those in goods and truths, induced by evil Spirits . . .

196. These temptations are most grievous when conjoined with pains inflicted on the body; and still more so if these pains persist and grow worse . . .

R. 263. Grief of heart (lest) all should perish. Sig. and Ex.

326. Grief of heart (felt by those in the Lower Earth). Sig.

763. That in the degree of their elation of heart . . . they have internal pain after death . . . Sig. and Ex. 767, Sig.

788. Their interior and exterior pain and mourning . . . that so eminent a religiosity should be destroyed . . . Sig.

884. That the Lord will take away from them all grief of the lower mind, etc. Sig. and Ex.

M. 10⁴. He said, I was tortured with interior pain . . .

—⁵. With the pain and consequent torture in head and body I prostrated myself on the ground . . .

371. In all love there are fear and grief; fear lest it perish, and grief if it perishes.

T. 568. Hell, where there are eternal pains.

D. 153. Evil Spirits inhere most pertinaciously in doing evil to man, (as shown by) their inflicting pain on various parts of my body; on the feet, so that I could hardly walk; on the dorsal nerves, so that I could hardly stand; in like manner on the parts of the head; with such pertinacity that the pain and the like lasted continuously for some time . . . The pains were appeased and aggravated, sometimes suddenly, with various changes, as I talked with them . . .

376^e. Thus a most frightful sense of pain would be induced by the diabolic crew, unless God Messiah saved Souls from such a Hell.

541. He said he is allowed to chastise them with . . . pains in the joints, to such a degree of pain that they can endure it no longer, as if by a contorsion of the joints of the fingers, feet, and also by certain gentle prickings in the face, according to the permission.

3677. Sins are not remitted except from the heart, with a certain internal torture and pain.

3900². (These lascivious girls) occasion a pain in the os pubis . . .

3922^e. (These lascivious ones) inflict a pain in bulbum penis.

3930. (These most deceitful ones above the head) inflicted a pain on the os pubis.

3997. (These Sirens) struck a quite sensible pain in the region of the abdomen, which was their own anguish putting forth this effect . . .

4088. (Thus) if all the reasonings of Spirits were to inflow, man would . . . have his head affected with such a mute pain. Des.

4348. There have been Spirits with me who infused a pain of the teeth at the right side of the jaw, and in the flesh of the teeth there, and in the bones as far as the right ear. (They were hypocrites. Des.) The influx is into the periosteum of the teeth, and also into the pericranium near the right ear, in which they create a pain quite bad and severe; an indication that they are evil. Those who do not [cause] a pain are good, and are sensible of all things which are being thought . . .

—^e. For some days I felt a gnashing of the teeth and a grievous pain in their roots and in the periosteum from (these hypocrites). When (this cause) was removed, and in proportion as it was removed, the pain ceased. It passed also into other periosteum of the head according to the diversities of its state. 4351. 4361.

4381. There are as many Hells (as there are phantasies), with living pain, torture, and perception. Des.

4558. Pain seized the flesh of the gums on the left side, so that they swelled, by which I perceived that hypocrites were present . . .

4559. I also perceived a pressure and pain . . . at the skull . . . above those teeth, which was from the same source ; for hypocrites strike a pain into the very bones of the skull.

4586. That such things have their cause in the Spiritual World has been given me to know by much experience . . . Such Spirits have been often and long applied to me, and have induced tortures and pains . . .

4614. (On the Spirits who affect the tongue with pain.)

4778. I felt a contraction and pain in the thoracic region, because those were there who acknowledge faith as the only means of salvation . . .

4855. When (these profaners) come to man, they produce pain in the head, even in the very bones ; and a pain in the shoulder, or arm . . . Such are those who are in a life of piety, and not in a life of charity.

4924². (These priests, on being led upwards) began to get a pain in the knees ; afterwards in the region of the stomach ; and at last about the breast . . . Towards the higher places, the pain became grievous . . .

5103. From the Hell of the hypocrites there arose an exhalation which infested the teeth and gums of the left side, both upper and lower. This lasted some hours, and I complained that I was affected with that pain . . . (Continued under LUTHER.)

5759a. Those who could strike a pain into the body and lower mind. (See LAST JUDGMENT, here.)

5767². From those in falsities, the pain was terminated towards the urethra ; [from those] in the love of self, towards the anus.

5814². (Those in a holy external) operated into the lower ribs of the left side, and inflicted pain.

D. Min. 4658. That as hypocrites induce pains on a tooth, so other Spirits induce other pains of the body which correspond. Examps.

E. 306. Grief of heart . . . Sig. and Ex.

393. Grief of their lower mind. Sig. and Ex.

412²⁸. Their torments from the influx of Divine good and Divine truth, are signified by, 'pangs and pains shall take hold on them . . .' (Is.xiii.5).

419. The interiors are (then) opened . . . whence they have pains, anguishes, and torments . . .

484². Grief on account of the non-understanding of truth . . . Sig.

—³. 'The shedding of tears'=grief of mind ; and 'weeping'=grief of heart, on account of falsities. Grief of mind is grief of the thought and understanding . . . and grief of heart is grief of the affection or will . . .

601. A testification of grievous grief on account of the desolation of Divine truth in the Church. Sig. and Ex.

—¹⁴. Grievous grief and lamentation over all things of the Church. Sig.

660. All sadness and grief of the lower mind proceeds from an assault on the love.

710¹⁸. That it will not receive reformation, is signified by, 'the pains of a travailing woman shall come upon him' (Hos.xiii.13). 721²⁴. —²⁵. —²⁶. —²⁷.

781¹⁸. The grief of the natural man, and the derivative grief of the spiritual man. Sig.

811³. Lamentation over the devastation of all truth in the Church, is described by, 'Hear all ye peoples, and see my sorrow' (Lam.i.18).

1164. Grief of soul and of heart. Sig. and Ex.

J. (Post.) 45. The Arians induce a pain on the right arm, near the shoulder-blade ; but the Socinians induce a pain on the breast-bone.

A. 1008². A pictured image of the man (in each idea of his thought).

1869. The ideas themselves appear (there) like pic-tured images.

3391³. 'To paint with vermilion' (Jer.xxii.14)=to falsify spiritual truths.

5199. Beauty from the truth of faith only is like the beauty of a painted or sculptured face . . .

8480. Like flowers painted upon a tablet, as compared with those born in a garden . . . The flowers painted on a tablet are beautiful in the external form only ; and as to the internal one are nothing but dirt and a mass of earthy particles lying strewed about . . . So is it with the good which is from man, as compared with that which is from the Lord. 8801^e.

9424^e. Like a painting in the likeness of a man, in which inwardly there is nothing but dirt, as compared with the form of the man himself, in which inwardly there is life.

9828^s. 'Men painted on the wall' (Ezek.xxiii.14)=the appearances of truth in externals : in like manner 'images painted with vermilion.'

10194. This truth (without good) may be likened to paintings of flowers, of a tree, of an animal, inwardly in which there is only dirt . . .

H. 74^e. The Angels in churches, whether sculptured or painted, are always presented as men.

459^e. No painter with all his art could give such light to the colours . . .

W. 94. When God is presented in pictures as a Man.

R. 777. 'Paint,' etc. (Rev.xviii.13)=the spiritual things of worship. —², Ill.

M. 42¹. No painter could present her beauty in its form; for there is no such lustre in his colour; nor is such beauty expressible in his art.

364^e. Painted—picturatae—like rainbow stones.

I. 2. Like a picture on a wall seen at night . . .

T. 15². Should see on a tablet (the three gods) painted . . .

61. Therefore painters set an ugly face beside a handsome one. 465. 763.

296⁴. If this faith were exhibited in its enormity in a picture . . .

348². Faith separated is like a painting in colours partaking of black on a black stone; but faith conjoined is like a painting in beautiful colours on a transparent crystal.

681^e. The (mere) name of a Christian . . . is like a blackened painting.

D. 252. Images, paintings, and innumerable other things, which in outermosts appear beautiful, and are esteemed as of great price, are yet so disposed within that they are like dirt and mud . . . 2558.

2763^e. These things have been shown me, but I cannot describe the forms and pictures . . . They can indeed be pictured, but not described to the apprehension.

2824. As I have somewhere seen in pictures.

3511. Therefore they tolerate in their temples neither statues, images, nor pictures . . .

4166. As when one sees in a picture everything represented simultaneously.

4214. Not as if they were painted, but seen . . .

— Like pictured things which appear optically.

5833². Recognized him from his picture in the world.

E. 654⁶⁹. 'When she saw men painted upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans painted with vermilion' (Ezek. xxiii. 14) = phantasies from the fallacies of the senses, which are of the sensuous man; and the derivative argumentations, whence are falsifications.

825⁴. (Such works) are like paintings made from stercoaceous dirt coloured over . . .

827². The Temple, in which . . . the paintings, etc., were representative.

—⁷. 'Painted with vermilion' = these things appearing exteriorly like truths . . . The 'painted wall' = the appearance of the doctrinal things in externals.

831⁶. Cannot be imitated by any picture in the world.

Ath. 153. The ancients, when they represented God in their paintings, pictured Him as a Man . . .

Pair. Par.

See Two—bina.

A. 671. 'Pairs of all shalt thou make to enter into the ark to vivify' (Gen. vi. 19) = their regeneration . . . to wit, both of truths . . . and of goods . . . 673. (Compare 717.)

747. They cannot be pairs unless they correspond to each other, as do truths and goods, and evils and falsities. Ex.

W. 127. In order that love and wisdom may make a one with angel and with man, there are pairs in all things of his body. Enum. . . All their right parts relate to love, from which is wisdom, and all their left parts to wisdom from love . . . Angel and man have these pairs, in order that love and wisdom, or good and truth, may act a one; and that as a one they may look to the Lord.

384. In the other things of the body, which are called members, organs, and viscera, the will and understanding are conjoined, and therefore they are in pairs. Enum.

—^e. And as the conjunction of good and truth is reciprocal, and, through this conjunction there is effected as it were a one, therefore these pairs in man act together and conjointly in functions, motions, and senses.

409². From this marriage (of the will and understanding) it is that in each and all things of the body there is a right and a left; and the right relates to the good from which is truth; and the left to the truth from good; thus to conjunction. It is from this that there are pairs in man. Enum.

M. 42. A pair of consorts (from the Third Heaven). Des.

229. Hence it is provided that conjugal pairs are born . . . 316³.

270⁴. The three pairs of birds (seen) signify these things: the pair of turtle-doves, the conjugal love of the highest region (of the mind); the pair of birds of paradise, the conjugal love of the middle region; and the pair of swans, the conjugal love of the lowest region.

E. 984². In like manner the rest of the pairs with man relate to good and truth; the organ or member on the right, to good; and the one on the left to truth. It is the like with a husband and his wife between whom there is love truly conjugal . . .

1004⁴. (These consorts who are in such conjugal love that both can be one flesh) are like the pairs in man (Enum.) which, although they are two, still are one as to life, and as to the exercises of life, which are uses.

1142. Hence it is that here and elsewhere in the Word, pairs are mentioned, of which the one signifies good, and the other truth. Examps.

Palace. Palatium.

A. 1626. There are also presented to view cities with magnificent palaces, contiguous, resplendent in their colouring, beyond all the art of the architect.

1631. Those who . . . in the life of the body, had dwelt in magnificent palaces, placing their Heaven in such things, and, being destitute of conscience and charity, had despoiled others of their goods . . . are sometimes allowed to dwell in palaces, in like manner as in the world . . . But the scene is changed. The palaces are slowly dissipated, and become small houses, more and more mean, and at last none at all . . .

2348^e. 'Palaces' (Jer. ix. 21), or houses, = voluntary things.

3271^e. 'Courts' = the external things of the Church; and 'palaces,' the internal things.

[A.] 4411². When this truth inflows into the First Heaven . . . it appears there . . . as a City in which are palaces.

4459⁴. He who believes from the heart . . . that of himself he possesses nothing . . . in Heaven . . . dwells in most magnificent palaces. Refs.

4926⁶. 'The palace' (Amos iv.3)=the Word, consequently the truth of doctrine which is from good.

6486^e. Like one who is building a palace . . .

10194². Around Spirits who are in truths from good, there appear the most beautiful representatives; namely, houses and palaces refulgent with gold and precious stones . . .

10513. Before the Spirits (of the Third Earth) were represented magnificent palaces . . . but they held them in no estimation . . . D.1681.

H. 51². Like the prefects, officials, and ministers in one royal palace . . .

185. There have been seen palaces of Heaven, which were so magnificent that they cannot be described. Above, they shone as if they were of pure gold; and below as if of precious stones; one palace being more resplendent than another. Within, the rooms were adorned with such decorations as neither words nor knowledges suffice to describe. At the side which looked to the south, there were paradises . . . At the boundaries again were seen palaces, in which the view terminated.

218². (The prefects) dwell in the middle of the Society, higher up than the rest, and in magnificent palaces.

270⁴. They compared the wisdom of the Angels of the Third Heaven to a magnificent palace, full of all things for use . . . and those Angels, being in the truths of wisdom, can enter into the palace, and see all things . . .

— (Such) cannot come to the first threshold of the palace of wisdom . . .

361. Some (of the rich in Heaven) dwell in palaces, within which all things shine as from gold and silver . . . but they do not set their hearts on these things; but on the uses . . . Uses themselves are thus refulgent in Heaven . . . P.220¹⁰.

F. 63. In the Spiritual World appear . . . houses and palaces . . .

—². All things which appear there are correspondences . . . This is why those in the affection of good and truth, and thence in wisdom and intelligence, dwell in magnificent palaces, around which are paradises . . .

P. 36². The Angels represent wisdom to themselves as a magnificent and most ornate palace; the ascent to which is by twelve steps . . .

203^e. This universal Providence is seen . . . by the Lord, as a magnificent palace, with its work of construction and enlargement constantly going on. (See D.3724.)

R. 962. A magnificent palace seen, and in its inmost a temple (in which was held a Council of the clergy). B.120. T.188.

M. 7. In front was a lowly palace . . .

—⁴. Those of the highest [rank] in Heaven have palaces and courts, which in magnificence and splendour surpass the palaces and courts of earthly emperors and kings.

11^e. I will introduce you into (the Prince's) palace . . .

12. When they were brought to the palace, they first viewed it from without. It was large, built of porphyry, with a substructure of jasper; and before the gate were six lofty columns of lapis lazuli. The roof was of plates of gold; the lofty windows, of the most transparent crystal, also had frames of gold. . . Within the palace they were conducted from room to room; and saw ornaments of ineffable beauty; on the ceilings, decorations of inimitable carving. Near the walls they saw silver tables overlaid with gold, on which were various utensils made of precious stones, and of entire gems, in heavenly forms . . . The Angel said, The things you see . . . were framed by the Maker of the universe, and presented as a gift to our Prince; and here therefore is the architectonic art in its own art . . . As our hearts are not in these things, they are only accessory to the joys of our hearts . . .

14. They were introduced into the court-yard, the ambulatory of the palace . . .

76³. (In the city of the Silver Age) the houses were so many palaces, built of marble, with steps of alabaster in front; and, at the sides of the steps, columns of jasper . . .

151a. On the top of the hill was an octagonal palace, which they called the Palladium . . .

266². All things in that Society . . . are magnificent from the palaces and paradises.

270². (The three pairs of birds) flew to a certain lofty palace in the east . . . In the palace were three rows of windows . . . That palace represented the habitations of conjugal love in human minds. Ex.

316. I saw . . . a portico leading to a small palace-palatiolum. Des.

381. I saw afar off a palace beset by a crowd . . .

477⁴. (When his external sight was opened) he saw magnificent palaces of alabaster, marble, and various precious stones, (which vanished when his internal sight was opened).

—⁵. He was introduced into one of the palaces. Des.

T. 808. Like one who from the roof of his palace sees . . .

D. 714. There are also (there) things which are called heavenly habitations; namely, magnificent palaces . . .

1344. The palaces constructed by art in the world are as nothing [in comparison] . . .

350². The rich (Dutch) at first seem to themselves to dwell in magnificent palaces (which are gradually changed) into mean houses; and then into none at all.

3724. Like the materials collected for a great palace . . .

4052. (The palace of those who are in the persuasion that faith alone saves, and yet live mercifully, from conscience). Des.

4303. On the palaces in the other life.
4427. The Angels dwell in palaces so magnificent . . . and this with variety to eternity.
4577. But where the Angels are, there are the most magnificent palaces, such as cannot be described . . . They shine with the most precious woods and stones.
- 4639^c. Who would believe that (in the Heavens) there are palaces in which they dwell, most magnificent . . .
4774. I was brought to a great palace like the castle in Stockholm. (Continued under NEW CHURCH.) J.(Post.) 117.
4894. There appeared (in the Heavens) mountains higher and higher, which were still better cultivated, and where there were magnificent palaces.
5119. (Those in the Celestial Kingdom) have palaces, etc.
5159. (In Heaven) they see . . . also palaces, with decorations varying perpetually, with such harmony, that the successions of the changes occasion inexpressible delight to the lower mind. Within, are rooms in such an order as cannot be described, with stupendous ornaments in them.
- 5684². Otherwise, he stands far outside the palace of wisdom . . .
- 6027¹⁴. When they arrived, the house was changed into a beautiful palace, with many rooms. (Continued under MARRIAGE, here.)
- E. 208. These things the Angels have from correspondence; whence it is that the wiser Angels have palaces more magnificent than the less wise Angels.
- 304¹¹. 'The palace shall be a desert' (Is.xxxii.14)=where good dwells.
- 365³⁵. 'Peace be in thy bulwark, and rest in thy palaces' (Ps.cxxii.7)=in the exterior and the interior man; for . . . the interior man, with the things therein, which are spiritual truths and goods, is like a palace, or house; because it is within the exterior. Hence . . . the interior things of man are signified by 'palaces.'
- 391¹⁵. 'Palaces' (Lam.ii.7)=the things of doctrine.
- 405²⁷. That truths are inscribed on those who are in celestial good, is signified by, 'God is known in her palaces' (Ps.xlviii.3).
- 410⁷. 'The palace' (Is.xxxii.14)=the whole Church as to truths from good.
417. Where the Angels dwell, there are palaces, etc.
- 453¹⁰. 'To distinguish her palaces' (Ps.xlviii.13)=to perceive the goods of truth. For 'houses'=goods; and 'palaces,' the more noble goods of truth.
- 555⁶. 'Palaces' (Jer.ix.21)=all things of thought and affection.
- 575³. By phantasies, evil Spirits can present palaces, etc.
- 652²⁷. 'Palaces'=the more interior, and thence the more sublime things, of the human mind. Hence it is evident what is signified by, 'death . . . shall come into our palaces' (id.)
- 675¹⁴. 'Palaces' (Amos vi.8)=falsities themselves; which are called 'palaces,' because they are proud; and because their falsities are embellished in the external form, so as to appear magnificent . . .

714¹⁸. The dogmas which defend them are signified by 'palaces' and 'fortifications' (Is.xxxiv.13).

—¹⁹. By 'her palaces in which are the ijim,' and by 'the temples in which are dragons' (Is.xiii.22) are signified the goods and truths of the Word adulterated and profaned.

724¹¹. The affections of truth are compared to 'corners cut out in the figure of a palace' (Ps.cxliv.12), because 'a palace' is a representative of the understanding, in which Truths are in a beautiful form; and they are in a beautiful form when they are from the affection of truth.

—¹⁷. 'The palace shall be inhabited, according to its manner' (Jer.xxx.18)=the spiritual understanding of Truths, as with the Ancients: 'a palace'=the understanding of Spiritual Truths; for in the understanding are spiritual Truths in their forms, which, when presented to view, appear as palaces.

734¹⁶. The endeavour to destroy the understanding of truth, is signified by, 'Let us destroy her palaces' (Jer.vi.5).

831⁶. In the Spiritual Heaven there are magnificent palaces, within which all things are refulgent with precious stones, and with decorations in such forms that they cannot be imitated by any picture in the world, nor be expressed in words. For art there is in its own art, especially that of architecture.

863¹⁴. 'They shall come into the palace of the king' (Ps.xlv.15)=with heavenly joy into Heaven, where the Lord is.

1146³. 'Palaces of ivory' (ver.8)=truths from the rational man; thus rational truths.

1191². In the Societies of Heaven there are prefects . . . Their chief, who is wiser than the rest, dwells in the middle, in a palace so magnificent, that not anything in the universal world can be compared to it. Its architectural features are so stupendous that . . . not one hundredth part of them can be described in natural language; for art itself is there in its own art. Within the palace there are chambers and bed-chambers, in which all the furniture and ornaments are resplendent with gold and various precious stones, in such forms as cannot be effigied, either by painting or sculpture, by any artificer in the world; and, wonderful to say, each most singular thing is for use; everyone who enters seeing for what use it is; and also perceiving it as if from a transpiration of the uses through their images. But every wise person who enters does not long keep his eye fixed on the images; but he keeps his mind in the uses . . . Round about the palace there are porticoes, paradisiacal gardens, and little palaces-palatiola; and every single thing is a heavenly pleasantness in the form of its own beauty.

J. (Post.) 96. The abodes of the Mohammedans after death are palaces . . .

119. I was brought to the Africans . . . and saw there as it were a palace . . .

[J. (Post.)] 318. In Heaven there are palaces so magnificent that worldly things cannot be compared to them . . .

D. Wis. 1⁵. At the end of the way of wisdom was seen a palace in light; but at the end of the way of folly, something like a palace, but in shade . . .

Palaestra. Palaestra.

Wrestling. Palaesticus.

A. 474¹. Believes them to be taken from the school of wisdom.

R. 566⁴. You said that we have not any truth in our schools.

839⁵. A plain elevated like a wrestling-ground. They . . . entered into the wrestling-ground.

M. 6⁴. Follow me to the ways of exit from this place of sports.

17⁴. There are wrestling contests among the boys . . .

T. 694⁶. The games, so called, were spiritual exercises and trials of skill.

D. 3212. Concerning a palaestra.

4547. On the right are the brothels of the lascivious.

D. Love. xvii. Use is as the plain or theatre of the exercise of the love.

Palate. Gula.

H. 488⁵. Those who have . . . indulged the palate and the belly, loving these things as the highest good of life, in the other life love excrementitious things and privies . . . This is because such pleasures are spiritual filth. They shun clean places which are devoid of filth, because they are undelightful to them.

R. 952². Dogs appear there from those who have sacrificed to their palate and tongue . . . Such, being gross in mind, make the things of the Church of no account.

E. 617². Unless man enjoys spiritual nourishment together with that of the body, he is not a man, but a beast; which is the reason why those who . . . daily indulge their palates, are obese as to spiritual things, however well they can reason about the things of the world and the body; whence, after their decease, they lead a ferine rather than a human life; for in place of intelligence and wisdom they have insanity and folly.

Palate. Palatum.

D. 1181. Those Angels who reject the more interior things were acting within me, namely, at the upper region of the palate, and were compelling me to think and speak according to their thoughts . . .

1189. The reason they held the higher region of the palate, was that in that place corporeal things, such as the blood, ascend into the brain, and descend also there . . .

E. 519⁹. His inward quality is described by, 'he hides evil under his tongue, and keeps it within his palate' (Job xx.13).

Pallor. Pallor.

Pallidly. Pallide.

Pale, To grow. Pallescere.

A. 1774^e. A face pallidly snowy (represents such).

6534⁴. 'The pale-pallens-horse . . . '= the damnation thence.

S. 12². 'The pale-pallidus-horse' = the understanding of the Word null from evils of life and the derivative falsities in the fourth or last state of the Church. E. 381.

W. 379². The extinction (of the love) is . . . seen in the pallor of the face.

R. 320. 'Behold a pale horse' (Rev. vi.8) = the understanding of the Word destroyed [as to both good and truth. . . By 'pale' is signified what has no vitality. In the Word, those are said to have no vitality, who are not in goods of life from truths of doctrine. Ex.

—^e. With those now seen there were no Knowledges of good and truth from the Word, nor any understanding of them; and, in the Spiritual World, such appear pale, like those who are devoid of life.

M. 269³. If the love of the world makes the head, the man appears from Heaven with a pale face, like that of a dead man, with a yellow circle round his head.

D. 6036. In the third Hell they appeared . . . pale, like the dead. He asked them whether they were dead. They said that they appear to themselves to be alive; but are such in the eyes of others.

E. 381². The reason 'pale' = evil of life and the derivative falsity—thus 'a pale horse,' the understanding of the Word null from evils of life and the derivative falsities—is that pallor indicates and thence signifies the absence or deprivation of life; here, the absence and deprivation of spiritual life, which exists when in place of the good of life there is evil of life, and in place of the truth of faith there is falsity of faith; for then there is no spiritual life. By spiritual life is meant the life of Heaven . . . That by 'the pale horse' is signified spiritual death, is evident from the words which follow . . .

—³. The like is signified by 'pallor,' or by 'pallid,' in Jer. xxx.6, (where) 'all faces are turned into paleness' = that hence there is no good and truth, but evil and falsity; thus no spiritual life, but spiritual death. This is signified by 'the paleness of the face.' 721²².

—⁴. By 'his faces not waxing pale' (Is. xxix.22) is meant that they shall not be in evils and falsities; but in goods and truths.

—⁵. The reason 'paleness' = the absence and deprivation of spiritual life, which exists when there is no good and truth, but evil and falsity, is that when man is deprived of vital heat, he grows pale, and becomes an image of death; as is the case in extreme terrors, and also when he dies; but when he dies spiritually, his face becomes either red like a coal fire, or pale like that of a corpse. Such do the infernals appear in the light of Heaven.

721²². 'Paleness' = the affections which are of the love of good extinguished.

1224^e. I have seen three kinds of (infernal): the fiery, the black, and the pale . . .

5 M. 1. He first appeared with a bright living face; then with a pale dead one; and finally with a black infernal one . . . Such are the successive states of the minds of those who are merely natural . . . The meditates of their minds, because they have falsified truths, are represented under the pallor of death . . .

Palestine. Palestina.

See PHILISTIA.

D. 2256. The Messiah, who would lead them into Palestine . . .

Palladium. Palladium.

M. 151a². (An octagonal palace, called the Palladium, there.) 153a. 182³. T. 692³. 693³.

B. 66². As the Palladium of religion. T. 177^e.

T. 759². As the Greeks kissed the Palladium in the temple of Minerva. For they called that the Palladium of religion.

Pallas. Pallas.

A. 4658⁵. Such women were sometimes seen by the ancients, and by them were called Pallases. Des.

B. 66². Like the head of Gorgon or Medusa engraved on the shield of Pallas.

T. 292. See JUPITER (the god), here.

D. 3952. Such women were called Pallases, not Minervas, but Pallases. Des.

Palliative. Palliativus.

Palliatively. Palliative.

P. 282. The healing of the understanding alone, would be like palliative healing . . .

T. 435². The good in the external man (merely) is like a wound healed palliatively, within which there is putrid matter.

E. 1152². For man to compel himself to do good-benefacere—to the neighbour . . . while he has not compelled himself to [abstain] from evils . . . would be like a palliative cure, by which the disease or ulcer is healed outwardly.

C. 25^e. Thus, and not otherwise, is the ulcer opened and healed; otherwise it is a palliative cure.

Inv. 25. If this little work is not added to the former one . . . it would be like a palliative cure only . . .

Palm. Vola.

See also under PALM-palma, and PALM-palmus.

A. 875. 'The dove found no rest for the sole of her foot' (Gen. viii. 9) = that nothing of the good and truth of faith could yet take root.

1085². 'To take by the palm' (Ezek. xxix. 7) = to confide.

2177⁴. 'The hand,' or 'palm' = power.

4182. 'God hath seen the weariness of my palms'

(Gen. xxxi. 42) = that all things were from Himself by His Own power. . . 'The weariness of the palms' = temptations. . . 'The palm,' or 'hand,' = power; consequently, 'my palms,' or 'my hands' = Own power.

4277. 'He touched the hollow of his thigh' (Gen. xxxii. 25) = where celestial spiritual good is conjoined with the natural good signified by 'Jacob' . . . The 'hollow,' or acetabulum, or the hollow-cavus-of the thigh, = where there is conjunction.

4278^e. 'The hollow of the thigh' = where goods are conjoined.

4280. 'He touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh' = where conjugal love is conjoined with natural good; (for) 'the hollow of the thigh' = where there is the conjunction of conjugal love. The reason why conjunction there with natural good is signified, is that there the thigh is conjoined with the feet . . .

—^e. This conjunction (of every celestial and spiritual love with natural good) is what is signified by 'the hollow of the thigh.'

4303². That 'the hollow of the thigh' is where there is the conjunction of conjugal love with natural good, consequently where there is the influx of spiritual truth into natural good. Refs.

4317. Hence 'to touch the hollow of the thigh,' or to hurt it so as to occasion halting, = to destroy the good which is of those loves.

6954. 'It became a rod in his palm' (Ex. iv. 4) = that then power was communicated from the Divine. . . 'The palm' = interior power.

7518. 'The fists,' or palms, = power, because 'the hand' = power.

9391². External or natural good was represented by, 'the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot' (Ezek. i. 7); for . . . 'the soles of the feet' = the things which are ultimate, in the natural man. E. 279².

10082. 'Thou shalt put all things upon the palms of Aaron, and upon the palms of his sons' (Ex. xxix. 24) = the acknowledgment in the Heavens that these things are the Lord's and from the Lord. . . (For) 'the palms' = the things which are from Own power; thus proprium. . . The reason 'the palms' = the things which are from Own power; and hence 'to be put upon the palms' = the acknowledgment that all these things are the Lord's and from the Lord, is that the palms are those of the hands; and by 'the hands' is signified power; and 'to put upon them' = to ascribe; thus to acknowledge; for it follows that they were to be 'agitated upon them,' by which is signified the derivative life from the Divine; and life from the Divine is given through faith, the first of which is acknowledgment. As by 'the hands is signified power, it follows that by 'the palms' of the hands is signified full power, since the palms grasp fully; and therefore when the palms are predicated of the Lord, and of the Divine truth proceeding from His Divine good, as here, omnipotence is signified. Hence it is evident that 'to put upon the palms of Aaron and his sons' = the acknowledgment of the Lord's omnipotence; thus that all things are His, because all things in the Heavens are from Him.

[A.] 10583. 'I will cover My palm upon thee, until I have passed by' (Ex. xxxiii. 22) = the closing up of the Internal . . . of the Church, of worship, and of the Word . . . for 'to cover with the palm' involves to prevent from seeing the glory and faces of Jehovah . . .

10584. 'And I will remove My palm, and thou shalt see My hinder parts . . .' (ver. 23) = that they should see the externals of the Word, of the Church, and of worship . . .

E. 654¹⁴. 'The sole of the steps of the king of Assyria' (2 Kings xix. 24) = the Sensuous and the derivative reasoning, which is from fallacies alone.

962². 'From the sole of the foot even to the head no soundness' (Is. i. 6) = that both the natural and spiritual things . . . are destroyed.

Palm. Palma.

A. 7093³. 'Spathes of palms' (Lev. xxiii. 40) = the good of faith.

7596. 'I will expand my palms unto Jehovah' (Ex. ix. 29) = intercession. Ex.

7620. Afterwards it adhered to the palm—palmae seu volae.

8367^e. The affection of truth from good and the derivative delight, is signified by the 'seventy palm-trees' (Ex. xv. 27).

8369. 'And seventy palm-trees' = the goods of truth in all abundance. . . For 'palm-trees' = the goods of the Spiritual Church, which are the goods of truth; and, as goods are signified by 'palm-trees,' there is also signified by them the affection of good and the derivative delight; for all delight is from the affection of good. As this was signified by 'palm-trees,' therefore palms were employed in the holy festivities; as in . . . Lev. xxiii. 40, (where) by 'palms' is signified spiritual good, or the good of truth.

—². That 'palms' = the holy festivity which is from good, is evident from . . . John xii. 13; Rev. vii. 9; etc.

—³. As 'a palm-tree' = good, it = also wisdom; for wisdom is of good. This was signified by the 'palm-trees,' which, together with the cherubs and flowers, were carved upon the walls of the Temple (1 Kings vi. 29). 'The cherubs,' 'palm-trees,' and 'flowers,' upon the walls, signified the Providence, wisdom, and intelligence which are from the Lord; thus all things which are of Heaven. —⁴.

9202^e. Even if a man, in supplicating . . . should tightly compress his palms, and raise them . . . to heaven.

9296⁶. 'Spathes of palms' = the internal truths of this good.

R. 367. 'Palms in their hands' (Rev. vii. 9) = confession from Divine truths . . . because 'palms' = Divine truths. For every tree = something of the Church; and 'palm-trees,' Divine truth in ultimates, which is the Divine truth of the sense of the letter.

— . Therefore 'the palm-trees' on the walls of the Temple = the Divine truths in the Word.

— . That by 'palms' are signified the Divine truths of the Word; and, by 'palms in the hands,' confessions from them. Ill.

— . Their taking 'branches of palms . . . and crying, Blessed is He who cometh in the name of the Lord' = confession from Divine truths concerning the Lord.

— . 'The palm' = Divine truth also in, 'The just shall flourish as the palm-tree' (Ps. xcii. 12).

—^e. As Jericho was a city near the Jordan, and by the river Jordan was signified . . . Divine truth such as is in the sense of the letter . . . it is called 'the city of palm-trees' (Deut. xxxiv. 3; Judg. i. 16; iii. 13).

R. 875⁴. In a certain garden on the right there were olive-trees, vines, fig-trees, laurels, and palm-trees, set in order according to correspondence.

M. 56. A portico of palm-trees and laurels, (which was) terminated in a garden, in the middle of which was the Temple of Wisdom.

77. We entered the Heaven (of the Copper Age) on the southern side, where there was a magnificent grove of palm-trees and laurels . . .

132. At the foot of the hill was a portico of palm-trees which was continued up to the very top (where there was a School of Wisdom).

155⁴. This sense (said the wives) we have in the palms, when we touch . . .

183. There appeared in the eastern quarter a grove of palm-trees and laurels, set in spiral gyres (which led to the garden Adramandoni).

269². The man then stands upon his palms with his head downwards . . .

270⁴. See OLIVE-TREE, here.

T. 78. At the north I saw groves full of chestnut trees, palm-trees, lindens, planes, and other foliaceous trees.

E. 277⁶. 'A palm-tree' = spiritual good, which is the good of charity. Ref.

458. 'And palms in their hands' = in the good of life according to these (truths). 'A palm' = the good of truth, or spiritual good. . . Hence by their having 'palms in their hands' is signified that the good of truth was in them, or that they were in the good of truth. The good of truth, when it is with anyone, is the good of life. Ex.

—³. As by 'palms' was signified spiritual good, palms were carved in the Temple . . . By 'the palms,' there, is signified spiritual good, which is the good of the Second Heaven . . . But in the supreme sense . . . by 'the palms' is signified the Divine wisdom of the Lord . . . For the Divine good united to Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord, is received . . . in the Second Heaven as Divine wisdom.

—⁴. Like things are signified by 'the cherubs,' and 'palms' in the New Temple (Ezek. xli.).

— . 'Palms' (Lev. xxiii.) = spiritual good or the good of truth.

—⁵. As 'palms' signified spiritual good, and as all joy of heart is from spiritual good, for spiritual good is the very affection or love of spiritual truth, therefore of yore they testified the joy of their hearts by palms in their hands; and [they also testified] that they were acting from good. Ill.

—⁶. In the following passages also 'a palm'=spiritual good or the good of truth. III.

— The fructification of good with him is meant by, 'he shall flourish like the palm-tree.'

—⁷. 'The palm-tree' (Joel i.12)=joy of heart from spiritual good.

—⁸. Its appearance as good formed through truths, is signified by, 'they are solid like a palm-tree' (Jer. x.5). (Compare 587⁶.)

—⁹. 'The seventy palms'=that they had the goods of truth in all abundance.

—¹⁰. As Jericho=the good of truth, it was called 'the city of palms.'

—¹². In the Spiritual World, moreover, in paradises where are Angels who are in spiritual good or the good of truth, there appear palms in great abundance; from which also it has been evident that a palm=the good of truth.

Pan. Cacabus.

A. 7356⁹. The meat-offering baked in an oven, was distinguished from that baked in a pan—sartagine, and from that baked in a pan (Lev.ii.4-7). It was the diversities of the good of love which were signified by these meat-offerings. 10137¹².

Pancreas. Pancreas.

Pancreatic. Pancreaticus.

A. 5184. Those who pertain to the pancreas act by a sharper method, and as it were by a method of sawing, and also with such a murmur . . . Their region is between that of the spleen and of the liver, more to the left.

5185. The Spirits who relate to the pancreatic duct. Des. D.893.

H. 96^e. Those who are in the liver, pancreas, and spleen, are in the various purifications of good and truth.

P. 174. No one knows how the soul operates so that . . . the liver and pancreas may dispose . . .

336². No one knows how . . . the pancreas and spleen purify (the blood).

D. 1009. As to the pancreas, these act by a method of sawing, or of trituration to and fro, with a certain murmur of sawing. Their province is more distant from the head (than that of the liver); not between that of the liver and the spleen, but more to the left; and yet it is above the head, that is, above the region of the temples.

Panic. Panicus. D.5294.

Pannag. Pannag. See MINNITH.

Pannicle. Panniculus.

A. 4874. The external of the Church is signified by 'the signet, the pannicle, and the staff' (Gen.xxxviii.18) . . . 'The pannicle'=external truth.

4875. 'Thy pannicle' (id.)=through truth; namely, a token of consent. . . The reason 'a pannicle'=truth, is that it is among the things which relate to garments . . . But the pannicle=outermost or lowest truth: it was made of threads twisted together, by which are signified the determinations of such truth. 'A pannicle'=such truth also in, 'Every open vessel, upon which there is not a pannicle for a covering, it is unclean' (Num.xix.15), by which was signified that nothing should be indeterminate; for that which is indeterminate is open. It is also the outermost truths to which the interior truths are determined, and in which they are terminated.

T. 165². Boys tie a handkerchief—panniculetum—over their eyes . . .

R. 46. 'Girt at the paps with a golden girdle' (Rev. i. 13)=the Divine proceeding and at the same time conjoining, which is the Divine good. . . For, by the Lord's breast, and, in special, by 'the paps' there, is signified His Divine love.

—^e. That by 'the paps,' or 'breasts,' is signified the Divine love, is evident from the places in the Word where they are mentioned; and also from their correspondence with love.

D. 939. On those who constitute the mamillary processes in the brain. 954.

E. 65. 'To be girt about the paps with a girdle,' means to be invested as to the breast. The paps and girdle are mentioned, because the paps stand out from the breast . . . The reason the Divine good proceeding from the Lord is meant, is that the breast in general, and the paps in special, signify it.

—². The reason 'the paps' are mentioned instead of the breast . . . is that the paps=spiritual love; and the breast, the good thereof; (as in) 'Thou shalt suck the paps of kings' (Is. lx. 16). 'Kings'=truths from good from the Lord; 'paps,' and 'the breast'=that good, which is the good of spiritual love.

—³. (Thus) 'the pap'=spiritual love; and 'the breast,' its good.

From this writing there darted forth a resplendence which formed a wide circle around the paper . . . I (then) saw the Angel descending with the paper in his hand ; and, as he descended, the paper became less and less lucid . . . and finally the Angel was seen to enter a dark mist, and to pass through the mist to the earth ; and there that paper, although the Angel still held it in his hand, was not seen. . . Those who came from the east and from the south, who in the world had applied themselves to learning . . . saw nothing at all. . . Those who came from the west and the north, who in the world had believed in the words of the learned, also said that they did not see anything. The last of these, however, who in the world had been in simple faith from charity . . . after the others had gone away, said that they saw a man with a paper . . . and that the paper had letters written on it ; and, when they had directed their eyes to it, they said that they read, The marriage of good and truth. T.624.

132. In the middle of the theatre was a table on which was laid a paper sealed with a seal.

— The two Angels broke the seal of the paper, and read before (the School of Wisdom) the arcana of wisdom written on the paper, which they were now to discuss. They had been written by Angels of the Third Heaven. (The arcana stated.) Underneath these was written, Join these three together into one sentence, and write it upon a new paper ; and place it upon this table, and we shall see it . . .

135. After this they took up the paper, and read the third subject for discussion . . .

136. After this, they looked at the paper left by the Angels upon the table, and saw (what) was written underneath.

— These things they wrote on a new paper, and placed it upon the table ; and the Angels were suddenly present in a bright white light, and carried away the paper into Heaven.

533. The paper upon which those arcana had been written, was let down from Heaven ; and . . . while yet in the Spiritual World, it shone like a star ; but when it had descended into the natural world, the light disappeared . . . and when it was sent by the Angels into assemblages of (the learned), there was heard . . . What is this? Is it anything? What does it matter whether we know these things, or not? . . . And it appeared as if some took the paper, and folded it, rolling and unrolling it with their fingers, in order to obliterate the writing ; and it appeared as if some tore it to pieces ; and some wanted to trample upon it, but they were withheld from that deed by the Lord ; and the Angels were commanded to draw it back and guard it : and, as the Angels became sad . . . it was said, 'Until a time, and times, and half a time.' T.848.

B. S1². Quite different (would be the treatment accorded to it) if a paper concerning justification by faith alone were brought from the lower regions. T.181⁶.

T. 209². When any verse of the Word is written upon a paper, and the paper is projected into the air, the paper itself shines in the form in which it has been cut ; and therefore, by means of the Word, Spirits can produce various shining forms, and also those of birds and fishes.

—³. If something from the Word is written on a paper by one who is in falsities, and the paper is projected towards Heaven, there takes place an explosion in the air between his eye and Heaven, and the paper is torn to shreds and vanishes. The like thing happens if the paper is projected towards an Angel—angulum—who is standing near. From this it is evident . . . that those who are in falsities of doctrine have no communication with Heaven by means of the Word ; but that their reading is dispersed on the way, and perishes like gunpowder enclosed in a paper, when it is set on fire and thrown into the air. The contrary takes place with those who are in truths of doctrine . . . The reading of the Word by them penetrates even into Heaven, and makes a conjunction with the Angels there.

389³. (The Englishman said,) What glory we should have had if we had accepted those things which the paper sent down from Heaven carried in its bosom !

535³. Such are many of the saints in the pontifical religion . . .

562^e. Many who are of the pontifical religion, when in the other life they perceive that the Lord has all Power, and they have none (want to be the devil himself, in order that from the love of self they may continually infest Heaven).

N. 8. By the expression, The Churches in the Christian world, . . . is not meant the Church with the Papists, because the Christian Church is not there; for, where the Church is, the Lord is adored, and the Word is read. It is otherwise with them; there, they themselves are adored instead of the Lord; and the Word is forbidden to be read by the people; and a saying of the Pope is placed equal to it; nay, above it.

J. 47. The Judgment was executed . . . first upon those who had been of the Pontifical (or Papal) religion . . . Des. (See Last Judgment, here, and at 48.)

55. See BABEL, here.

58. Hence it is that nearest around the Middle are those who are of the Papal religion; for they have the Word, and it is read by those who are of the ecclesiastical government, although not by the people. This is the reason why the Papal nation in the Spiritual World have obtained dwelling-places around those who are in the light of truth from the Word. (Their abodes, cities, and quarters, fully des.)

63. Those of the Papal nation who have lived piously, and have been in good, although not in truths, and yet have longed from affection to know truths, have been . . . carried into a tract in front in the north-western quarter; and dwelling-places have been given them there, and Societies instituted; and afterwards priests from the Reformed have been sent to them, who instructed them from the Word; and, as they are instructed, they are received into Heaven.

C. J. 56. Concerning the Papists in the Spiritual World. Gen.art. T.817.

— The Papists in the Spiritual World appear around the Reformed, and are kept distinct from them by an interval, which [no one] is permitted to pass over.

57. After the Last Judgment, their state has been so changed that they are no longer allowed to gather together in assemblages; but, to every love, both good and evil, ways have been ordained, which those who come from the world at once enter, and go to a Society corresponding to their love . . .

58. All the Papists, who have not been utter idolaters, and from their religiosity have performed goods from a sincere heart, and have also looked to the Lord, are led to Societies instituted in the confines of the Reformed, and are there instructed; the Word is read before them, and the Lord is preached; and those who receive Truths, and apply them to life, are elevated into Heaven, and become Angels. There are many such Societies of them in every quarter; and they are guarded on all sides from the deceitful and cunning machinations of the monks, and from the Babylonish leaven. Moreover, all their infants are in Heaven; who, being educated by Angels under the auspices of the Lord, are ignorant of the falsities of the religion of their parents.

59. All who come into the Spiritual World are kept in the confession of faith and in the religion of their country; and so are the Papists. Therefore they always have some representative Pontiff set over them, whom they adore with the like rites as in the world. (Continued under POPE.)

61. Concerning the saints of the Pontificials in the Spiritual World. Gen.art. T.822.

62. The love of commanding is in those of the Pontifical nation who have dominated from the heat of its delight; and have despised the Word; and have set the Pope's sayings above it. These are completely devastated as to externals, even until they know nothing of the Church; and then they are cast down into Hell, and become devils. There is a certain Hell set apart for those who want to be invoked as gods; where they are in such phantasy, that they do not see that which is, but that which is not. Des. and Sig.

63. All who have been sanctified by Papal-Papales-

Bulls are hidden away, and are deprived of all intercourse with their worshippers. Ex.

64. Many of the Pontifical nation, especially the monks, when they come into the Spiritual World, seek the saints, each the saint of his own order . . . but they are instructed that their saints are intermingled either with those in the Heavens or with those in the Hells . . . The worship of saints is such an abomination in Heaven that they are horrified when they only hear of it; because in the proportion that worship is ascribed to any man, in the same proportion it is derogated from the Lord . . .

65. In order that I might know the quality of the Pontifical saints . . . a hundred of them were brought out of the Lower Earth . . .

S. 25^e. By 'the beast' (Rev. xvii. 3) are meant the Papists.

105³. Around these are the Papists.

110. When the Word had been almost rejected by the Papists, by the Divine Providence of the Lord the Reformation was accomplished, and so the Word was received again; besides that the Word is held to be holy by a noble nation among the Papists.

P. 136⁴. Those who suffer themselves to be compelled to religion are many of the Pontifical nation; but this takes place with those with whom there is nothing internal in worship.

257². The invocation of dead men was established by a Papal-Papalem-Bull . . .

—³. The fire of the love of self first excited them to preach the Lord and teach the Word; and it is from this their first state that Lucifer is called 'the son of the morning.' But, as they saw that they could have dominion through the holy things of the Word, the love of self—by which they were first excited to preach the Lord—burst forth from within; and at last exalted itself to such a height that they transferred to themselves all the Divine Power of the Lord . . . This could not be prevented by the Divine Providence; for if it had been, they would have proclaimed the Lord not to be God, and the Word not to be holy, and would have made themselves Socinians or Arians, and thus would have destroyed the whole Church, which, whatever may be the character of the prelates, still endures with the subject nation; for all of this religion who approach the Lord also, and shun evils as sins, are saved; and therefore there are many heavenly Societies of them in the Spiritual World. Moreover, it has been provided that there is a nation among them which has not passed under the yoke of such domination; and which holds the Word to be holy; which is the noble French nation. But . . . when the love of self . . . removed the Lord from His throne, and set itself thereon, that love . . . could not but profane all things of the Word . . . to prevent which, the Lord . . . took care that they should recede [from the worship of Him, and should invoke dead men, pray to their images, kiss their bones, and bow at their tombs; should forbid the reading of the Word, place holy worship in masses not understood by the common people, and sell salvation for money; because if they had not done these things, they would have profaned the holy things of the Word and of the Church . . . And lest they should profane the Holy Supper, it is of the Divine Providence that they divide it . . . and, when the bread and wine are divided, the wine=profane truth, and the bread adulterated good; and, besides, that they make it corporeal and material, and assume this as the primary of religion.

R. 294². In the middle of the congregation were Reformed . . . and next them Papists with monks . . .

—¹¹. At last, turning to the Papists, they said, Perhaps you can say Divine Human, because you believe that in the bread and wine in your Eucharist, and in every part of it, is the entire Christ; and you also adore Him as God, when you show . . . the host; and also because you call Mary the mother of God; consequently you acknowledge that she brought forth God; that is, the Divine Human. These then wanted to utter it from those ideas of thoughts concerning the Lord; but they could not, on account of their material idea about His Body and Blood; and on account of their assertion that the human Power, and not the Divine, has been transferred by Him into the Pope. (Continued under DIVINE HUMAN.)

631. The Christian Heaven collected from the Reformed constitutes the Middle; and the Pontificals are around it; and, when the Middle is new, there is at the same time what is new produced in the circumferences . . .

717. In Rev. xvii. and xviii., the Papists are treated of; among whom those who have claimed the Power to open and shut Heaven are meant by 'Babylonia.'

819. The Papists have a certain Council in the southern quarter towards the east, where their chiefs assemble, and consult . . . especially how to keep the common people in blind obedience, and how to enlarge their dominion. But no one is admitted into it who has been Pope, because there is seated in his mind a semblance of Divine authority . . . Nor are any cardinals permitted to enter it . . . yet these latter assemble in a spacious conclave beneath the others; but after staying there some days they are taken away . . . There is another Meeting in the southern quarter towards the west; where the business is to intronit into Heaven the credulous common people. Des.

820². At the sides of (this) great Society, schools have been instituted, to which go those who are in doubt concerning religion; where are converted monks who teach them concerning God the Saviour Christ, and also concerning the holiness of the Word; and the monks leave it to their option [as to whether they will] turn away their minds from the sanctifications introduced into the Roman Catholic Church. Those who receive are introduced into a large Society, where are those who have receded from the worship of the Pope and the saints; and, when they come into it, they are like those who have been roused from sleep, and are awake . . . and then they are invited to feasts by those who are there and noble wine is given them to drink out of crystal cups. I have heard that the Angels send down to their host a plate on which is manna, in a like form, and of a like flavour, to that which was sent down upon the camp of Israel, which plate is carried round to the guests . . .

376^s. The reason genuine truths and goods have not been perceived and known in Christian Churches, is that these Churches have been divided, in general, into the Pontifical and the Evangelical; and in the Pontifical Church they are altogether ignorant of truths, because those who are in it do not depend upon the Word . . . but upon the Pontiff, from whose mouth scarcely anything proceeds but what is from the love of exercising command, and this love is from Hell; and therefore scarcely a single truth of the Church exists with them . . .

805^s. To take sins away by another's deriving them into himself, is a dogma of the Papists . . .

879^s. (The adulteration of the good and truth of the Church) takes place with the Papists, who have made dominion over the holy things of Heaven the essential of the Church.

928^s. The Church with the Papists, has been devastated through dominion over the souls of men, and over Heaven. Tr.

949^s. With the Papists, evils and the derivative falsities have devastated the Church; but, with the Reformed, falsities and the derivative evils.

1031. The state of the Church with the Papists manifested. Sig.

these can be withdrawn from the vanities of that religiosity, and from its idolatries, and can be brought to worship and adore the Lord. They also receive truths from the Lord through the Word, or through those who teach it. And therefore many Societies, which are so many Churches, have been instituted from them since the Last Judgment.

1063^s. Those are not in this (fourth) kind of profanation who do not read the Word, and do not approach the Lord, as is the case with the Papists.

Ath. 66. Of the Pontifical religion, all those are accepted who adore the Lord, and do not acknowledge the Pope except as the chief priest. They are accepted, because they rarely worship the Father, and separate the Lord from the Father; although they are empty, from their doctrine, which is empty of Truths.

102. It was from the Papists that the Lord's Human was made to be less than the Divine of the Father; and thus less than His own Divine.

134^e. Therefore (the Protestants) believe with the Papists, that the Human is not Divine.

De Dom. 32. The Papists turned away, and could answer nothing, when it was said that no other is meant for the Father than the Lord's Divine.

—². The things which the Lord has spoken in these parables, in the external form appear like common similitudes; but, in the internal, are such, that they infill the universal Heaven; for in every single thing there is an internal sense, which is such, that its Spiritual and Celestial diffuses itself through the Heavens in every direction like light and flame.

I have been brought there. It is in front of, and a little above the corner of the right eye. Here are those who live a paradisiacal life. . . Each and all things appear as in their most beautiful spring-time and flower, with stupendous magnificence and variety. Each and all things are living, from the representatives; for everything represents and signifies something celestial and spiritual; and thus not only affects the sight with pleasantness, but also the mind with happiness. . . D.3097.

—². The Souls who are being introduced into Heaven, are for the most part carried first of all to paradisiacal things. But the Angels look upon these things with other eyes. The paradises do not delight them; but the representatives; thus the celestial and spiritual things from which they are. From these things the Most Ancient Church had its paradisiacal things.

1772. It has been granted me to see the Lord's Word in its beauty in the internal sense . . . not as when the several words are being explicated . . . but all things in one series; which may be called seeing a heavenly paradise from an earthly paradise.

1977². It is those angelic Spirits who are at the threshold of the paradisiacal things who insinuate such dreams. D.3381.

2196¹². (They walk about in their paradises, etc., just like men.)

2603. They are instructed that paradisiacal things are not Heaven; but the affection of celestial and spiritual things which is in them.

3220. When the Angels are discoursing about the things of intelligence and wisdom . . . the influx from them . . . falls into . . . representations of paradises, etc.

3477². In the narrow way were Angel infants . . . in most pleasant paradises and flower-beds.

4411². When this truth inflows into the First Heaven, mediately and immediately, it is received substantially, and appears there as a paradise . . .

4412^e. Those who pertain to the coats of the eye communicate with the paradisiacal Heavens, where truths and goods are represented in a substantial form.

4528. The eye, or rather its sight, corresponds especially to those Societies which are in paradisiacal things; which appear in front, above, a little to the right, where are presented to view gardens with trees and flowers of so many genera and species, that those which grow in the universal Earth are relatively few. In each single object there, there is something of intelligence and wisdom which shines forth, so that you would say that they are together in paradises of intelligence and wisdom. These are what affect, from the interiors, those who are there; and thus not only gladden the sight, but the understanding also at the same time.

[A. 4528]². These paradisiacal things are in the First Heaven, on the very threshold to the interiors of that Heaven; and are representatives which descend from a higher Heaven, when the Angels of the higher Heaven are speaking together intellectually about the truths of faith. The speech of the Angels there is effected by spiritual and celestial ideas . . . and continuously by series of representations of such beauty and pleasantness as cannot possibly be expressed; and it is these beauties and pleasantnesses of their discourse which are represented as paradisiacal things in the lower Heaven.

4529. (A botanist in immense paradises there. See under FLOWER.)

8328^e. The paradise thence is Heaven.

8891³. By paradise (in Gen.) they perceive the wisdom of a man created anew.

9011⁵. The Church is called . . . 'a garden' from intelligence; and a paradise from wisdom.

9394³. With these persons, the things of the memory are like heavenly paradises; and in the Word are represented and signified by 'paradises.'

9396³. The sense of the Word in Heaven differs from its sense in the world as much as a heavenly paradise differs from an earthly paradise. (For) a heavenly paradise is intelligence and wisdom . . .

9577. The angelic Spirits who are in the First Heaven continually see forms of Things like those in the world; as paradises, trees there with fruits, flowers and plants . . .

9942⁴. By 'paradise' is meant and described the wisdom and intelligence of the Celestial Church.

9960²⁰. Their state after the Fall is thus described, because from internal men they had become external: their Internal is signified by 'paradise;' for 'paradise' is the intelligence and wisdom of the internal man; and the closing up of it is signified by their ejection from paradise.

10185⁴. The heavenly paradise is represented in the earthly paradise; and hence all things in nature relate to such things as are in the Spiritual World.

10194². Around Spirits who are in truths from good appear most beautiful representatives; namely . . . gardens and paradises of ineffable beauty.

10276⁴. (Good Spirits) see paradises with trees and fruits of innumerable species . . .

10545. The wisdom of (the men of the Celestial Church) is what is described by 'paradise.' For . . . by 'paradise,' in the Word, is signified intelligence and wisdom.

H. 136². From this correspondence, Heaven is called paradise, because there truth is conjoined with good . . . as is light with heat in spring-time.

412. The upright, who do not know what heavenly joy is . . . are carried first to paradisiacal things, which surpass every idea of the imagination. They then suppose that they have come into the heavenly paradise; but they are taught that this is not happiness truly heavenly . . .

J. 46². By 'paradise,' in Eden, is meant the wisdom of that Celestial Church.

F. 63². See PALACE, here. M.266².

W. 117^e. Therefore (Adam) was cast out of paradise.

R. 84. In the second state, they appeared to be turned towards the paradises which are in Heaven.

90. 'Which is in the midst of the paradise of God' (Rev.ii.7)=interiorly in the truths of wisdom and faith. . . . 'The paradise of God'=the truths of wisdom and of faith . . . (as) is manifest from the signification of 'a garden' in the Word . . .

M. 3⁴. The Fourth Company said . . . We have concluded that heavenly joys are paradisiacal joys. What else is Heaven than a paradise, whose extension is from the east to the west, and from the south to the north, and in it trees of fruits, and flowers of delights. Des.

8. The Angel introduced them into a paradise. Des. The place was actually a paradise, at the first entrance to Heaven, into which are admitted those who in the world had believed that the universal Heaven is one paradise, because it is called paradise; and who had impressed on themselves the idea that after death there is a complete rest from labours; and that this rest is nothing else than . . . walking on roses, etc., and that this life is not possible except in a heavenly paradise. (The various paradisiacal enjoyments there, described.)

—³. The Angel led his companions . . . to a most beautiful bank of roses—rosoto, (where) some persons were sitting . . . mourning and weeping . . . They said, This is the seventh day since we came into this paradise. When we entered, our mind seemed to be elevated into Heaven . . . but after three days those joys began to pall, and in our minds to be abolished, and to become insensible, and thus null . . . We then wandered through the ways and areas, seeking the gate . . . but were told that it cannot be found; because this paradisiacal garden is a spacious labyrinth, of such a nature, that he who wants to go out, enters further in; and that therefore we cannot do otherwise than remain here to eternity . . . We have now been sitting here a day and a half . . . and see around us an abundance of olives, grapes, oranges, and citrons; but the more we look at them, the more is our sight wearied with seeing, our smell with smelling, and our taste with tasting . . .

—⁴. The Angel said to them, This paradisiacal labyrinth is truly an entrance into Heaven. I know the exit, and will lead you . . . and on the way the Angel taught them . . . that heavenly joy and the derivative eternal happiness are not external paradisiacal deliciousnesses, unless together with these there are internal paradisiacal deliciousnesses: external paradisiacal deliciousnesses are only deliciousnesses of the senses of the body; whereas internal paradisiacal deliciousnesses are deliciousnesses of the affections of the soul; and unless the latter are in the former, there is no heavenly life, because no soul, in them; and every de-liciousness without its corresponding soul, by continual [enjoyment] becomes languid and torpid; and fatigues the mind more than labour. Everywhere in the Heavens there are paradisiacal gardens; and from these also the Angels have joys; and in proportion as there is in them the deliciousness of the soul, in the same proportion these joys are joys to them.

—⁵. The deliciousness of the soul is from love and wisdom from the Lord . . . and the seat of them both is in the effect, which is use. This deliciousness inflows from the Lord into the soul; and descends through the higher and lower things of the mind into all the senses of the body, and infils itself in them. Hence does joy become joy; and becomes eternal from the Eternal from whom it is. You have seen paradisiacal things, and . . . there is nothing there . . . which is not from the marriage of love and wisdom in use; and therefore if a man is in this, he is in the Heavenly Paradise; thus in Heaven. T.737.

353^e. Therefore after eating of it the man was cast out of paradise . . . 'paradise,' spiritually, is intelligence.

T. 74³. Afterwards, they are expelled from paradise.

461. I was once carried . . . to the southern quarter of the Spiritual World, into a certain paradise there; and I saw that this one excelled all the rest . . . The cause was that a garden = intelligence; and all who excel others in intelligence are transferred into the south. The Garden of Eden . . . = nothing else; and therefore their being expelled from it involves that they were expelled from intelligence.

D. 710a. Some (Souls) are made to feel delight even to the inmosts by paradisiacal pleasantnesses . . .

3097. Concerning paradisiacal deliciousnesses.

3852^e. Girls and women, when they perceive that paradisiacal things exist in the other life, are more allured to the Knowledges of faith than in any other way . . .

4292. Concerning habitations and paradisiacal things.

5119. (In the Celestial Kingdom) they have paradises, etc. Ex.

E. 110. 'Which is in the midst of the paradise of God' = that all the Knowledges of good and truth in Heaven and in the Church look thither and thence proceed. . . 'Paradise' = the Knowledges of good and truth and the derivative intelligence; and, as these are signified by 'paradise,' by 'the paradise of God' is signified Heaven; and, because Heaven, the Church . . . which are called 'the paradise of God,' because the Lord is in the midst there; and from Him are all intelligence and wisdom. . . It is believed that by 'paradise' (Gen.ii.) is meant a paradisiacal garden; but no earthly paradise is meant there, but the heavenly paradise, which is possessed by those who are in intelligence and wisdom from the Knowledges of good and truth. III.

724⁴. As trees are fructified from seeds, whence come gardens, which are called paradises in the spiritual man; groves in the natural, and shady forests in the sensuous.

831⁶. As the spiritual Heavens correspond to the eyes, there are paradisiacal things there . . .

988⁶. Families would then be like fruit-bearing trees of many species, from which would be as many gardens, each containing its own species of fruit, and which gardens taken together would present the form of the heavenly paradise; (for) trees = the men of the Church; gardens, intelligence; fruits, the goods of life; and paradise, Heaven.

De Verbo 14⁵. In the spiritual Word, instead of paradise there is described the intelligence of the men of that Church . . . But in the celestial Word . . . instead of paradise there is described the Lord's Divine wisdom.

D. 6031². They believe that God pardons all sins without any co-operation of the man; when yet without his co-operation nothing of evil is removed; for wounds cannot be healed unless they are opened.

Parent. Parents.

A. 310. Their first parents, who constituted the Most Ancient Church, were celestial . . .

494². All the actual evil with the parents puts on a species of nature; and, when it often recurs, it becomes natural, and is added to the Hereditary, and is transplanted into the children . . . 2300.

1865³. That the Divine love is such, may be evident from the love of parents towards children, in that it increases according to the degree in which it descends . . . The cause of this must be from the Lord, from whom all . . . the love of parents towards the children inflows . . .

2309. I was informed that the parents themselves excite their little boys to such fighting. The Angels . . . said that the parents thus extinguish in the earliest age all the mutual love and all the innocence which infants have from the Lord, and initiate them into hatred and revenge; consequently, that they exclude their children from Heaven . . . Let parents, therefore, who wish well to their children, beware of such things. H.344.

2533². Like a parent who is teaching his little boys and girls . . .

2609². By 'the parents' who are to be 'honoured,' the Angels perceive the Lord.

2730. Mutual love . . . wishes better for another than for self, as does that of parents towards their children.

—^e. This love is preserved by the Lord with parents, even if they are not in conjugal love, in order that the human race may not perish.

2739. From the marriage of good and truth in the Heavens descend all loves, such as the love of parents towards their children . . .

—^e. Therefore they dwell together in the Heavens distinguished into nations, families, and houses, all of which acknowledge the Lord as their only Parent.

2910⁴. One (cause of the destruction of Churches) is that parents accumulate evils, and, by frequent use, and at last habit, induce them on nature, and thus transcribe them into their offspring . . .

3183. Next, man is introduced into a state of affection of celestial good; that is, of love towards his parents, which with them is in place of love to the Lord . . .

3295². As he who does not honour his parents; but from the commandment learns to honour them . . .

3603⁵. As man grows up, then that which he has hereditarily from his parents manifests itself more and more, if he is such that he does not suffer himself to be regenerated . . .

3690⁵. In respect to 'honouring parents,' he now sees that when men are born anew . . . they receive another Father . . .

4231. By the good of the Natural, is not meant the good . . . which man derives from his parents . . .

4317⁴. It is believed . . . that all hereditary evil is from the first parent . . . But it originates from each person's parents, and parents of parents in succession.

—⁴. When a man is being regenerated, the hereditary evil rooted in from the nearest parents is extirpated; but with those who are not being regenerated . . . it remains.

4563². It is known that man derives evil from both parents . . .

5126³. From childhood to adolescence a communication is opened to the interior Natural, by his learning what is becoming, civil, and honourable, both by instruction from parents and masters, and by studies . . . 5135².

5135². Begins to think, not, as heretofore, from parents and masters . . .

5949³. He who from the heart honours his parents, has that honour present in everything . . .

7089. The literal sense is that parents are to be honoured . . . But the internal sense is that the Lord is to be worshipped.

7280. Fear then becomes like that of infants towards the parents whom they love . . .

8550. Every man is born into the evils of the love of self and of the world from his parents . . . Thus successively from the parents, grandparents, and great grandparents, in a long series backwards.

8627. This wisdom (the inhabitants of Jupiter) draw from their parents from infancy . . . and thus it increases (by descent).

8788. This is inrooted in that people from their first parents.

W. 269. Hereditary evil believed to be not from the parents, but through the parents from Adam . . .

P. 215². In the most ancient times there were no dignities except such as are between parents and children; which dignities were dignities of love, full of respect and veneration, not on account of their birth from them, but on account of instruction and wisdom from them, which is the second birth . . .

R. 216^e. Just like a parent, who, if he loves his children, permits chastisement in order to remove their evils.

M. 298. That the woman ought to consult her parents, or those who are in the place of parents, and then deliberate with herself, before she consents. Gen.art.

395. That the sphere of innocence inflows into the infants, and through them into the parents, and affects. Ex.

396. That it also inflows into the souls of the parents, and conjoins itself with the same sphere in the infants; and that it is insinuated especially through the touch. Ex.

— Unless the parents also received that influx in their souls, and in the inmosts of their minds, in vain would they be affected by the innocence of the infants.

[M.] 399. That the state of rational innocence and peace with parents towards infants, is because from themselves they know nothing and can do nothing . . . and that this state recedes successively, in proportion as they know and have ability from themselves. Ex.

405. Spiritual (parents), after they have sipped the sweetness of the innocence in their infants . . . love their children from their spiritual intelligence and moral life; thus from the fear of God and from their actual piety or life; and at the same time from their affection for and application to uses . . . and it is principally from the love of these things that they provide for and administer to their necessities; and therefore if they do not see such things in them, they alienate their minds from them, and only do anything for them from obligation.

— With natural (parents), the love of infants is also from innocence; but this when received from them is entwined round their self-proprium-love, and thus from this latter and at the same time from the former they love their infants, kissing, embracing, carrying, and pressing them to their bosoms, and flattering them beyond all bounds; and they regard them as one heart and one soul with themselves; and afterwards . . . when innocence is no longer operative, they love them not from any fear of God, or actual piety, or life, nor from any rational and moral intelligence in them; and they pay regard very slightly, if at all, to their internal affections, and thus to their virtues and good morals; but only to their externals, which they favour; to these they join, affix, and agglutinate their love; and therefore close their eyes to their vices, which they excuse and favour. The reason is, that with these (parents), the love of their offspring is also the love of self; and this love adheres to its subject from without, and does not enter into it . . .

406. After death . . . spiritual parents-patres-only look at their children, and inquire in what state they are, and rejoice if it is well with them, and grieve if it is ill; and, after some conversation, instruction, and admonition about heavenly moral life, they separate themselves from them; and, before separation, they teach them that they are no longer to be remembered as their fathers, because the Lord is the only Father to all in Heaven . . . and that they never remember them as their children. (Continued under CHILDREN.)

T. 44. The sphere of the Divine love which pervades the universe . . . especially affects parents; from which it is that they tenderly love their children, who are outside of themselves; that they want to be one with them; and that they want, from themselves, to bless them. Des.

106. The first state (of reformation) is represented with every man by the state of his infancy and childhood, even to puberty, adolescence, and early manhood, which state is one of humiliation before his parents, and of obedience then, and also of instruction by masters and ministers. But the second state is represented by the state of the same person when he becomes his own master . . .

305. By (the Fourth Precept) is meant, in the natural sense, to honour parents, to obey them, to be attentive to them, and to render thanks to them for the benefits they confer; which are, that they feed and clothe them, and introduce them into the world, so that they may act in it as civil and moral persons; and also into Heaven, by the precepts of religion . . . and they do all these things from the love in which they are from the Lord; in whose stead they discharge these offices. In a relative sense, is meant the honour which wards should pay their guardians, if the parents are dead.

—^e. But to their country, king, and magistrates, honour must be rendered by parents, and by them be implanted in their children.

431. The domestic obligations of charity . . . of (parents) towards their children . . . and those of children towards their parents. (See CHILDREN, here.)

—³. With parents who are in charity, parental love-storgé-is conjoined with love towards the neighbour and with love to God. (Continued under CHILDREN.)

D. 1683. Concerning . . . the love of parents towards their children. . . Unless the Lord loved all and each, as a Father His children; and the Inmost Heaven from the Lord, as a mother her infants, no parental love-storgé-would ever come forth; it cannot be impressed by self. That the parental love towards grandchildren is greater—thus that love descends—comes from the same source.

3032. All should acknowledge the Lord as the one only Parent of all . . . and also that those who are the Lord's are in the place of parents.

4421. If a parent-pater-does not chastise a son or daughter who is disobedient and does evil, but indulges him, he is unmerciful; for he then encourages his son in all these evils. Thus he is against his children, and is unmerciful towards others.

E. 315²¹. 'The children shall rise up against their parents, and shall kill them' (Mark xiii.12)=that the falsities of evil will assault the goods and truths of the Church, and will destroy them. 366³.

724⁵. This would be contrary to the spiritual love implanted in everyone from Heaven, which is that of parents towards their children, and of children towards their parents . . .

813³. By 'parents,' etc., (Luke xxi.16) are meant those who are of the same Church, but in evils and falsities.

966². Concerning the Fourth Precept: that parents are to be honoured. Ex.

989². The hereditary evils into which man is born . . . are from the parents on account of the adulteration of good and the falsification of truth; thus on account of the marriage of evil and falsity . . . The reigning love of the parents is derived and transcribed by a graft into the offspring, and becomes their nature. If the love of the parents is the love of adultery, it is also the love of evil for falsity, and of falsity for evil. From this origin, man has all evil . . .

—³. But it is to be known that although man is born a Hell from adulterous parents, he is nevertheless not born for Hell, but for Heaven. Ex.

—^e. It is of the Divine justice that no one shall suffer penalties on account of the evils of his parents . . .

1002³. The reigning love of the parents is engrafted in the offspring . . . This is broken and made mild with parents who shun adulteries as infernal, and love marriages as heavenly.

E. 405⁵⁴. The Gentiles in Greece placed Helicon on a high mountain, and Parnassus on a hill below it; and there they believed their gods and goddesses to dwell. This was derived from the Ancients in Asia . . . with whom all worship consisted in representatives.

[A.] 1831. 'He laid each part of it overagainst the other' (Gen.xv.10)=parallelism and correspondence as to celestial things; (for) the parts on one side=the Church; and the parts on the other, the Lord . . .

—². The middle space between the parts=that with man which is called perception, internal dictate, and conscience.

3633^e. Such as the general is, such is the part of the general; for the parts must be like their general, in order to be of it.

3634. There is an influx of all, or of the general, into the singles, or parts.

4038². These three parts of man communicate in a marvellous manner . . .

4424². 'Appoint him his portion with the hypocrites' (Matt.xxiv.51)=his lot, which is the 'portion' with those who outwardly appear to be in truth as to doctrine, and in good as to life; but who inwardly believe nothing of truth, and will nothing of good.

5077. The things subject to the intellectual part. Tr.

6138². The Lord wills man's total submission, that is, that he should not be his own as to a part, and the Lord's as to a part . . .

6149. 'A portion was assigned to the priests by Pharaoh' (Gen.xlvii.22)=that this was ordained by the Natural . . . 'An assigned portion'=what is ordained.

9391¹⁸. 'A calf cut into two parts' (Jer.xxxiv.18)=good proceeding from the Lord on the one part, and good received by man on the other part. E.279⁷.

9416². (This) was signified by all the sacrifices, of which part was burnt upon the altar, and part was given to the people to eat. Ex.

H. 7. Makes Heaven in general and in part.

20. Heaven is distinguished in general, in special, and in part. . . In part, into innumerable Societies.

62. From a Society, as from a part, they conclude as to the whole . . . For, in the most perfect form, the generals are as the parts, and the parts as the generals . . .

64. The general performs use to its parts, and the parts perform use to the general; for the general is from the parts, and the parts constitute the general . . .

72. In the most perfect form, such as is the form of Heaven, there is a likeness of the parts to the whole . . . The parts of Heaven are the Societies of which it consists.

78. That Heaven, in the whole, and in the part, relates to a man . . . Gen.art.

293. Spirits from Hell (must) act on the one side, and Spirits from Heaven on the other; man being in the midst.

W. 19. In such a form is Heaven in the whole, in the part, and in the individual . . .

115. This conjunction on the part of the Angel is . . .

207². The parts of these (fruits, etc.) are such, from which is the whole. The inmosts, mediates, and outermosts of the parts, are in these degrees . . .

367². In a word, the whole comes forth from the parts; and the parts subsist from the whole . . . In a kingdom, the general comes forth from the men who are the parts; and the parts or men, subsist from the general. It is the same with every Thing which is in any form; and most so in man.

389. For man to be man, no part must be wanting . . .

431^e. All that inflows from the Lord is use; and it inflows from the parts into the general, and from the general to the parts. The parts, there, are the Angels; and the general is a Society of them.

P. 124. As the human form is such that all the parts make the general . . .

168³. Thought from this exterior illustration sees a Thing on both sides . . .

—⁴. But by interior illustration from man, man sees a Thing on one side, and not on the other.

T. 520. Unless by repentance man removes evils as to a part, he remains in them. Gen.art. 522².

646². From this, or from the other two parts, of the globe.

658. There are two faculties, or parts, of the mind . . .

D. 3496. On those who . . . bend others to their own side-partes.

4585. To which the parts of the body correspond.

E. 223⁴. Its doctrine of falsities is meant by 'the city broken into three parts (Rev.xvi.19).

242¹⁰. 'Two parts in the universal earth shall be cut off, and shall expire; but the third shall be left therein' (Zech. xiii.8). 'The third part of the earth'=some in the Church.

532⁹. 'The two parts of the earth' (id.)=all the good in the Church. And that something of truth will remain, but scarcely any genuine truth, is signified by, 'the third part shall be left in it; yet I will bring the third part through the fire, and will prove it . . .'

983². From this marriage of the Lord and the Church, the Church is the Church in general and in part. The Church in the part is the man in whom is the Church.

1014². In this middle is man while he lives in the world; and, if he is in evil and the derivative falsities, he passes over into the parts of Hell . . . But if he is in good and the derivative truths, he passes over into the parts of Heaven . . .

1019. 'The great city became into three parts' (Rev. xvi.19)=that all things of the doctrine of truth from the Word have been dissipated. . . 'To become into three parts'=to be dissipated. Ex.

Ath. 47. They thus make three parts in the Lord, when yet there are two: the Divine, and the Human; and these two parts are one Person; and, as soul and body make one man, so the Divine and the Human are one Christ.

3939². Relatively to the Grand Man, he is only the smallest particle . . . like a particle of air relatively to the whole atmosphere; or like a particle of water to the ocean.

E. 167. Without this correspondence, the body does not live, not even a particle of it.

1223³. The part, nay, the particle, in which there is not life, becomes dead . . .

D. Love iv². There is not a particle, or the least of a particle, in any member, organ, or viscus, which is not a use in form.

785. There is an internal and an external . . . even in . . . a particle of ground.

Particle. Vocula.

A. 1143². There is not one little word which does not, in the internal sense, involve arcana. 1429². 1896^e.

9659⁶. No particle in the Word is vain. 10127². (Compare E.408².)

10632⁴. It was provided that the Word should be Divine . . . even as to each particle. (Compare 10633.)

S. 13^e. If a particle were taken away, the connection would be broken, and the copula would perish.

Particular. Particularis.

See under GENERAL, and MEMORY.

A. 1288. That, in particular, there was one doctrine. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'Words'=doctrine in particular, or the particulars of doctrine.

— . For particulars make no difference, provided they look to one end, which is to love the Lord above all things, and the neighbour as one's self; for then they are the particulars of the generals.

1476². Scientifics in special and in particular (then) become ultimate vessels . . .

1526. I was withdrawn from the ideas of particulars, or those of the body . . .

1563. The life (from the internal man) cannot be singularly, or distinctly, received by the external man, unless its organic vessels are opened, which must be the recipients of the particulars and singulars of the internal man. These organic vessels . . . are not opened except by means of the senses . . . and, as they are opened, the internal man can inflow with the particulars and singulars.

7834. If particular good is not sufficient for innocence. Sig. and Ex.

7836². The general Societies (in Heaven) are as many as the members, viscera, and organs in man; the special Societies are as many as the viscerules contained within each viscus, member, and organ; and the particular Societies are as many as there are lesser parts in these constituting the greater.

H. 72. Every Angel in particular . . .

286. In particular, from . . .

P. 124. That the Lord never acts into any particular with man singly—singillatim—without acting at the same time into all things belonging to him. Ex.

R. 793. As (falsities and truths) are of many genera, and each genus of many species, and each species of many genera and species again, which, however, are called particulars and singulars . . .

M. 48². Conjugal love is . . . particular and proper to men . . .

T. 47^e. Every wise man can contemplate (this) as in a mirror, when he acquires a general idea of the creation of the universe, and, in this, views the particulars; for particulars adapt themselves to their general, and the general disposes them into a form so that they agree.

413². Therefore, charity is to be exercised towards a Society almost in the same way as towards a man in particular . . .

480. The particulars which show that there is free will in spiritual things . . .

D. 560. The knowledges of particulars, or of the senses . . . seduced the Most Ancient Church.

564. (The inhabitants of Jupiter) do not care for particulars . . .

1562. Into this idea inflowed the particular or singular ones of the Spirits . . .

2285. That particulars cannot possibly be taken up into the Heavens, nor be understood by them.—Particulars are the words of every language; they are the names of men, cities, and the like, which are in the Word of the Lord. These cannot possibly be taken up into the Heavens; for they are most finite, and therefore not at all suited to their ideas . . . The speech of the Angels is not one of words, names, and such things, which are particulars . . . Nor could the Angels understand me when I was speaking, except through intermediate Spirits, through whom the ideas of particulars were translated into universal ones, and the significations of Things . . .

3114^e. Man, too, can almost similarly lead man in some particulars . . .

3485. He induced a general sphere of ideas . . . such that there was no idea of particulars; and yet he spoke as if from what is particular; for all speech is that of particulars . . .

3635. See IDEA, here.

D. Min. 4712^e. In like manner in every particular, and thus in the least organic forms of the interiors; for, as is the general, so are the particulars; for these are images of the general.

6971². With such, the passage for the light of Heaven is closed.

6982. The Divine becomes human when it passes through the Heavens; and, when it has passed through the Heavens, it is presented in a human form, and becomes speech . . .

6996². The Divine truth proceeding from the Lord . . . must pass to man by mediations . . .

—^e. The Divine truth . . . is not perceivable in Heaven, except in proportion as it passes through Heaven . . .

7004². The Divine truth which proceeds mediately from the Lord is adapted to the Angels in the Heavens, and also to men; for it passes through Heaven, and so puts on an angelic quality, and a human quality . . .

7442². In the same proportion the interiors, through which the passage is, are closed.

7724². In order that this Scientific may become of faith, it must be conjoined with good; and it then passes into the internal man . . .

7939². When they passed through the Hells . . .

8039^e. The transmission through the midst of damnation, is signified by the passing through the Sea Suph.

8321. 'Until Thy people shall pass through' (Ex.xv. 16)=that all (such) will be saved without danger of infestation. Ex.

— For, so long as the evil had not been cast into Hell, scarcely any could pass through; that is, be saved.

8577. 'Pass through before the people' (Ex.xvii.5)= that he shall lead and teach them. Ex.

8603³. The communication of the interiors with the exteriors is effected marvellously by means of transits as it were fibrous.

—^e. The transits from one to the other in successive order are also called degrees.

9094^e. That which inflows from the Divine passes through Heaven, and, there, is celestial and spiritual; but when it comes into the world, it becomes mundane, containing the former within it.

9400. The Divine truth . . . passes through the Heavens down to man; and, on the way, is accommodated to each Heaven . . .

9433^e. 'Thou hast set a bound that they may not pass over' (Ps.civ.9)=the ultimate of Divine truth in which interior things cease . . .

9826². No one in one Heaven can possibly pass into another.

10452. 'The tables were written from the two transits; from hence and from hence were they written' (Ex. xxxii.15)=by which there is conjunction of the Lord with the human race, or of Heaven with the world. Ex.

10489. 'Pass ye through and return from gate to gate in the camp' (ver.27)=wherever there is anything open from the internal into the external; (for) 'to pass through and return'=to survey and look around from one end to the other.

10575. 'To make to pass' (Ex.xxxiii.19)=upon it.

4592^e. Man would have passed from his earthly body, without disease.

E. 417⁷. That evils and falsities will then break in on every side, is signified by: 'I will bring their destruction from all the passages thereof' (Jer.xlix.32); for, in the Spiritual World, where the evil are, there lie open on all sides ways from the Hells; and, through these, evils and the derivative falsities break in; and through the same ways go all who are in the like evils and falsities . . .

—¹⁰. 'To pass through,' in the Word, is said of truths; and 'to dwell,' of goods.

Passion. Passio.

See under CROSS.

A. 2776². It is the common belief that the burnt-offerings and sacrifices signified the Lord's passion . . .

4735⁹. The Church knows no otherwise than that 'the blood of the Lamb'=the Lord's passion, because it believes that men are saved solely by the Lord's having suffered—passus . . . The Lord's passion was the last of His temptation, by which He fully glorified His Human. Ill.

5712. Diseases correspond to the cupidities and passions of the lower mind: these are the origins of them. Enum.

8383. When I was reading . . . about our Saviour's passion . . .

10828². That the passion of the cross was the last temptation and full victory. Ill. E.328⁵.

L. 24. That the Lord is called 'the Son of Man' when it treats of His passion. Ill.

R. 26². All things of the Lord's passion represented the state of the Jewish Church as to the Word.

379⁵. The Angels do not think about the Lord's passion, but about His resurrection; and therefore when man is thinking . . . about the Lord's passion, the Angels perceive His glorification, and solely His resurrection then. 706⁴.

T. 95. That the Lord alone has merit and justice . . . especially by the passion of the cross, is at this day believed in Christian Churches. But it has been supposed that the passion of the cross was the act of redemption itself; when yet that was not the act of redemption; but was the act of the glorification of His Human. Ex. 134⁵.

126. That the passion of the cross was the last temptation which the Lord as the Greatest Prophet sustained; and that it was the means of the glorification of His Human, that is, of union with the Divine of His Father; and was not redemption. Gen.art.

[T. 126]. The reason the union itself was fully effected by the passion of the cross, is that it was the last temptation . . .

—². That in the passion of the cross the Lord was left to Himself. Ill.

127. These two things : redemption, and the passion of the cross, must be perceived distinctly . . .

—^e. But although redemption and the passion of the cross are two distinct things, still they make one with respect to salvation . . .

129. The reason the Lord willed to be tempted even to the passion of the cross, was that He was The Prophet . . .

— . Being the Word itself, the Lord as The Prophet represented by the passion of the cross the Jewish Church . . . for all things of His passion signified such things as belong to the profanation of the Word . . .

130². In this whole chapter (Is. liii.) it treats of the Lord's passion.

—³. (This representation) is manifest from each single thing of His passion. Enum.

132. That the belief that the passion of the cross was redemption itself is a fundamental error of the Church ; which, together with the error concerning the three Divine persons from eternity, has perverted the whole Church . . . Gen.art. Coro.22.

134. They replied that (they were contending) about redemption, and that this was wrought by the Son of God through the passion of the cross . . . To this the deputed Angel said, Why by the passion of the cross ? (Their faith ex. by one of their priests, and refuted by the Angel.)

378³. The causes of so many divisions in the Church are principally three : . . . Third, That the passion of the cross has been taken for redemption itself.

581. That redemption and the passion of the cross are two distinct things, and are not at all to be confounded ; and that by means of both the Lord took to Himself the power to regenerate and save men, has been shown . . . From the accepted faith of the present Church concerning the passion of the cross, as being redemption itself, have sprung phalanxes of horrible Falsities. Enum.

704^e. Therefore also He called the passion of the cross 'a cup.' Ill.

709². If anyone is so simple . . . I advise him when he takes the bread and wine to . . . keep in remembrance the passion of Christ, and His love for the salvation of man.

D. 331². (Thus) the very passions and cupidities in man are all from a heavenly beginning . . . but on the way out of Heaven they are turned into contrary things by Spirits ; in like manner as in every man . . . according to his essential form . . .

2011. How the passions of men are bent, so as not to be broken. Ex.

2024. How the passions of Spirits are tempered. Ex.

2496. They can insinuate themselves into everyone's passions . . .

4394. I spoke with the Angels about the Lord's passion . . .

E. 195²¹. Each thing mentioned concerning the Lord's passion . . . signifies how the Church . . . had treated the Divine truth, thus the Word . . . but what these things signify can be known only from the internal sense. Examp.

412¹⁷. All things mentioned concerning the Lord's passion represent and signify arcana of Heaven and the Church ; and, in special, the quality of the Jews as to the Word, the Church, and worship. Refs.

476². In the sense of the letter, by 'the blood of the lamb' is meant the passion of the cross . . . The passion of the cross was the Lord's last temptation, by means of which He subjugated the Hells, and glorified His Human ; on the completion of which the Lord sent the Comforter the Spirit of Truth, by which (also) is meant the Divine truth proceeding from His glorified Human.

—^e. No Angel is allowed to think about the Lord's passion ; but about His glorification ; and about the reception of the Divine from Him.

627¹⁵. (Such) may suppose that the things related concerning the Lord's passion, involve nothing more than the common modes of derision . . . Whereas all the things related concerning the Lord's passion=the mocking of Divine truth, consequently the falsification and adulteration of the Word ; because the Lord, when in the world, was the Divine truth itself . . . and because the Lord was this when in the world, He permitted the Jews to treat Him exactly as they were treating the Divine truth . . . Examp.

655¹¹. (Thus) all the things related concerning the Lord's passion, were representatives of the state of the Church then with the Jewish nation. Examp.

806². His passion in Gethsemane and on the cross was the last temptation, and the plenary victory.

—⁵. That the Lord subjugated the Hells, He Himself taught when the passion of the cross was at hand. Ill.

—⁶. That the Lord glorified His Human, and that the passion of the cross was the last temptation and the full victory, by means of which He glorified it. Ill.

1145⁹. This was done, because all things of the Lord's passion were representative of the destruction by the Jews of all things of good and truth.

Ath. 181. In ultimates is all strength. Hence it is that also by all things of His passion the Lord represented the state of the Church : how it was against the Divine, and against the truths and goods of Heaven and the Church.

Can. Redeemer vii. That the Lord united Divine truth to Divine good . . . thus the Human to the Divine of the father . . . by temptations, and fully by the passion of the cross.

Passive. Passivus.

Passively. Passive.

See under ACTIVE.

A. 1712². Man ought not to . . . remain in a passive state. Ex.

4653. (These Spirits) are such, because hearing is to speech, as the passive is to the active . . .

5557^o. (The Spirits of the membranes and cuticles) are only passive forces; and act nothing from themselves, but from others. D. 1723. 1727.

W. 178. The atmospheres are active forces; waters are mediate forces; and earths are passive forces from which all effects come forth.

B. 24. The Reformers conjoined good works, but in man as a passive subject; but the Roman Catholics in man as an active subject.

T. 110⁶. The Lord alone is active with every man; and man from himself is merely passive; but by the influx of life from the Lord he is also active . . .

607². The Natural, regarded in itself, is passive, or a dead force . . . what is passive, or a dead force, cannot act from itself . . .

D. 360. All must be passive forces, to which the active forces correspond, as re-agents.

620. Those who are ruled by the Lord are passive, and have no forces from themselves. They are impotent to act, or feel, anything from themselves, and they know this. These are called 'the needy,' etc. . . Whereas those who suppose that they live from themselves . . . possess active forces; while the former . . . possess only passive forces. Those who have active forces from themselves, are such as excite evil thoughts and affections in others; so that the evils which they think . . . are from the active forces of such Spirits . . .

635. Concerning the active and the passive of man. Ex.

— From this faith . . . man cannot commit sin . . . because he then lives passively, and suffers himself to be ruled; and when man is in such a state, he can be gifted with peace by the Lord; for he then trusts solely in the Lord, and cares nothing for anything else. Thus the man who would live in peace, must be in a passive state, and never in an active one, except by reaction, and the concurrence of action, which also come from the Lord; thus it is still a passive state, resistant or sequent. Such is the state of the Angels, who live in peace. 638.

2732. Concerning the opinion that as the Lord gives all things of faith . . . man must act as passive . . .

3419^o. Therefore the whole Grand Man is a passive force, which is called dead in itself; and the Lord alone an active, or living, force. Hence the marriage . . .

3468^o. The passive life is represented as of a snowy light . . .

4063^o. The eyes and ears are passive and recipient forces; and the ether and air are active or acting forces . . .

616². (Thus) action and reaction make all conjunction, and action and mere passivity—passio-none; for when an active inflows into a mere patient or passive, it passes through and is dissipated; for the passive yields and gives way; whereas when an active inflows into such a passive as is also reactive, then they are applied [to each other], and both remain conjoined. So is it with the influx of Divine good and of Divine truth into the will or love of man . . .

Passover. Pascha, Paesach.

Paschal. Paschalis.

A. 2342². Hence the passover was called 'the feast of unleavened things.' Ill.

—³. The passover represented the glorification of the Lord, and thus the conjunction of the Divine with the human race; and, as the conjunction of the Lord with the human race is effected by means of love and charity, and the derivative faith, these celestial and spiritual things were represented by the unleavened bread which they were to eat all the days of the passover . . .

3994⁶. It is known that the paschal lamb, in the supreme sense, = the Lord; for the passover signified the glorification of the Lord, that is, the putting on of the Divine as to the Human; and, in the representative sense, it = the regeneration of man; and the paschal lamb, that which is the essential of regeneration, namely, innocence . . .

7093⁶. That to hold a feast = worship from a glad mind . . . is manifest from the feast of the passover, which they were commanded to celebrate yearly on the day when they went forth from Egypt; and this on account of the deliverance of the sons of Israel from servitude; that is, on account of the deliverance of the Spiritual Church from falsities, thus from damnation; and, as the Lord delivered them by His Advent, and elevated them into Heaven with Himself when He rose again, therefore this also was done at the passover.

7822. The damnation of those in faith separated, and the deliverance of the Spiritual Church, is represented by the passover; and the states as to charity and faith of those who have been delivered, by the things to be observed on the days of the passover.

7823. In the supreme sense, by the passover is represented the damnation of the unfaithful, and the deliverance of the faithful by the Lord when He was glorified. The state of these, such as it was then, and such as it will afterwards be, both in the universal and in every particular, is described, in the supreme sense, by the statutes of the passover.

7831². By the paschal lamb or kid is signified the good of innocence which is inmost . . .

7842. Hence it is that the passover began on the fourteenth day of the month, lasted seven days, and ceased on the twenty-first day, which day also = what is holy . . . Hence it was that on the first day of the passover there was a holy convocation, and on the twenty-first day a holy convocation.

7860². The state of the deliverance of the Spiritual Church from infestations, is represented by the passover; but the state of their elevation into Heaven, by their introduction into the Land of Canaan . . .

7867. 'A passover this to Jehovah' (Ex. xii. 11) = the presence of the Lord, and deliverance by Him.

7878. All things thus far appointed concerning the paschal lamb—the roasting and eating of it, and its blood upon the posts and lintel—have reference to this : that the destroyer will pass by their houses ; in the internal sense, that they shall be free from all damnation. They were prepared for the sake of this end, namely, that damnation should flee from them. The process of their preparation is that which has been described in the internal sense by the statutes concerning the paschal lamb.

[A.] 7882. The passover was instituted on account of the deliverance of those of the Spiritual Church by the Lord.

7900². As the passover was the most holy of the feast days, it was commanded that it should be celebrated on the fourteen day of the month, should last seven days, and should finish on the twenty-first day . . . For the same reason it was appointed, that those who could not celebrate the passover in the first month, should do so in the following month, also on the fourteenth day (Num.ix.10,11).

7902^e. Innocence is to acknowledge that in one's self there is nothing but evil, and that all good is from the Lord, and also to believe that we do not know or perceive anything from ourselves, but from the Lord . . . When man is in this state, falsity can be removed from him, and truth from the Lord can be insinuated. This is the state signified by 'the unleavened things,' and also by the eating of the paschal lamb.

7917. 'Kill ye the passover' (Ex.xii.21)=preparation for the presence of the Lord, and the consequent deliverance. . . 'The passover'=the presence of the Lord, and the deliverance of those who are of the Spiritual Church.

7938. 'The sacrifice of the passover is this to Jehovah' (ver.27)=the worship of the Lord on account of the deliverance. . . 'The passover'=the presence of the Lord, and the deliverance of those who are of the Spiritual Church.

7995. 'This is the statute of the passover' (ver.43)=the laws of order for those who are delivered from damnation and from infestations. . . 'The passover'=the presence of the Lord, and deliverance from damnation.

7996. 'No son of a stranger shall eat it' (id.)=that those who are not in truth and good are separated from them. . . The passover was a supper which represented the consociations of the good in Heaven ; and, in the statutes which follow, it is indicated who can be consociated, and who cannot.

with the Angels in the Heavens ; but . . . when they come to any angelic Society, and feel the sphere of holiness from the truth of the good of innocence, which is signified by the blood of the paschal lamb, they cannot approach . . .

8001. For the paschal supper represented the angelic consociations as to goods and truths. 8003.

8006. The reason why 'all the assembly of Israel' were to 'do the passover' (ver.47) was that they might represent the deliverance of those of the Spiritual Church who had been detained in the Lower Earth even until the Advent of the Lord ; and by their eating it together in one house, might represent the angelic consociations in Heaven ; and thus, by the whole assembly of Israel doing it, might represent the whole Heaven.

8017. The reason this denotes a state of the presence of the Lord, is that it was the day of the passover ; and by the passover is signified the presence of the Lord, and the deliverance of those of the Spiritual Church from spiritual captivity and damnation. That there was deliverance then, is signified by the things which follow in this verse . . .

8020. The statutes and laws concerning the eating of the paschal lamb. Enum.

8038. The perpetual remembrance of the deliverance by the Lord, is treated of (in Ex.xiii.) by the celebration of the passover.

9287. 'The feast of unleavened things thou shalt keep'=worship and thanksgiving on account of purification from falsities . . . Concerning this feast, which is called also the passover, see below.

9292^e. Their going out of Egypt=their deliverance from infestation by the infernals ; and that on this account the passover, which is the feast of unleavened things, was instituted. Refs.

9294⁴. These three feasts are called the feast of the passover, the feast of weeks, and the feasts of tabernacles. . . By the bringing forth of the sons of Israel from the land of Egypt, the same was represented as by the first feast, which was named the passover.

9965⁴. The paschal supper represented conjunction with the Lord through the good of love ; and (on this account) it was ordered that he who did not do the passover should be cut off from the people . . .

9992^e. The reason he was to be cut off from Israel who ate what was leavened in the feast of the passover, was that the feast of the passover signified deliverance from damnation ; and, in special, deliverance from the falsities of evil with those who are suffering themselves to be regenerated by the Lord. Hence, also, that feast was called 'the feast of unleavened things.'

10132⁸. By the feast of the passover was signified the deliverance from damnation of those who receive the Lord in love and faith ; thus who are in the good of innocence . . . and therefore it is said that they should put the blood of the lamb or kid upon the posts, the lintel, and the houses ; for where there is the good of innocence, Hell cannot enter. The reason they were to eat it roast with fire, was that by it was signified the good of celestial love . . .

10134¹². Therefore the day before the feast of the passover was called 'the evening;' for by the feast of the passover was signified the presence of the Lord, and the deliverance of the faithful from damnation by Him. Refs.

10655³. On account of the remembrance of (the subjugation of the Hells, and the glorification of His Human) the feast of unleavened things, or of the passover, was instituted; and therefore in this feast He rose again . . .

10659. (Thus) the feast of the passover, which was called also the feast of unleavened things, was instituted in remembrance of the deliverance by the Lord of man from Hell . . .

N. 215. That the paschal supper signified consociation in Heaven. Refs.

— . That the feast of unleavened things, or of the passover, signified deliverance from damnation by the Lord. Refs.

T. 433^e. As such consociations of minds were signified by . . . feasts . . . nothing else is meant by them in the spiritual sense; and, in the supreme sense, by the paschal supper . . .

704. Therefore when the Lord instituted this Supper of the last Jewish passover, and of the first Christian passover, He said: 'This do in remembrance of Me.'

727. Why not . . . the paschal flesh at the Lord's Supper . . .

D. 5746^e. These things lasted . . . to the 11th of April when was the feast of the passover, 1757.

E. 252. These things were formerly signified by the paschal supper; and are to-day signified by the Holy Supper.

314^e. By the feast of the passover was represented the glorification of the Lord's Human.

329. By the paschal supper the Angels understand the like as by the Holy Supper; in which, in place of the paschal lamb or kid, there are the bread and wine.

401²⁹. For by the feast of the passover was signified the celebration of the Lord on account of deliverance from damnation, which is effected by means of regeneration; and, in the supreme sense, the remembrance of the glorification of the Lord's Human, because thence is deliverance. Refs. And, as the first state of regeneration is a state of ignorance, that feast began in the evening when the sun had set. This state is signified also by the exit of the sons of Israel from Egypt. Ex.

Ath. 162. The passover=that (full and whole) glorification.

6078. 'For thy servants have no pasture for their flock' (Gen.xlvii.4)=that there are lacking scientifics in which are the goods of truth; (for) 'the pasture which is for the flock'=the scientifics in which are the goods of truth. . . In the internal sense, 'pasture'=that which supports the spiritual life, and is especially scientific truth; for this the soul of man longs, as the body does for food . . . and therefore 'to feed=pascere'=to be instructed.

6413⁴. 'The stags have not found pasture' (Lam.i.6)=the natural affections without truths and their goods. That 'pasture'=truth and the good of truth, which support the spiritual life of man. Refs.

2761. 'Way,' and 'path' (Gen. xlix. 17) = truth. 3923².

3699². The word 'ladder,' in the Original Language, is derived from a word which means path, or way, which is predicated of truth.

3780³. 'The highways are laid waste' (Is.xxxiii.8)=truth no longer anywhere.

4926⁴. 'The restorer of paths to dwell in' (Is.lviii.12)=the truths which are of good; for 'paths,' or 'ways,' =truths; and 'to dwell' is predicated of good.

6399. 'An arrow-snake upon the path' (Gen.xlix.17)=ratiocination from truth concerning good. . . 'A path'=truth.

9144⁵. 'Ways,' and 'paths' (Hos.ii.6)=truths.

10422². See WAY, here. H.479(p).

E. 219³. 'Set thine heart toward the highway, the way thou goest' (Jer.xxxi.21)=the affection of the truth which leads to life.

237⁶. 'She shall not find thy paths' (Hos.ii.6)=that nothing of truth can be seen. Ex.

280⁵. 'The highways are laid waste, he who passeth along the way hath ceased' (Is.xxxiii.8)=that there are no longer the goods and truths which lead to Heaven. ('The highways laid waste'=that there are no longer the goods of life; and 'he who passeth along the way hath ceased'=nor the truths of faith. 365²².)

405⁹. 'To be set for a way'=to be in truths; and 'the highways to be exalted' (Is.xlix.11)=to be in genuine truths; for 'ways,' and 'highways,'=truths, which are said to be 'exalted' from good; and the truths which are from good are genuine truths.

412²². 'Way,' and 'path' (Is.xxx.11)=the truth and good of the Church.

555¹⁸. 'To destroy the way of the paths' (Is.iii.12)=that the truth which leads is not known.

652⁶. Desolation is described by, 'the ways have ceased; those going in paths have gone in crooked ways' (Judges v.6). By 'ways,' and 'paths,' are signified . . . the truths of doctrine which lead; and 'to go in crooked ways'=aberration from truths.

734². That they will be taught in truths, by which they will be led, is signified by, 'He will teach us of His ways; and we will go in His paths' (Is.ii.3): 'ways'=truths; and 'paths,' the precepts of life.

781¹⁵. That falsities from Own intelligence avert and reject the influx of truth, is signified by, 'He hath fenced up My ways with hewn stone; he hath overturned My paths' (Lam.iii.9). By 'the ways,' and 'paths,' of God, are signified the truths which lead to good . . .

Patience. Patientia.

Patient. Patiens.

A. 952. He called this Christian patience, wanting to be the least, in order to become the greatest in Heaven. D.1302.

R. 33. 'The patient expectation of Jesus Christ' (Rev.i.9)=the Advent of the Lord.

77. Their study and patience. Sig. So.

185. Spiritual combat, which is temptation, is called 'the word of endurance, or patience' (Rev.iii.10) of the Lord, because in temptations the Lord fights for man . . .

593. 'Here is the patience and the faith of the saints' (Rev.xiii.10)=that the man of the Lord's New Church is explored by temptations from them, as to the quality of his life and faith. By 'patience' is here signified patience in temptations, and exploration then [to discover] the man's quality as to a life according to the Lord's precepts, and as to faith in the Lord; and therefore it is said, 'Here is the patience and the faith.' 638.

— Elsewhere in the Apocalypse also, 'patience' is predicated of the temptations by which man is explored in regard to his quality. Ill.

D. 157. In such a state (of temptation) all patience as it were perishes . . .

E. 813. 'Here is the patience and the faith of the saints'=that these are the things through which comes temptation, and afterwards the implantation of truth from good with those who are being made spiritual by the Lord.

—². The reason 'the patience of the saints'=the temptation of the faithful, or of those who are becoming spiritual from the Lord, is that 'patience'=spiritual patience, which is patience in enduring temptations; and those are in this patience who fight in themselves against the falsities which are in, and which adhere to, the dogma about faith alone; for they confirm it by reasonings from the natural man, and also from the Word wrongly applied and thus falsified. The temptations which these endure, while they are fighting against falsities, are meant by 'patience.'

—³. The like is signified by 'patience' in Luke xxi.16-19; (where) the last time of the Church is treated of, (and) the temptations which the faithful should then undergo on account of truths; (and, by the words) 'in your patience possess ye your souls' is signified to preserve the life of truth among falsities.

—⁴. 'To bring forth fruit in patience' (Luke viii.15) =to do truths and goods, although they are living among falsities and evils; that is, among those who are in them.

—^e. The Lord's patience in temptations . . . is described in Is.liii.7. . . 'Not to open His mouth'=patience.

893. 'Here is the patience of the saints' (Rev.xiv.12) =the persecutions and temptations of those who are not in that faith, but in charity; (for) 'patience'=temptations; (and also) persecutions. —²,Ex.

—³. The temptations here meant by 'patience' are the spiritual temptations which are undergone by those who receive genuine charity from the Lord; for they have to fight against the evils which are in every man from birth; and some against the falsities which from their childhood they have imbibed from masters and preachers concerning faith alone . . . 897.

Patmos. Parmos, Patmos (?)

R. 34. 'I was in the isle called Patmos' (Rev.i.9)=

the state and place in which he could be illustrated. The reason the revelation was made to John in Patmos, was that it was an island in Greece, not far from the Land of Canaan, and between Asia and Europe; and by islands are signified the nations more remote from the worship of God, but who will nevertheless accede to it, because they can be illustrated; in like manner by Greece; but the Church itself by the Land of Canaan; by Asia those belonging to the Church, who are in the light of truth from the Word; and by Europe, those to whom the Word will come. Hence it is that by the 'isle of Patmos' is signified the state and place in which he could be illustrated.

E. 50. 'I was in the isle called Patmos'=a revelation to the gentiles; (for) 'Patmos'=the revelation which is in the Apocalypse. . . That 'Patmos'=revelation, is from the memorable [circumstance] of the revelation which was there made to John. (Continued under ISLAND.)

— All persons . . . through whom the Word was written were led to places which had a signification, in order that all things should be significative of spiritual Things . . . Therefore also John was commanded to betake himself into the isle of Patmos, in order that there might be revealed there the things there would be at the end of the Church; because 'an island'=a nation which will receive the truths of doctrine. Moreover, this isle is in the Archipelago, where there are many other islands; and hence, too, it is that by 'Greece,' in the Word, such nations are signified. Ill.

750. Yet they found the doctrine of their Church upon one saying of Paul . . . quite falsely understood. 825².

892^e. They have fabricated a universal doctrine of the Church from a single saying of Paul falsely understood, and not from any Word of the Lord; which also is a species of spiritual theft.

24^e. In Whom all the fulness of the Divinity dwells bodily, according to the edict of the Apostle Paul.

328. Therefore Paul calls ineffable the things which he heard from the Third Heaven.

T. 701⁴. There was read an Epistle written by Paul while he sojourned in the world, but not published, without anyone's knowing that it was by Paul. The hearers at first regarded it as of little moment; but, when it was disclosed that it was one of Paul's Epistles, it was received with joy, and each and all things therein were adored.

D. 1747. As Paul has written about himself.

3520. When I entered the Temple of Paul . . . (i.e. St. Paul's Cathedral.)

3728. A certain one came to me suddenly, so that it was perceived that it was Paul, who inquired whether I was speaking evil about him; but I replied that I was not then thinking about him . . .

4321. Concerning Paul.—For a long time he was in front, a little to the right, and he was shown that he might have bliss; but continually, when the opportunity was given, he spoke against the Truths of faith. At last a certain [Spirit] was detected in a higher place, who said that he had led him. He who was detected spoke quite confidently, as one who ruled him, and all things which pertained to him, professing himself to be as it were a god, and breathing forth a sphere as if [he were] the Lord; but he was a certain devil . . . Then Paul . . . spoke with him, saying that he wanted to be his companion, and that they would go together, and make themselves gods; and so, being associated, they went together to a considerable distance in front, and wanted to deceive those who were there; but they were rejected wherever they came. Moreover, when I was infested in my sleep by adulterers, and they perceived that I was infested, those two lent their aid, and held me so stubbornly in that turpitude of thought that I could scarcely release myself. . . These two underwent the same penalty (as the rest), grievously; and thus it was made known to all, that Paul also is such a nefarious one; and that it is only for certain reasons that he has hitherto been delivered; for a nefarious one undergoes the penalty of his nefarious deeds; concerning which I have also spoken with him; and he is now among such cohorts as rove about, and almost where there is a desert place. 4323.

4322. There was a certain [Spirit]—it was Paul—with whom I spoke, [to the effect] that no one can become good miraculously . . . As he has thought in this way, the Societies were removed, and he was then seen as an infant sprawling with his hands . . . Such would the evil become if they wanted to become good miraculously.

one of His parables; so that he has received nothing from the life and discourse of the Lord; as also has been said to him; when yet in the Evangelists is the Evangelist himself.

4413. There was a certain one who was insensible to the internal sense of the Word, because he wanted to place merit in [his] acts—Paul—. For a long time he has been at a distance from me; and is among the worse ones. Already has he associated himself with the worst devils; already has he wanted to form for himself a Heaven, to whom he should give joys from himself, but those of cupidities and of pleasures. This he has also attempted, but became worse from it, and was cast down. I then spoke to him, [saying] that this was not Heaven, but Hell; and it was also turned into a black Hell. He especially wanted to have hypocrites . . . Such have been with me for some days, which I was able to know by the pain in my teeth . . . and it was perceived and said that this was from Paul, who hates the internal sense; and thus the anger of this hatred has the effect of summoning hypocrites . . . for hypocrites believe nothing, but still esteem the literal sense of the Word, because they can take many things thence and persuade the vulgar.

6043. (Zinzendorf) cared little for the Evangelists; only for the Epistles of Paul. J.(Post.)279.

6062. Concerning Zinzendorf and Paul.

—². He was shown . . . that Paul did indeed speak from inspiration, but not as did the prophets, to whom the several words were dictated; but that his inspiration was that he received an influx according to those things which were with him; which inspiration is totally different; nor has it conjunction with Heaven by means of correspondences.

D. Min. 4561. Concerning Paul.—Paul, while alive, thought nothing about the other life except what is worldly. He supposed there would be worldly glory there, not knowing what heavenly glory was, nor whether it was anything; and thus he supposed that it was he who would introduce all into Heaven, and that the Lord would accept them [as being] from him. He also supposed that he had merited better than others. On account of that worldly glory, in order to be the greatest, he underwent so many dangers and punishments . . . Hence it is that he has several times consociated himself with evil Spirits and devils, in order to make for himself a Heaven altogether infernal; and hence it is that he rejects the interior things of the Word, because they are opposed to worldly glory, and to merit.

4562. He seems to have with him a paper, and writes on it what he observes; but the manner in which he writes has been shown me; namely, by lines drawn around to the ends . . . This is allowed him, in order that the things to be observed may be better impressed on his memory . . .

—^e. At last, Paul was given a habitation by himself, above, to the left; but still he by alternations has wanted to make a tumult. Finally, he has been brought lower down, where he does not know that he has been Paul.

4603^e. There was discourse also about Paul: that (he) did not know what Heaven is.

4631. Concerning Paul.—I have spoken with Paul [concerning the fact] that he wants to be the introducer [into Heaven]. . . I said that if he has understood the Word according to the letter, this should be the office of Peter. . . He said that he wants to snatch this from him, and claim it for himself, because he has laboured more. Paul is altogether averse to Peter; and says that he understands nothing, and thus can do nothing.

De Verbo 3^d. It has sometimes been granted me to be among the Angels of the Middle and of the Supreme Heaven. . . and I was then in an interior natural state. . . and heard things ineffable and inexpressible, as we read happened to Paul.

Docu. 232. II. I have conversed with Paul for an entire year; and also on the subject of what he wrote in Rom.iii.28.

Peace. Pax.

Peaceful, Pacific. Pacificus.

A. 59. The Lord gives (the regenerating man) food, which is compared to 'the herb seeding seed,' and to 'the tree in which is fruit,' which are [states] of tranquillity and peace, with their delights and felicities; and this at intervals.

S. 5. The Lord's Kingdom. . . is called 'the Sabbath,' or eternal peace and rest. Tr.

90^e. 'Rain,' which is presently called 'vapour,'=the tranquillity of peace, when combat ceases.

92. The nature of the tranquillity of peace of the external man, when combat, or unrest from cupidities and Falsities, ceases, can be known by no one except him who has known a state of peace. This state is so delightful, that it surpasses every idea of delight. It is not only a cessation of combat, but is the life coming from interior peace, so affecting the external man that it cannot be described. Truths of faith, and goods of love, are then born, which derive their life from the delight of peace.

245. Such things can never come from the Fountain of mercy, peace, and goodness.

540^e. Afterwards (Souls) are brought into a state of peace, even to their inmost; and they then confess that nothing of it is at all expressible, or thinkable.

925³. 'An odour of rest'=what is grateful of peace. Peace comprehends in one complex each and all things which are of the Lord's Kingdom; for the state of the Lord's Kingdom is a state of peace. In a state of peace there come forth all happy states which are from love and faith in the Lord.

1038². The covenant itself is called in the Word, 'the covenant of peace,' for 'peace'=the Lord's Kingdom; and the Lord's Kingdom consists in mutual love, in which alone is peace. III.

1275. I was in a Society where there was tranquillity. . . approximating in a measure to a state of peace; but it was not peace.

1664⁶. The 'arms of war' are 'broken,' when, cupidities and Falsities ceasing, man comes into the tranquillity of peace. III.

1726. 'King of Salem'=a state of peace as to interior or rational things. 'Salem,' in the Original Language, means 'peace,' and also perfection. . . A state of peace is the state of the Lord's Kingdom: in this state the Lord's celestial and spiritual things are as in their morning and their spring; for peace is circumstanced as is the dawn in the early morning, and the spring in the spring-time. The dawn and the spring cause all things which then meet the senses to be full of joy and gladness. . . So is it with the state of peace in the Lord's Kingdom: in the state of peace all celestial and spiritual things are as it were in their dawn or vernal flower and laughter; that is, in their felicity itself. So does the state of peace affect everything; for the Lord is peace itself. 2780, Ex.

—^e. When man is in the combats of temptations, he is, by alternations, gifted by the Lord with a state of peace, and is thus recreated. The state of peace is here signified by 'Salem,' and presently also by 'the bread and wine' (brought out by the king of Salem) which=celestial and spiritual things; thus a state of celestial and spiritual things in peace, which state is recreation itself.

1738. Remains are all the states of love and charity, consequently all the states of innocence and peace, with which man is gifted. These states are given to man from infancy; but less as the man advances into adult age. (Continued under REMAINS.)

2133^e. This Glorification is performed by the angelic Societies when they are in a state of tranquillity and peace; for it then flows forth from their inmost joys, and from their felicities themselves.

2183². Before the Natural and Rational have been conjoined, man cannot be. . . in the tranquillity of peace; for the one fights with the other.

—³. If the Rational conquers, the man then comes into the tranquillity of peace; and, in the other life, into the peace of Heaven; whereas if the Natural conquers, then, while he lives, he appears as if he were in tranquillity; but in the other life he comes into the unrest and torment of Hell.

[A.] 2303. The angelic Spirits who were in front, above, . . . said that their state was a state of the tranquillity of peace; and that there were infants with them . . . These Spirits were of the female sex. . . With infants on earth there are at first Angels from the Heaven of innocence; but, in the succeeding age, Angels from the Heaven of the tranquillity of peace . . .

2780. A state of peace and innocence (in the Lord then.) Sig. and Ex.

— . In the state of peace in the Heavens there come forth all celestial and spiritual things; and they derive thence all their happiness, bliss, and felicity . . . It is the like with the state of innocence: this comes forth in the state of peace . . .

2786. The Lord's preparation for undergoing the most grievous and the inmost temptations, was that He put on a state of peace and innocence . . . Sig.

28267. 'Peace and rectitude' (Mal.ii.6)=both (the good of Divine love and the truth thereof).

2892. He who lives in good, and believes that the Lord rules the universe, and that from Him alone is all the good which is of love and charity, and all the truth which is of faith; nay, that from Him is life; and thus that from Him we live, move, and are, is in such a state that he can be gifted with heavenly freedom, and, with this, with peace also . . . But he who believes that he rules himself, is continually disquieted . . . 6325.

3170. The peace thereof. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'To pass the night'=to rest; and, in the internal sense, to have peace.

— . The case is this: when spiritual things are being appropriated to the natural man, the things of the cupidity of evil and of the persuasion of falsity recede, thus the things which induce unrest; and there accede the things of the affection of good and truth, thus the things which make peace; for all unrest is from evil and falsity; and all peace is from good and truth.

3384³. 'To make to dwell secure'=a state of peace.

3458. See MORNING, here.

3460. 'They went . . . in peace' (Gen.xxvi.31)=that they were content.

3574. 'Justice and peace kiss' (Ps.lxxxv.10)=they conjoin themselves.

3579⁴. See DEW, here.

3696. Those who are to be regenerated . . . are first of all in a state of tranquillity, or in a state of external peace; for external peace, or peace in externals, is called tranquillity; and is produced from a Divine state of peace which is inmost within it, and which comes forth in externals by this: that cupidities and Falsities are being removed; for these are what cause all unrest. Continued under TRANQUILLITY.)

—². (Even when in temptations and vexations from the diabolical crew) he has, inmost, a state of peace; for unless this were inmost there, he would not combat; for in the combats in which he is he continually has regard to it as the end . . . and hence it is that he conquers; and, as this state is the end, after the combats he comes into it. It is like the state of spring which succeeds that of autumn and winter . . .

—⁵. From these passages it is evident that a state of peace and tranquillity is described by 'to lie down.'

3780. 'Has he peace?' (Gen.xxix.6)=is not this good from the Lord's Kingdom?

—². 'Peace,' in the supreme sense, = the Lord Himself; and, derivatively, in the internal sense, His Kingdom. Peace is the Divine of the Lord inmost affecting the good in which are those who are there. That these things are signified by 'peace,' in the Word. Ill.

— . 'The Prince of peace' (Is.ix.6) manifestly means the Lord; and 'multiplying the government and peace,' means those in His Kingdom; thus His Kingdom itself.

— . 'A habitation of peace' (Is.xxxii.18)=Heaven.

—³. 'The Angels of peace' (Is.xxxiii.7)=those who are in the Lord's Kingdom; thus the Kingdom itself; and, in the supreme sense, the Lord.

— . 'Evangelizing,' and 'making to hear peace' (Is.lii.7)=the Lord's Kingdom.

—⁵. In all these passages, 'peace,' in the supreme sense, = the Lord; in the representative sense, His Kingdom, and the good from the Lord there, thus the Divine which inflows into the good, or into the affections of good, which also makes, from the inmost, joys and felicities.

3887. (The celestial Angels) appear to others as infants; for a state of peace and innocence presents this appearance.

3941³. 'No peace' (Jer.xii.12)=no affecting good.

3994³. The Lord's Kingdom, and the state of peace and innocence there. Tr.

4213². For those who have been conjoined as to good and truth, are in tranquillity, and in peace.

—^e. For the good of love and of charity gives peace. Sig.

4393. 'Salem'=the tranquillity of peace. Ill.

—². In the tranquillity of peace are interior truths, that is, those who are in interior truths in faith and life; but so long as they are in exterior truths, and especially while they are coming from exterior into interior truths, the state is in tranquil; for they then are in the combats of temptations. Tr.

4479. 'These men are peaceable with us' (Gen.xxxiv.21)=concordance as to doctrinal things.

4681. 'They could not speak to him for peace' (Gen. xxxvii.4)=that they averted themselves from the Divine truth . . . For 'to speak for peace'=to will well to anyone; for by peace the Ancients understood, in the supreme sense, the Lord Himself; in the internal sense, His Kingdom and life, or salvation, in it; and, in the external sense, salvation, or good health, in the world.

4712. 'Go, I pray, see the peace of thy brethren'

(ver.14)=every Advent of the Lord . . . 'Peace'=salvation. Ex.

4783³. If they knew how much peace, joy, and happiness there are in charity, they would know what Heaven is.

5044³. Peace is the state of blessedness in the Heavens affecting what is good and true from the inmosts. Hence the Lord is called 'the Prince of peace;' and it is said 'multiplying principality and peace,' to which there is 'no end.'

5050^e. (The Societies in which there is genuine conjugal love) live in the delight of peace above all others.

5052. It is the Inmost Heaven through which the Lord insinuates conjugal love: those who are there are in peace above all others. Peace in the Heavens is like the Spring in the world, which delights all things. It is the Celestial itself in its origin.

5113³. 'The seed of peace' (Zech.viii.12)=good in the interior man.

5257. 'God shall answer peace to Pharaoh' (Gen.xli.16)=from the Divine Human through conjunction. . . (for) 'the peace' which 'God shall answer'=from the Divine Human of the Lord; 'God'=the Divine; and 'peace,' in the supreme sense, the Lord.

5396^e. By this was represented how the Lord rules the disconnected and inordinated things which are without, from what is peaceful in the midst. D.1176.

5585³. 'To lift up the faces'=to give peace.

5660³. He who is gifted with a heavenly proprium, is also in tranquillity, and in peace; for he trusts in the Lord, and believes that nothing of evil can touch him, and knows that concupiscences will not infest him . . .

5662. 'He said, Peace be to you, fear not' (Gen.xliii.23)=it is well; let them not despair; (for) 'peace'=to be well.

—². The reason 'peace'=to be well, is that it is what is inmost, and therefore that which reigns universally, in each and all things in Heaven; for peace in Heaven is like the Spring on earth, or like the dawn, which do not affect by sensible varieties, but by a universal pleasantness which inflows into each thing that is perceived, and endues with pleasantness not only the perception itself, but also every object.

— . At this day scarcely anyone knows what is the 'peace' which is mentioned in the Word; as in the benediction . . . Almost everyone believes that peace is security from enemies, and that it is tranquillity at home, and among our companions; but this peace is not meant there, but a peace which immeasurably transcends that peace. It is heavenly peace. . . No one can be gifted with this peace, except him who is led by the Lord, and is in the Lord, that is, in Heaven, where the Lord is the all in all. For heavenly peace inflows when the cupidities which originate from the love of self and of the world have been taken away; for these are the things which take away peace, for they infest the interiors of man, and cause him at last to place rest in unrest, and peace in things which cause troubles; because [they cause him to place] delight in evils. So long as man is in these, he cannot possibly know what peace is; nor even so long as he believes that this peace is of no account. And if anyone says that this peace comes to the perception when the delights from the love of self and of the world have been taken away, he smiles. The reason is that he places peace in the delight of evil, which is opposite to peace.

—³. As peace is such, namely, the inmost of all felicities and blessednesses, and therefore the universal which reigns in each thing, the Ancients were wont to say as a common formula, Peace be to you, when they meant that it should be well; and also to ask whether they had peace, when they meant, Is it well? Refs.

5677. 'He asked them for peace' (ver.27)=the perception as to whether it is well . . . 'Peace'=to be well. 5678.

5680. 'They said, Thy servant our father hath peace' (ver.28)=the apperception of the Natural that it is well with the good a quo. . . 'Peace'=to be well.

5963^e. For this blessedness dwells in the tranquillity of peace.

-6373. See SHILOH, here.

6391. See REST, here.

6469. The sweetness of the Angels is perceived by them from the fact that they do not think and will from themselves, but from the Lord. Hence they have tranquillity, peace, and happiness.

7018. 'Jethro said to Moses, Go in peace' (Ex.iv.18)=assent and what is votive.

8455. The truth of peace adjoining itself. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'Dew'=the truth of peace . . . because it descends from heaven in the morning. Ex. This truth, called the truth of peace, is the Divine truth itself in Heaven from the Lord, which universally affects all there, and makes Heaven to be Heaven; for peace has in it confidence in the Lord, that He will rule all things, and will provide all things, and that He will lead to a good end. When man is in the faith of these things, he is then in peace; for he then fears nothing, and no solicitude about future things renders him unquiet. Into this state comes man in proportion as he comes into love to the Lord. A state of peace takes away all evil, especially self-confidence. It is believed that an evil man is in peace when he is in gladness and tranquillity from the fact that all things succeed with him. But this is not peace. It is the delight and tranquillity of cupidities, which counterfeits a state of peace; and this delight, being opposite to the delight of peace, is turned in the other life into what is undelightful; for this is what lies concealed in it . . . Peace is the inmost in all the delight, and also in the undelight, with the man who is in good. Therefore, in proportion as he puts off what is external, in the same proportion there is revealed a state of peace, and in the same proportion he is affected with happiness, bliss, and felicity, the origin of which is the Lord Himself.

—³. It may be said about the state of peace which is in Heaven, that it is such that no words can describe it, and that by no idea from the world can it come into the thought and perception of man so long as he is in the world. It is then above all sense: the tranquillity of the lower mind, the content, and the gladness from successes, are relatively nothing; for these affect only the externals; whereas peace affects the inmosts of all things, the first substances, and the beginnings of substances, with man; and thence derives itself and pours itself out into the substantiated and derivative things, and affects them with what is pleasant, and also affects the origins of the ideas, and consequently the ends of life of the man, with what is prosperous and happy; and thus makes the man's mind a Heaven.

[A.] 8478⁴. In proportion as anyone is in the stream of Providence, he is in a state of peace; and also in proportion as anyone is in a state of peace from the good of faith, he is in the Divine Providence.

8494. 'A rest'=a state of peace, when there is no temptation; (for) a rest such as there was on the Sabbath days, was a representative of a state of peace in which takes place the conjunction of good and truth; but the six former days represented the combat and labour, and thus the temptations, which precede a state of peace; for after temptations there takes place a state of peace, and, then, the conjunction of good and truth.

8495³. The angelic state in Heaven is that they will and act nothing from themselves or from proprium, and do not even think and speak anything therefrom. Their conjunction with the Lord consists in this. . . This state with the Angels is the heavenly state itself; and, when they are in it, they then have peace and rest. . .

8517. 'Rest ye, everyone under himself'=a state of peace.

—e. When man is in a state of peace, he is then led by the Lord by means of good. If man were then to lead himself, even if it were by means of truth, he would dissipate the state of peace; and there would consequently be no conjunction.

8595. The Divine truth itself which proceeds from the Lord immediately, is not combative, but is pacific; for it is peace itself; for it proceeds from the Divine good of the Lord's Divine love. . .

8665. 'They interrogated a man his companion for peace' (Ex.xviii.7)=a mutual Divine celestial state; (for) 'to interrogate for peace'=consociation as to a Divine celestial state. . . because, in the internal sense, 'to interrogate for peace'=to interrogate concerning the life, and its prosperity and happiness. But 'to interrogate for peace,' in the supreme sense, when it is treating of Divine good and truth Divine,=consociation as to a Divine celestial state; for 'peace,' in the supreme sense,=the Lord, and thence the state of the Inmost Heaven, where are those who are in love to the Lord, and thence in innocence. These, moreover, being in the Lord, are in peace above all others; and their state is called Divine celestial. Hence it is that by 'peace' this state is meant.

is in truth, and not as yet in good, he is in what is intranquil; but when he is in good, he is in tranquillity, thus in peace. The reason is that evil Spirits cannot attack good, but flee away at the first apperception of it; but they can attack truth; and hence it is that when they are in good they are in peace. These are the things which are signified by, 'all the people shall come upon their place in peace.'

8823². The Divine truth and Divine good, in the supremes, are peaceful and quite free from disturbance; but when they fall down towards lower things, they become by degrees unpeaceful, and at last tumultuous. Sig.

8827. In the Inmost Heaven. . . they are in love to the Lord, and consequently in peace and innocence above all others.

8890. 'Not to do any work'=rest and peace; thus Heaven; for, when man is in Heaven, he is devoid of all sollicitude, unrest, and anxiety; and, when he is devoid of these, he has bliss.

9118. As to act against conscience is to act against the new will. . . consequently against the life which man has from the Lord, it is evident that man is in the tranquillity of peace, and in internal bliss, when he acts according to conscience; and that he is in intranquillity and pain when he acts against it.

9274. 'The seventh day. . . '=the second state, when the man of the Church is in good, and thus in the tranquillity of peace.

9278³. But when man is in internal things, then, because he is in Heaven with the Lord, labour and combat cease, and he is in the tranquillity of peace, in which also conjunction takes place. These are the things which are signified by 'the seventh day.' 9279, Sig. and Ex.

9280. The tranquillity of peace in external goods and truth at the same time. Sig. and Ex.

9431. But when man is in the second state, or the state of good, he is then in rest, and in the tranquillity of peace. . . This state is represented by 'the seventh day,' or 'sabbath.'

9546. Thus the presence of the Lord with heavenly peace and joy from mercy. Sig. and Ex.

10054. 'An odour of rest'=what is perceptive of peace. . . 'Rest'=peace.

— That 'peace,' in the supreme sense,=the Lord, and the Divine which proceeds from Him affecting from the inmost what is good in the Heavens. Refs.

10097. 'From their peacemaking sacrifices' (Ex.xxix.28)=. . . the acknowledgment that it is of the Lord alone. It is said 'from the peacemaking sacrifices' because by them is signified the worship which takes place from freedom; for the peacemaking or eucharistic sacrifices were voluntary sacrifices . . .

10160^o. (The Most Ancients) did not know what it is to exercise command over others from the love of self, or to heap up wealth beyond the necessaries [of life] from the love of the world; and they had internal peace and at the same time external peace.

10579^o. By 'the faces of Jehovah' is here meant . . . whatever is of the Divine; thus mercy, peace, and all good; but, in the universal sense, the Divine truth . . . for truth is recipient of good, thus also of mercy and peace.

10723. In the Heavens there is a communion of all goods; the peace, intelligence, wisdom, and happiness of all are communicated to each one there; and those of each are communicated to all . . .

10730^o. By 'the Sabbath,' in the proper sense, are signified rest and peace; because, when the Lord had united His Human to the Divine Itself, He had peace; for then the combats had ceased, and all things in the Heavens and Hells had been reduced into order; and thus not only He had peace, but the Angels in the Heavens and men on earth also had peace and salvation.

—³. For the universal of all is that the Lord has united His Human to the Divine Itself, and that thence man has peace and salvation; and it is also a universal, that man must be conjoined with the Lord—which is effected by regeneration—in order that he may have peace and salvation.

H. 284. On the state of peace in Heaven. Chapter.

— . He who has not been in the peace of Heaven cannot perceive what the peace is in which are the Angels; and man, so long as he is in the body, cannot receive the peace of Heaven, thus cannot perceive it . . . As the peace of Heaven has been thus perceived by me, I can describe it, not such as it is in itself, because human words are not adequate, but only such as it is comparatively to that rest of the lower mind which is possessed by those who are content in God.

285. See INNOCENCE, here.

— . Peace is that from which is all the delight of good . . .

—^e. Peace is the inmost of the delight from the good of innocence. Ex.

286. Whence peace comes. Divine peace is in the Lord, coming forth from the union of the Divine Itself and the Divine Human in Him. The Divine of peace in Heaven is from the Lord, coming forth from the conjunction of Him with the Angels of Heaven; and, in particular, from the conjunction of good and truth with each Angel. These are the origins of peace. (Thus) peace in the Heavens is the Divine inmost affecting with bliss all the good there, thus is that from which is all the joy of Heaven; and in its essence it is the Divine joy of the Lord's Divine love from His conjunction with Heaven, and with each one there. This joy, perceived by the Lord in the Angels, and by the Angels from the Lord, is peace. Thence, by derivation, the Angels have all bliss, delight, and happiness, or that which is called heavenly joy.

287. As these are the origins of peace, the Lord is called 'the Prince of peace,' and He says that from Him is peace, and in Him is peace; the Angels are also called 'Angels of peace;' and Heaven 'the habitation of peace.' Ill.

—². That it is Divine and heavenly peace which is meant by 'peace,' in the Word. Ill.

— . As 'peace'=the Lord, and Heaven; and also heavenly joy, and the delight of good, salutations were . . . and are, Peace be with you. Ill.

—³. A state of peace is meant by 'Jehovah's smelling an odour of rest.' Ill. 'An odour of rest,' in the celestial sense, =the perception of peace.

— . As peace=the union of the Divine Itself and the Divine Human in the Lord, and the conjunction of the Lord with Heaven and with the Church, and with all in Heaven, and also with all in the Church who receive Him, the Sabbath has been instituted for a remembrance of these things, and has been named from rest, or peace, and has been the most holy representative of the Church, and on this account the Lord has called Himself 'the Lord of the Sabbath.' Ill.

288. As the peace of Heaven is the Divine inmost affecting with bliss the good itself which is with the Angels, it does not come to their manifest perception, except by a delight of heart when they are in the good of their life; and by a pleasantness when they hear truth which is concordant with their good; and by a cheerfulness of mind when they perceive their conjunction. From this, however, it inflows into all the acts and thoughts of their life; and there presents itself as joy, in the external form also.

—². But peace in respect to its quality and quantity, differs in the Heavens according to the innocence of those who are there; since innocence and peace walk hand in hand; for . . . innocence is that from which is all the good of Heaven, and peace is that from which is all the delight of that good. (Thus) what has been said concerning the state of innocence in the Heavens . . . may also be said concerning the state of peace; because innocence and peace are conjoined as are good and its delight; for good is felt by its delight, and delight is known from its good. (Therefore) the Angels of the Third Heaven are in the third or inmost degree of peace . . . and the Angels of the lower Heavens are in a less degree of peace.

—³. That innocence and peace are together, as are good and its delight, may be seen also with infants; who, being in innocence, are also in peace; and, as they are in peace, all things with them are full of sport. But the peace with infants is external peace; and internal peace . . . is not given except in wisdom; and, as it is given in wisdom, it is given in the conjunction of good and truth . . . Heavenly or angelic peace is given also with men who are in wisdom from the conjunction of good and truth, who, from it, perceive themselves to be content in God; but so long as they live in the world, it lies concealed in their interiors; but is revealed when they leave the body behind, and enter Heaven; for the interiors are then opened.

289. As Divine peace comes forth from the conjunction of the Lord with Heaven; and, in special, with every Angel from the conjunction of good and truth, therefore the Angels, when they are in a state of love, are in a state of peace; for good is, then, conjoined with truth with them . . . The like takes place with a man who is being regenerated: when there comes forth with him the conjunction of good and truth, which takes place especially after temptations, he then comes into a state of delight from heavenly peace. (Continued under DAWN.)

[H.] 290. I have spoken with the Angels about peace, and have said that in the world it is called peace when wars . . . cease, and when enmities and discords between men cease; and that it is believed that internal peace is the rest of the lower mind when cares are removed, and most especially the tranquillity and delight from the success of Things. But the Angels said that (these latter things) appear as of peace, but are not of peace except with those who are in heavenly good, because peace is not given except in this good; for peace inflows from the Lord into their inmost, and descends from their inmost, and flows down into their lower things, and presents rest of mind, tranquillity of the lower mind, and joy therefrom. But with those who are in evil, peace is not given. There does indeed appear as it were rest, tranquillity, and delight, when things succeed according to their wishes, but it is external and not at all internal; for interiorly there burn enmities, hatreds, revenges, and many evil cupidities . . .

W. 105². Hence there is perpetual spring in all the angelic Heavens, from which the Angels are in a state of peace; for this state corresponds to the time of spring on earth.

P. 41. This happiness rarely manifests itself in the world; because . . . the Natural does not communicate with the Spiritual by continuity, but by correspondences; and this latter communication is not felt except by a certain rest and peace of the lower mind, especially after combats against evils . . .

R. 12. 'Grace be unto you and peace' (Rev.i.4)=a Divine salutation. . . That 'peace be unto you' was a salutation of the Lord to the disciples, thus a Divine salutation. III. And by the Lord's command it was the salutation of the disciples to all to whom they were to enter (Matt.x.11-15).

306. 'To him who sat upon him it was given to take peace from the earth' (Rev.vi.4) = charity, spiritual security, and internal rest taken away. By 'peace' are signified all things in the complex which are from the Lord, and thence all things of Heaven and the Church, and the blessednesses of life in them. These belong to peace in the supreme sense. That 'peace'=charity, spiritual security, and internal rest, follows from this; for, when man is in the Lord, he is in peace with the neighbour, which is charity; and is in protection against the Hells, which is spiritual security; and when he is in peace with the neighbour and in protection against the Hells, he is in internal rest from evils and falsities. As, therefore, all these things are from the Lord, it may be evident what is signified by 'peace,' both in general and in special, in the following passages. III.

—^e. That peace is that which inmost affects with bliss every good. Ref.

640. 'That they may rest' (Rev.xiv.13)=that they will have peace in the Lord. By peace is meant rest of the soul from not being infested by evils and falsities, thus by Hell . . . Hence by 'they shall rest from their labours,' is signified that those who afflict their soul and crucify their flesh, in the world, for the sake of the Lord and of eternal life, will have peace in the Lord; for the Lord says: 'In Me ye shall have peace; in the world ye shall have tribulation' (John xvi.33); 'My peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth give I unto you' (John xiv.27).

949². For 'reward' is the intrinsic bliss which is called peace . . .

M. 16^e. The Prince (then rose from table) and said Peace.

155a^e. This General, which we have from our wives, is like the serenity of peace.

180. That the states of (love truly conjugal) are innocence, peace, tranquillity, etc. Ex.

—^e. Innocence and peace are of the soul; tranquillity is of the mind . . .

207⁷. The delight of use . . . causes him to be in eternal peace, and in the rest of peace.

218. That in itself the intelligence of women is modest, elegant, pacific, etc. Ex.

222². There are many spheres which proceed from the Lord; as . . . a sphere of innocence and peace . . . but the universal of all is the conjugal sphere, because this is also the sphere of propagation, and is thus the pre-eminent sphere of the conservation of the universe . . .

285. That (conjugal semblances) are for the sake of peace in the house. Ex.

—². Besides, peace and tranquillity give serenity to their minds, and, dispose them to receive gratefully the kindnesses offered by their wives . . .

316. I look at you (said the guard) in order to see whether the delight of peace which is in your face derives anything from the delight of conjugal love . . .

394. That the sphere (of the love of infants) is also a sphere of innocence and peace. Ex.

— . Innocence and peace are the two inmost things of Heaven. They are called inmost things, because they proceed immediately from the Lord; for the Lord is innocence itself and peace itself . . . From peace, He says, 'Peace I leave you; My peace I give you' (John xiv.27); and it is also meant by 'the peace' with which they were to salute a city or a house . . . Another reason why innocence and peace are the two inmost things of Heaven, is that innocence is the esse of all good, and peace is the bliss of all the delight which is of good.

399. That the state of rational innocence and peace with parents towards their infants, is that they know nothing, and can do nothing from themselves . . . and that this state successively recedes as they know and can do from themselves . . . Ex.

T. 303. In the celestial sense, by this (Third) Precept is meant conjunction with the Lord, and peace then, because protection from Hell; for by the Sabbath is signified rest; and, in the supreme sense, peace. III.

304. Heavenly peace, in relation to the Hells, so that evils and falsities do not rise from them and invade, may be compared in many respects to natural peace ; as to peace after wars, when everyone lives in security from enemies, and lives safe in his city, in his house, and in his own property and gardens. (Other comparisons made.)

571. In proportion as the good of love acts the first part, and the truths of faith the second . . . the man acts from charity, and speaks from faith, and feels the good of charity, and perceives the truth of faith, and is then in the Lord, and in peace, and thus is regenerate.

599^e. After redemption, the Lord gifted with peace those who had believed in Him . . . and in like manner after temptation He gives to man to feel peace, that is, gladnesses of the lower mind, and solace.

Ad. 3/6923. Gladness, tranquillity, etc., are not peace : they are below peace ; and, relatively to peace itself, are as it were nothing.

6924. In peace there is nothing at all of quiescence ; but there is life itself . . .

6925. By the Divine mercy . . . it has been granted me to experience something of this peace ; but I sacredly attest that no language can ever express it ; for it is the complex of all felicities, with the highest [degree of] life, without the life which is wont to arise from concupiscences, the pleasures of the body, care, and anxiety about future things. It is to be in the bosom of God Messiah.

D. 370. What corporeal peace is.—Corporeal peace is indeed the health of the body and all its members ; but, besides this, it is also a delicious and perceptible peace of the whole body, which has been shown me by the actual and perceptible operation of Spirits according to the viscera of the body, and in conformity with the formation of the viscera of the body. Hence is corporeal peace.

446. I have experienced this day . . . that there was not the least thing which did not take place by the auspices and direction of God Messiah, being to the best end. From this I could conclude what the Angelic is, and also what peace is, because [one] acquiesces in every most minute particular.

1728. (Those who constitute the pia mater) are modest, pacific . . .

2102. Concerning peace. I was in a species of peace, and was therefore removed from the cupidities which Spirits would insinuate, at which they wondered, and said, How in that way could I have any life . . .

3878. Concerning a peaceful state (which a Spirit was in). Des. and Ex.

4763². (Charles XII.) was admonished to make peace . . .

5994. Concerning peace in the world, and whether there is peace. I saw chariots in a long series along a way : it was said that peace has now been made on earth. This was seen on the 12th of June [1760, or 1761], the body being awake.

D. Min. 4696. A state of tranquillity and peace is from no other source than that the Angel perceives that all things inflow ; also that evil is not his, and neither is good ; thus he is in peace, and yet he as it were appropriates good.

E. 22. 'Grace be to you and peace' = the delight of truth and of good . . . 'Peace' = the delight of the good of innocence and of love.

340¹¹. Heaven and eternal happiness, which the Lord gives through His Divine truth and His Divine good, are meant by, 'and give thee peace' (Num. vi. 26).

—¹³. 'Peace upon Israel' (Ps. cxxviii. 6) = all spiritual good in general and in special (upon) the Church.

355⁵. The instauration of the Church with the gentiles is signified by, 'He shall speak peace unto the nations' (Zech. ix. 10) . . . 'Peace' = the good of love to the Lord, and thence all things of the Church. 357.

365. 'To take peace from the earth' = the consequent disagreements.

—⁴. For 'peace' = the peacefulness of the mind and the tranquillity of the lower mind from the conjunction of good and truth ; hence 'to take away peace' = the unpeacefulness and intranquillity from their disjunction, from which come intestine disagreements. Ex.

—⁵. Hence it is that by 'peace,' in the supreme sense, is signified the Lord ; in the relative sense, Heaven and the Church in general ; and also Heaven and the Church in particular with each person. Ill.

—⁷. By 'peace' (in the words, 'in Me ye shall have peace') is meant also internal delight from conjunction with the Lord, whence are Heaven and eternal joy. Ex.

—⁸. Their saying, 'Peace be to this house' (Luke x. 5) = that they should know whether those there received the Lord, evangelized concerning the Lord, and thence concerning Heaven, heavenly joy and eternal life ; for all these things are signified by 'peace ;' and those who had received are meant by 'the sons of peace,' upon whom their peace should rest. But that if they did not acknowledge the Lord, and thence did not receive the things which are the Lord's or which are of peace, it should be taken away from them, is signified by their peace returning to them again if the house or city were not worthy.

—⁹. 'If thou hadst known . . . the things which belong to thy peace' (Luke xix. 42), that is, which belong to eternal life and happiness which are from the Lord alone ; for by 'peace' is meant Heaven and heavenly joy through conjunction with the Lord.

—¹⁰. Their illustration in Divine truths through the reception of the Lord and conjunction with Him, whence are Heaven and eternal happiness, is meant by 'the way of peace' (Luke i. 79).

—¹¹. 'Peace in Heaven and glory in the highests' (Luke ix. 38) = that those things which are signified by 'peace' are from the union of the Divine Itself and the Divine Human, and are thence in Angels and men from conjunction with the Lord ; for when the Hells had been subjugated by the Lord, peace was made in Heaven, and then those there had Divine truth from the Lord, which is 'glory in the highests.'

— As 'peace,' in the internal sense of the Word, = the Lord, and thence Heaven and eternal life, in special, the delight of Heaven originating from conjunction with the Lord, therefore the Lord, after His resurrection, when He appeared to His disciples, said to them, 'Peace be unto you' (Luke xxiv.36; John xx.19, 21, 26).

—¹³. Here (Ps.iv.6-8) is described the peace which those have who are in conjunction with the Lord through the reception of the Divine good and Divine truth from Him; and that it is peace in which, and from which, is heavenly joy. . . As peace is in them, and from them, it is said, 'In peace I together lie down and sleep; for Thou Jehovah makest me dwell secure.' By 'peace' is signified the internal delight of Heaven; by 'security,' the external delight. . .

—¹⁴. Whence peace is, that is, whence are Heaven and heavenly joy, is here described (Lev.xxvi.3,4,6). Peace, regarded in itself, is not Heaven and heavenly joy, but these are in peace and from peace. For peace is like the dawn, or like the Spring, in the world, which dispose human minds to receive in the heart delights and pleasantnesses from the objects which appear before the eyes; for it is this which delights and pleases. And as, in like manner, all things of Heaven and of its joy are from Divine peace, these also are meant by peace. . . As man has Heaven from living according to the precepts. . . it is said, 'If ye walk in My statutes, and observe My precepts, and do them, I will give peace in the land' . . .

—¹⁵. By 'the multitude of peace' with which they shall be 'deliciated' (Ps.xxxvii.11) are signified the delights which follow temptations. . . That from the conjunction of good and truth man has the delight of peace, is meant by, 'Mark the perfect one, and behold the right; for the end to the man is peace' (ver.37).

—¹⁶. 'The mountains shall bring peace to the people . . .' (Ps.lxxii.3). . . From (the signification of these words) it is evident that by 'peace' is meant the heavenly joy which is from conjunction with the Lord by love. . . 'In his days shall the just flourish' = who is in the good of love; hence it is said, 'and much peace' (ver.7) for peace is from no other source than the Lord, and His conjunction with those who are in the good of love.

—¹⁷. As from Him are the Divine good and the Divine truth, He is called 'the Prince of peace' (Is.ix.); and it is said, 'in multiplying government and peace there shall be no end;' 'government' is said from the Divine truth, and 'peace,' from the Divine good conjoined with the Divine truth; hence he is called 'the Prince of peace;' 'Prince' being predicated of truths . . . and 'peace,' of the conjunction of good and truth.

—¹⁸. As 'peace' is mentioned in very many passages of the Word, and the explication must be applied to the . . . subject of which it is predicated, and as its signification thence appears various, I will state, in sum, what peace means, lest the mind be carried about in all directions. Peace is the bliss of heart and soul which originates from the conjunction of the Lord with Heaven and with the Church; and this from the conjunction of good and truth with those who are there, whence there is no longer the combat of evil and falsity against good and truth. . . Hence is peace, in which take place all fructification of good and multiplication of truth, consequently all wisdom and intelligence; and, as this peace is from the Lord alone, and, from Him, with the Angels in Heaven, and with men in the Church, therefore by 'peace,' in the supreme sense, is meant the Lord; and, in the relative sense, Heaven and the Church, and therefore good conjoined with truth with those who are there. From these things an idea may be had of the signification of 'peace' in the following passages.

—¹⁹. 'Seek peace and pursue it' (Ps.xxxiv.14); 'peace' = all things which are of Heaven and the Church, whence is the happiness of eternal life, and as this is solely with those who are in good, it is said, 'Depart from evil, and do good.'

—²⁰. 'Much peace have those who love Thy law . . .' (Ps.cix.165). 'Peace' = heavenly bliss, happiness, and delight; and as these are given solely with those who love to do the Lord's precepts, it is said, 'Much peace have those who love Thy law; I have awaited Thy salvation, O Jehovah, and have done Thy precepts.' That such have no infestation from evils and falsities, is signified by, 'and nothing shall offend them.'

—²¹. As peace is from Jehovah alone, that is, from the Lord, and in doing good from Him, it is said, 'Jehovah, dispose peace for us; for Thou hast wrought all our works for us' (Is.xxvi.12).

—²². As peace is from the Lord, and in Heaven from Him, the Angels are called 'The Angels of peace;' and as there is no peace for those on earth who are in evils and the derivative falsities, it is said that 'they weep bitterly . . .' (Is.xxxiii.7).

—²³. As there is peace for those who live according to the Lord's precepts, and not for those who do not so live, it is said, 'Would that thou hadst hearkened to My precepts, and thy peace should have been as a river; there is no peace to the wicked' (Is.xlviii.18,22); 'peace as a river' = in abundance.

—²⁴. 'The covenant of peace' (Is.liv.10) = heavenly joy from conjunction with the Lord. 'The sons who shall be taught of Jehovah, and who shall have great peace' (ver.13) = those in the New Heaven and New Church who will be in truths from good from the Lord: that they will have eternal bliss and happiness.

—²⁵. 'To make a covenant of peace with them' (Ezek.xxxvii.26) = heavenly joy and eternal life for those who have been conjoined with the Lord. —²⁷.

—²⁶. 'The covenant of life and of peace' (Mal.ii.5) = the union of the Divine Itself with His Divine Human, from which union are all life and peace. . . The union itself which was effected in the world, is meant by, 'he walked with Me in peace and rectitude.'

—²⁸. Those are called 'a seed of peace' (Zech.viii.12) with whom there is the conjunction of good and truth. . . The conjunction of truth and good is further described by, 'Speak ye the Truth a man with his companion; judge the Truth and the judgment of peace in your gates; only love Truth and peace' (ver.16,19). By 'the Truth' is signified truth; by 'the judgment of peace,' and by 'peace,' is signified its conjunction with good.

—²⁹. 'Jehovah shall speak peace to His people, and to His saints' (Ps.lxxxv.8)=that He will teach and give conjunction with Himself through the conjunction of good and truth with them. By 'peace' are signified both these conjunctions. . . Both these conjunctions are further described by, 'Mercy and Truth shall meet; justice and peace shall kiss each other' (ver.10). Ex.

—³⁰. 'How delightful upon the mountains are the feet of him . . . that causeth to hear peace' (Is.lii.7). . . By 'peace,' here, is signified the Lord Himself, and thence Heaven for those who are conjoined with Him. . . As the conjunction of truth and good from conjunction with the Lord is signified by 'peace,' it is said, 'of him that causeth to hear peace'. . .

—³¹. 'The chastisement of our peace was upon Him' (Is.liii.5)=. . . the Lord's frightful temptations. . . By 'peace,' therefore, is here signified Heaven and eternal life for those who are conjoined with Him.

—³². To be spiritually healed is to be [healed] from evils and falsities, and as this is effected by the Lord through truths, it is said, 'I will reveal unto them an abundance of peace and of truth' (Jer.xxxiii.6).

—³³. 'He will redeem my soul in peace' (Ps.lv.18) =salvation through conjunction with the Lord.

—³⁵. 'Seek ye the peace of Jerusalem . . .' (Ps.cxxii.6). . . By 'peace' is meant everything of doctrine and worship; for when these are from a heavenly origin . . . they are from peace, and in peace; whence it is evident what is meant by, 'Seek ye the peace of Jerusalem.' And as those who are in this peace are called 'those of rest,' it is added, 'let them rest that love thee,' namely, those who love the doctrine and worship of the Church. By 'peace be in thy bulwark, and rest in thy palaces,' is signified in the exterior and in the interior man.

—³⁶. 'Who setteth thy border peace' (Ps.cxlvii.14) =all things of Heaven and the Church. . .

—³⁷. As all these things are . . . through the peace which is from the Lord, it concludes with: 'that thou mayest see peace upon Israel' (Ps.cxxviii.6).

—³⁸. Jerusalem is here called 'Salem' (Ps.lxxvi.2) because by 'Salem' is meant peace, from which Jerusalem also is named. The reason it is so named, is that 'peace'=all those things which have been stated above, in sum. —

—³⁹. That all these things shall be in abundance from conjunction with the Lord, is signified by, 'Behold, I spread peace abroad over her like a river' (Is.lxvi.12).

—⁴⁰. Peace is called 'the work of Jehovah' (Is.xxxii.17) because it is solely from the Lord. . . 'A habitation of peace' (ver.18)=Heaven where the Lord is. . .

—⁴¹. That the Lord will reign through the good of love, is signified by, 'I will make thy government peace, and thine exactors justice' (Is.lx.17). . . 'Peace' =the Lord.

—⁴². As peace is with those who are in the conjunction of good and truth from the Lord, and as evil destroys good, and falsity truth, thus also peace, it follows that there is no peace with those who are in evils and falsities. It does indeed appear as if there were peace with them when they succeed in the world; and they also then seem to themselves as if they were of a contented mind; but this peace is apparent solely in their extremes, while interiorly there is no peace; for they think about honour and gain without end, and cherish in their minds cunning, deceit, enmities, hatreds, revenges, and many like things, which, unknown to themselves, rend and devour the interiors of their minds, and thence also the interiors of their bodies.

—⁴³. That those have peace who are in good and the derivative truths; and that those have no peace who are in evils and the derivative falsities. III.

—⁴⁴. As peace in its first origin is from the union of the Divine Itself and the Divine Human in the Lord, and thence from the Lord in His conjunction with Heaven and with the Church, and with everyone there in the conjunction of good and truth, therefore the Sabbath, which was the most holy representative of the Church, was so called from rest or peace; and therefore also the sacrifices called 'pacific' were commanded. III.

401⁹. 'Peace' (Ps.lxxii.7) is said of the good of love.

405⁸. 'To evangelize peace'=to preach the Lord's Advent; for by 'peace,' in the supreme sense, is signified the Lord.

650⁵¹. 'A covenant of peace' (Ezek.xxxiv.25)=conjunction with the Lord by the Divine things which proceed from Him, which are the goods of love and the truths of doctrine from the Word; thus through the Word.

—⁵⁸. 'Peace in the Land. . .' (Lev.xxvi.6)=protection from the irruption of falsity in the Church. . .

695¹³. 'No peace' (Zech.viii.10)=infestation by evils and the derivative falsities. . .

—'. 'The seed of peace' (ver.12)=the truth of Heaven and of the Church which is from the Lord. This is called 'the seed of peace,' because it protects against the Hells, and gives security.

725⁸. 'When thou drawest nigh unto a city to fight against it, thou shalt invite it to peace. . . If it do not accept. . . thou shalt smite every male of it with the edge of the sword. . .' (Deut.xx.10,12,13). . . 'Not to accept peace'=not to agree with the truths and goods of the Church. . .

which inmosty affects the delights of the loves, and which is called peace, be given with any others than those who can be inmosty conjoined . . .

[E.] 999². From love truly conjugal there is power and protection against the Hells, because against the evils and falsities which ascend from the Hells . . . Hence it is that through conjugal love man has peace, which is the inmost joy of the heart from security from the Hells in every way, and from protection from the infestations of evil and falsity thence.

1003³. In place of the innocence and peace which those have who live in ehaste marriages, there are deceit and no peace with those who live in adulteries.

D. Wis. iii.1². While man is in the womb, he is in innocence . . . and in like manner is in a state of peace. The reason is . . . that the Divine love and the Divine wisdom are innocence itself and peace itself.

3. In spring and summer, heat co-operates with light, and light with heat, and causes vegetation and germination. In like manner in a state of peace and tranquillity, love co-operates with wisdom, and wisdom with love, and produces and forms. This is done in the embryo and in man.

Coro. liii. In this New Church there will be spiritual peace . . .

21¹⁰. The goal of redemption and the palm of the redeemed is spiritual peace.

Peacock. Pavo.

T. 487². Over it we have strewed feathers borrowed from the wings of peacocks.

E. 514⁷. 'Ivories, apes, and peacocks' (1 Kings x.22) = the truths and goods of the External Church.

1200². The peacock is a bird of an intermediate character, which appears in the World of Spirits.

Coro. 30². The natural man separated from the spiritual is like . . . a screech owl beside a peacock.

Peak. Cacumen.

See SUMMIT.

A. 9422. By the peak of Sinai, where Jehovah was, (Ex. xix.20) is signified the highest or inmost of the Law or Word . . .

9434. By Mount Sinai is signified Heaven; and, by its highest part, which is called the head, and the peak, is signified its inmost.

10606. 'The head,' or peak of Mount Sinai = the Inmost Heaven, where is Divine love. H.188(c).

D. 5182. The mountains (in Heaven) are elevated even to a peak; and those who are in the highest of the mountain are the best of that kind . . . The peak is in the middle. De Conj. 70.

5232. The peaks of the mountains became continuous . . .

Pear. Pirum.

T. 109³. The state of the Church before the Lord's Advent may be compared to the skin of . . . a pear, etc., and its flavour. But the state of the Church after His Advent may be compared to the inner parts of these fruits, and to their flavour.

7620^e. (The bird) became stony; at first of a pearly colour . . .

H. 307². Its 'twelve gates' which were 'of pearls' = introductory truths; for pearls = such truths.

R. 727. 'With pearls' (Rev. xvii.4) = the Knowledges of good and truth which are of the Word with them. By 'pearls,' in the spiritual sense, are signified the Knowledges of good and truth both celestial and spiritual, which are from the Word; in special, from the sense of its letter . . . Ill.

—e. 'The one precious pearl' = Knowledge concerning the Lord.

772². 'Pearls' (Rev. xviii.12) correspond to the Knowledges of (spiritual goods and truths).

899. 'Pearls' (Rev. xxi.21) = the Knowledges of truth and good. Through these is man introduced into the Church.

916. 'The twelve gates were twelve pearls; and each of the gates was of one pearl' (id.) = that the acknowledgment and Knowledge of the Lord conjoin into a one all the Knowledges of truth and good which are from the Word, and introduce into the Church. . . 'Twelve pearls' = the Knowledges of truth and good in sum. Hence it was that the gates were 'pearls.' The reason 'each of the gates was of one pearl,' is that all the Knowledges of truth and good, which are signified by 'gates,' and by 'pearls,' relate to one Knowledge, which is their containant, and which one Knowledge is the Knowledge of the Lord. Ex.

—e. 'The one precious pearl' = the acknowledgment and Knowledge of the Lord.

T. 642. It would be like a pearl fastened to a swine's snout.

D. 3213. A pearly aura.

3247. It was then like a pearly bird.

3496². A pearly influx.

3875². Knowledges which do not come forth from affection are like such inanimate pearly birds.

—e. Such is the pearly bird. 3883^e.

3881². To speak without affection is also a pearly bird. . . For a pearly bird = thought without affection.

E. 717⁶. 'The twelve pearls' of which were the gates = ultimate Divine truths, which are the truths of the sense of the letter, upon which the doctrine of that Church is founded, and through which man is introduced as through gates. The reason the 'foundations' are said to be of precious stones, and the 'gates,' of 'pearls,' is that the sense of the letter contains in it a spiritual sense, thus the light of Heaven . . .

S40^o. 'Pearls' (Matt.xiii.)=Knowledges, and also truths themselves; and 'one precious one'=the acknowledgment of the Lord; and 'to sell all that he had'=to alienate all things which are of the love of proprium; and 'to buy it'=to procure for ourselves that Divine truth. 863.

1044. 'With pearls' (Rev.xvii.4)=the appearance in externals as if they were in the Knowledges of good and truth, when yet in internals they are in the knowledge of evil and falsity. 'Pearls'=the Knowledges of good and truth; and thence, in the opposite sense, the knowledge of evil and falsity, from which they have cunning and malice. 1167.

—³. That 'pearls'=the Knowledges of good and truth. Ill.

— . 'Pearls' (Matt.xiii.)=the Knowledges of good and truth, for these are the truths of the natural man; and 'one precious pearl'=Knowledge concerning the Lord, and concerning His Divine. That 'going away he sold all things he had, and bought it'=that he rejected proprium, in order to receive life from the Lord.

—⁴. 'Swine'=filthy loves such as are in the Hells of adulterers. As these are in the infernal marriage . . . they utterly reject truths and goods and their Knowledges . . . and therefore it is said, 'Cast ye not your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet . . .' (Matt.vii.6).

1142. 'Of precious stone and of pearl' (Rev.xviii.12) =the profaned Knowledges of truth and good from the Word. 'Precious stone'=the Knowledges of truth . . . and 'pearl,' the Knowledges of good. And, as these Knowledges are scientific truths or truths of the natural man, therefore by 'precious stones' are signified the truths through which are goods; and by 'pearls,' the goods through which are truths . . .

Pearl. Perla.

T. 459¹³. Like a pearl which looks like the eye of a boiled fish.

D. 3925. Their speech fell as it were into pearls. There was seen from them an aura as it were of smaller pearls of various colours.

Pearl. Unio.

Pedigree. Stemma.

M. 250^e. In the Heavens . . . virgins given in marriage do not know of what pedigree they are.

T. 300. No one there retains the name he had received from his father or ancestors.

320. Proclaim that they are noblemen from an ancient pedigree.

724^e. Those who derive their pedigree from the Lord through regeneration.

Peel. Decorticare.

Peeling. Decortatio.

A. 4015. 'He peeled in them white peelings' (Gen. xxx.37)=the disposition of the power of interior truth; (for) 'to peel,' and 'peelings'=the drawings off of exterior things, in order that interior things may be laid open. 4016.

Peel. Putamen.

A. 10194. Like a shell without a kernel.

10276⁸. Like the peel of a tree, flower, fruit, or seed, without their interiors.

T. 76³. As shells encompass kernels.

Peeled. Expilatus.

E. 331⁵. By 'a people pulled asunder and peeled' (Is.xviii.7) are signified those with whom truths have been taken away, changed, or perverted, by those who are in falsities of doctrine.

Peg. Pavillus.

A. 8990^e. That 'a peg,' or 'nail,'=affixion or adjunction. Ill.

9777. 'All the pins thereof, and all the pins of the court, shall be of brass' (Ex.xxvii.19)=all the things which conjoin together and strengthen both Heavens, the Middle and the Ultimate, through good; (for) 'pins'=things which conjoin together and strengthen. —², Ill.

De Verbo 7³. The winged horse, or Pegasus, =the understanding illustrated by the Spiritual.

Pekin. Pekin. D.3066.

Peleg. Peleg.

A. 1137. The internal worship (of the second Ancient Church) is 'Peleg' (Gen.x.25). 1240. 1242.

1345. 'And begat Peleg' (Gen.xi.16)=a derivation from (the Church 'Eber'). Peleg was a nation, so called from him as its father, by which is signified external worship. The reason 'Peleg,' here,=external worship, follows from the series . . . thus from his derivation. In the preceding chapter there is another meaning from the signification of the name . . . because there, he, with his brother Joktan, represented that Church.

Pelican. Pelicanus.

Coro. 40. The man who has religion, is, in spiritual things, like a pelican feeding its young with its blood.

Pellicacy. Pellicatus.

Concubine, Mistress. Pellex.

M. 342. Only those Mohammedans are elevated into their higher Heaven who renounce concubines . . .

343. In their lower Heaven they live with a number of wives and concubines as in the world.

345. Polygamous love is the love of the sex, because . . . it is allowed to take concubines in addition to wives; and thus . . . is the love of lasciviousness.

370^e. The concubines and wives of polygamists are, after death, for the most part set free . . .

377. That there is also a jealousy in regard to concubines . . . Ex.

— . Jealousy in regard to concubines springs from the externals . . .

—². An invitation to love by a concubine does not so (chill the whole man). Ex.

453. They make one evil out of all evils, and mix them together . . . In like manner do they with the love of the sex, with fornication, with pellicacy, with adultery . . .

459. That with those who . . . cannot as yet enter into marriage, and on account of salacity cannot restrain their lusts, the Conjugal may be conserved, if the love of the sex be restricted to one mistress. Ex. D.6054.

— . There seems to be no other refuge and as it were asylum, than the ascription—addictio—of a mistress, who in French is called maitresse.

— . It is better that (the springing fountain of manhood) be reserved for a wife; but if on account of the unbridled force of lust it cannot, an intermediate method is needed, by which conjugal love may in the meantime be prevented from perishing. That this is pellicacy, is favoured by these things. (Six reasons stated.)

—⁵. In pellicacy, which is a more ordinate and sane fornication, he can learn and see (these) distinctions.

—⁶. By pellicacy, also, no access is given to the four kinds of lusts which are in the highest degree destructive of conjugal love . . . But these things are not said to those who can restrain the heat of lust; nor to those who can enter into marriage as soon as they arrive at manhood . . .

460. That pellicacy is better than wandering lust, provided it is not engaged in—pacta—with more than one, nor with a virgin or unimpaired woman, nor with a married woman, and it is kept separate from conjugal love. Ex.

— . The reason pellicacy is not to be engaged in with more than one, is that with more than one there is what is polygamous within, which induces on man a merely natural state . . .

—². Therefore, he who adjoins to himself a virgin as a mistress, can indeed cohabit with her, and thus initiate her into the friendship of love; but still with the constant intention, if she does not commit adultery, that she be or become his wife.

—³. That pellicacy is not to be engaged in with a married woman, because this is adultery, is evident.

—⁴. The reason why the love of pellicacy is to be kept separate from conjugal love, is that these loves are distinct, and therefore are not to be commingled. For the love of pellicacy is a love unchaste, natural, and external, whereas the love of marriage is chaste, spiritual, and internal. The love of pellicacy makes distinct the souls of two persons, and conjoins only the sensuous things of the body; whereas the love of marriage unites their souls . . .

—⁵. The love of pellicacy enters only into the understanding, and into the things which depend on the understanding; whereas the love of marriage enters also into the will . . . and therefore if the love of pellicacy becomes the love of marriage, the man cannot recede from any right, without a violation of the conjugal union; and if he does recede, and marries another, conjugal love perishes in the breach of it. It is to be known that the love of pellicacy is kept separate from conjugal love, by his not promising marriage to the mistress, and by his not leading her into any hope of marriage. Yet it is better that the torch of the love of the sex be first kindled with a wife.

462. In the preceding chapter . . . by pellicacy was meant the conjunction of an unmarried man with a woman under a compact . . . Those who do not distinguish genera, use the words (pellicacy and concubinage) promiscuously . . . But, as they are two genera, and the word pellicacy is suitable to the former, because a mistress is an adulteress—moecha . . . therefore, for the sake of separation, an ante-nuptial compact with a woman is signified by pellicacy . . .

T. 434^e. Occurs.

E. 376²³. 'His wives, and his concubines' (Dan.v.3).

654⁶⁹. 'She doated above their concubines . . .' (Ezek. xxiii.20)=the cupidities of love towards these things.

Penalty. Poena.

See under CHASTISE, FINE, PUNISH, TORMENT, and TORTURE.

A. 391^e. Falsity and evil have in them the penalty of falsity and evil; consequently, the fear of the penalty.

592². Evil returns to him who does evil, and becomes the evil of penalty . . . But still the Lord turns all the evil of penalty into good . . .

696. Such is the equilibrium . . . that the evil itself punishes itself; so that in evil there is the penalty of the evil. In like manner in falsity . . . Hence each person induces on himself the penalty and torment . . . But as the evil Spirit himself rushes into it, the Lord turns all the penalty and torment into good, and into some use; for there never can be any penalty, unless there is with the Lord an end of use . . . 1011^e.

828². (Such seducers) undergo a most grievous penalty in the other life. Des. D.2708.

960. By withdrawing into a more subtle nature . . . they suppose themselves safe from all penalty. But these, too, not only undergo the penalties of rending . . . but are also conglutinated . . . and the more they desire to be loosened from one another, the more closely they are fastened. This penalty is attended with a more intense torment, because it responds to their more hidden deceits.

961. Those who use the words of Scripture in jests . . . undergo the penalties of rending, until they desist . . .

7643³. When the Lord is ordinating the Heavens . . . evil Spirits rush more strongly into evils and falsities, and their penalties . . .

7721². When the evil are being devastated, it is often given them to perceive whence they have the evils of penalty, that they may know . . . themselves to be the cause.

7788^e. Hence the evil there undergo penalties, until at last they . . . do not infest the good . . .

8214. The evil (thus) cast themselves into the penalty of retaliation . . . Sig.

8232^e. Until at last such an ardour is assuaged, from fear of the penalty.

8799. 'To be stoned' = the penalty of falsity and of violated truth. The reason this is the penalty for those who from self-confidence ascend to the Divine in a Heaven which is above, is that then all their intelligence perishes.

8970. What is the penalty, and what the restitution. Tr.

9011. A state of exemption from penalty. Sig. and Ex.

9102. A corresponding penalty to much. Sig. and Ex.

9103. A corresponding penalty to the full. Sig. and Ex.

9173. No penalty. Sig. and Ex.

9437². 'Forty stripes' (Deut.xxv.3) = penalty to the full.

10219. Lest there be the penalty of evil in doing goods as of one's self. Sig. and Ex.

10618^e. There, the penalty adheres to its evil, and as it were inheres in it.

509. The penalties in the World of Spirits are manifold. There is no respect of persons . . . Every evil carries its penalty with it ; they are conjoined together ; and therefore he who is in evil is also in the penalty of the evil. But still no one pays the penalty on account of the evils he has done in the world ; but on account of the evils he does then. But it comes to the same thing. Ex.

—². The fear of the penalty is the only means in that (second state after death) of mastering evils . . . But good Spirits are never punished . . . because their evils do not return. Ex.

543². (The infernals) are ruled through fears of penalties . . . The penalties there are manifold, more lenient or more grievous according to the evils. For the most part . . . the more malignant . . . are able to keep the rest in compliance by means of penalties and the consequent terrors. . . The sole means of restraining the violence and fury of those in the Hells is the fear of the penalty. 581.

550. Evil Spirits are severely punished in the World of Spirits, in order that by the penalties they may be deterred from doing evils. . . Yet nothing of the penalty there is from the Lord, but is from the evil itself; for evil is so conjoined with its own penalty, that they cannot be separated. For the infernal crew desire nothing more than . . . to inflict penalties . . . and do inflict penalties on everyone who is not protected by the Lord. Therefore, when evil is done from an evil heart, as it rejects all protection by the Lord, they rush upon him . . . and punish him. (Ex. by penalties in this world.)

574². After the infestations (the infernals) begin to treat cruelly (their new associate) by means of penalties . . .

581. Without the fear of a penalty . . . evil would rush into furies, and the whole (Hell) would be dispersed, like a kingdom on earth where there is no law, and no penalty.

P. 136. That no one is reformed by means of threats and penalties, because they compel. Gen.art.

—⁴. (Thus) it is hurtful to compel men to Divine worship by threats and penalties.

139³. The fear of civil penalties and of external ecclesiastical penalties does not close (the internal of thought). Ex.

—⁴. The fear of infernal penalties does indeed invade the external of thought, but only for some moments, hours, or days . . .

249³. Still, every evil is followed by its own penalty : it is as if on an evil there were inscribed its own penalty, which the wicked man pays after death.

R. 762. Just retribution and penalty after death : that then the evils and falsities by which they have seduced . . . others will return upon them . . . Sig. and Ex.

763². These are the retributions and penalties (after death) which are meant . . . by 'the torments in Hell.'

T. 79⁸. The delight (of the demons) was changed into undelight, because, by means of penalties and the fear of them, they were restrained from their former delight . . .

—^e. The nature contracted in the world cannot be changed or expelled by means of penalties. Whenever it is expelled by them, it recurs after a short lapse of time.

407. Charity is exercised towards the evil by means of penalties, etc.

531^e. He would be punished after death, and this until he did not do evil for fear of the penalty.

D. 232. The penalty of witches. Des.

589. (The penalty of the tun for the evil Spirits of Jupiter.) Ex.

592. On the penalty of women in especial, who lead a delicate and idle life.

654. On the penalty of those who want to counterfeit holy things. (Ulceration, itch, leprosy, lice.)

1377. The Spirit who endured this penalty said that he wants to desist . . . but, as it inheres, he cannot . . . and therefore in order that he may be able to do so he was compelled by means of penalties. Such or the like penalties have now been inflicted on him ten times; I have seen him before, under the veil; but he still insists. It is now seventeen centuries—sacculu—that he has been such . . .

1385. That same Spirit . . . was brought to this lake, to see the penalties of those miserable ones, and to choose one . . .

1390. The representations there, as the penalties of the miserable ones, appear to be phantasies; but are actual; because those who suffer the penalties enjoy sense. They feel them; and are tortured exactly as if they were in the body . . .

1485. On the penalty of whirling. Ex.

1486. It is the penalty of those who do not say what they think . . .

1492a^e. In the other life there are never wanting kinds of penalties answering to every crime.

1494. It is the Angels who regulate and relax the penalty, or permit it to extend, according to the pleasure of the Spirits (in revenge).

1500. What the penalty of the horror of darkness effects. Ex.

1663. Concerning the penalty of lasciviousness. (Revolution round a cord.) Compare 1694.

1696^e. The penalty thus evolved itself from the offence.

1798. Concerning the penalties of those who relate to stagnant humours in the brain.

1865. (The penalties of those who kill men deceitfully.)

1883. Concerning the penalty of certain who are immersed as it were in deep clouds.

1979. One of the penalties (of those who hold to the common conjunction of women and men) is that their lascivious members are burned as with fire . . .

2206². (As they could not restrain themselves) shame, fear, horror, and like things, are struck into them by means of penalties . . . so that they can be different . . .

2240. The penalty of those who are well endowed with cleverness, yet study only those things which serve for perversion to man.

2719. This is the reason why the infernal torments (of those who are delighted puellas parvas stuprare) are more grievous than the infernal penalties of all other sins. See 2711.

2776. That evil has the penalty in itself; in fact, that of retaliation. Ex.

2793. What the penalties in the other life effect. Ex.

— . There are manifold penalties, more grievous and prolonged according to each person's nature contracted in the life of the body; but the penalties effect this: that for a period of time they inject fears, shames, horrors, for such things . . . But still they do not change the nature . . . but the penalties superadd those things by which they can be withdrawn from such evils.

[D.] 286. There was one who supposed that infernal penalties will last to eternity . . . to whom it was shown that there can never be any penalty in the other life without an end . . . namely, that by means of the penalty and torments he may be tempered so as to be able to be in some good Society.

2880. That evil Spirits could not live, unless they served for temptations, penalties, and the like, from which comes good. Ex.

2905. He was told that the penalty of such things is one of retaliation ; and therefore the evil Spirits dragged him to themselves, and tortured him with the like (pains that he had inflicted on others by sorcery). 2913.

3038². From these (examples in nature) it is evident that the evil of penalty which they suppose to come from another, is from themselves ; for there is such a response.

3112. For their mind (is ruled by) the penalty . . .

3113^e. (The penalty of inflation for those who are proud. Des.)

3179. Concerning interior and other penalties.

3228. He was told that he knew their penalty according to the laws of the earth . . .

3297. I reflected upon their cruel penalty : how they treat the (Spirits of that Earth).

3298. Their penalty is, that they wrap him up in a woollen cloth . . . holding in their hands the knot, and twisting it . . .

3303. While the penalty of laceration was going on, angelic choirs were in the same place as the penalty . . .

3427. The drunkenness of Spirits is one of the infernal penalties, but not a hard one . . .

3807. (The Quaker Spirit who called himself the Holy Spirit) was revolved round an axis . . . into a thin plate . . . which is the penalty for saying that they are from eternity.

3849. External bonds induce such a nature . . . that they appear as if they were upright, when yet, inwardly, they are wolves . . . Hence it is evident what the penalties in the other life [effect], which at last induce as it were a nature, so that the Spirit can be detained from evils.

3859^e. To insidiate against man while asleep in the night is abominable ; and therefore such attract a penalty to themselves.

3932. When wickedness comes to its height, they precipitate themselves into the penalties ; for . . . the equilibrium then perishes, and so they precipitate themselves . . .

4055. Whenever a Spirit attempts to rush into greater evils than he has acquired by actuality in his life . . . he at once runs into the penalty. 4224.

4110. He thus undergoes not one kind of penalty, but many ; and whenever it occurs . . . he is punished with the penalty which conforms with his evil. But still there remains one kind of penalty, and consequently one Hell, which is that of His reigning evil.

4111. Such penalties last a long time, through many years, and through many ages . . . and are attended with vastation . . . Thus he continually descends to the ultimate of his penalty.

4194. The penalty of certain : that they are sent among the auriculars. Ex.

4236. Concerning the penalties of those who disquiet man in his sleep. Ex.

4238. The penalty advanced around me, to others . . . and all were found . . .

4239. Other (Sirens) want . . . to derive the penalties upon the punishers . . .

4276. The evil of penalty flows from order. If there were no evil of penalty, order would perish . . .

4277. When they are in the penalty, they (most dexterously) substitute others . . . There are many such . . . they undergo the penalty of rending or reverberation, and are at the same time held in this, that they throw the blame upon others ; nor are they liberated from the penalty until such a disposition ceases.

4298. On the penalty of those who want to do violence to infants. (Circumgyration.)

4308. The reason of there being a penalty (for Spirits who speak well). 4310.

—^e. Until . . . they are amended by means of penalties.

4326. Concerning penalties. I have heard the penalties of reverberation and collision more frequently than I can relate, for hours . . . Wonderful to say, all who have been in fault are found ; and those not in fault, although summoned and in the midst of the penalty, are not hurt by the penalty . . .

4327. There was a certain new penalty, by means of a species of circumrotation of a number ; thus as it were of the confounding of a number together, which they said was grievous. It was for Sirens . . .

4328. The penalties take place in this way. He who is being punished is held . . . by his companions in a like cupidity, and is explored as to how much he inheres in it, and as to how much he has receded through the penalty ; nor is he liberated from the penalty until he does recede, and becomes better . . .

4361^e. Such is the penalty of hypocrites, and there is their Hell. (The pyramidal sack.)

4369. How expeditiously penalties are inflicted. (Collisions, and breaking of the bones.)

4468. Concerning a certain infernal penalty. (A magical Spirit is made pendulous.)

4472^e. When the horror of the penalty prevails (over their delight), it is then the consummation (of evil Spirits).

4478. The Sirens no longer cared for the penalties, but eluded them . . . But they were told that all penalties can be indefinitely aggravated, even so as to last for thousands of years . . . The more obstinate they are, the more grievous things they suffer . . .

4514. She at last eluded all the penalties . . .

4651. [A discourse] with Spirits, that they induce the penalty on themselves ; and that the penalty is enjoined with the evil. Ex.

5200. There are some who cannot be amended by any penalties, because they have imbued hatred, revenge, etc., from childhood, and have retained them to old age. (Their terrible condition in Hell.)

5205. To (these gulfs in the extremes of each world) are sent those who cannot be mastered by penalties . . .

5494². Hence other (infernal) who had also endeavoured to rise up, lamented . . . that if he wandered about free, they would run into his grievous penalties . . . Hence it is evident that they cannot rise up out of the Hells for fear of the penalty . . .

5932². The judge (in Hell) adjudged them to undergo a penalty . . . He tolerated all things . . . provided they did no evil to anyone . . .

5983². After many penalties, he at last suffered the last and hardest; but still in this penalty he said that he would rather die than desist from killing me.

6031^e. All the penalties in the Hells are for no other cause, than that evils may be actually opened and known, and they are punished until they do not want them.

6110². (The English lords) are punished with the penalty of tearing to pieces—dilaceratio, which is one of the most grievous ones. They said that after [undergoing] the penalties they do not know whether their members cohere together; and they lie long in bed.

D. Min. 4777. Reflection is given (an evil man after death) by means of many penalties, until, at last, they are averse to do evils, especially to the Societies where they have suffered. This reflection is external, and they are then kept in the Hells . . . They endure the penalties so long, and so grievously, that at last this reflection arises as it were of itself.

4791. (These infernal) Spirits remain in the World of Spirits quite a long time . . . in order to tempt Spirits, and this until the measures of their evil are filled. Meanwhile, they endure many grievous penalties, but such that they are not completely deterred. At last, when their measures are being infilled, they endure more grievous, and, at last, the most grievous penalties, and this in quite a long series, on the way to Hell . . . At last, they are cast into Hell, so that they may there chastise and punish each other . . . and become such that they at once see penalties if they venture out . . . In this state they become more prudent, and see those in the World of Spirits . . .

E. 556^s. This law (of doing to others as we would they should do unto us) is in Heaven . . . and thence every evil has with it a corresponding penalty, which is called the penalty of the evil; and it is in it as if it were conjoined with the evil. From this flows the penalty of retaliation. Ex.

638¹⁷. To avert the evil of penalty, is contrary to order . . . Evil would increase until there was no good left.

647². He who is not the cause of the evil is not the cause of the penalty . . .

971³. So those who do evils are driven by the penalties to reject them as of themselves. If they do not do so as of themselves, the penalties are not conducive to anything.

1119. Infernal penalty in the same proportion. Sig. and Ex. . . For all infernal torment, or penalty, corresponds exactly to the evils . . .

1133². An evil Spirit is driven by penalties not to speak or do evil, and such he continues so long as he remains in the place where the penalty is floating before his mind; but as soon as the fear of the penalty recedes, he is evil as before.

1150⁵. Fears which compel the internals of man . . . relate, on the one side, to the penalties of Hell . . . But the fear of the penalties of Hell is external [fear] of the thought and will.

1151^e. Evil does not recede through the compulsion which is effected through penalties; nor, afterwards, through the fear of them.

1155³. That . . . man is not reformed . . . through penalties. Ex.

—³. By fears and penalties the external of the body is compelled, which consists in speaking and doing. This latter can be compelled . . . but the external of the spirit is not to be compelled . . .

1163. While they were in externals, from the dread of infernal penalties. Sig.

1164². With those not reformed, evils are removed through penalties . . . When an evil person undergoes penalties, as is the case in Hell, he is kept in them until it is perceived that, from himself, he does not want them . . . If he is not punished even to this intention and will, he remains in his evil. Nevertheless the evil is not extirpated . . .

1165^e. After a time has passed, they are cast into Hell, when they are compelled not to do evils through penalties; but the penalties do not take away the will, intention, and derivative thought of evil; they take away only the acts.

See COMMON PEOPLE, and under NATION.

A. 1259. 'Nation' = good, or evil ; and 'people,' truth, or falsity ; and this constantly. Ill. 1260. 1672.

—⁴. 'Kings,' being of peoples, = truths.

—⁷. As those in faith are called 'peoples' . . . the Lord's royalty is predicated of peoples . . . which was represented in the Jewish Church . . . After they had received kings, they became a people. 1672.

1316. 'The people are one' (Gen. xi. 6) = that they all had the truth of faith together. Ex.

1719. 'Women and people' (Gen. xiv. 16) = both goods and truths.

2015⁵. 'Peoples,' and 'sons' = truths.

2058. 'Peoples' (Gen. xvii. 14) = truths ; thus 'peoples' = those who live in truths, that is, the Angels . . .

2069. 'Kings of peoples . . .' (ver.16) = truths from conjoined truths and goods. . . 'Peoples'=truths; in general, all spiritual things; for kings are predicated from peoples . . .

2349. 'All the people from the extreme' (Gen.xix.4) = all and each one of falsities.

2567³. 'People,' and 'priest' (Is.xxiv.2) = interior truths and goods.

2714². The spiritual are signified by 'the peoples whom He loves' (Deut.xxxiii.3).

2826⁵. 'People' is predicated of those who are in the truth of faith.

2928. 'The people of the Land,' where Israel and Jerusalem are treated of, = the Spiritual Church . . . Ill.

2943². Hence, when, in place of 'nation,' 'people' is mentioned, there is signified the truth of faith.

2947. 'Sons of the people' (Gen.xxiii.11) = those first initiated into truths.

2952. 'The people of the Land' (ver.13) = those of the Spiritual Church; and also the truths of this Church.

3255. 'To be gathered to his peoples' is to go away from those among whom he has been, and to pass to his own; thus, here, to represent no longer. (Continued under GATHER.)

3272. 'Twelve princes of their peoples' (Gen.xxv.16) = all the primary things of that Spiritual Church. . . 'Peoples' = those in truths . . .

3294. 'Two peoples shall be separated from thy viscera' (ver.23) = that truth is thence. . . It is said 'two peoples,' because truth is interior and exterior. Ex.

3295. 'People shall prevail over people' (id.) = that at first truth shall be superior to the good of truth. Ex.

3401. 'People' (Gen.xxvi.11) = those of the Spiritual Church.

3581. 'Peoples shall serve thee' (Gen.xxvii.29) = the truths of the Church; 'and peoples shall bow to thee' = the truths of good [shall do so]. . . The 'peoples' first named = the truths of the Church, which are called spiritual truths; and the 'peoples' named the second time = the truths of good, which are spiritual goods . . . (Therefore they are different words in the Hebrew.)

3669. 'Thou shalt be for a company of peoples' (Gen.xxviii.3) = an abundance (of truths). Ex.

3727^e. 'To kill the people with the sword' (Ezek.xxvi.11) = to destroy truths by falsity.

4250. 'He halved the people who were with him' (Gen.xxxii.7) = the preparation and disposing of truths . . . in the Natural to receive the good represented by Esau.

4385. 'The people who are with me' (Gen.xxxiii.15) = some things of the truth of good.

4468. 'We shall be one people' (Gen.xxxiv.16) = conjunction as to doctrine also; (for) 'people' = the truth of the Church, and thus doctrine. 4485.

4557. 'He and all the people with him' (Gen.xxxv.6) = with all things which are in the Natural. . . 'People' = truths; thus 'the people who are with him' = the truths of that good; and, as all things in the Natural relate to goods and truths, these words signify with all things there.

4619. 'Was gathered to his people' (ver.29) = was now among the things of the Divine Natural. (Continued under GATHER.)

—e. Thus 'people' = the truths in which are the concordant Societies, or the Societies which are in these truths.

4973⁶. 'Kingdom' is predicated of Divine truth; and therefore the Lord is called . . . 'King of peoples'; for by 'peoples' are signified those who are in truth. Refs.

5135⁹. 'A people great and mighty' (Joel ii.5) = falsities fighting against truths.

5312. 'Upon thy mouth all my people shall kiss' (Gen.xli.40) = that everything in the Natural shall be under obedience to him. . . By 'people' are signified truths; thus, in the Natural, the Knowledges of good and truth, and scientifics; for these are the truths of the Natural.

5365. 'The people cried to Pharaoh for bread' (ver.55) = the need of good for truth . . . 'People' = truth. Ex.

5418. 'He sold to all the people of the land' (Gen.xlii.6) = that all appropriation is from him. . . 'The people of the land' = the truths of the Church; here, in the Natural.

6146. 'He transferred that people to cities' (Gen.xlvii.21) = that scientific truths were referred to doctrinal things. 'People' = truths; here, scientific truths; because they are predicated of the people of Egypt. Ex.

6152. 'Joseph said to the people' (ver.23) = the influx of the Internal into scientific truths.

6232. 'I will give thee for a company of peoples' (Gen.xlviii.4) = increase ad indefinitum. 'A company of peoples' = truths from good ad indefinitum; for 'peoples' = truths; and 'a company,' abundance. Ex.

Perceive, Apperceive. Appercipere.

Perception, Apperception. Apperceptio.

Perceptibly. Apperceptibiliter.

A. 1614. He who does not apperceive [that] what is good and true is from the Lord, is no longer in Heaven.

1640^e. In the other life, where perception far surpasses such apperception.

1757^e. Hence the mental view, apperception, and utterance of singular things is more prompt (after death).

1769². I apperceived . . . that he was lifted up.

1820². As soon as evil Spirits . . . apperceive as it were by smell anything which is delightful to a man . . .

1860. Those who feel hatred apperceive a kind of delight . . . in it.

1884. I apperceived that I had been in a state like . . .

1914². When anything contrary to the truth of conscience inflows . . . they not only apperceive it, but . . .

1937⁴. The pains . . . take away the apperception of the . . . freedom.

1944. Unless he can apperceive and feel this, he has not anything rational . . .

1953². The interior hearing apprehends; the interior sight then perceives; and thence through the hearing there is an apperception of the meaning . . .

2094^e. Cannot inflow perceptibly into man's idea.

2144². Conscience is a species of perception; for to act against or according to conscience, is nothing else than to apperceive thence . . .

2150. 'To see'=to understand and apperceive . . . 3132. 5274. 5639. 6675. 8460.

2215. Human rational truth . . . apperceived that it was not what it ought to be. Sig.

2294. I have often apperceived their resistance.

2593. They could apperceive the interiors of my thoughts.

3138. Influx of the light of Heaven into the things of the light of the world produces illustration, and at the same time apperception. If there is correspondence, [it produces] an apperception of what is true; if not, an apperception of what is false as if it were true. But there can be no illustration and apperception without affection. 3336².

3223². Unless the light of Heaven inflowed, no one would have any apperception . . .

3427⁴. The light of truth from the Lord cannot (then) inflow, and give them to apperceive that it is so . . .

3428^e. The simple who are in good . . . can apperceive in a moment . . . They have a general sense of the apperception of truth.

3451. 'In seeing to see'=to apperceive, and thus to know for certain.

3525. All apperception in the natural world is from the Rational.

3549. The apperception of natural truth. Sig.

— . 'To say'=to perceive; here, to apperceive, because from the Natural. 3609.

3570^o. The Rational . . . is above the sphere of the apperception (of the Natural).

3609. A state of the apperception of the affection of truth from influx through Divine truth. Sig. and Ex.

4245. He would then apperceive in what way falsities had intermingled themselves.

4256^e. This cause in no wise appears to man, because it is above the sphere of his apperception.

4283^e. Light as of dawn then appears to him, if he is in such a state that he can apperceive it.

4627^o. Conscience . . . is the interior apperception of good and truth . . .

4652. The communication of the thought and apperception of the spirit with the speech and hearing of the body . . . The apperception of speech is nothing but the hearing of the spirit . . . When a man is listening, the apperception appears no otherwise than as the hearing in the ear.

4856. 'To tell'=apperception; thus communication. 5264. 5601, Ex.

5119^o. Through this influx (of interior things into exterior ones) comes apperception. . . The interior man sees and apperceives in the exterior what is going on outside the latter.

5130. That which reigns universally is not apperceived, except when the thought is determined thereto.

5141. That it would turn out well, is an apperception from the Sensuous, which apperception is relatively obscure. There actually are an apperception from the Sensuous, an apperception from the interior Natural, and an apperception from the Rational. For when man is in interior thought from affection, and abstracts the mind from sensuous things . . . he is in rational apperception . . . But when man is in exterior thought . . . his apperception is from the interior Natural . . . But when man is in pleasures, and in the delights of the love of the world, and also of the love of self, the apperception is from the Sensuous . . . The more exterior the apperception is, the more obscure it is . . .

5247^o. The holiness in each particular of the Word does not appear to the understanding . . . but still, through influx from Heaven, it does to the apperception with him who believes the Word to be holy.

5254. 'Thou hearest a dream to interpret it'=the faculty of apperceiving what there is in the things

7638. 'To say'=to apperceive. Refs.

—^e. From the presence of Truth Divine there is apperception. Sig.

7650. 'To look back'=the deprivation of apperception; for man is deprived of apperception when he looks back or turns away from the truth which is from the Divine.

7877. The apperception of that truth by those who inflict damnation. Sig. and Ex.

8443. The presence of the Lord in truth accommodated to apperception. Sig. and Ex.

8462². So long as (these) delights dominate, interior good cannot come to the apperception.

8707. The immediate influx of truth from the Lord, from which [comes] not the apperception of truth; but the light which gives the faculty of understanding.

8870³. Apperceive that externals are to be taken away from them . . .

8920⁴. If truth Divine appeared as it is in Heaven . . . at the first view, and at the first apperception, man would reject it . . .

9035. Mental view takes place by means of spiritual truth, and is apperception.

9144. So long as the fires of evil are kept shut up in the will, the understanding is in light, and thence in the apperception of good and truth. But when those fires shed their light into the understanding, then the former light is dissipated, and the man is darkened in respect to the apperception of good and truth.

9224². The truths of faith come to man's apperception, but not the good of charity, before he has been regenerated. For . . . the good of charity inflows through an internal way . . . and therefore does not come to the apperception.

9336³. This has been confirmed by many things which have come to [my] apperception.

9340³. Scientific truths are in man's memory. When they are taken out thence they come to the apperception.

9407³. The Word in the letter is no otherwise attended to and apperceived in Heaven . . .

—^e. He is then led by the Lord to apperceive and imbue the truths which are suited to him . . .

9780². When man lives according to the Word, the Lord insinuates good into his life; hence the man apperceives it, and feels it . . . Otherwise it does not appear, because it is not apperceived.

10057². It is known that the things seen with the eyes and heard with the ears are apperceived within the man . . .

10396. The Israelitish nation, when it did not apperceive in the Word anything from Heaven. Sig. and Ex. 'To see,' when predicated of the understanding of the Word, = apperception. Refs.

10402. Representative insignia of obedience, and of the apperception of the delights of external loves. Sig. and Ex. . . 'The ears'=obedience and apperception. Refs.

10454. The apperception of the quality of the interiors of that nation. Sig. . . 'To hear'=survey and apperception.

10574. The apperception of internal Divine truth in external. Sig.

10685². This interior resistance does not then come to man's apperception. Ex.

10692. The apperception of those who are in the externals of the Church, etc., without the internals. Sig.

H. 130. The natural man does not apperceive that thought.

246². They suppose (this), because it is so apperceived.

251^e. Hence it was apperceived what Angels they were . . .

254². He afterwards apperceives and acknowledges that he is a Spirit . . .

282^e. I say this from the apperception of it.

299^e. I have apperceived its increase and decrease . . .

322³. He apperceived in his own way . . .

326. When they apperceive (this) they are ashamed.

336. It was apperceived that their influx is tender . . .

343. I have often apperceived (this).

356². The things which man thinks spiritually, he does not apperceive . . . But when he comes into the Spiritual World, he does not apperceive the things he had thought naturally, but those he had thought spiritually.

410. This it was given to apperceive by communication.

423. Man can think from the understanding, and thence apperceive what is true and also what is good, but cannot think it from the will, unless he wills and does it.

434. Apperception, which is internal hearing, is possible only in a substance which is an organic form.

441². I apperceived that I had been in such a state . . .

450. The Spirit apperceives no otherwise . . . But it is an appearance.

462². The light of Heaven . . . gives to the sight of the Angels to apperceive and distinguish the most minute things.

— The hearing corresponds to their perception, which is of both the understanding and the will, and therefore in the tone and words of a speaker they apperceive the most minute things of his affection and thought . . .

474. To proceed is to be . . . presented in a suitable form so that it is apperceived and appears.

478. In order that (these things) may be presented to the apperception before the senses . . .

499. Thinks of others according to what he has heard and apperceived . . .

525^e. They apperceived in themselves infernal torment instead of heavenly joy.

526^e. The Angels do not apperceive anything about these men when the Word is being read by man . . . but instead of them they perceive the Lord.

548. When the Angels apperceive this, they leave him.

562^e. When (the Papists) apperceive in the other life that the Lord has all Power . . .

571. This fire burns inwardly, as is apperceived from the heat exhaled thence.

577³. (This) it has been given me to know by many experiences, and also to apperceive.

579. Wherever they apperceive good affections, they turn them into evil ones . . .

W. 382². Thought in the spirit . . . is not manifestly apperceived.

386². As (when a man is dying) they apperceive nothing but wind, they judge . . . that the spirit is not a man.

404³. The very affection of truth is apperceived no otherwise than . . .

T. 365³. There are infinite things in the heat and light which proceed from the Lord, although they are apperceived simply as heat and light.

D. 4627⁸. Hence from the light is thought, apperception, reflection, etc.

4751. Charles xii. excelled in the faculty of apperceiving; for, when in interior thought, he could run through a hundred things with one glance of the eye . . . 4752.

4752. That the infernals have the gift of apperception. Ex.

D. Min. 4694. It has been given me to apperceive continually that each and all things inflow . . .

E. 445². When what is believed is seen and perceived, it is not then called faith; but apperception and perception.

518²⁸. 'The rivers of Egypt' = Knowledge, and apperceptions of truth; because . . . the natural man has Knowledge and apperception; as the spiritual man has intelligence.

Perceive. Percipere.

See under NOSE, NOSTRIL, ODOUR, SAY, SMELL, SPEAK, and TREE.

A. 64. Thus do the Angels perceive the Word.

—². By 'Adam in Paradise' they perceive the Most Ancient Church . . .

77. 'Trees desirable in aspect' = perceptions of truth; 'trees good for food,' perceptions of good. 102.

So. It is allowable for (the celestial man) by every perception from the Lord to know what is good and true . . . Sig.

81. The celestial man believes and perceives spiritual and celestial truth and good . . .

—^e. The bonds (of the celestial man), which are not apparent, are perceptions of good and truth.

96. Odour = perception.

99. As there is no combat, the celestial man perceives that (the Lord inflows).

—^e. For the Lord's life is in (such a man), which enables him to have perception.

102. 'A tree' = perception (when the celestial man is treated of). 103.

104. What perception is, is now unknown. It is a certain internal sensation, which is from the Lord alone, as to whether [a thing] is true and good. It was very well known to the Most Ancient Church. With the Angels it is so manifest that from it they know what is true and good; what is from the Lord, and what from themselves; and also the quality of anyone who comes to them from his mere coming, and a single one of his ideas. The spiritual man has no perception; but has conscience . . .

[A.] 125. 'To eat of every tree' = to know from perception what is good and true. The men of the Most Ancient Church had the Knowledges of true faith by revelations . . . They continually had perception from the Lord, which is such, that when they thought from the things which were of memory, they at once perceived whether it was true and good; insomuch that when anything false was presented, they were . . . horrified. Such is also the state of the Angels. But afterwards, in place of the perception of the Most Ancient Church, there succeeded the Knowledge of truth and good from things previously revealed, and then, from the things revealed in the Word.

155. The proprium thus vivified has a perception of all the good of love and truth of faith . . . (insomuch) that the Angels perceive that they live from the Lord . . . But . . . if they recede even the least . . . they perceive a change; and therefore they are in their peace and happiness . . . when they are in the general perception that they live from the Lord.

159. How these things are, is not easily perceived . . .

— The celestial man perceives what things are of the internal, and what are of the external man . . . But their posterity . . . no longer perceived the internal man to be distinct . . . for such does perception become when proprium is desired.

183. The man cannot perceive otherwise . . . but it is an appearance.

184^e. It was perceived that this takes place with variety.

185. Afterwards . . . perception is induced on (the resuscitating man).

193. They perceived that they were in evil; from which remnant of perception . . . it is evident that natural goodness remained with them. Tr.

202. If faith is named, they perceive love. . . Still less can they endure to hear anything rational, and least of all anything scientific, about faith; for, through love, they have a perception from the Lord of what is good and true. From perception they know instantly whether it is so, or is not so; and therefore when a matter of faith is spoken of, they make no other reply than that it is so, or is not so; because they perceive [it] from the Lord. Sig.

203. The Spiritual Angels . . . also have from the Lord a perception of all the things of faith; but not such a perception as the celestial Angels have. The perception of the spiritual Angels is a kind of conscience, which is vivified by the Lord, and appears like celestial perception; but is not celestial, but only spiritual perception.

218. This dictate is the residue of the perception which they had. Sig.

220. That only a little of perception was left, as if alone with itself, and as it were unheard. Sig.

221. The time when the Church still had a residue of perception. Sig.

224. Mercy, peace, and every good . . . are what cause the dictate with those who have perception . . .

225. Natural good, in which there is some perception. Sig.

— Good is not good, unless its inmost is celestial, from which . . . there is perception.

227. Whence perception, dictate, and conscience are. Ex.

228. The exquisite perception of the Angels. Des.

— The least of thought is more perceptible to the Angels . . .

337. Through this love they had . . . a perception of all the things of faith. 393.

370. 'Jehovah said unto Cain' = a certain perceptive from within, which dictated . . .

371. By Jehovah's 'speaking,' the Most Ancients signified perception; for they knew that which the Lord gave them to perceive. This perception could not remain longer than while love was the principal thing. When love to the Lord and . . . the neighbour ceased, perception perished; and, so far as love remained, so far did perception. This Perceptive was proper to the Most Ancient Church; but, after faith was separated from love, as in the postdiluvians, and charity was given through faith, conscience succeeded, which also dictates, but in another way. 393².

391. They perceive his quality at his first coming. Such perception is given in the other life.

443. In the other life it is given manifestly to perceive what opinions (Souls) had held . . . I perceived from one who had deceased that . . .

—^e. Spirits and Angels live in the highest light . . . with such perception as can scarcely be described; thus not in an obscure life.

467. With Lamech there was nothing left of the perception of the Most Ancient Church. Sig.

483. The principal thing of all these Churches was perception; and therefore the differences of the Churches of that time were especially differences of perceptions. Concerning perception, we may mention that in the universal Heaven nothing but the perception of good and truth reigns, and such perception as cannot be described, with innumerable differences, insomuch that one Society has not the like perception with another. There are genera and species of perceptions there, and the genera are innumerable, and there are innumerable species in each genus . . . and still more innumerable varieties in a species . . .

—². The Most Ancient Church represented the Celestial Kingdom also as to the generic and specific differences of perceptions. But as perception, what it is, in its most general [aspect] is at this day entirely unknown, if the genera and species of the perceptions of these Churches were to be told, nothing would be told but strange and unknown things. They were distinguished into houses, families, and nations, and contracted matrimonies within the houses and families, in order that genera and species of perceptions might come forth . . .

495. It was a perceptive Church, such as does not exist at this day. The perception of a Church consists in this: that they perceive from the Lord what is good and true, as do the Angels; not so much what the good and truth of civil society is, but what is the good and truth of love and faith in the Lord . . .

502. The three Churches, 'Man,' 'Seth,' and 'Enos,' constitute the Most Ancient, with a difference of perfection as to perceptions. The Perceptive of the first Church was diminished everywhere in the following ones, and became more general. . . Perfection consists in the faculty of distinctly perceiving; and is diminished when [exercised] not so distinctly, but more generally. Then, instead of a clearer perception, there succeeds a more obscure one; and so it begins to vanish.

503. The Perceptive of the Most Ancient Church consisted not only in this: that they perceived what is good and true, but in the happiness and delight of acting good. Without (this latter) the Perceptive is not living; but lives thence. Ex.

—². In this they were likenesses of the Lord, and therefore in Perceptives they became images of Him. The Perceptive is to know what is good and true; thus what is of faith.

507. Perception (in the Church 'Cainan') began to become general . . .

511. Because the Perceptive decreased, and from being more singular or distinct became more general or obscure, the life of love or of uses did so too; for as is the life of love or of uses, so is the Perceptive. From good to know truth, is celestial.

521. For to know from perception is entirely different from to know from doctrine. Those who are in perception have no need to know by the way of formed doctrine . . . Examp. To those who [know] from perception, it is given by the Lord to know what is good and true by an internal way . . . Add to this, that the perceptions of the celestial man can never be described; for they are in the minutest and most singular things, with every variety according to states and circumstances. But, as it was foreseen that the Perceptive of the Most Ancient Church would perish, and that afterwards men would learn what is good and true by means of doctrines . . . it is said, 'God took him' . . .

530². The remains (with the Church 'Noah') were not of perception, but . . . of doctrine from the Perceptives of the Most Ancient Churches.

536. As perception is at this day a Thing entirely unknown, insomuch that it may be supposed to be a kind of continuous revelation; and to be a something implanted; or something merely imaginary . . . and as perception is the Celestial itself from the Lord given to those who are in the faith of love; and as in the universal Heaven there is perception with innumerable variety, therefore, in order that a notion of perception may be had . . . we may, in what follows, describe perception as to its genera, such as there is in the Heavens.

545. It has been given me . . . to perceive the Delights of heavenly joys . . . The harmonies of innumerable affections (therein) do not come distinctly to the perception, but obscurely, because the perception is most general. Still, it was given to perceive that there are innumerable things within . . . It was also perceived that the joy and delight came as from the heart . . . and [that] everything perceptive and sensitive therefrom is living from happiness.

549. There is a communication and most exquisite perception (there) of all affections and thoughts . . .

—^e. When this is perceived, he is at once dissociated.

558. Thence there was no longer . . . a perception of good and truth. Tr.

573. All the Perceptive of truth and good had been extinguished through persuasions . . . So that after the Flood . . . conscience succeeded in place of perception . . . Therefore 'reproof by the Spirit of Jehovah'=an internal dictate, perception, or conscience.

586. That there was no perception of good and truth, because they had immersed the doctrinal things of faith in their filthy cupidities, (and that) when this was done, all perception perished; and, in place of perception there succeeded a direful persuasion. Sig.

597. The state of the Most Ancient Church was that they had from the Lord a perception of good and thence of truth . . . and such as is the difference between having perception, and having conscience, such was the difference of state of the Most Ancient and of the Ancient Church. Perception is not conscience. The celestial have perception; the spiritual have conscience.

—². The Most Ancient Church had immediate revelation from the Lord by consort with Spirits and Angels, and by visions and dreams, whereby it was given them to have a general knowledge of what is good and true; and, after they had (this), then these general principles were confirmed by innumerable things by means of perceptions . . . Thus were the general principles corroborated daily; and, whatever was not congruous with the generals, they perceived not to be so; and whatever was congruous they perceived to be so. Such is also the state of the Celestial Angels. (Examps. of their general principles.) They received from the Lord a perception of the innumerable things which confirmed and agreed with these. With them, love was the principal thing of faith; and through love it was given them by the Lord to perceive whatever was of faith . . .

608. He no longer could have a like perception; but . . . something intermediate between perception and the conscience now known to some.

695^e. The diabolical crew perceive pleasure in this . . .

895². The man of the Most Ancient Church had revelations, by means of which he was initiated from infancy into the perception of goods and truths; and, as they were inseminated in his voluntary part, he perceived innumerable things without new instruction ; so that from one General, he knew from the Lord the particulars and singulars which now men have to learn . . . and even so can know scarcely the thousandth part.

—². The man of the Spiritual Church . . . (will) believe what is false, because he has no other perception than that it is so.

896^e. When, in the other life, they perceive that what they had preached . . . is true, they marvel.

920. With the men of the Most Ancient Church, Heaven communicated with man . . . This communication was perception. . . In each object of sense they perceived something Divine and heavenly. Examps.

—³. But when . . . this perception, or communication with Heaven, began to perish . . . they no longer perceived what was heavenly in objects, but what was worldly, and this the more in proportion as they had a smaller residue of perception ; and at last . . . they perceived nothing else than what is worldly, corporeal, and earthly. Thus was Heaven separated from man . . . (and) man's state became inverted. (Therefore doctrinal things were preserved for the use of posterity.)

925². Such is the communication (by spheres) in the other life ; and such is the perception . . .

978⁴. What comes thence to perception in his thought and affection, is a certain General . . .

991. These scientifics . . . come to man's sensation or perception when he lives in the body . . .

1043. (This must) be perceived through colours . . .

—⁴. The celestial man has love to the Lord, which is implanted in his voluntary part, and therefore he receives from the Lord, not conscience . . . but the perception of good and thence of truth. Ex.

1071. The man of (this Spiritual Church) had not perception . . . but had to learn what is good and true from the doctrinals of faith collected from the perception of the Most Ancient Church.

1120^e. Internal respiration (then) ceased, and, with this, immediate communication with the Angels, and perception.

1121. I have been instructed by the sons of the Most Ancient Church concerning the state of their perception: that they had a perception of all the things of faith, almost as have the Angels with whom they had communication ; and this because their . . . spirit, by means also of internal respiration, was joined to Heaven ; and that love to the Lord and love towards the neighbour are attended with this ; for man is thus conjoined with the Angels as to their veriest life . . . They said that they had the law inscribed upon them . . . for then whatever the laws dictate was with their perception ; and whatever the laws forbid was against their perception . . . As they had the fundamental (law) in them from the Lord, they could not but know all things which are from it. They also believe that those who live in the world now, who love the Lord and the neighbour, also have the law inscribed upon them . . .

1122. In earthly things they did not perceive anything of delight . . .

1123^e. The third generation . . . expected the Lord . . . Their perception of these delights (in procreating offspring) was from influx from Heaven . . .

1124. It was given to perceive that they were inter-iorly evil . . . They supposed that no one would perceive what they were thinking.

1179². 'Cain' was in a Celestial Church which had perception ; whereas 'Ham' was in a Spiritual Church which had no perception ; and therefore the former was more enormous.

1241². Those called 'Enoch' collected the perceptives of the Most Ancient Church, and made doctrinals thence. These were their Word.

1383. On the perception of Spirits and Angels. Gen.art.

— . Of the perceptions there, there are two kinds : one, which is angelic, [is] that they perceive what is true and good ; what is from the Lord, and what from self . . . The other kind, which is common to all . . . [is] that at the first coming of another they know his quality.

1385. There are Spirits who . . . perceive nothing of what is good and true ; and indeed the more they reason the less they perceive . . . They were told that it is of angelic wisdom to perceive whether a thing is good and true, without reasoning ; but they do not apprehend that such perception is possible . . .

1386. So long as Spirits suppose that they lead themselves, and that they think, understand, and are wise, from themselves, they cannot have perception.

1387. I have spoken about perception with those who . . . had supposed that they could penetrate and understand all things ; [telling them] that the Angels perceive that they think and speak, and will and act, from the Lord. But still they could not conceive what perception is, supposing that if all things inflow, they would be bereaved of all life . . . But they were told that between having perception, and not having it, the difference of life is like that between light and darkness ; and that, to themselves, men first live when they receive such perception . . . They were also shown by much experience how the case is with perception ; and they then acknowledged that it is possible ; but after a while they again did not know . . . from which it may be evident how hard it is for man to comprehend what perception is.

1388. The second kind of perception. Des.

—^e. This communicative perception has its beginning in that the Lord wills all goods to be communicable . . . Hence such perception reigns universally also among Spirits.

1394. It is because there is (the second kind of) perception, that they are conjoined into Societies . . .

1395. (Examps. of this kind of perception.) 1396.

1397. As perceptions are so exquisite, evil Spirits cannot approach a sphere . . . where are good Spirits . . . 1398.

1405. Thus do the Angels perceive from the Lord the Word, when being read by man.

1442. The Lord's first perception. Sig. . . As soon as Jehovah appeared to the Lord in His celestial things, He attained perception ; for all perception is from celestial things. Everyone receives perception from the Lord when he comes to celestial things. Those who have become celestial men . . . have all received perception. Those who become spiritual men . . . have an analogue of perception, or a dictate of conscience, more or less clear, accordingly as they are in the celestial things of charity. The celestial things of charity are attended with this, because in these alone is the Lord present, and in them appears to man.

1443. (Perceptions of three degrees signified by trees.)

1496^e. Intellectual truth is conjoined with an internal perception that it is so.

1504. Continuation concerning perceptions. Gen.art.

1520. The perceptibility of the interiors of Spirits by spheres.

1539. The Lord's interior perception. Tr.

1616. That the Lord arrived at a perception still more interior. Sig. and Ex.

—². Conjunction with celestial things gives perception. Ex.

—⁵. As the Lord implanted Knowledges in celestial things, so He had perception ; for from the conjunction is all perception. He had the first perception when He had implanted the scientifics of childhood . . . and the second, which is more interior, when He had implanted Knowledges. Sig.

1620^e. (The objects) are perceived there with every sense.

1622. They not only see (the objects), but also perceive each thing much more vividly than the sight of the eye apprehends such things on Earth.

1625. There was perceived the semblance of a sun . . .

1630. Spirits are . . . in the fruition of all goods as to all the senses, and this to the inmost perception of them.

1668². This (infestation and combat) is with all who have conscience, and was still more with the Lord, when a child, who had perception. (It causes) with those who have conscience a dull pain, but with those who have perception an acute one, and the more acute as the perception is more interior . . . The Lord had interior and inmost perception.

1695². Evil Spirits . . . at once perceive with a man that good and truth have been confirmed. There exists such a perception of Spirits superior to [that of] man.

1701. That the Lord perceived from His interior man. Sig. and Ex. . . The interior man perceives what is going on in the external, just as if one were to tell it. The Lord, who had a perception of all things which were taking place, clearly knew . . . Such things are . . . scarcely concealed from men who have celestial perception.

1702. In the interior man there is conscience with the spiritual man, and perception with the celestial.

1707. That the interior man perceived in what state was the external. Sig. and Ex.

—³. Regenerate men . . . are gifted either with perception or with conscience.

1769. It was perceived that he was devoted to studies.

—². I soon perceived—apperecepi—that he had been taken up . . . He said that he perceived—appereceperet—nothing of the sense of the letter . . . Certain Spirits . . . said that they believed because they had heard him say that he heard, saw, and perceived it to be so. But other Spirits . . . said it was not so . . . and therefore they were taken up, and (then) confessed . . . because they really perceived that it is so, and that by a more exquisite perception than can ever be given to any sense in the life of the body.

1776. Although this does not come to the perception (of children).

1786. 'Vision'=the inmost revelation, which is of perception. Ex.

—². With the Lord, the visions were the most perfect of all ; because He then had a perception of all things in the World of Spirits and in the Heavens.

1791. 'Abram said, Lord Jehovah'=the Lord's perception ; (for) the Lord had the inmost and most perfect perception of all things. The perception was a sensation and a perceptive Knowledge of all that was being done in Heaven ; and was a continual communication and internal conversation with Jehovah.

1802³. By instruction the interiors are formed . . . and are adapted to receive the goods of love and truths of faith, and thus the perception of good and truth. No one can perceive what he does not know and believe ; thus cannot be gifted with the faculty of perceiving the good of love and truth of faith, except through Knowledges . . .

1815. The Lord's internal man, which is Jehovah, whence He had perception. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. The perception which the Lord had most perfect . . . was from His Internal . . .

1822. 'He said unto him'=perception. Perception itself is nothing but a certain internal speech, which so manifests itself that what is said is perceived. All interior dictate, even conscience, is nothing else ; but perception is a higher degree.

[A.] 1831². The middle space between the parts = that with man which is called perception, internal dictate, and conscience. The things which are above (these) are the Lord's, and those below are with the man.

1841. 'He said to Abram' = perception.

1850². The Last Judgment of the Most Ancient Church was when . . . there was no perception.

1879². He who has the interiors of his spirit open, receives at the same time a sensitive perception of such things.

1898. 'Sarai said to Abram' = that it was so perceived. . . . The Lord's perception at that time was from truth adjoined to good, which dictated to Him how the case was. There is something similar with a celestial man who receives perception—there is something of truth adjoined to good which dictates; afterwards there is good from which or through which truth is perceived.

1911⁵. It is an intellectual truth, that the celestial man has from the Lord a perception of good and truth. The first Rational either denies perception altogether, or supposes that if he perceived from another and not from himself, he would be as if he had no life . . .

1914². The Lord could perceive and see from the interior the quality of the new Rational; (for) the Interior can perceive what comes forth in the Exterior . . . but not the reverse. Even those who have conscience can . . . apperceive anything contrary to the truth . . . Still more those who have perception; for perception is more interior in the Rational. How much more the Lord, who had Divine celestial perception.

1919. 'Abram said unto Sarai' = perception. The Lord's perception is signified by these words; but His thought from perception by 'Sarai said unto Abram.' The perception was that from which was the thought. They who are in perception think from no other source; but still perception is a different thing from thought. Examp.

—³. The Lord's perception was immediately from Jehovah; thus from the Divine good; but His thought was from intellectual truth and its affection. The Lord's Divine perception cannot be apprehended by any idea . . . The perception of the Angels, relatively to the perception which the Lord had, is scarcely anything. The Lord's perception, being Divine, was that of all the things in the Heavens, and (therefore) of all the things on earth . . .

—⁴. But after the Lord's Human Essence had become . . . Jehovah, the Lord was above that which is called perception, because He was above the order which is in the Heavens . . .

1964^e. When they are in (spiritual and celestial) life, they are in the faculty of perceiving all the things of the Lord's Kingdom.

1970². When this sight is opened . . . Spirits are seen, together with a perception who they are, what they are, where they are, whence they come, and whither they are going . . .

1972. The sight of my spirit has rarely been opened (to the Heaven of Angels); but it has been given me to know what they were saying, by a certain perception, the nature of which cannot be described . . .

2016. The Angels are in this perception to such a degree that they perceive that in so far as anything is from the Lord it is good and true, and that in so far as it is from themselves it is evil and false. . . . The very withholding (from evil), and the influx itself, are perceptible to them. But that man supposes that he does good, etc., from himself, is an appearance, because he is in a state of no perception.

2080. 'God said' = an answer perceived. Ex. . . In all perception whatever, there is both a proposition and a response. Sig.

2088². From the beginning all were celestial, because in love to the Lord: they thence received perception, by which they perceived good, not from truth, but from the affection of good.

2135. In this chapter (the Angels) perceive the state of the Lord's perception in the Human . . . 2136. 2137.

2138. Secondly, it treats of the Lord's perception in that state, concerning the Rational . . .

2141. The Lord's perception concerning the human race: that they were in evil and falsity. Tr.

—^e. That He returned into His pristine state of perception. Tr.

2143. 'Jehovah appeared to (Abraham)' = the Lord's perception. Ex.

2144. 'In the oak-groves of Mamre' = the quality of the perceptions . . . that they were human, from scientifics, and from the first rational things thence.

—². What perception is, is now entirely unknown, because no one is in perception such as the Ancients were in, and especially the Most Ancients. The latter knew from perception whether a thing was good, and consequently whether it was true. There was an influx into their Rational from the Lord through Heaven; from which, when they thought about any holy thing, they at once perceived whether it was so, or was not so. Such perception afterwards perished with man, when he began to be no longer in heavenly ideas . . . and in place of it succeeded conscience, which also is a species of perception; for to act contrary to conscience and according to it is nothing else than to perceive from it whether or no a thing is so, or is to be done. But the perception of conscience is not from the good which inflows, but from the truth implanted from infancy . . .

—⁴. As to the Lord when in the world, all His thought was from Divine perception . . . His perceptions were more and more interior, the nearer he drew to union with Jehovah. Tr.

2145². Perceptions being more and more interior may be illustrated by the perceptions of the Most Ancients . . . The more they were in scientifics from the objects of hearing and sight, the lower were their perceptions; but the more they were elevated from them to the celestial things of charity and love, the more interior they were . . .

2149^e. The three men (being) seen by Abraham . . . represents the Divine perception, or the perception from the Divine which the Lord had when in the Human.

2150. That the Lord apperceived that perception from the Divine was present. Sig.

2151. That He drew nearer to the things which were being perceived. Sig.

2157. The deference of the Lord's state when He noticed that perception. Sig.

— . The celestial Angels perceive the Word as to the affection; the spiritual Angels as to the subject.

—². Thus the perception, thought, and speech of the celestial Angels are much richer than (those) of the spiritual Angels.

2158. The affection of longing that what He began to perceive should not pass away. Sig.

2161. That the Divine (perception) should let itself down nearer to the state of perception in which the Lord then was. Sig. 2162, Ex. 2166.

2167. When He had left off perceiving. Sig.

2171. The Divine perception into which the Lord came, when He was in the perception of the human. Tr.

— . There is perception more and more interior; namely, natural perception; then rational perception; finally internal perception, which is Divine and which the Lord alone had. Those who are in perception . . . know very well in which perception they are, natural, rational, or still more interior, which, to them, is Divine. What did not the Lord know! who had perception from the supreme and infinite Divine Itself, in which no Angels ever are; for perception inflows into them from the supreme Divine of the Lord through His Human essence.

—². The reason the Lord's perception is so much treated of. 2540².

2180. The Celestial Natural which the Rational took to itself, that it might conjoin itself with the perception from the Divine. Sig. and Ex. 2181^e, Ex.

2186. That the Lord drew near to Divine perception, after He had prepared Himself. Sig.

2218. 'The men arose' = that that perception came to an end.

— . The Lord's perception from the Divine, then, was first concerning the Divine Trine . . . ; afterwards it was concerning His Human, that it should put on the Divine; and now follows perception from the Divine concerning the human race . . . ; and that He did not will to remain in this perception, is signified by Abraham's 'going with the men to send them away.' 2221. 2222.

2231². Love . . . would have been as the flame, and all perception and thought as the light thence . . . Perception or thought concerning the quality of love and charity, is what is called faith.

2238. When 'Jehovah said' occurs, it = a perception not quite continuous with the former.

2245². The Lord's thought was from the Human conjoined with the Divine . . . but the perception, from which was the thought, was from the Divine.

2287. That this state of perception in which the Lord was, ceased to be such. Sig.

— . The Lord's thought was from perception; and the perception was from His Internal . . .

2367. The perception of good and truth is in obscurity with man, even a regenerate man; and still more so with him who is in external worship. Sig. and Ex.

2500². The Lord's instruction . . . was by continual revelations, and thus by Divine perceptions and thoughts from Himself . . . which Divine perceptions and thoughts He implanted in Divine intelligence and wisdom. Sig.

2513. The Lord's perception concerning the doctrine of faith. Sig.

— . 'God came' = to perceive; for perception is nothing less than the Divine coming of influx into the intellectual faculty.

2514. That the perception was obscure. Sig. . . The Lord's first perception is called obscure, because it was in the human which He was to put off . . . The Perceptive of the Lord, although from the Divine, was in the human, which is such that it does not at once receive the light itself . . . That He afterwards came into clear perception, is signified . . . by 'Abimelech's rising early in the morning.' 2540.

2515. Thought from the (obscure) perception. Sig. and Ex.

— . There are thoughts from perception, thoughts from conscience, and thoughts from no conscience. Thoughts from perception are given only with the celestial . . . such thought is the most internal that is given to man . . . It is perception from the Lord by which and from which their thought is: to think contrary to the perception is impossible.

2545^e. The Lord's thought was from intellectual truth . . . but the perception from which He thought was from Divine truth.

2552. A perception which was an answer. Sig. and Ex.

— . The case is this. Perception is a higher thing, and the Lord had it from the Divine Itself; but thought is a lower thing, and the Lord had it from the Intellectual itself; and, as it was perception from which He had the thought, so the answer of the thought was from perception. There is something similar with man. The celestial man cannot think except from perception, nor the spiritual man except from conscience. The perception of the former . . . is from the Lord, and it does not appear to the man himself whence it is; but his thought is from the Rational, and appears to him as from himself. Thus when he thinks about any Thing from the Rational . . . the answer comes either from perception or from conscience . . .

2571. The Lord's perception concerning the doctrine of love and charity. Sig. and Ex.

—². The Lord's perception and thought in everything of faith, was always from the Divine love.

2574. Perception from spiritual truth. Sig. and Ex.

—². The Lord alone had perception from spiritual truth.

2619. The perception which is signified by 'Jehovah said,' was from the Divine Celestial; but the thought which is signified by 'Jehovah spake,' was from the Divine Celestial through the Divine Spiritual.

[A.2619]². With man, the case is this. It is good from which he perceives; but truth through which he thinks. Ex.

2654⁴. Man is not wise until he believes and perceives that all evil is from Hell, and all good from the Lord. In this faith, nay, perception, are all the Angels . . .

—^e. That man can look from within into the things in himself which are below, is known by experience to those in perception; and even to those in conscience . . . With man such perception is from the Lord; but the Lord's was from Himself.

2663. 'God said unto Abraham' = the Lord's perception from the Divine.

2665. (This) cannot be explained . . . in the fulness in which it can be perceived by those who are in the internal sense; and therefore if it should be told what it is according to their perception, it would scarcely be acknowledged.

2673. The Lord's clear perception from the Divine. Sig.

2682. The despair (of the spiritual man) in that he perceived nothing of good and truth. Sig. and Ex.

—'. 'Shrub' = perception in a less degree than 'tree.'

2693. (The Lord's) perception concerning his state. Sig.

—'. In the sense of the letter this is an interrogation by the Lord; but in the internal sense it is the infinite perception of all things.

2694². The reason for this desolation (of the spiritual) is . . . that they may receive the perception of good and truth, which they cannot receive until the Persuasive which is from proprium is as it were softened. . . What good, and indeed what happiness, is, no one can perceive with an exquisite sense, until he has been in a state of what is not good, and not happy. From this he acquires a sphere of perception; and this in the degree in which he has been in the opposite state. The sphere of perception, and the extension of its limits, arise from relatives which have been actually formed. Examps.

2701. This influx is the state of man's illustration, in which the truths he hears or reads, are confirmed to him by a certain perception interiorly in his Intellectual . . . Sig.

2708. The celestial have perception; but the spiritual, the dictate of conscience.

2715⁴. The good with the spiritual man is relatively obscure, because he does not know what is true from any perception, as the celestial do; but from instruction . . .

2718². They who are in the affection of good, know and perceive, from good itself, that it is so . . .

2722^e. The man of the Spiritual Church has no other perceptions that those which come through Knowledges from doctrine or the Word; for these become of his faith; thus of conscience from which he has perception.

2769. The Lord's perception from Divine truth. Sig. and Ex.

2770. For all thought and the derivative reflection come from perception.

2786. The Lord's state then according to perception. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. How greatly the human Intellectual and Perceptive fall short of the angelic Intellectual and Perceptive.

2813. Concerning truth Divine, some idea can be formed; but not concerning good Divine, except by those who have perception, and are celestial Angels.

2831. The spiritual have not perception of good and truth as the celestial have; but, in its place, conscience . . . Those who have not perception of good and truth, cannot be confirmed otherwise than by scientifics.

—². As to perception, in general . . . there is a perception of good and truth in celestial and spiritual things; a perception of what is just and fair in civil life; and a perception of what is honourable in moral life. As concerns the perception of good and truth in celestial and spiritual things, the interior Angels have this from the Lord; the men of the Most Ancient Church had it; and the celestial, who are in love to the Lord, have it. They know at once, from a certain internal animadvertence, whether it is good and whether it is true; for the Lord insinuates this, because they are conjoined with Him by love. But spiritual men have not such a perception of good and truth in celestial and spiritual things, but in place of it have conscience, which dictates. But conscience is formed from the Knowledges of good and truth . . .

—³. That the spiritual have no perception of the good and truth of faith. Shown.

—⁴. But as to the perception of what is just and fair in civil life, this is possessed by those in the world who are rational; and also the perception of what is honourable in moral life. In these perceptions, one man is distinguished from another; but these same do never on this account have the perception of the good and truth of faith, because this perception is higher or more interior, and inflows from the Lord through the inmost of the Rational.

—⁵. The reason the Spiritual have no perception of the good and truth of faith, is that good and truth are not implanted in their voluntary part . . .

2862. The Lord's reflection and perception . . . can only be expressed in the historicals by 'to tell,' and 'to say.' Moreover, in itself, reflection and perception is an internal telling and saying.

2882^e. All the Angels are in the perception itself that (everything inflows). The inmost Angels perceive how much is from the Lord . . .

2896. The Word in the Most Ancient Church was not written . . . for they were . . . in the perception of good and truth . . .

2897. But the man of the Ancient Church, being spiritual . . . knew, but did not perceive, what the representatives and significatives involved.

2937. For the spiritual man has no perception of good, as the celestial has . . .

2946². To the regenerate . . . it is given not only to Know this, but also to perceive it . . .

2960^e. This state is followed by a fourth, namely, that they perceive (reformation) to be from the Lord.

2974^e. In Heaven, it is perceived that (all good is from Him). There is a sphere of perception there that it is so . . . The degrees of this perception go from the middle to the circuits.

2994. In the body, man can feel and perceive little of this; for . . . in the external man he loses the sensation and perception of (celestial and spiritual things).

3069³. 'To eat and drink upon the Lord's table in His Kingdom'=to enjoy the perception of good and truth.

—, 'To drink'= . . . to give the perception of good and truth. 3089.

3100. A state of perception as to these things. Sig. and Ex.

3113. Perception. Sig.

3120. Perception of the influx of love. Sig.

3125^e. In these two verses it has treated of perception as to the quality and source of truth.

3209. Perception from the Divine Natural as to how the case was. Sig. and Ex.

—, 'To relate'=to perceive; for perception is as it were an internal narration . . .

3220. When the Angels are discoursing about perceptions . . . paradises, etc., appear.

3223. So long as man is in worldly things . . . he has only a perception of the things of the light of the world . . .

—². The light of Heaven inflows into the light of the world . . . and causes man to perceive sensuously the objects of Things. Unless this light inflowed, man would have no apperception.

3241³. As those of the Spiritual Church have no perception, as have those of the Celestial Church, of what is good and true . . . they are continually discussing . . . No one concludes from any perception; nay, they do not know what perception is. No wonder (therefore) that there are dissensions about (the Trinity). The celestial perceive that they are not three, but one.

3246². The celestial . . . therefore never inquire what truth is; but from good perceive it. . . But the Spiritual . . . do not know what truth is from any perception . . .

3316³. How remote (therefore) is the thought and perception of the Angels from the thought and perception of man. If man . . . for the bread would perceive love to the Lord, and for the wine love towards the neighbour, he would be in like thought and perception with the Angels . . .

3324. When man concludes from natural perception, he believes that faith . . . is prior to charity . . . because he perceives how truth enters . . .

3325³. With those not fully regenerated, the opinion has prevailed that truth is prior, for as yet they had not the perception of good . . . whereas the regenerate, being in good itself, can apperceive . . . what good is . . .

—, The Spiritual Church is such, that it must be introduced through truth into good; and, then, without the perception of good, except such and so much as lies concealed in the affection of truth . . .

3385². The spiritual, as they have not perception, like the celestial . . . investigate whether the thing is so . . . and, as they have not perception whether it is so, there is given them what appears like truth . . . Tr.

3388. It treats of those who are in the doctrinals of faith, and have no perception of truth, from good; but only a conscience of truth . . .

3393. The Lord's perception from Doctrine. Sig. and Ex.

3394². As the spiritual have not perception, as the celestial . . . —³.

—, As for the celestial, they perceive Divine good and truth in the Rational . . . and they can acknowledge . . . that there is a perception of good and truth . . . from the Lord . . .

3399². The Spiritual Church cannot . . . profane good, because they cannot receive good so far as to the perception of it, like the celestial. —³.

3432². The Lord gave (the Celestial Church) to perceive good and truth from love and charity, and to know from revelation.

3436². He who is in simple good . . . is gifted with the faculty of perceiving truths when he is being instructed (there) by the Angels.

3438. The Lord's perception concerning this obscurity. Sig. and Ex.

3463². Those solely in the doctrinals of faith, and in a life according to them . . . are not in any perception of good, but in a species of persuasion . . . Truth does teach what good is, but without perception; whereas good teaches what truth is from perception. Examp.

3528. The inmost degree of perception. Sig. and Ex.

—, 'To feel at'=the inmost and the all of perception . . . for the reason that all the Sensitive relates to the sense of touch, and this is derived and comes forth from the Perceptive; for the Sensitive is nothing else than the external Perceptive; and the Perceptive is nothing else than the internal Sensitive. Moreover, all the Sensitive, and all the Perceptive, which appear so various, relate to one general and universal sense—that of touch: the varieties . . . which are external sensations, are nothing but different kinds of touch, which originate from the internal Sensitive, that is, the Perceptive.

—^e. Moreover, all the Perceptive, which is the internal Sensitive, comes forth from good, and not from truth, except from good through truth; for the Lord's Divine life inflows into good, and through good into truth, and thus presents perception.

3548. The state of perception from the presence of this truth. Sig. and Ex.

3550. Those who have perception know that . . . it is truth under the form of good.

[A.] 3559. Inmost perception from presence. Sig.

3560. As it is the Rational which perceives what the Natural is, (these words=) the perception that it was not natural good.

3562. All perception. Sig. . . Because the perception of all things is from inmost things ; that is, they who are in inmost perception, are in the perception of all things which are below. Ex.

3572. A degree of perception still more interior. Sig.

3575. What is grateful from the truth of good which he perceived. Sig.

3603². Such know from revelation that (these things are good and true) ; but as they do not live according to them, they have no perception of this good and truth, but only of the Knowledges separated from them.

—⁵. Man knows not that he has this Involuntary, because he perceives nothing else in himself than what is his own . . .

3608. The Lord's perception from Divine truth concerning the animus of natural good then. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'To tell'=to think and reflect, thus to perceive.

3619. The Lord's perception from Divine truth. Sig. and Ex.

— . Perception from the Divine truth of the Rational is from the Intellectual ; whereas perception from Divine good is from the Voluntary. But perception from the Intellectual is not of the Intellectual, but is of the inflowing Voluntary . . .

3654⁸. 'The law written on the heart'=the perception of good and truth, from good.

3661. Reflection and perception thence. Sig. 3682.

—^e. Reflection is the mental view of a Thing, as to how it is circumstanced, and also as to its quality : from this is perception.

3671². To understand (and will) good and truth are of the Rational ; the derivative perceptions of good and truth are as seeds . . .

— . When he apperceives delight in acting them, the seeds grow . . . But (not) when he . . . interiorly perceives something of will, but still does not love . . . to do them.

3693. (Ways of speaking which come) from our perception of such things as are in the other life.

3702². This is perceived in the organ of smell . . . and things still more hidden would be perceived in man's interior organs, if his life were according to order.

—³. The life from which (the objects of nature) were descending, was in the sight and perception (of the Most Ancients), causing the images to be thus alive. Such a perception have the celestial Angels concerning all the things in the world . . . and hence infants have such a perception.

3747^e. The third degree of life is that . . . through which the Lord inflows into the rational mind, whence he has the faculty of thinking, whence he has conscience, and whence he has the perception of good and truth.

3906². For to acknowledge (this truth) in faith and act, is to have a perception that it is so . . . and also a perception that good from the proprium (is evil).

3928². If he does not perceive in himself . . .

3979. Perception from the good signified by Laban. Sig.

4027². They are outside of Knowledges, because outside of perceptions.

4038³. Perceptions, etc., pertain to the understanding (of the Rational).

4043. In the interiors . . . nothing is perceived by spaces and times . . .

—^e. In the Heavens . . . thousands and thousands of perceptions can scarcely fall into anything perceptible with man.

4068. The Lord's perception from the Divine. Sig.

4125. The obscure perception of this good when left to itself. Sig. and Ex.

4169. For to do good from good, is to do it from the perception of good. The perception of good is given solely with the celestial. But to do good from truth, is to do it from knowledge . . . but without the perception that it is so . . . It may therefore be fallacious . . .

4184. An obscure state of perception. Sig. and Ex.

4210^e. If the Word had not been spoken according to the ideas of man's thought . . . he would not have perceived a whit . . .

4241. After regeneration, truths proceed from good ; for he then, from good, perceives and knows that they are truths.

4242. 'To command the messengers to say'=reflection and thence perception that it is so ; consequently, acknowledgment.

4245². (Such) cannot know, still less perceive, that truth . . . is subordinated to good . . .

4286⁵. Good . . . and truth . . . are not perceived distinctly. The reason these are not perceived, is that there is no genuine charity ; and, where anything is not, there is no perception of it.

4301². The state of truth in good . . . can be apprehended only by those who have celestial perception . . . (For) those who have perception are in celestial light as to the understanding . . . and are affected with truths . . . as the eye is affected with flowers . . . and those in interior perception are affected with them as with the fragrance from flowers . . . Therefore those Angels perceive all the differences . . . of the conjunction of truth in good . . .

4302². If these things were described, still they would not be evident, except to those who are in celestial perception, and not at all to those who are solely in natural perception. For they who are in celestial perception are in the light of Heaven . . .

4317⁵. The interior form itself which receives good and truth . . . is depraved . . . Hence it is that there is no perception of good and truth at this day ; but, in its place, with the regenerate, there is conscience, which acknowledges as good and true that which is learned from parents and masters.

4339. The perception and intention of the good of truth. Sig. and Ex.

4369. Affection with the perception wherewith it was reciprocally insinuated. Sig.

4403^o. Those at the nostrils are those who excel in perception.

4448. The Most Ancient Church . . . was in the good of love to the Lord, and thence in the perception of all truth; for the men of that Church . . . communicated with the Angels; hence their perception; and therefore they never reasoned about any truth of faith; but said—because they perceived it from Heaven—that it is so.

4454. The Most Ancient Church . . . was in the good of love to the Lord; their Voluntary and Intellectual made a one . . . and therefore they had the perception of truth, from good; for the Lord inflowed through an internal way into the good of their will, and through this into the good of their understanding, or the truth.

4538. The perception of natural good. Sig. and Ex.

4567. Interior natural perception. Sig. and Ex.

—'. 'God saw,' when predicated of the Lord, = perception from the Divine; which is the same as interior perception.

4592³. For he who is in the light of the world, and has perception from it, scarcely knows what good and truth are . . .

4624. To the province of the sense of smell and thence of the nostrils pertain those who are in general perception, so that they may be called perceptions. 4625².

4625^e. Those in the nostrils perceived whatever happens in general in the Society; but not so much in particular as those in the province of the eye; for these latter discriminate and mentally view the things which are of perception. I have observed, also, that their Perceptive is varied according to the general changes of the state of the Society in which they are.

4626. When any Spirit is approaching . . . his presence is perceived . . . Angelic Spirits, who are in a more exquisite perception, thence know innumerable things about the state of his life and faith.

4627. Those who relate to the interiors of the nostrils are in a more perfect state as to perception . . .

4687². As the Most Ancient Church could have no perception of the Infinite Esse, but could have some of the Infinite Existing from the perceptible things in their internal man . . . they adored (the latter).

4692². The internal of perception is closed with those (in faith separated), because there exists no intermediate through which influx [might come].

4844⁴. Hence no one knows from mental view, consequently neither from perception, whether truth is truth . . .

4892. Perception from truths. Sig.

4925². For it is good through which the Lord inflows, and gives intelligence and wisdom, consequently a higher (mental) view, and also perception as to whether it is so or is not so.

4991. Perception concerning truth natural not spiritual. Sig.

5097. This state of illustration exists when it is acknowledged, and still more when it is perceived, that good is good and truth is truth. Perception is internal revelation.

5111. Revelation from perception. Sig.

—'. 'To say' = perception, thus also revelation; for this is internal perception, and from perception.

5113². For the man of the Spiritual Church has no perception of truth, from good . . .

—³. When the man of the Celestial Church had gained the perception of (the good of charity), he was led into the perception of love to the Lord . . .

5121. Revelation from perception by the Celestial in the Natural. Sig. and Ex. 5150, Sig.

—'. All revelation is either from speech with the Angels . . . or from perception.

—². Those who are in good and thence in truth, especially those in the good of love to the Lord, have revelation from perception . . . This revelation is internal. The Angels . . . have revelation from perception; so had the men of the Most Ancient Church; and so had some from the Ancient Church; but at this day scarcely anyone . . .

—³. As (the prophets) had no perception, they had merely verbal or visual revelations, without perception of what they signified; for genuine perception comes forth through Heaven from the Lord, and affects the Intellectual spiritually, and leads it to think perceptibly as the Thing really is, with an internal assent . . . The man supposes that it is in him, and that it flows from the connection of the Things, whereas it is a dictate through Heaven from the Lord, inflowing into the interiors of the thought concerning such things as are above the Natural and the Sensuous.

—^e. But the revelation from perception which the Lord had . . . was from the Divine in Him. Tr.

5145⁴. Whether there are terminations and consequent planes . . . is indicated by the perceptions of good and truth, and of conscience. With those who have perceptions of good and truth, like the celestial Angels, the terminations are from the first degree to the ultimate one. Without terminations of each of the degrees, such perceptions are impossible.

5172. The Spirits (of the thymus gland) have interior perception which is not made so visual as with others by meditations and thoughts . . .

—^e. With such there remains a soft Infantile, into which the perception of good inflows . . .

5228. Perception from thought. Sig. This cannot be explained, because at this day it is altogether unknown what spiritual perception is . . . For perception is nothing else than the speech or thought of the Angels who are with the man. When this speech or thought inflows, it causes the perception that it is so or is not so; but with those only who are in the good of love and of charity; for it inflows through good. With these, that perception produces thoughts; for what is perceptive is to them the General of thought. But there is no perception from thought actually, but apparently.

5238. Perception thence. Sig.

5251. The perception of the Celestial of the Spiritual from (or in) the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

5262. The perception of the Natural from the Celestial of the Spiritual. Sig. 5308.

5306. The perception of the Natural with all things there. Sig.

[A.] 5313¹³. Angelic Spirits, to whom is given perception by the Lord, know what (these things) signify.

5400. For sight abstracted from the things of the world, that is, spiritual sight, is nothing else than the perception of truth.

5403. Perception concerning truths in general. Sig.

5421. Perception and acknowledgment by the Celestial of the Spiritual. Sig.

5458. The perception of the Celestial of the Spiritual concerning these truths separated from itself. Sig.

5472. Still perception from faith in doctrine and understanding. Sig. and Ex.

5473. The degree of the perception thence. Sig.

5498. General perception. Sig.

5581. Perception by the things which are of the Church. Sig.

5591. Perception concerning the Spiritual. Sig.

5595. Perception from spiritual good. Sig.

5603. Perception by the good of the Church concerning these things. Sig.

5649². The general cause why man does not perceive this, is that worldly things engage his heart . . .

—³. As man is in ignorance about these things, he can have no perception concerning them ; for the Knowledge of a Thing must precede in order that there may be the perception of it . . .

5677. The perception that it is well. Sig.

5680. The apperception thence of the Natural that it is well with the good a quo. Sig. . . It is said apperception thence . . . because all the perception of the Natural comes from the Spiritual . . . that is, through the internal from the Lord. The Natural never has any perception . . . except what comes from the Spiritual . . .

5698. The perception of conjunction through the medium with the truths in the Natural. Sig.

5732. The communication of thought . . . on the part of the recipient is perception ; and therefore 'to command' = also perception.

5779. Their perception then. Sig.

— . From the Internal, that is, through the Internal from the Lord, comes all perception . . . It appears that apperception comes from influx from the External, but it is a fallacy.

5782. The perception given to the good of the Church in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

5802. Reciprocal perception. Sig.

5816². When man is in good, he then from good sees truths, and perceives them, and thus believes that they are truths . . .

5877. That the Celestial Internal gave to truths in the Natural the faculty of perception. Sig. and Ex. . . When there is conjunction, there is given the faculty of perceiving, namely, through the affection of truth, and thus of good.

5882. The perception of the new Natural. Sig. and Ex.

—². When the conjunction of good with truth comes forth, there is for the first time given the faculty of perception, in that the man is affected with truth and thus with good.

5907. The perception (of spiritual good) concerning the Celestial Internal. Sig.

5919. Testification from perception. Sig.

5920. Especially from the perception of the medium. Sig. and Ex.

5937. The perception of the Natural from the Celestial Internal. Sig. and Ex.

— . For all perception is from what is interior ; and never is there any perception of what is interior from (or by) what is exterior ; for, whence influx is, thence is perception.

—². What the perception is which is being so frequently mentioned.—There is with every man the faculty of perceiving whether it is so, or is not so. The faculty of concluding within himself, or in his mind, causes the Thing to be perceived. This faculty is never possible unless there is influx from the Spiritual World. In this gift one man excels another : those excel less who conclude and thus perceive little within themselves ; but they say that it is so, because others, in whom they have faith, have said so. But those who excel more, are those who see, not from others, but from themselves, that it is so. But verily the perception which is with every man is [a perception] in worldly Things, but not at this day with anyone in spiritual Things. The reason is, that the Spiritual, which inflows and makes the perception, is obscured and almost extinguished by the delights of the love of the world and of self . . .

—³. He who would have perception in spiritual things must be, from good, in the affection of truth, and must continually long to know truths. Thence his Intellectual is illuminated, and, when the Intellectual has been illuminated, it is then given him to perceive something within himself. But he who is not in the affection of truth, that which he knows to be so, that does he know from what is doctrinal . . . From these things it may be evident what perception is, and that it exists in worldly things, but not in spiritual ones . . . Those born in any heresy, if the veriest truths were told them, and also confirmed, would, nevertheless, not at all perceive that they are truths : they would appear to them as falsities.

5962². From relatives [the Angels receive] more perfect perception . . .

—⁴. It is evening with the Angels when they do not perceive the Lord present ; for in Heaven there is a continual perception of the Lord. When they are in a state of non-perception, they are not affected with good and do not see truth as before . . .

5963. Perception given that they are in tranquillity. Sig. and Ex.

— . The varying states (there) are according to the perception of good and truth with them, thus according to the perception of the Lord's presence : according to this perception they have tranquillity ; for those who are in the perception of the Lord's presence, are in the perception that each and all things which befall them tend to their good ; and that evils do not reach them. .

6035. The perception of spiritual good from the Celestial Internal. Sig.

6038. The perception of life thence in himself. Sig.

6040. The perception of truths in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

— . For all perception inflows through the Internal into the External or Natural ; for the Natural perceives nothing whatever from itself ; but that which it perceives is from what is prior to itself ; and neither does the Prior perceive from itself, but from what is still prior to itself ; thus at last from the Lord . . . Such is the influx, and thence such is the perception. Ex.

—². The reason it is said, the perception of truths in the Natural, and not the perception of those who are in the truths. Ex.

6041. The perception of the goods there. Sig.

6063. The presence of the Celestial Internal in the Natural . . . and the consequent influx, and perception. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. From influx from the Internal comes forth perception in the External, or in the Natural . . . for influx and perception mutually correspond to each other.

6072. Perception concerning the truths of the Church in the Natural. Sig.

6081. Perception in the Natural where scientifics are. Sig. 6092.

6193². The Angels are in the manifest perception that it is so. 6466.

6222³. The Intellectual of the Church is, that when man is reading the Word, and carefully compares one thing with another, he perceives thence what is to be believed, and what is to be done. This falls only into those who are being illustrated by the Lord . . . and this illustration falls only into those who long to know truths, not for the sake of reputation and glory, but for the sake of life and use. Ex.

6240. The truly rational man is no other than he who is called a celestial man, and who has a perception of good ; and, from good, a perception of truth ; whereas he who has not this perception, but only Knowledge . . . is not a truly rational man, but an interior natural one.

6256. The spiritual good represented by Israel is in obscure perception (or apperception), because it is from the Natural . . .

6295^e. For the celestial man is such that he does not reason from truth . . . for he has perception from good—that is, through good from the Lord—that it is so or is not so. Refs.

6302. The perception of spiritual good from the Celestial Internal concerning the new life. Sig and Ex.

6317^e. Therefore the perception (of the unlearned) is more extended and clear.

6325². The man who is led by the Lord . . . has given him the perception of good, and also the sensation of it.

6384^e. The Intellectual (of those who have been in the affirmative) is illustrated, and is thus in a certain perception of spiritual truth . . .

6500. Without any perception as to whether what he confirms is true or not.

6560. Influx from the Internal, and thence perception. Sig. and Ex.

6562. Perception from the Internal what to do. Sig.

6598. It is known that one man excels another in the faculty of understanding and perceiving what is honourable in moral life, what is just in civil life, and what is good in spiritual life. The cause consists in the elevation of the thought to the things of Heaven . . . They who can think above sensuous things—if the things in the memory are ordained—are in the faculty of understanding and perceiving above others ; and this according to the degree of the [mental] view from within.

6599^e. The faculty of understanding and perceiving is according to the extension into Societies ; that is, according to the influx thence. 6600. 6611^e.

6622^e. As man apperceives one word merely as a simple sound . . . it may be evident how gross is the perception from the Sensuous.

6641^e. For the man of the Spiritual Church has no perception of truth, from good . . . 6647². 6865².

6737^e. Those in perception know, when they feel compassion, that they are admonished by the Lord to give aid.

6740. The perception that good from the Church itself was to be insinuated therein. Sig. and Ex.

— . For in the internal sense is meant the truth of good which has perception ; but in the sense of the letter a girl who has not perception.

6751^e. It is these planes which are illustrated by the light of Heaven ; hence is the Intellectual, and the Perceptive of faith and of the good of charity.

6783. The perception that now conjunction was certain. Sig.

6835. Perception from the law from the Divine. Sig.

6866. Perception from the Divine. Sig.

6872. The perception and acknowledgment of the Divine. from love ; (or) the perception and acknowledgment of the Divine in the Human. Sig. and Ex.

6881. What is new of perception. Sig.

6945. The perception of those who are of the Spiritual Church. Sig.

—². Those of the Spiritual Church have no perception of truth, from good, as the celestial have. (Who are here meant by the Spiritual Church, shown.) 7233².

6989. No perception of truth, and thence no obedience. Sig.

— . Hearing corresponds . . . to perception, because the things which are heard are perceived within . . .

7017. The perception of spiritual life. Sig. and Ex.

7028. Perception from the Divine . . . here, a new perception. Sig.

7055². They would (then) have the affection of knowing truth for the sake . . . of life ; and hence would be gifted with a perception as to whether the doctrinal things of their own Church are true . . .

—³. The prophets had not a perception of what each thing in the internal sense signified; for when (mediate and immediate truth) are conjoined, then is perception given. This conjunction rarely exists with man . . . 7058².

[A.] 7058². The celestial Angels have an exquisite perception of both (mediate and immediate) truth, and thence of the Lord's presence. The cause is, that they are in good more than others . . .

7171. The natural sun in the perception of Spirits.

7172². The Spirits of Mercury have an exquisite perception, from the fact that they are continually exploring by means of perception what others know.

7381². The ideas of interior thought . . . are terminated in material things; and, where they are terminated, there they appear to be; thence man perceives what he thinks.

7680. Everything of perception . . . with the infesters destroyed. Sig.

— . 'Day' = a state of perception not obscure; 'night' = a state of obscure perception.

— . Perceptions are mentioned, and not illustrations, because the evil who infest have not illustration, but still they have perception. But they have perception only so long as something of the Knowledge of truth and good . . . remains . . .

—². The infernals can indeed confirm their evils and falsities; but this is not perception. Perception is to see that truth is truth, and good good; and also that evil is evil, and falsity falsity; but it is not perception to see truth as falsity, and good as evil; nor evil as good, and falsity as truth. They who do this, in place of perception have phantasy, which causes an appearance of perception . . .

7691². By the Sensitive is signified the ultimate of perception.

7812^e. All perception of a Thing is according to the reflection relative to differences from contraries in various manner and various degree.

7877². Those in the Third Heaven do not know what faith is, thus neither what the truth of it is; for they are in the perception of the truth which is of faith . . . That which is in perception in this way, does not fall into knowledge. But the spiritual, in the Second Heaven . . . reason as to whether it is true or not, because whether it is so they do not perceive . . .

7935. The interior perception of the truth which is of conscience. Sig. and Ex. . . The perception of this truth is of conscience; for those of the Spiritual Church have not perception such as those of the Celestial Church . . .

7975. For the man of the Spiritual Church has no perception of good and truth, but acknowledges and believes for good and truth the things which the doctrinals of his Church teach.

7977². But civil truth, moral truth, and their goods, those of the Spiritual Church can know, because they are in congruity with the Things that are in the world; hence, too, they have perception of them . . .

So81. Perception from the truth which is of conscience. Sig. and Ex.

8128^e. Thought from perception is internal speech.

8354. 'To show,' when it is done by Jehovah, = to give perception; and, as this is done by influx, it = to inspire.

8439². For the influx from the Divine passes first into perception, which is of the understanding, and then into the will . . .

8521². (The man of the Spiritual Kingdom) has no perception as to whether truth is truth, except that he seems to himself to have from the fact that he has confirmed it . . .

—³. But the good with those of the Celestial Kingdom . . . is implanted in the voluntary part. They who are in this good know whether it is truth from internal perception which is from the Lord.

8541^e. (The inhabitants of Jupiter) at once perceive and acknowledge as from themselves, whether what is said by others about the life of Heaven with man, is true or not.

8625². The man of the Spiritual Church . . . is in obscurity as to the truth of faith, and acknowledges it for truth because the Church has said so, and not because he perceives it to be truth.

8628. These persons, from not having cultivated their rational faculty by means of their knowledges (of languages, etc.) in the other life have but little of perception . . .

8631. In what clear perception about spiritual Things the Spirits of Jupiter are, shown.

8645. The perception of the Things which had been done to those of the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

8660. Influx and thence perception. Sig. . . For perception is from influx.

8668. Perception, then, from truth Divine concerning the power of the Lord's Divine Human against (the infesters). Sig. and Ex.

8685^e. (Only those can understand these arcana) who are in illustration from the Lord, and through illustration in perception; (they) can be described . . . but they do not fall rightly into the thought unless there is perception from Heaven; and there is no perception from Heaven except with those who, from good, are in the love of truth; and not even then, unless they are in the love of truth from genuine good.

8690². The immediate influx of the Lord does not come to perception, because it is in the inmosts of man, but the influx of the Lord [which is] immediate and at the same time mediate, comes to perception, and gives affection; for it is not only in the inmosts of man, but is also in his mediates and outermosts.

8694². By revelation is meant illustration when the Word is being read, and perception then . . . The cause of those in good having revelation . . . is that . . . the Angels with the man perceive the Word according to the internal sense; and this is communicated to the man who is in good, and is reading the Word, and is longing for truth from affection. Hence are the illustration and perception. Ex.

8701. In the first state (of regeneration) the influx of truth Divine is immediate . . . When the influx is immediate, the Lord does indeed inflow with good and truth, but the good is not then perceived, but the truth . . . But when the influx is also mediate at the same time, then good is perceived; for the mediate influx is into the external Sensuous of the man . . .

8717². That this is so, the Angels in Heaven not only know, but also perceive in themselves. 8865.

8792. That people could not perceive the presence of Jehovah in any other way (than visibly). That . . . the sight of the eye = the perception which is of faith. Refs.

8802. Those who have a general perception of celestial good. Sig. and Ex.

—². By those who are in a general perception of celestial good, are meant those who are intermediate between the Celestial Kingdom and the Spiritual Kingdom . . . These have extension even into the celestial Societies . . . The general perception is with those who are in spiritual good, and who can receive the general influx of the good of the higher Heaven; here, of the Inmost Heaven. Sig.

8885. The things which come to manifest perception are then in the middle (in man's thought).

8914. The perception of truths Divine from good. Sig. and Ex.

8920². The form of truth Divine, that is, its perception, thought, and utterance, in the Third Heaven, so transcends that in the Second Heaven, that it cannot be apprehended there . . .

8928². That (those of the Spiritual Church) are in thick darkness as to truth Divine, is evident from the fact that they do not know from any internal perception that which the Church says to be truth; but solely from the fact that the Church says so . . . and he who is not in internal perception concerning truth Divine, is in thick darkness; or, what is the same, to him Divine truth is thick darkness. Examps.

8967. Through temptations the internal man acquires dominion over the external . . . When this is done, illustration and perception as to what is truth and what is good, and also as to what is evil and false, take place for the man . . .

9049^e. The nostrils correspond to the perception of truth.

9050³. The intellectual faculty is illustrated by the Lord when man receives faith; hence he has the light or apperception of truth in such things as are of faith when he is reading the Word; and . . . the voluntary faculty is kindled by the Lord when the man receives love; hence he has the fire of life, and a sensitive perception of good.

9103³. This clear-sightedness increases according to the influx of the light of Heaven, until at last he discriminates not only between truths, but also between the truths in these truths; and this the more lucidly as the communication between the internal and the external man is the better opened; for the light of Heaven inflows from the Lord through the internal man into the external. Thence the man has perception; but still not spiritual perception. This perception does not come forth from natural truths, but from spiritual truths . . . which are called the truths of faith. The reason spiritual perception comes forth from these truths, is that the light of Heaven is the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord . . . and therefore there must be spiritual Knowledges with man in his Natural, in order that spiritual perception may come forth . . .

9256². When the gentiles are instructed, they have a clearer and more interior perception than Christians. Ex.

9474². As all the perception of good is through truth, spices were employed . . .

—³. The good which is of love does not come to perception except through truths; for truth is the witness and also the revelation and form of good. Ex.

—^e. The aromatic of the oil of anointing = what is grateful of internal perception; and the aromatic of the incense = what is grateful of external perception. 9475.

9653². Sunrise = the good of love from the Lord in clear perception; and sunset, the good from Him in obscure perception; and, as man and Angel have clear perception when elevated towards interior things . . . and obscure perception when in exterior things . . . the west is called also 'the sea' . . .

9688^e. The Spiritual Church is called 'an eagle' from perception.

9716^e. For the Intellectual is allotted to the perception of truth, from good; and the Voluntary to the perception of good in truth.

9818. Those in the Celestial Kingdom know truths not from knowledge . . . but from internal perception: for they are in the good of love from the Lord, and all truths are implanted in this good. Ex. . . The form of good and its quality is, with them, truth, which is not seen, but is perceived, from good . . .

10062. The 'blood upon the right ear' = the perceptive in the Inmost Heaven . . . In the Inmost Heaven there is the perceptive of truth, from good; but in the Middle Heaven there is not the perceptive of truth, but its Intellectual, and also in the Ultimate Heaven. Sig.

10093. Divine truth is acknowledged in the Spiritual Kingdom; but in the Celestial Kingdom is perceived. Sig. and Ex. . . That which is received in the intellectual part is said to be acknowledged; and that which is received in the voluntary part is said to be perceived.

10124². But with those in the Celestial Kingdom, truth does not become knowledge, nor faith, nor conscience; but it becomes reception in the good of love; and, in proportion as they live according to it, it becomes perception, which increases and is perfected with them according to love. Ex.

10155. The perceptive that all good and all truth are from the Lord. Sig.

—³. In these passages 'to Know' = to perceive; and to perceive is from good; but to understand, and see, are from truth ; for they who are in good, or in love, perceive within themselves that it is so ; whereas they who are in truth, or faith, see within themselves ; and therefore with those in the Celestial Kingdom there is perception that it is so ; but with those in the Spiritual Kingdom there is faith that it is so. Refs.

[A.] 10159. For all perception, such as that of the Angels of the Third Heaven, is from the order and from the flux of Heaven . . .

10219. For, before, he cannot reflect that anything inflows from the Lord ; and cannot at all perceive, that is, feel [it] in himself, until he begins to will and love it to be so.

10237². For the truths of faith in the Natural come to manifest perception ; for they are among . . . the Things of memory, which, when thought, are manifestly perceived ; but not the things which are thought in the internal man : these do not come to manifest perception while the man is in the world, because the ideas there are spiritual. Hence it is that purification must take place in the Natural.

10252. The perception of sensuous truth. Sig. and Ex.

10254. The perception and affection of natural truth. Sig. and Ex.

10256. The perception and affection of interior truth. Sig. and Ex.

10290. Illustration and perception again through the Word, from the Lord. Sig. and Ex.

—². For the Lord speaks with the man of the Church no otherwise than through the Word ; for He then illustrates so that the man sees the truth, and also gives perception so that he perceives that it is so ; but this is done according to the quality of the longing for truth with the man . . . Those who love truth for the sake of truth are in illustration ; and those who love truth for the sake of good are in perception.

10336³. 'To write the law upon the heart' = to implant Divine truth in the will . . . When this is done, Divine truth is no longer taken forth from the memory, but is perceived from the good itself of love . . .

10554. 'To speak face to face' = the mutual perception of the one in the other. This is understood concerning the Word . . .

10702. Those who turn themselves to the Lord or to Heaven, receive influx thence, and are in illustration, and thus in the perception of truth within themselves. Sig.

10729^e. Divine truths are such that they can be fitted to good . . . thence man has perception, which, in itself, is a reacting.

10737. They know (that God is visible under a human form) from interior perception . . . Abraham, Lot, etc., saw God under a human form, and acknowledged what was seen as the Creator . . . and this also from interior perception ; but at this day this interior perception has perished in the Christian world, and remains only with the simple who are in faith.

10756. (Those of the Fifth Earth) have a perception as to whether there is what is conjugal with those of them who are naked . . .

10786. They were from the Celestial Kingdom, where all know the truths from interior perception which with us are called of faith ; for they are in illustration from the Lord.

—². There are few in our Earth who have interior perception, for the reason that in their youth they learn truths and do not do them. Ex.

10787². Those who are being regenerated by the Lord, and who let truths at once into the life, come into interior perception concerning them. Whereas those who receive truths first into the memory, and then into the understanding, and finally into the will, are those who are in faith ; for from faith, which is then called conscience, they act.

H. 25. The Angels in the Celestial Kingdom . . . receive Divine truths at once into the life . . . and therefore have them inscribed on their hearts, and perceive them, and as it were see them, in themselves . . .

30^e. What is disposed by the Lord in this Inmost (of man) does not inflow manifestly into the perception of any Angel, because it is above his thought . . .

88. As, without a perception of what correspondence is, nothing can be known in light . . .

153. When evil Spirits appear turned to the quarters of Heaven, they have . . . a perception of truth, but no affection of good . . .

204^e. This communication with Societies, is not a communication with those there to a manifest perception of them . . .

271. The Angels of the Ultimate Heaven (are) without interior perception as to whether they are truths.

284. Man, in the body . . . cannot perceive the peace of Heaven, because the perception of man is in the Natural . . .

288. The peace of Heaven . . . does not come to the manifest perception of the Angels, except by . . .

344². I perceived their horror.

351. True intelligence and wisdom is to see and perceive what truth and good, and falsity and evil, are, and to well distinguish them, and this from interior view and perception. . . In proportion as the interiors have been formed, and make a one with the exteriors, so does man see and perceive. Ex.

—^e. The wise . . . whose interiors have not only been opened, but also cultivated, both see truths in themselves, and perceive them (whereas the simple whose interiors have been opened, but not cultivated by spiritual, moral, evil, and natural truths, perceive truths when they hear them, but do not see them in themselves).

352. Spurious intelligence and wisdom is not to see and perceive what truth and good, and falsity and evil are, from within ; but only to believe . . . what is said to be so by others, and then to confirm it . . .

395. It would fall into an unknown idea ; thus not into perception.

413. Do not come distinctly to perception, but obscurely ; because the perception is very general ; but still it has been given to perceive that . . .

414. The beauty perceptible by our sight.

462². The hearing corresponds to their perception, which is of both the understanding and the will ; and thus in the sound and words . . . they apperceive the most minute things . . .

541^e. The quality is known from the opposite . . . and thence are all perception and sensation.

N. 140. Concerning perception. (Refs. to passages.)

S. 58. Through the internal senses (of the Word) the Lord inflows into the natural sense, and into the light of this with man. Hence man, from interior perception, acknowledges truth, and then he sees it in his thought, and this as often as he is in the affection of truth for the sake of truth ; for from affection comes perception ; from perception thought ; and thus is effected the acknowledgment which is called faith.

74^e. In the Word of the Celestial Kingdom . . . the marks are affections ; but in the Word of the Spiritual Kingdom . . . the marks are perceptions.

Life 3. Hence comes this common perception.

4. Still, they acknowledge—which is effected by common perception from Heaven—that those who live well are saved . . .

F. 3. Spiritual truths can be comprehended equally as well as natural truths ; and, if not clearly, still, when they are heard, they fall into the perception as to whether they are truths or not ; most especially with those who are affected with truths. Shown.

5. To be in illustration is nothing else than to be in the perception, and thence in the internal acknowledgment, that this or that is truth. These are they who are called 'the taught of Jehovah' . . .

W. 2. Inmost thought, which is the perception of ends, is actually the first effect of life.

42. Thoughts, perceptions, and affections are substances and forms . . . and are not exhalations . . .

76. He who cannot from some perception think of God apart from time, cannot perceive eternity . . .

115. An Angel perceives no otherwise than . . . Unless he did so perceive, there would be no conjunction. . . The Lord cannot be in (anyone) unless . . . he perceives and feels these as his own . . .

179. In a higher degree, which transcends the perception.

199^e. These ought to be perceived distinctly.

276. When loves are opposites, then all things which are of perception become opposites . . .

277². There are all the . . . thoughts of his perception, which make the second degree . . .

291². Thus produce the perception as of his presence . . .

316¹. The delights of uses do not present ideas . . . but only affect, without distinct perception.

361. This is known from common perception.

—². Who does not know from common perception that . . .

—³. Many of the learned . . . have debilitated, and obscured, and have even destroyed, common perception with themselves.

— . Tell some truth to anyone who is in common perception, and he will see it . . . But say the same things to one of the learned, who has not [been accustomed] to think from common perception . . . and he will not see it.

363². There are many things of wisdom ; as perception, reflection, recollection, thought, etc.

—^e. The understanding smells, and also tastes, from its perception ; and therefore to smell and taste are predicated of perception.

365⁸. Ask anyone who is in common perception where his thought is . . .

—³. The affection of truth is one thing ; the perception of truth is another ; and thought is another. Ex.

— . When man is in the affection of understanding, and through this comes into the perception of truth, he is then in the thought of his spirit . . .

—⁴. (Thus) these three : the affection of truth, the perception of truth, and thought, follow in order from love ; and they come forth no where else than in the understanding . . .

—^e. Thought does indeed come forth first, because it is of the natural mind ; but thought from the perception of truth which is from the affection of truth, comes forth last . . .

405⁴. The ramifications of the bronchia of the lungs correspond to the perceptions and thoughts from these affections of truth.

406. For all the perception of truth belongs to love in the understanding . . . and all the senses of the body derive their perception from the perception of their mind.

410². (Thus) the perception of truth which (the love) acquires from the affection of understanding . . . is not of the understanding, but is of the love.

—⁴. Thoughts, perceptions, and the derivative knowledges, do indeed inflow from the Spiritual World, but still are not received by the understanding, but by the love, according to its affections in the understanding.

412. The air vessels in the lungs correspond to perceptions.

[A.412]². The respirations are not perceptions and thoughts, but are correspondences (of them). 420.

—³. The understanding does not perceive or think from itself, but from the affections. Shown.

413. That the wisdom, or understanding, from the power given it by the love, can be elevated, and can receive the things of the light of Heaven, and perceive them. Ex. That man can perceive the arcana of wisdom, when he hears them, has been shown above. This faculty of man is what is called rationality, which every man has from creation.

427². As those in celestial love have wisdom inscribed on their life, whatever they hear they at once perceive to be true or not . . .

P. 24. Good is not Known . . . except by relation to what is less good, and by opposition from evil: all the Perceptive and sensitive are thence, because their quality is thence. Ex.

—^c. But an opposite may take away, or may exalt, the perceptions and sensations. Ex.

28³. The Angels receive the influx (of the Lord) in the perception of truth, and in the thought; for in these the influx appears to them; but not in the affections. Now, as the perceptions and thoughts appear to the Angels as theirs, when yet they are from the affections which are from the Lord, there is the appearance that the Angels conjoin themselves reciprocally with the Lord; when yet the Lord conjoins them with Himself; for the affection itself produces these perceptions and thoughts . . . for no one can perceive and think anything without affection; and everyone perceives and thinks according to the affection.

33. The perceptions and thoughts of the love (of evil) are as many as are the falsities which favour the evils and confirm them.

—³. As the influx of the Lord is into the love of good and its affections, and, through these, into the perceptions and thoughts . . . so the influx of Hell is into the love of evil and its affections . . . and through these into the perceptions and thoughts . . .

34. The reason the degrees of wisdom are perceived, is that the love enters through the affections into the perceptions and thoughts . . . So, also, is perceived how the man is meditating, perceiving, and thinking; but not how their soul, which is the affection of good and truth, is producing these things.

36. The wisdom which comes to perception is the perception of truth from the affection of it, especially the perception of spiritual truth . . . Those who are in the perception of spiritual truth, from the affection of it, are also in the perception of moral and civil truth; for the affection of spiritual truth is the soul of these perceptions.

39. The felicities of Heaven cannot be described in words, but can be perceived in Heaven with the sense; for that which is perceived with the sense only, cannot be described; because it does not fall into the ideas of thought . . .

57. It is the like in men as to their affections which are of love, and perceptions which are of wisdom. The variety of both is infinite and eternal; and in like manner their fructifications and multiplications. Ex.

105. The internal of thought is from the life's love and its affections, and the derivative perceptions . . .

106^e. The life's love rules the whole man through its affections and derivative perceptions, and through its delights and the derivative thoughts; the internal of the mind through the affections and derivative perceptions . . . 108.

107. Celestial (or heavenly) love, with the affections of good and truth, and the derivative perceptions . . . may be compared to a tree . . . The branches with the leaves are the affections of good and truth with their perceptions.

110. With those in celestial (or heavenly) love . . . the life's love, with its affections of good, and their perceptions of truth, is like a soul in the things which they think, and thence speak and act.

136. For there are many things, which, when heard, are at once perceived to be so . . .

150². For that which the Lord teaches, He gives man to perceive in the reason, and this in two ways; one, in that the man sees in himself that it is so as soon as he hears it; the other, in that he understands it by means of reasons: to see in himself, is in his internal man; and to understand by means of reasons, is in his external man. Examp.

156. As there cannot be given to man—so long as he is in the world—the perception of sensation that he lives from the Lord alone . . .

168. Interior illustration from the Lord is that man, from the first hearing, perceives whether what is said is truth or not. Exterior illustration is thence, in the thought. —², Ex. and Examps.

—². These, and other like things, man perceives interiorly in himself, when he hears them. The reason he perceives them, is that he has rationality, and this is in the light of Heaven, which illustrates.

—³. The thought is in this illustration in so far as it remains in the perception which it has from the interior illustration . . .

170. There is also another illustration, by which it is revealed to the man in what faith, intelligence, and wisdom he is; which revelation is such, that he perceives it in himself. Ex.

173. It follows that from the light in its origin, there is light in its own derivations, which are perceptions and thoughts about any Thing whatever.

—². There is one only life . . . and perception and thought are of life; and therefore from the same fountain as life comes from, come also perception and thought.

174. These (operations of the internal organs) do not come to man's perception and sensation.

175. That it is a law . . . that man should not perceive and feel anything of the operation of the Divine Providence . . . Gen.art. 176.

194. These affections adjoin to themselves consorts . . . the interior affections, consorts which are called perceptions.

195. Therefore . . . every perception and thought has its pleasantness . . .

233¹². The proprium of man . . . as to perceptions . . . is like an owl.

252. The worshipper of self and of nature . . . when he thinks according to his own perception . . .

298⁴. That the Divine Providence continually makes man see truth, and also gives the affection of perceiving it, and receiving it. Ex.

318⁸. No others are intelligent than those who perceive truth to be truth, and confirm this by Truths continually perceived. . . The difference between the light of confirmation and the light of the perception of truth cannot be discerned . . .

321³. These sometimes receive some answer by a living perception in the thought . . .

324³. This descended from Heaven into the common perception (of the Sophi).

R. 37. A manifest perception of Divine truth revealed from Heaven. Sig. and Ex. E.55.

42. The inversion of the state of those who are in the good of life as to the perception of truth in the Word, when they turn themselves to the Lord. Sig. and Ex.

226. Divine influx, consequent elevation of mind, and manifest perception then. Sig. and Ex.

236. Illustration, perception, and instruction, from the Lord. Sig. and Ex. E.273.

354. The perception of use, and of what use is, with those who will be in the Lord's New Heaven and New Church. Sig. and Ex.

— . There is an interior perception of uses with those who have conquered in temptations; for by temptations the interiors of the mind are opened. The perception which they have, is described in Jer.xxxi.33, 34. They feel in themselves what good is, and see in themselves what truth is.

796. That with (these) there is not any illustration from the Lord, and consequent perception of spiritual truth. Sig. and Ex.

875². The derivations of love are called affections: and through these are produced perceptions and thus thoughts.

—⁵. From knowledge, afterwards from perception, and at last from sight from interior light, I have acknowledged that . . .

—¹⁵. I said, You comprehend (this) from the common perception which man has from the influx of light from Heaven when he hears any truth; but you do not comprehend from the Proper perception which man has from the influx of light from the world. These two perceptions, internal and external, or spiritual and natural, with the wise make a one. You, too, can make them a one, if you look to the Lord, and remove evils.

914. Every man has exterior and interior thought: interior thought is in the light of Heaven, and is called perception . . .

M. 28. Man has common perception, which is the same thing as the influx of Heaven into the interiors of his mind, from which he perceives truths within himself, and as it were sees them, and especially this truth:

that man lives after death—happily, if he lives well: and unhappily, if evilly . . .

42. From illustration thence I perceived . . . Presently, there was heard a voice from Heaven . . . We have perceived, and now we see . . . It has pleased the Lord to open to thee the Heavens, in order that into the interiors of thy mind there may flow illustrating light, and thence perception.

—³. I perceived that they represented . . .

51^e. When conjugal love becomes of the spirit, it becomes more interior and pure, and thence more perceptible: and all delight increases according to the perception . . .

147. Everyone sees (this) from common perception . . . But, as all have not common perception . . .

166. That for the sake of this conjunction . . . there has been given to the wife a perception of the husband's affections. Ex.

167. That wives hide this perception with themselves . . . Ex.

168. That this perception is the wisdom of the wife, and is not possible with the man. Ex.

— . The Masculine is to perceive from the understanding; and the Feminine is [to perceive] from love; and the understanding perceives also those things which are above the body, and outside the world . . . but love, not beyond that which it feels . . .

173. That the wife thus receives the image of her husband in herself, and thence perceives, sees, and feels his affections. Ex.

315¹⁰. All things of love are called affections, and all things of wisdom are called perceptions . . .

359^e. Lest with the love there be extinguished all the . . . perceptibility of delight . . .

I. 1². It is according to order for the cogitative mind to inflow into the sight . . . and for the perceptive mind to inflow into the hearing . . .

T. 42. The highest region (of the mind) is opened by perceptions of Truths, both moral and spiritual.

—². The perfection of life consists not in thought; but in the perception of truth from the light of truth. . . Some men, as soon as they hear truth, perceive that it is truth: these are represented there by eagles. There are others who do not perceive truth, but conclude it by confirmations . . . There are others who do not want, and also who cannot, perceive truth, but only falsity. Ex.

61. From the things of order, God perceives, knows, and sees everything contrary to order. Ex.

— . These are distinctly perceived from their opposites. Ex.

62. The perception of opposites is different from the perception of relatives. Ex.

—². As God perceives and sees, and thence Knows, all the relatives in Heaven . . . and thence perceives, sees, and Knows all the opposite relatives in Hell . . . it is evident that God is omniscient . . . thus that He perceives, sees, and Knows their evils and falsities from the good and truth in which He is.

76. The Angels perceived this (meditation of mine).

... One of them said, We have perceived here that you have meditated on the creation . . . We now perceive that so great a universe could not have been hatched from (such an egg). . . We now perceive that out of nothing, nothing is made . . .

[T.76]². I replied . . . I perceived that it would be vain . . . and once, when I was in illustration, it was given to perceive that . . .

—³. When I have been in illustration, I have perceived that . . .

—⁴. From the light in which are the perceptions of your understanding, you may clearly see . . .

78³. The perceptions of His wisdom are infinite . . . and there are the like correspondences (there) with those who receive . . . perceptions from God.

135³. Three Angels were then associated with me, in order that I might speak from interior perception . . .

155. There are four (Divine virtues) which follow in order with the clergy: illustration, perception, disposition, and instruction. Illustration is from the Lord. Perception is with the man, according to the state of his mind as formed by doctrinal things. If these are true, the perception becomes clear from the light which illustrates; but if they are false, the perception becomes obscure, which may however appear as if clear, from confirmations . . .

165. This is repugnant to the common perception of all men in the universal world.

238. This delight of the Angels is communicated to the man, and makes . . . a communication of perceptions.

339. In order to affect, there must be perception . . . and this man has only in the Natural.

349. From the perception concerning faith which there is at this day . . .

361. The spiritual is within the Natural with those who are in faith in the Lord, and in charity towards the neighbour, and therefore the Natural with them is transparent . . . (and) whenever the man thinks, reads, or hears anything, he sees within himself whether it is the Truth, or not: he perceives this from the Lord, from whom spiritual light and heat inflows into the higher sphere of his understanding . . .

365². The Divine love . . . is perceived by the Angels as heat . . .

—³. The Angels perceive (in a man's voice) all the affections of his love . . .

— . These things, although innumerable . . . are perceived by the sense of the soul as a one.

—^e. It is spiritual light from which the understanding sees and perceives rational things analytically, as the eye sees and perceives natural things symmetrically.

393. Who does not see (this) from a certain interior perception . . .

420. In common perception, the mind is the internal man.

504. I gathered that one (of the Spirits) could perceive Truths like the other, could acknowledge them when perceived, and thus think from the understanding

... From this freedom in their minds there appeared a lucidity, from the first sight, which was that of perception, to the last, which was that of the eye . . .

571. In proportion as the good of love acts the first part . . . the man . . . feels the good of charity, and perceives the truth of faith . . .

603. (Man could not see what he thinks) unless there were an interior thought which is called perception, which looks into the lower, which is called thought.

839. The men who perceive Things interiorly are in the light of truth . . . and those who perceive Things exteriorly are in no light of truth . . .

—^e. Internal men perceive that (they know comparatively few things); whereas external men perceive no otherwise than that they know all things.

D. 897. Concerning interior perception and persuasion. Ex. 1405.

1401. That the Word perception can be applied to the Angels. As to perceive relates to both the understanding and the affection, so as to involve both, the word is suited to the Angels, who perceive the things of faith both ways—utroque—for they perceive at once that it is truth.

1739. There is a more interior and an inmost sense and perception . . .

1884. Concerning a certain perception, by which it is Known how much of life there is. There is a certain sensation, or sensitive perception . . .

1987. There are still some who retain much from the Ancient Church . . . and who also have this, above others, that they perceive whether [a thing is] good. Ex. (See also D. 1048.)

1988. I spoke with them about perception . . .

2148. The Lord infuses into everyone the perception of immortality . . .

2163. That the Lord provides, sees, perceives, and rules, everything . . .

2415. The perception of spirits, and of Angels, from the general state. Ex.

2416. From spiritual perception it was given me to know that . . .

2420^e. The understanding of what is unknown is wont to exist, but not the perception [of it].

2854. That . . . perceptive affection distinguishes man from the brutes.

2942. That interior Spirits have a subtle perception.

3046. The angelic Spirits of Jupiter are in celestial perception . . .

3235. So that (the Spirits of Mercury) know distinctly what perception is, which our Spirits do not know . . .

3255. They have an exquisite perception.

3363. They thought and spoke from cupidities; thus from perception.

3399. When there is interior respiration, the interior senses and perceptions are alive . . .

3422^e. Has no perception of what an idea is . . .

4691. Concerning intelligence and perception in Heaven.—There are in Heaven those who have perception. . . (From the good Angels around) they have a general perception, but not of the truth of faith in special. These are such as have not . . . studied the truths of faith. They are in perception, and not in intelligence . . . They believe that everything of Heaven consists in perception . . . They can be led as easily by the evil as by the good ; and can have innumerable opinions about one Thing, and not know which is true . . .

4779^e. By means of knowledges, they have extinguished all the gift of perception . . .

4820. When I was writing, and was in a certain intermediate celestial perception . . .

5120. When these things are excited, (with the celestial) then perception takes place, not only in the thought, but in the whole Angel.

5357. The English have a perception sufficiently exquisite that it is so, when it is said from reason . . .
5825. J.(Post.)6.

5587². The things which enter through the hearing into the perception, enter into the interior man . . .

5640. Few (devils) can by affections counterfeit Angels of light in the Heavens, because there is there an exquisite perception of such things ; but (they can) in the lower sphere, and with all the simple at the threshold of Heaven ; for these have not interior perception . . .

D. Min. 4636. In course of time, by instruction, experience, inspiration, and revelation, it was given to (the sons of the Most Ancient Church) to know all the things of faith, to which they at once assented inwardly, so that they had a perception of them, because it agreed with their affections.

4644. Concerning perception. — Perception is twofold ; one of which is in civil and moral things, and is of what is just and right ; the other is in celestial and spiritual things, and is of good and truth. The former is for man in the world, and is given naturally ; the latter is for man in the other life, or for his spirit. . . The lower perception . . . exists with men, and is of what is just and right, and is called common sense. Those who have a perception of what is just, can at once, from a few things which they know, perceive whether it is just or not ; but those who have a perception of what is right, cannot do so, but [they do it] from the laws and such things as they have learned. The former perception is more excellent than the latter. These perceptions exist naturally. But at this day there is not given the perception of celestial good and of spiritual truth. That of celestial good was given with those who were of the Celestial Church, and is called the perception of good, and is immediately from the Lord. The perception of truth is given with those who have conscience, but according to the truth which they have learned, have impressed on themselves, and know : this, too, is from the Lord through conscience. These are called the spiritual . . . From the perception in civil and moral things, they are called rational ; from the perception of good, they are called celestial ; and of truth, spiritual.

4655. Therefore the simple have a much clearer perception as to good and truth . . .

—^e. Such wise ones . . . cannot have one single perception of spiritual truth.

4718. Concerning a certain infernal, who had a remarkable perception of truth.

4729. Concerning perception.—I said to the Angels that men have not perception because they would increase their wickedness (by) injuring each other interiorly and clandestinely. It belongs to perception to know what another is thinking, and willing . . .

4730. Brute animals have perception, each in their own species, and this because they are in their own order . . . They know their food ; their master ; their enemies ; their companions . . . not from smell ; for perception is the beginning of smell . . .

4731. (So) the sparrows know from perception that the pea lies hidden below.

4746. Concerning those who are in intellectual perception . . . and yet are evil.

E. 8². Only those have spiritual perception who are in the good of love. The reason is that they receive not only in the hearing, but also in the love . . . and those who receive thus, see the things in their understanding . . .

198. To see truths and their quality is of perception ; to live according to them is of reception.

260. These truths are seen intellectually ; that is, perceived ; which sight, or perception, cannot be described in human words . . .

273. For that which enters through the hearing into the mind is both seen and perceived ; it is seen in the understanding, and is perceived through communication with the will.

307². The Angels of the Third Heaven have perception ; those of the Second and Ultimate Heavens have illustration of the understanding. They are distinguished by this : that perception is a full confirmation from influx from the Lord ; but illustration is the spiritual sight of the understanding . . .

354. Attention and perception. Sig. and Ex.

— . For that which comes from the Inmost Heaven is perceived ; but that which comes from the Middle Heaven is understood . . .

405⁴⁷. The understanding of truth is from the light of truth ; but the perception of truth is from the heat or love of truth.

445². When what is believed is seen and perceived, it is not called faith, but apperception and perception . . .

471. Influx out of Heaven from the Lord, and thence perception. Sig. and Ex.

506. That the perceptions and Knowledges of truth and good have perished through cupidities . . . Sig. and Ex.

—⁴. When the perception concerning spiritual truths and goods perishes, the Knowledge of them also perishes . . . The perception of a Thing makes the Knowledge of it. Knowledge without perception is dead . . .

[E.] 514⁵. That there is no perception of doctrine from the Word. Sig. For like doctrinal things from the Word are not true without spiritual perception . . .

520³. From good comes the perception of truth, but not from evil . . .

538. The atmosphere (also) corresponds to natural thought and perception . . .

546. That [they should hurt] only the understanding of truth and the perception of good . . . Sig. and Ex.

547. That they should not be deprived of the faculty of understanding truth and of perceiving good. Sig. and Ex.

551. That they want to destroy the faculty of perceiving the good which is of spiritual life. Sig. and Ex.

—e. To perceive truth from the affection of the will is to perceive good . . .

602. Instruction from Heaven and perception concerning the last state of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

616. The faculty of perceiving from the Lord the quality of the Word. Sig. and Ex.

638³. Every Church is a Church from the Knowledges of truth and good, and according to the perception of them.

710³⁰. The natural man does not enjoy the intelligence of the spiritual man, nor the perception of the celestial man.

790⁹. All these things, which are from the spiritual mind in the natural, come under the view, and into the perception, of man.

825³. (Such a man) is daily taught by the Lord what to do and speak . . . for when evils have been removed he is continually under the Lord's auspices, and is in illustration. But he is led and taught, not immediately, through any dictate, nor through any perceptible inspiration; but through influx into his spiritual delight, whence he has perception according to the truths of which his understanding is composed . . .

1067^e. When a man is reading the Word, from the Lord, and not from himself, he is in company with the Angels, and is interiorly in perception like the spiritual perception of the Angels; and this spiritual perception . . . inflows into his natural perception, which is proper to him in the world, and illustrates it . . .

1138⁶. The perception is then reciprocal; grateful to the Lord . . . and happy to the man . . .

De Verbo 12. This will of good, when determined to that use, becomes in the understanding first the affection of truth; then the perception of truth; and presently, by means of rational light, the thought of truth . . . D. Wis. x. 1. 5.

D. Wis. x. 5². The correspondence of the variations of sound, which derive very little from the understanding, is with perception; those which derive more, with the variation of perceptions; and those which derive much, with thought and its variations.

xi. 2a. The illustration which (such) do not deny, is here meant by perception. (Continued under ENLIGHTEN.)

C. 123. All have a common (or general) perception of truth; but a love of what is lower casts down the man . . . into perception from proprium. This perception is material, which communicates with the sight of the eye. It is phantasy, or imagination.

Perceive. Persentiscere.

M. 55³. It has been given us to perceive-percipere-the influx of this love . . . and we have perceived clearly that in sweetness it surpasses every other love . . .

D. 284^e. Although they do not know what good is, still, by their contrary nature, they perceive it.

E. 618. All the adulterated good of truth . . . is sensitively perceived as bitter.

Perdition. See under Destroy-PERDERE.

Perennial. Perennis.

Perennity. Perennitas.

A. 8057. The worship of the Lord unceasing on account of the deliverance. Sig.

9286³. These feasts were instituted for the perpetual remembrance of these things.

E. 992³. The effect opens this vein (of love), and makes the perennity . . .

Peres. Peres.

R. 313. 'Peres' (Dan. v. 28), or 'to divide,' = to disperse.

Perez. Peres.

A. 3325³. Occurs.

4812. The sons from Tamar = the two essentials of the Church . . . 'Perez' = faith.

4927. 'She called his name Perez' (Gen. xxxviii. 29) = the quality; namely, of the separation of truth from good apparently . . . For, in the Original Language, 'Perez' is 'a breach.'

6024³. The sons of Judah, Er and Onan, and Shelah, and Perez, and Zarah' (Gen. xlv. 12) = celestial love, and its doctrinal things. . . 'The sons of Perez, Hezron, and Hamul' = the truths of this good, which are the goods of charity.

Perfect. Perfectus.

Perfect, To. Perficere.

Perfection. Perfectio.

See under INTEGRITY.

A. 633^e. As a man or Angel can be perfected, so, of the Divine mercy, he is perfected . . . Every man can be perfected. Ex.

894. There is no fixed time in which man is regenerated so that he can say, I am now perfect. Sig. and Ex.

—². In some states, man can be said to be more perfect; but in an indefinite number of others, not so. Those who have been regenerated (here) are constantly being perfected in the other life.

935². There are such alternations in order that man may be perfected more and more . . . For without alterations . . . he can never be perfected . . .

1285^e. The varieties . . . contribute to the perfection of the whole.

1414^e. The Lord is thus the Perfect Man . . .

1555^e. When man has become such (here), he is continually perfected (there).

1726. 'Salem' means 'Peace,' and also 'Perfection.'

2094^e. The spiritual (in Heaven) are thus perfected. Ex.

2189². The more of truth is insinuated, the more is the life of charity perfected.

2219². He should . . . rise up there into a heavenly state continually more perfect.

2249^e. According to the purification of their ideas (the Angels) are perfected for the reception of heavenly things. Heaven is not pure . . . (but) they are continually being perfected.

2261^e. Such as is the conjunction (of the goods and truths), and the consequent faculty that these can be perfected there, such is the state of blessedness . . .

2297. As the infants are perfected . . .

2490^e. Those in the truth of faith and the affection of good . . . are continually perfected thence.

2525. 'Rectitude' is expressed by a (Hebrew) word which means also integrity and perfection . . .

2551². At the same time (the Angels) are instructed and perfected (by the internal sense). 2574^e, Ex.

— . How the Lord perfected His Rational.

2595. (Thus are the gentiles) more and more perfected.

2759^e. Such (as rusties) are informed there ; and are perfected in the good of love and truth of faith.

3200^e. For man can never be perfected.

3207^e. It appears that truth perfects good, when yet good perfects truth.

3308^e. Thus are the Angels continually being perfected.

3350^e. The more (Angels) there are, the more distinct and perfect each and all things become ; and the more also as the Angels are of a more interior Heaven ; for all perfection increases towards the interiors.

3629^e. For perfection and strength are from the unanimous multitude of many.

4145². Thus is the man who is being regenerated perfected by degrees. Examp.

4295³. The Angels are continually being perfected by the Lord, and yet to eternity can never be perfected so much that their wisdom and intelligence can be compared to (that) of the Lord . . .

4379². Still, to eternity man can never be perfected beyond being like an egg to the things beyond.

4464⁴. Will there see, hear, etc., more perfectly than in the body . . .

4803. The states of good Spirits and Angels are continually being changed and perfected . . . But still no Angel can ever arrive at absolute perfection. The Lord alone is perfect. In Him, and from Him, is all perfection.

—². When these are being perfected, they are reduced to this . . .

5122³. To eternity no one can ever be so regenerated as that he can in any way be called perfect. Ex.

5146. In the interior Heaven there is no idea of interior and exterior things, because something of space adheres to this idea ; but there is the idea of a more perfect or imperfect state ; for interior things are in a more perfect state than exterior ; because interior things are nearer the Divine.

5962². (Without these alternations the Angels) cannot be continually perfected ; for they are relatives ; and there is a more perfect perception from relatives . . .

6110³. By such alternations all are perfected.

6125. Every man can be perfected as to his Intellectual . . .

6232². The Angels are continually being perfected to eternity ; that is, they are continually growing in good and truth ; and yet they can never come to any degree of perfection ; for there are always indefinite things beyond . . .

6285. The greater this extension is, and the more it is according to heavenly order, the more perfect is the state.

6648^e. (By this continual increase of truths) the Angels are continually being perfected.

7541³. Those elevated into Heaven are perfected to eternity.

8108. There are perpetual changes of state there ; for the Angels are continually being perfected ; and cannot be perfected without them. 8426². 10200². H. 158².

8326^e. Regeneration . . . is continually being perfected, not only (here), but to eternity ; and yet can never arrive at such perfection that it can be compared to the Divine.

8431^e. Alternations thus follow in succession, in order that the man may be perfected . . .

8452. Good Spirits and Angels are remitted into the state of the natural affections . . . in order that they may be perfected thence ; for all are perfected by the implantation of faith and charity in their external man. Ex.

8603^e. All things which are of life relate to truth, and their perfection to good ; in the opposite sense, to falsity, and their imperfection to evil.

9334^e. Man's regeneration in the world is only a plane to perfect his life to eternity.

9503. The more perfectly the Angels receive the Divine truth which is from the Lord, thus the Lord, the more perfect human forms they are ; and, at last, so perfect, that their beauty exceeds belief.

9568. 'One solid of pure gold' = entire and perfect because from the same good . . . For that which is wholly from good is entire and perfect. By what is wholly from good, and thus by what is entire and perfect, is meant when good is the all in all . . .

[A.] 964⁸. For the more interior every state is, the more perfect it is; and the more exterior, the more imperfect.

966². The best and purest things (there), thus those which are more perfect than the rest, are in the inmost, and the things which proceed thence towards the exteriors, are less perfect according to the degree of their removal . . . ; and, at last, those which are in the extremes are the least perfect of all. Things are said to be less perfect, which can be more easily wrested from their form and beauty, and thus from their order. . . . The seeds (in fruits) are in a more perfect state than the pulp which is outside them . . . (And so) the germ which is in the inmost of the seeds is in a more perfect state than the things outside of it . . . (So in Heaven) the inmost things, being nearer the Lord, are in a more perfect state . . . (And in each Heaven) the inmost is more perfect . . . Likewise with the man who is in the good of love and truths of faith: his internal is in a more perfect state than his external . . . In like manner in every perfect form: the inmost of it is the best.

982⁵. For anything to be perfect, it must be distinct in three degrees.

986⁴. There were four rows, and in each row three stones, in order to represent the conjunction of all truths from one good, and thus perfection . . . By 'three' is signified perfection.

1018⁰. 'Square' = perfect.

1018¹³. The things in a more interior degree are more perfect than those in an exterior one . . .

1019⁴. May be likened to the flower, tree, or animal itself, the perfection of which increases towards the interiors; for that which has been created by the Divine, the more interior it is, the more perfect it is . . .

1025⁸. For the more interior heavenly things are, the more perfect they are; for all perfection increases towards the interiors; and all perfection is from good, that is, through good from the Lord.

1028⁶. For Divine things increase in perfection towards the interiors; until at last they are of ineffable perfection and beauty.

H. 34. All perfection increases towards the interiors, and decreases towards the exteriors; because interior things are nearer the Divine . . . Angelic perfection consists in intelligence, wisdom, love, and in every good, and the derivative felicity; but not in felicity without the former things . . . As the interiors with the Angels of the Inmost Heaven are open in the third degree, their perfection immensely surpasses the perfection of the Angels in the Middle Heaven . . . and in like manner does the perfection of (these) Angels surpass the perfection of the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven.

43. In like manner in each Society . . . those who are more perfect—that is, who excel in good, and thus in love, wisdom, and intelligence—are in the middle . . .

56. The variety in the worship of the Lord . . . does no harm . . . for the perfection of Heaven is thence. Ex.

—². That all perfection is thence, is evident from all beauty, pleasantness, and delight . . . for these . . . flow from the harmony of many concordant things . . .

71. The more there are in one Society . . . the more perfect is its human form; for variety disposed into a heavenly form makes perfection.

133^e. The most perfect Angels are those who receive (Divine truth and Divine good) in a like degree.

221². The reason there are such things (as preachings) in Heaven, is that the Angels are continually being perfected in wisdom and love . . . 225.

267. Wisdom, like all perfection, increases towards the interiors . . .

271². The Angels of the Third Heaven are perfected in wisdom through the hearing . . .

273. The Angels are continually being perfected in wisdom; but still cannot to eternity be so perfected that there is any ratio between their wisdom and that of the Lord . . .

345^e. The state of the men who grow up on the Earth can become equally as perfect as that of the infants who are in Heaven . . .

418². For all perfection in the Heavens increases according to the plurality. Ex.

459². In a word, all perfection increases towards the interiors, and decreases towards the exteriors; and as perfection increases and decreases, so also does beauty.

469. Hence Spirits and Angels are perfected in intelligence and wisdom by means of the Knowledges of good and truth equally as are men.

—². With every Spirit and Angel remains the affection such as he had in the world; and this is afterwards perfected, by impletion, . . . to eternity. Ex.

J. 12. That the perfection of Heaven increases according to the plurality. Gen.art.

Life 84^e. Thus they are 'perfect' (John xvii. 23) when the Lord is in them. These are they who are called . . . 'perfect as is our Father in the Heavens' (Matt. v. 48).

W. 199. That all perfections increase and ascend with degrees and according to them. Gen.art.

200. Perfection and imperfection are general predicates; for they are predicated of life, of forces, and of forms. Perfection of life is perfection of love and wisdom; and (therefore) is perfection of the will and the understanding, and of the derivative affections and thoughts; and, as spiritual heat is the containant of love, and spiritual light of wisdom, the perfection of these may be referred to perfection of life.

—². Perfection of forces is the perfection of all things which are actuated and moved by means of life, but which have not life in them . . .

—³. Perfection of forms and perfection of forces make a one; for such as the forces are, such are the forms . . . The forms which are not at the same time forces, are also perfect according to degrees. 201.

202. The Angels in the Highest Heaven are in all perfection above those in the Middle Heaven; and those in (this) are in all perfection above those of the lowest Heaven. The degrees of the perfections are such that the Angels of the lowest Heaven cannot ascend to the first threshold of the perfections of those of the middle Heaven; nor these to the first threshold of the perfections of the highest Heaven. . . The cause is that they are consociated according to discrete degrees. . .

203. As the interiors of man . . . are like the Heavens as to degrees . . . their perfections also are like. But these perfections do not appear to any man so long as he lives in the world. . .

204. It appears as if prior things were less perfect than posterior ones, or simples than composites; but prior things . . . are more perfect. Ex. . . Perfection itself is in the Lord, and thence in the Sun . . . and thence in the things which proximately succeed; and so on in order down to the lowest things . . . Unless there were such an eminent perfection in prior things . . . neither man, nor animal, could come forth from seed . . . For everything prior . . . and more simple, being more perfect, is more exempt from injury.

205. In a like (successive) order are all the perfections of the forms and forces there.

207. Inmost in (the fibres, etc.) are the simplest things which are the most perfect.

227. The perfection of the created universe is from the similitude of generals and particulars . . . as to these degrees. . .

346². As every . . . discrete degree decreases by continuity from its perfection to its imperfection . . . animals do so; and therefore there are perfect, less perfect, and imperfect ones. Enum.

P. 4¹. That a form makes a one the more perfectly in proportion as the things which enter into it are distinctly different, and yet are united. Ex.

34². The natural degree with man can be perfected to its height, and yet cannot enter the spiritual degree . . . Ex.

334. Every Angel is perfected in wisdom to eternity; but each according to the degree of the affection of good and truth in which he was when he left the world. It is this degree which is being perfected to eternity. That which is beyond this degree is outside the Angel . . . and that which is outside him cannot be perfected within him. Sig.

335. The media by which man . . . is perfected as to the understanding, are called truths. Ex. . . There are media for forming and perfecting civil natural life; for forming and perfecting rational moral life; and for forming and perfecting celestial spiritual life. Ex.

—^e. The media through which man is formed and perfected as to the will, are of equal number. . .

M. 133^e. Thus the imperfection of the birth of man becomes his perfection; and the perfection of the birth of a beast is its imperfection.

T. 42². The perfection of life does not consist in thought; but in the perception of truth from the light of truth. Ex.

349. That an abundance of Truths cohering as in a bundle exalts and perfects faith. Gen.art. 352.

403. That these three loves, when rightly subordinated, perfect the man . . . Gen.art.

D. 1339. In order for anything to be perfect, it must put on a species of body. Ex.

2250^e. Therefore, the less hard man is, that is, the less he has from himself . . . the more perfect he is. Ex.

2404. (Thus) an Angel can never be perfected to eternity; and can scarcely be perfected as to the more general things.

3475. Unless these (more interior) minds were in a state of perfection, men could never be reformed. . .

D. Min. 4646. The inmost or spiritual man is perfected in the other life, in so far as it can have concordance in the natural man; but this latter cannot be perfected in the other life; but remains such as it has been acquired in the life of the body; and is perfected in this [life] by the removal of the love of self and of the world. . .

E. 294⁹. 'Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day in which thou wast created' (Ezek.xxviii.15). Ex.

D. Love xiii⁴. That all perfection increases towards the interiors. Ex.

Period. Periodus.

Periodical. Periodicus.

A. 893². Some whole period is designated in the Word by either 'day,' 'week,' 'month,' or 'year;' even if it were one of a hundred or a thousand years; like the 'days' in Gen.i., by which are signified the periods of the regeneration of the man of the Most Ancient Church . . .

1335. Thus by 'a year,' as also by 'a day,' and 'a week,' is signified an entire period, less or greater, of fewer or of more years; nay, a period abstractedly . . . Here . . . the second period of the Church is signified, which was when this second Church began.

2044. 'A week'=an entire period of any state or time; as of reformation, of regeneration, of temptation; both of a man in particular, and of the Church in general. Thus, a period, whether it be of a thousand years, of a hundred, or of ten, or of as many days, hours, minutes, and so on, is called 'a week.' 2213^e.

2457. Otherwise all those who are here represented by Lot would also have perished. Sig. and Ex.

2687. 'To see death'=to perish.

2754^e. (These cruel adulterers) account it as nothing if the universal world were to perish for them.

2912. A new Church in place of the former which has perished . . .

2959. When the Church completely perishes . . .

3116^e. If the least of falsity were conjoined with good, or the least of truth with evil, the man would perish to eternity: for he would hang in the other life between Hell and Heaven . . .

3340^e. Unless this fury (of the Hells) were continually repelled by the Lord, the whole human race would perish.

3387. Good is said to be 'slain,' or to perish, when it is not received . . .

3938⁴. They believe that if they were deprived of (the delights of the affections of evil and falsity) they would altogether perish.

4217³. (Without these external bonds) the human race would perish.

4257^e. Man perishes completely, when the Church . . . with him perishes. Sig. and Ex.

4288^e. Without the communication of Heaven with man through something of the Church, the human race would perish.

4423. Cannot apprehend but that those of the Old Church . . . will perish, as did the Antediluvians, and the Jews . . . But, when the Church has been vastated . . . it perishes principally as to the states of its interior things . . .

4493⁵. Would have perished to eternity.

4519. To perish. Sig.

[A.] 4687². Thus the human race would perish.

4785. That the Ancient Church was perishing. Sig.

4847. Fear lest the representative of a Church should perish. Sig. and Ex.

5302. Lest man should perish by the defect of truth. Sig. and Ex.

8699. That thus the truth which has been inseminated would perish. Sig. and Ex.

8797. That anyone of the Spiritual Church who intrudes himself to the celestial will perish. Sig. and Ex. 8831.

9206. That the goods with them will perish. Sig. and Ex.

—². Therefore, when the truth with man perishes, the good also perishes.

9207. That truths will perish at the same time. Sig. and Ex.

9457⁶. Without the conjunction of the Lord through Heaven, man would perish.

10276^e. On the breaking (of the communication with the Heavens through the Word) the human race in this Earth would perish. Ex. H.305(c).

10438. That those in good would perish. Sig. and Ex.

10452². If the (Word) were not in the world, the conjunction with Heaven would perish; and with this conjunction, all the good of the will, and the truth of the understanding with man; and, with these, that human itself which consociates man with man . . .

10506. That those who avert themselves from the Divine, will perish. Sig. and Ex.

10533. That if the internal were opened with that nation, and the Divine were to inflow, they would utterly perish. Sig. and Ex.

10632^e. Without conjunction through such a Word, Heaven would completely recede from man, and thus man would perish.

10791. If (order is not kept by prefects) the human race will perish. Ex.

H. 592. Thus the Spiritual World must perish, if good did not react against evil . . . Unless the Divine alone (restrained the insurrection of evil), both Heaven and Hell would perish; and, with these, the whole human race.

J. 1². The visible heaven will not perish . . .

10². It is possible that the human race might perish upon one Earth . . .

—⁴. The human race on this Earth would have perished . . . unless the Lord had . . . put on the Human in this Earth . . .

P. 217⁷. Everything which perishes . . . is within not anything . . .

281. Unless man had full freedom . . . he would perish in toto.

3893^e. I should perish at any moment; and so would all the men of this Earth.

E. 502⁶. 'They that perish in the land of Asshur' (Is.xxvii.13)=those who have been deceived by false reasonings.

684¹³. 'Lest He be angry, and ye perish in the way' (Ps.ii.12)=lest evils invade you, and ye be condemned.

Perishable. See under FALLING.

Peritoneum. Peritonaeum.

A. 5377. Here, the subject of the correspondence of the peritoneum, etc., shall be continued.

8980^e. (Correspondence of the peritoneum.)

9216. So with the peritoneum; as this contains the viscera of the abdomen, they rest upon it, and have a common connection with it. P. 180⁴, Ex. T. 60², Ex.

Perizzite. Perisita, Perisacus.

A. 1573. 'The Canaanite and the Perizzite were then dwelling in the Land' (Gen. xiii. 7) = evils and falsities in the external man. . . 'The Perizzite' = the falsity (from the hereditary evil of the mother.) Ex.

1574. That 'the Perizzite' = falsity from evil. Ill.

1867. 'The Hittite, the Perizzite, and the Rephaim' (Gen. xv. 20) = the persuasions of falsity (which are to be expelled from the Lord's Kingdom).

4517. 'The Canaanite and the Perizzite' (Gen. xxxiv. 30) = those who are in good and truth. (Continued under CANAANITE.)

6859. '(To the place of) the Amorite and the Perizzite' (Ex. iii. 8) = (the region occupied) by evils and the derivative falsities. . . 'The Perizzite' = falsity. Ex. . . The second origin of falsity is the evil of the cupidities of the loves of self and of the world. . . This falsity is signified by 'the Perizzite.'

9316. 'And shall bring thee to the . . . Perizzite, etc.' (Ex. xxiii. 23) = when the Lord has protected against the evils and falsities which infest the Church . . . 10638.

Perjure. Pejere.

A. 5135⁵. The falsity which takes away the remains of truth is signified by 'he that sweareth falsely,' and 'the house of him that sweareth falsely' (Zech. v. 4).

Permanent. Permanens.

Permanent, To be. Permanere.

Permanence. Permanentia.

A. 3494. The good into which man is initiated when an infant, is permanent . . . and, as it is permanent, it becomes the good of life.

3502^e. Whatever does not enter through some delight . . . does not inhere, and so is not permanent.

9286. The permanent worship of the Lord, and thanksgiving on account of deliverance. Sig. and Ex.

9422². 'To sit' = to be permanent in a state.

H. 262^e. Writings in the Heavens which are not made by hand are not permanent.

426. Some remain (in the World of Spirits) for weeks only; some for many years . . .

J. 1². The visible heaven and habitable earth will both be permanent.

W. 268. That the evils and falsities confirmed with man are permanent . . . Ex.

P. 231^e. That he who is once converted into good and truth must persevere to the end of life. Sig.

317. That everything persuaded and confirmed is permanent with the man as his Own. Gen. art. —¹¹. 319.

319⁴. Such as a man is when he dies, such he remains to eternity. Ex.

R. 188. That meanwhile they should persevere in their truths and in their good. Sig.

M. 461⁶. Without the permanence of delight (Spirits of Hell) have no will, or sensation; thus no life.

E. 173. Permanence in a state of the good of love and of faith until the visitation. Sig.

197. 'He that overcometh' = him who perseveres even till death.

199. In the world it may be blotted out, if the man does not remain spiritual even to the end of life; but if he remains [so] it cannot. Ex.

217. Permanence in a state of faith from charity even to the end. Sig.

219. That those who persevere shall be in Divine truth in Heaven. Sig. and Ex.

222². To write is to commit to paper that which is to be permanent, and therefore, in the spiritual sense, it = that which is to be permanent in the life of man . . .

253. That he who perseveres to the end of life shall be conjoined with Heaven where the Lord is. Sig. and Ex.

687¹⁷. 'To sit' is a word significative of essence and of permanence in the state of the Thing and of life.

D. Wis. v^e. The coming forth and permanence of (these), is memory.

Permeate. Transmeare. A. 925⁸.

Permeability. Permeabilitas. M. 110².

Permit. Permittere.

Permission. Permissio.

See ALLOW.

A. 592^e. The evil of penalty is said to be permitted for the sake of the amendment of the evil. . . Hitherto no one has known what permission is. That which is permitted is supposed to be done by Him who permits, because He permits it. But the fact is quite otherwise.

986³. But they are not permitted to speak falsity . . .

1002². As man is such, he has been permitted, and is also now permitted (to kill animals and eat their flesh).

1327⁴. This is why man is permitted to live in pleasures, and in cupidities rather (than to commit profanation). Therefore the Jews are permitted to immerse themselves in avarice . . .

1384^e. Whether from the Lord's will, leave, or permission.

1661³. Man is then permitted to attribute the power to himself . . .

1664⁸. Not the least can be inflicted on man by evil Spirits which is not from permission . . .

1755. The Lord provides some things from permission, some from admission, some from leave, some from good-pleasure, and some from will. 2447².

1832³. Suppose that as the Lord permits evil, He is the cause of evil.

1874^e. It is afterwards insinuated that the Lord permits; but that all evil is from diabolical Spirits.

2180⁷. (Thus) sacrifices were not commanded, but permitted.

[A.] 2447². Some things of permission are from the laws of order as to good.

2768². Although it is predicated of God that He permits, it is not according to the idea which man has of permission; namely, that by permitting He concurs . . .

3246⁴. That these ancients had concubines . . . was from permission, for the sake of the representation . . . This was of permission, because they had no conjugal love . . . To such there could be permissions without injury to conjugal love . . .

3330². The Lord permits that such things should influence man at first . . .

4142. Not permitted by the Divine. Sig.

4459². Therefore it was permitted that they should have such an opinion concerning the resurrection.

4493⁶. (Why Hamor, etc., were permitted to be killed.)

—^e. When any such thing is permitted by the Lord, it is done through the evil, and through the infernals . . .

5057. Such (cruelties) are never permitted except to such . . .

6489. Nothing is permitted, except to the end that something of good may come of it. 6574^e.

6574². The Lord permits the infernals in the other life to lead the good into temptation . . . This is the means by which spiritual life is gifted . . .

6663^e. (The Hells) are not permitted to bring forth any other evils than such as can be turned into good . . .

6914^e. Many things commanded by Jehovah, in the internal sense do not signify that they are commanded, but that they are permitted.

7877^e. How the case is with permission cannot be told in a few words, because it involves very many arcana. When the impious are damned, and tormented, the permission is not from the Lord as of one who is willing, but as of one who is not willing . . .

8227². It is believed that evils are from the Divine, from the fact that the Divine permits, and does not take them away; and he who permits, and does not take away when he can, appears as if he wills it so . . . But the Divine permits, because He cannot inhibit and take away evils. Ex.

9940. Things from will are nearest the Lord; those from good-pleasure are a little more remote from Him; those from leave are still more remote; and those from permission are most remote from Him. These are the degrees of the influx and reception of the Divine; but each degree contains innumerable things . . . as, for instance, in the case of those things which happen from permission . . . for when a man examines them closely . . . he becomes confounded by the innumerable arcana therein; and yet the arcana of permission are relatively few . . .

10612. Permission because they insisted. Sig. and Ex.

10778. To leave man to do evil from his freedom, is called to permit. N.272.

P. 16. Therefore the Lord permits evil, not as one who is willing; but as one who is not able to resist it for the sake of the end, which is salvation.

232. On the Knowledge of this law depends the Knowledge of the laws of permission.

233^e. On account of this danger (of profanation) the Lord permits evils of life, and many heretical things of worship.

234. That the laws of permission are also laws of the Divine Providence. Chapter.

— . It is said that God permits a thing, which does not mean that He wills it; but that He cannot avert it, on account of the end, which is salvation.

—². Leading man away from evil, and to good . . . cannot be done without the permission of evil.

236. Some things shall now be enumerated which are of permission, and still are according to the laws of the Divine Providence . . . 249. D.2713.

250³. Why the Divine Providence permits the impious in heart to be raised to dignities and enriched with wealth. Ex.

251. (Why wars are permitted.)

259². It follows that . . . the permissions of dissensions and heresies are also according to the laws of the Divine Providence.

275. That evils are permitted for the sake of the end, which is salvation. Gen.art. 281, Ex.

296⁷. That the Divine Providence with the evil is the continual permission of evil, to the end that there may be a continual withdrawal from it. Ex. —¹³. 333.

R. 602. 'Granted to him' = that it was permitted; for all falsities of doctrine, like evils of life, take place from permission. Refs.

686^e. It is therefore among the laws of permission . . . that they should falsify truths in so far as they are in evils of life.

T. 479. That from the permission of evil . . . it evidently appears that man has free will in spiritual things. Gen.art.

D. 398. Concerning permissions. The doctrine of permissions is an entire doctrine. He who does not understand permissions, or conclude concerning permissions, falls into things of doubt and denial concerning the Power of God Messiah over the universe . . . Without permission no one can be reformed; for opposites must be induced . . .

401. Concerning permissions: that every single thing tends to the good of the universe, or of all. Ex.

418. How permissions are represented by nature. Ex.

824. Concerning permissions.—The doctrine of permissions involves also this: that evil Spirits pretend to dominate over the evil . . . But the permission does not extend further than that the man . . . may become better . . .

892. They can do nothing except from the Lord's good-pleasure, leave, or permission, which are distinct . . .

1944. That the permissions of evils from Spirits are represented by the remission of their endeavours. Ex.

1946. That the perversion of order is the general cause of permissions. Ex.

2098^e. If a Spirit purposes to give thanks, he cannot do so at all, except by manifest permission and leave . . .

2296. That the permission, leave, good-pleasure, and will, of the Lord, are in all things which happen ; but in application to the subjects. Ex.

3845². They are thus bent to such things as the Lord concedes, and permits, so that not a whit comes forth from them which is not of leave, if not evil ; or of permission, if evil.

4206. That evil punishes itself ; and concerning permission. 4275.

E. 159. 'Thou permittedst the woman Jezebel' (Rev. ii.20).

1159^e. From these things it is evident, that the laws of permission, which are many, proceed from the laws of Providence.

1174³. By leading, if he acknowledges the Divine Providence . . . by permitting, if he does not acknowledge it.

Perpendicular. Perpendicularis.

Perpendicularly. Perpendiculariter.

774. The Lord's presence is perpetual with every man . . .

Persecute, Pursue. Persequi.

Persecution. Persecutio.

A. 1322. Evil Spirits act as a one in that they persecute truths and goods.

1710. 'Pursued unto Dan' (Gen.xiv.14)=a state of purification. 'To pursue the enemies' is here to expel the evils and falsities which were with the goods and truths . . . and thus to purify them.

1846. 'Affliction'=persecution, consequently temptation.

1851. Celestial and spiritual good is the 'acquisition' of those who suffer persecutions . . .

4122. 'Pursued after him' (Gen.xxxi.23)=a continued ardour of conjunction.

4555. 'They did not pursue after the sons of Jacob' (Gen.xxxv.5)=that falsities and evils could not approach.

4843^c. 'Persecutions' (Mark x.30)=temptations.

5744. 'Pursue after the men' (Gen.xliv.4)=that he ought now to adjoin them to himself.

6203^e. He then makes evils allowable . . . such as . . . persecutions under a show of what is just.

684. Each society consists of many, who . . . constitute as it were one person; and all the Societies together as it were one man.

1008². If there arises the idea of a person whom he had hated . . . 1395^e.

1361. Representatives are either persons, or Things . . .

—⁴. Quite abstractedly from the person . . .

1434. In the internal sense there is no reflection upon the persons and words . . .

1876. The Angels retain not the least idea of any person . . .

1981². There was a person of whom I had the idea that he was in natural truth . . .

3239. The names of persons, etc., in the Word, = Things.

3701⁶. The state of the adolescence of the new life, is that they do not have respect to any person, such as he appears in the external form, but to his quality as to good . . . and it is good which the man then begins to . . . love; and, from the good, the person.

3979^e. Persons, in the Word, = nothing else than Things . . . Thus, by two persons are signified two Things with the same [person].

4060⁵. The Lord comes whenever the Church has been devastated: not that He does so in person, as when He assumed the Human; but by apparitions . . .

4857². For when the literal sense passes into the spiritual, such things as are of person, etc., perish . . .

4868⁴. Representative holiness does not affect the person at all.

5095. Where, in the historical sense, many persons are mentioned . . . in the internal senses they do indeed signify various things; but only in one person . . .

5110². With man, these things cannot be conceived abstractedly from person . . .

5225. For the idea of a person is turned, in the internal sense, into the idea of a Thing . . . The reason is, that in the Spiritual World, not persons, but Things, come under the view; for persons limit the idea and concentrate it to a finite something . . . Hence it is that no person who is named in the Word is ever perceived in Heaven; but in place thereof the Thing which is represented by that person . . .

5256². For they distinguish the Divine into persons, and call each God, and attribute a distinct proprium to each . . .

5287. In the other life . . . all thought, and thence all speech, is effected abstractedly from persons. Therefore the thought there is universal . . .

5434². In the internal sense, all things are abstracted from persons. The reason is, that otherwise the thought and the derivative speech must needs be distracted and lowered from the Thing . . . to such things as are of person . . . Nevertheless, what is thus abstracted involves persons; namely those who are in these things.

6040². For thus the ideas of thought are abstracted from persons . . .

6653². For the determination of the thought . . . to any person limits and bounds the ideas, and averts from the perception of the Thing . . .

6804². The Angels in Heaven never determine their thoughts to particular persons; for this would bound the thoughts . . .

6993². Not Three, who are distinct as to persons.

7002. The Angels are unwilling to speak about persons; for speech about persons averts the ideas from a universal view of Things; thus from the comprehension of innumerable Things at once. 8343^e.

8705. Those who believe that there are three persons who constitute the Divine . . .

8985. For in Heaven the Thing is thought of without the person; for when the person also is thought of there, the Society which is in such Thing is excited, and thus the thought is determined thither, and is fixed; for, in Heaven, where the thought is, there is the presence . . .

9303². The reason the ideas of the men of the Church are founded upon three, is that they distinguish the Divine into three persons, and attribute special and particular offices to each . . .

9806⁵. The representations in the Jewish Church did not regard the person who represented; but the Thing which was represented. Thus the most holy Thing could be represented by persons whose interiors were unclean . . . provided the externals, when they were in worship, were disposed to holiness.

10282. It is said, abstractedly from persons, because the Divine things which proceed from the Lord make the Church, and nothing whatever of man . . . and therefore the Angels, when speaking together, speak abstractedly from persons. Therefore neither does the name of any person mentioned in the Word enter Heaven; but the Thing which is signified there by the person.

10736. (How the Spirits of the Fifth Earth are infested by the belief in three Divine persons of Spirits of our Earth.)

10797. No honour of any function is in the person; but is adjoined thereto . . . and that which is adjoined is separate from the person . . . Honour in the person is the honour of wisdom and of the fear of the Lord.

10801. The royalty itself is not in the person; but is adjoined to the person. The king who believes that the royalty is in his own person; and the prefect who believes that the dignity of the prefecture is in his own person, is not wise.

10821. Those who, in regard to the Divinity, have the idea of three persons, cannot have the idea of one God . . . But those who . . . have the idea of three in one person, can have the idea of one God . . .

[A.] 10822. The idea of three in one person is had when it is thought that the Father is in the Lord, and that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Lord . . .

H. 15. In Heaven, by to love the Lord is not meant to love Him as to person; but to love the good which is from Him . . . and by to love the neighbour is not meant to love an associate as to person; but to love the truth which is from the Word (with him). (y.) N.106³.

121. When the Lord appears in Heaven . . . He is not there in person; for the Lord in person is constantly encompassed with the Sun; but He is in presence by aspect. Ex.

390. In the Heavens, as everyone loves, esteems, and honours use, so also does he love, esteem, and honour the person to whom that use is adjoined; and also the person is loved, esteemed, and honoured, in proportion as he does not ascribe the use to himself, but to the Lord . . . Spiritual love, esteem, and honour are nothing else than the love, esteem, and honour of the use in the person; and the honour of the person from the use; and not that of the use from the person. Ex.

L. 2². In the spiritual sense, by the names of persons and places is signified something of the Lord; and thence something of Heaven and the Church from Him; or something opposite.

35². The Divine and the Human were not two, but one person.

54. (Thus) God is one in person and in Essence. F.35. R.67.537. B.116. T.2.

55. That the doctrine of the Athanasian Faith agrees with the truth, provided that by a Trinity of Persons there is understood a Trinity of Person, which is in the Lord. Gen.art.

— . That Christians have acknowledged three Divine persons, and thus three gods . . .

—². As the Word is such in the sense of the letter that it mentions a number who yet are one, Christians, who in the beginning were simple . . . distinguished the Divinity into three persons, which also was permitted on account of their simplicity; but yet so that they should believe the Son to be Infinite, uncreate, omnipotent, God, and Lord, entirely equal to the Father; and that they should also believe that there are not two, or three; but one in essence, majesty, and glory; thus in Divinity. —⁴.

60. That God and Man in the Lord . . . are not two, but one Person. Ill.

F. 21. He who loves the neighbour from charity conjoins himself with his good, and not with his person, except in so far and so long as he is in good: this is spiritual . . . But he who loves another from friendship only, conjoins himself with his person, and at the same time with his evil. The latter can with difficulty be separated after death from the person which is in evil . . .

W. 12. The idea of the common people in Christendom concerning God, is as of a Man, because in the Athanasian Doctrine God is called a Person.

97. Therefore, when the Lord manifests Himself to the Angels in person, He manifests Himself as a Man . . .

P. 217³. The person, his function and honour, is for the sake of the Thing which he administers; and not contrariwise . . .

—⁵. Spiritual dignities and wealth are of the Thing, and not of the person. The person who is in dignity is indeed in magnificence and glory . . .

—^e. Like a performer in a theatre . . .

224. Can counterfeit characters not his own . . .

262. (Why the worship of God under three persons—that is, three gods—is permitted; and why it is not known that God is one in Person and Essence.) Gen.art.

R. Pref.³. They who have worshipped God under three persons; but have not had the idea of three gods.

42. Therefore those who acknowledge a Trinity of persons, look primarily to the Father; and some to the Holy Spirit; and rarely to the Lord; and if to the Lord, they think concerning His Human as concerning a common man.

273. (Thus) He who sat on the throne, and the Lamb, are one person.

490^e. You cannot make it clear that God is one, unless He is one in person.

611⁷. Therefore, my disciples, think of God from Essence, and, from this, of His Person; and not from Person, and from this of Essence; for to think from Person about Essence, is to think materially even about Essence; whereas to think from Essence about Person, is to think spiritually even about Person.

701. A theology founded upon the doctrine of a Trinity of Persons, etc. Sig.

4338. They had retained nothing more (of the Athanasian Creed) than that there are three persons . . .

4342². When Spirits think about any person, etc. they only present the idea of him . . . Hence their speech . . .

4378. Things spoken have been called forth from my memory by Spirits, and then at the same time the persons to whom they were said . . . and the same persons were made to be present . . .

4488. He kept his thought [fixed] upon some person, and then all the things he had thought about that person presented themselves . . .

5594. I have thought . . . about persons, without their names, and (the Angels) have at once known all about them.

5959. (Athanasius) had confirmed himself in the opinion concerning three persons; but all others who have only heard about them from his creed, and have not confirmed themselves . . . if they have led a life of charity, are at last determined so as to acknowledge the Lord as the Only God; and therefore it is of the Divine Providence that few think about it: they only hear about it . . . and slightly retain, and do not confirm it.

6057². The idea (of God as a Man) has been destroyed with those who have begun to think about three persons, and to separate from them the Human of the Lord; for they have thus made for themselves three invisible gods.

D. Min. 4558. I needed merely to think about a person, with the idea of his qualities, place, dignity . . . without any idea of his face, body, . . . still less of his name; and the Spirits at once recognised him, and knew whom he was, and of what quality he was in my thought.

4618. (All these ideas) occur to a man simultaneously when he is thinking about a person, and when he sees him . . . And therefore, when such an idea occurs in the other life, the person is presented present.

E. 99. For the Angels think abstractedly from persons . . . 696².

100². Those who are in the spiritual sense . . . think nothing of person . . . The reason is that it is material to think about persons, but spiritual to think without the idea of person . . .

333. In the spiritual sense, everything of person is put off . . .

343³. See ESSENCE, here.

405². For the idea of persons and places bounds the thought; for it determines it to these things, and thus bounds it. This idea of thought is properly natural. But an idea abstracted from persons and places extends itself into Heaven on every side; nor is it bounded otherwise than as is the sight of the eye when the sky is regarded without intervening objects. Such an idea is properly spiritual. 625⁴. 724^e.

433². To love Him, is not to love Him as to person . . .

472². In spiritual speech . . . there is not the idea of person and place; but instead thereof the idea of Thing and state as to quality.

624¹⁶. For by a person and his function in the spiritual sense is meant the Thing itself which the person discharges . . .

768². In the spiritual sense it is not meant that the neighbour is to be loved as to his person. Ex.

807². They (thus) distinguish the Lord into two quasi persons, which they call natures.

828. They do not look to persons; but to such things as are with persons; for they are in wisdom above all the other Angels.

973². To love the Lord is not to love the person; but to love the things which proceed from Him; for these are the Lord with man . . . 1099³.

1103. Neither mingling the persons, nor separating the essence. (Ex. under ESSENCE.)

—³. They retain nothing else . . . than that there are three persons, and one God; and everyone makes one out of three in his own way; but only when he is speaking and writing; for, when he is thinking, he cannot help thinking of three . . .

—^e. Everything in the Athanasian Creed agrees with the Truth, provided that instead of three persons, one person is believed in, in whom is the Trinity. 1109², Ex.

1109^e. It is of Providence that persons are mentioned; for a person is a man; and a Divine Person is God who is a Man.

Ath. 6. Examine yourselves, ye who think of three persons: do you not think of another Divine than that of the Lord . . . when the Father is mentioned?

13. That they made a distinction among persons, was not from the Word . . .

25. It is said that the three persons are one substance or essence, when yet they are made distinct as to attributes . . .

44. I heard certain Spirits reasoning concerning three persons . . . It was said, Think of one, consisting of three persons, each of whom is God; and (then) say, One God; but they could not.

57. It is thus evident that they make the attributes themselves to be Gods, and call them three persons . . .

63. To make three persons, because it is said 'Father, Son, and Holy Spirit,' is to falsify the Word . . .

67. What is the quality of the idea concerning the Lord, with those who are in the doctrine of a trinity of persons . . .

78. An examination was made with Spirits . . . to ascertain whether it was possible for them to think of one God while thinking of three persons, each person being God; and it was clearly found that they could not possibly do so . . .

89. Those who in relation to the Lord's Human, have the idea of a mere human, make of the Lord two persons, which they call natures . . .

108. To Spirits who were saying that they believed in three persons, and still in one God, because there is one essence or substance to the three, I said . . . Consult your thoughts. Do you not think of three Gods? . . . And it was found that it was so; for, if there are three persons, there are three Gods.

110. Take the idea that there is one person, and that the Trine is in that person, and you will see that the Creed of Athanasius, from beginning to end, will coincide and harmonize with that idea . . .

121. The Father cannot be understood to have been a first person; for so there would have been two Fathers. Ex.

124. Christians were examined, to ascertain what kind of an idea they have concerning the three persons of the Divinity. It was found that they have various ideas. Enum.

139. Concerning the three persons—that specific properties distinguish them; and if they did not distinguish them, they would not be three persons, but one . . .

141. Thus three Divines as to persons, which are one as to substance, assumed the Human. Ex.

166. It was permitted to say three persons, because in the beginning there could be no thought except of Jehovah God. Ex. . . In the sense of the letter three are named for this reason: for example, the three Persons into whose names they were to baptize. For the same reason it was permitted that like things should be said in the Athanasian Faith . . . but so that it should be possible for the Trine of one Person . . . to be received by those who are in illustration; and also that it should be received at the end of the Church.

167. The Mohammedans have not acknowledged three persons, but one God: they have therefore denied the Divinity of the Lord . . .

169. But if you think that the substance or essence is what is called person, there necessarily results one Person, and the Trine in that . . .

170. Besides, each attribute by which one Person is distinguished from another, is a Divine attribute. Enum. . . Whatever Divine there is in the three persons, is a distinct Divine substance, or essence. And, as Athanasius saw this, he took care that the three should all be in each single attribute. From these things it follows, that the substance and essence are not one, unless it is in one person.

183. Consider whether one and the same essence or substance, in which are the like properties and attributes, can be said to be otherwise than one, without any distinction into Persons. It is otherwise when specific properties and specific attributes are of the same essence or substance: it can then be distinguished into Persons . . .

185. According to the common idea, the Divine is distinguished into three persons. But, according to the idea drawn from the Creed of Athanasius, the second Person is not only Divine, but is also Human; so that in the second Person there is more than there is in first, or third . . .

223. The thought is that there are three persons, and that each is God.

—^e. In the spiritual idea, man is not a person, but a use; for a spiritual idea is devoid of the idea of person . . . and therefore, when one sees another in Heaven, he does indeed see him as a man; but thinks of him as a use . . .

D. Wis. xi. Those who think only naturally . . . cannot think otherwise than that the Lord is to be loved as to person, and likewise the neighbour as to person; whereas those who think both naturally and spiritually, perceive . . . that both an evil and a good man can love the Lord as to person; and in like manner the neighbour . . .

11. The trinity of persons was first invented at the Nicene Council. iii.6.

14. The trinity of persons has inverted the whole Church . . .

iii. 2. How could a person beget a person from eternity? And how could both produce a person? Is not a person a person? How can three persons, each of whom is God, be conjoined into one God, in any other way than into one person? . . . How can the Divinity be distinguished into three persons, and yet not be distinguished into three gods, seeing that each person is God? . . . And how could three Divine persons be together and confer together in a non-extense of space, such as there was before the world was created? . . . How can there be conceived a trinity of persons in the unity of God ; and the unity of God in a trinity of persons.

[Can. Trinity] 5. A trinity of persons in the Divinity before the world was created, did not come into the mind of anyone, from the time of Adam to the Advent of the Lord ; as is evident from the Old Testament, and from the histories of the religion of the ancients. Neither did it come into the mind of the apostles, as is evident from their writings in the Word. Neither did it come into the mind of anyone in the Apostolic Church . . . as is evident from the Apostolic Creed.

—². A trinity of persons from eternity is not only above reason, but is also contrary to it. It is contrary to reason that three persons created the universe ; that there have been three persons, and each of them God, and not three gods ; and still three persons and not one person.

viii. That the confirmation of a Trinity of Persons, each of whom is God from eternity, according to the Nicene and Athanasian Creeds, has falsified the whole of the Word. Gen.art.

Persuadable. Persuadibilis.

See under ANTEDILUVIAN, and NEPHILIM.

A. 285. The seventh posterity . . . were left to their filthy loves and persuasions. Tr.

303. Man acquires life by all things he persuades himself of ; that is, which he acknowledges and believes . . .

311. Those who perished by the Flood . . . are in a Hell apart, as it were under a mountain. It appears as a mountain from their direful phantasies and persuasions, (which) are such that they induce on other Spirits such a stupor that they do not know whether they are alive or dead ; for they take away from them all the understanding of truth . . . They were in such persuasion also when they lived . . .

563. When such a persuasion takes possession of a man, it is like glue in which are inviscated the goods and truths which would be remains, so that remains can no longer be stored up . . . 798².

570. Those who persuade themselves concerning any Thing, confirm themselves by everything which they suppose to be true . . .

589. Until he so persuades himself that he can no longer see the truth.

601. That the man who remained from the Most Ancient Church could not be regenerated, on account of his direful persuasions . . . Tr.

622. 'To corrupt' is predicated of persuasions. Ill.

635². With (those called Noah) persuasions did not obstruct and absorb the Lord's operation . . .

641^e. Evil Spirits . . . inflow into the left side of the brain with direful phantasies and persuasions . . .

726. The rest of the descendants of the Most Ancient Church destroyed the celestial and spiritual seed within them by filthy cupidities, and by direful persuasions.

794. That the persuasions of falsity thus increased. Sig. and Ex.

—, Persuasions increase immensely when men infuse truths into cupidities, or cause them to favour the loves of self and of the world. Ex.

798². The persuasions of falsity were so great that they extinguished all good.

—^e. For the life of persuasions is such that it not only rejects all truth, and absorbs all falsity, but also perverts every truth which comes near.

803. That all these (affections of falsity, cupidities, pleasures, corporeal and earthly things) are in persuasions, man is not aware ; he supposes . . . a persuasion of falsity to be only a simple something, or one general thing ; but he is much mistaken . . .

806. A persuasion of falsity extinguishes, and as it were suffocates, everything spiritual and celestial . . .

831³. The nature (of these Sirens) is so persuasive that nothing of doubt is perceived in it . . .

1035. That so deadly and suffocative a persuasion should no longer come forth. Sig.

1051. That man's Intellectual should no longer be able to imbue such a persuasion . . .

1120^e. At last, when there was no love and no faith, but a persuasion of falsity, internal respiration ceased . . .

1159. 'Tongue,' in the internal sense, = opinion ; thus principles and persuasions. Ex.

1178. That he persuaded many. Sig. and Ex.
 —. Faith separated from charity is such that men are easily persuaded.

—, 'To hunt'=in general, to persuade . . . thus persuading for the sake of themselves . . . Ill.

1270. If they inflowed into the left side of the head, I should be destroyed ; for they would then inflow with their persuasions, which are direful and deadly . . .

—². Their persuasions are such that they extinguish all truth and good ; so that those into whom they inflow can perceive nothing whatever, and then cannot think.

1271. They tried to infuse into me their deadly Persuasive . . . I manifestly perceived that their Persuasive was suffocative.

1366. Those who . . . have so confirmed themselves in falsities that they are entirely persuaded, can with difficulty, if ever, be brought to receive the truths which are contrary to their falsities.

1510. See SPHERE, here.

1587. 'Gomorrhah'=persuasions of falsity.

1673. The persuasions of falsity, or the Hells of such, which the Lord conquered. Sig.

—³. There are some at this day also, especially from the Christian world, who have persuasions ; but not so direful as those of the Antediluvians. There are some persuasions of falsity which take possession of both the voluntary and the intellectual part of man—such were those of the Antediluvians . . . and there are other persuasions of falsity which take possession of the intellectual part only, which originate from principles of falsity confirmed with one's self. These are not so strong, nor deadly, as the former ; but still they cause much discomfort to Spirits in the other life, and partly take away their faculty of thinking. Such Spirits excite with the man mere confirmations of falsity ; so that the man sees no otherwise than that falsity is truth, and evil good.

—⁴. (How a man may know whether such Spirits rule him.)

1675. The persuasions of falsity which are from the love of self. Sig.

—⁷. The persuasions of falsity which are from the love of self are most filthy ; but the persuasions of falsity from the love of the world are not so filthy. The former persuasions are opposite to the celestial things of love ; and the latter persuasions are opposite to the spiritual things of love. Persuasions from the love of self carry with them the desire to exercise command over all things . . . and therefore the persuasions of this kind are never tolerated in the other life. But the persuasions from the love of the world advance . . . only to the insanity of not being contented with one's lot . . . But the differences of these persuasions are innumerable.

1820³. Evil Spirits do not combat by reasoning . . . but pervert goods and truths, and inflame with a certain fire of cupidity and of persuasion, so that the man knows no otherwise than that he is in a like cupidity and persuasion.

1862. This middle space (is then) filled with persuasions of falsity and with hatreds.

1867. 'The Hittite, the Perizzite, and the Rephaim'=persuasions of falsity.

1874. In order that the persuasions and cupidities may be bent, and not broken.

1983³. (Sirens) reduce their interiors into a state of persuasion . . .

2261². With those who live in things contrary to charity, acknowledgment is never possible, but only some persuasion . . . 2400^o.

2682². They are reduced to such ignorance in order that the persuasive light may be extinguished, which is such that it illuminates equally falsities and truths, and induces a belief in falsity through truths, and a belief in truth through falsities, and at the same time self-confidence.

—². For the light of truth from the Lord cannot inflow into the Persuasive which is from proprium ; for this is of such a nature as to extinguish that light. In the other life the Persuasive appears like a wintry light ; but, at the approach of the light of Heaven, there is darkness instead of it . . .

2689¹. With some there is a Persuasive of truth of such a nature, that no one can know but that it is genuine. But it is not the life of good, it is the affection of the love of self or of the world, which induces such a Persuasive . . .

2694². The cause of this vastation and desolation is chiefly that there may be broken the Persuasive which they have conceived from proprium ; and also that they may receive the perception of good and truth, which they cannot receive before the Persuasive which is from proprium has been as it were softened . . .

2715³. The good with the spiritual is obscured with persuasive things from various principles . . .

2832. Many say they believe although they do not apprehend . . . These either have a kind of Persuasive breathed in from the love of self and of the world, or they do not believe at all.

2889. Evil Spirits cannot apprehend . . . that they do not begin to live, until the life of the cupidities of evil and of the persuasions of falsity in which they are, has been extinguished . . .

2890. The evil Spirits with man . . . regard him as a vile slave ; for they infuse into him their cupidities and their persuasions . . .

2909³. 'The Anakim'=direful persuasions of falsity.

3175³. For in the natural man there are . . . also persuasions of falsity ; and so long as these are there, and adjoin themselves to truth, the natural man detains truth with himself, and does not suffer it to be elevated into the Rational. Sig.

3242³. 'Midian'=those in the truth of simple good, who thus allow themselves to be easily persuaded.

3309³. 'To hunt'=to teach, and also to persuade ; and this in both senses ; namely, from the affection of truth, and from the affection of falsity. Ill.

3427⁴. Persuasive faith. (See FAITH, here.) S148². 9367. 9368. 9369. 9434². 10582². H.482. F.31. P.131.

[A.] 3463². Those who are solely in the doctrinals of faith . . . are not in any perception of good ; but in a species of persuasion that what their doctrinals dictate is true . . .

—^e. Things not true cannot be eradicated while they are inrooted even to persuasion.

3834². The evil can be in the persuasion that (these truths) are so ; and yet the truth of faith . . . may not be conjoined with them.

3865³. With some there is a Persuasive which counterfeits faith ; but the Persuasive is of this character : it is what is scientific confirmed, not because it is true, but because it is a source of profit . . . This penetrates no deeper than through the ears into the memory . . .

3869. The hearing at the same time persuades that it is so . . .

—². The Persuasive of truth, when the man is in a life of evil, is such that he persuades himself that truth is truth, not for the sake of an end of good, but for the sake of an end of evil . . . The worst of all can be in such a Persuasive . . . When such come into the other life, they at first believe themselves to be Angels ; but they cannot approach any angelic Society ; for they are as it were suffocated there from their own Persuasive. Sig.

4156². Those in a life of evil . . . by means of scientific confirm not only the life of evil, but also principles of falsity, and this arrogantly and with persuasion, because they believe themselves to be wiser than others ; and thus destroy their Rational.

4171³. He who leads a life of good . . . in case he suffers himself to be persuaded by another who is in evil . . . is said to be 'torn.'

4172. The evil which man has . . . confirmed in thought even to faith and persuasion cannot be amended ; but remains to eternity. Whereas the evil . . . of which man has not inwardly persuaded himself . . . adheres only in externals . . . Such is the evil through which is good. Ex.

4274^e. Those who succumb in temptation come into the confirmation of evil, and into the persuasion of falsity . . .

4352³. Trust or confidence, of faith, so called . . . is possible with diabolical Spirits, when they are in a state . . . of persuasion from the love of self and of the world.

4416. Their truths were of persuasive faith . . .

4478. Persuasion. Sig. . . For he who wills is in persuasion ; and he who inflows thence, communicates persuasion.

4658². In order to impose on falsities the appearance of truth according to the desire of persuading.

4802³. Two in Hell who had believed the truths of faith persuasively.

5032². Natural good not spiritual, that it is easily persuaded. Tr. and Ex.

5033. For his wife, who persuaded (Potiphar)= truth natural not spiritual . . .

—². But those who are not in confirmed falsity, that is, in the persuasion of falsity, easily admit truths . . .

5128³. Still worse are the sensuous who are in the persuasion of falsity ; for the persuasion of falsity completely closes up the Rational. It is one thing to be in principles of falsity, and another to be in the persuasion of falsity. Those in the persuasion of falsity have some light in their Natural, but such as is the light of winter . . . but as soon as heavenly light falls upon it, it is obscured, and becomes opaque according to the degree and quality of the persuasion. . . . Many of the learned are in such persuasion more than all others ; for they have confirmed falsities in themselves by syllogistic, philosophical, and many scientific things.

5464². Although they see the contraries, and at heart deny truths, they can still persuade others . . .

5554. (Those who correspond to the skin) suffer themselves to be persuaded by others that it is so . . .

5860. The Spirits who are with man put on his persuasions . . . Thus they put on the man's persuasions, not only in civil and moral things, but also in the spiritual things which are of faith.

5971. The doctrinal things thence which were persuading. Sig.

6359. For the falsity which has been confirmed even to persuasion, is hard.

6610. The ideas of man's thought . . . are extended to various and new Societies ; with those in evil, to infernal Societies, and so also with those in persuasions of falsity. But with those in persuasions of truth—that is, who are in persuasive faith—the ideas of thought are exceedingly confined.

6907^e. (This is why) those in falsities from evil from so strong a persuasion oppose themselves to those in truths.

6947². Such excel others in the gift . . . of persuading, especially the simple.

7272². These are evils of falsity, because he has persuaded himself from falsity that they are not evils.

7298. The magicians there . . . know how to inject a Persuasive, and thus to dull the apperception of truth.

—². It is according to the laws of order that no one ought to be persuaded in a moment concerning truth, that is, that truth should be so confirmed in a moment as not to leave any doubt. The reason is that the truth so impressed becomes persuasive truth, and is devoid of any extension, and is without anything yielding [about it]. In the other life such truth is represented as hard, and as what does not admit good into it . . .

7317. Pharaoh . . . = those who had been in persuasive faith . . .

7577. 'Hail, and fire together . . .' = persuasions of falsity together with the cupidities of evil. . . 'Hail' = falsity from evil; here, the persuasion of falsity, because it is said 'grievous exceedingly.'

—². When they have been devastated as to the things of the Church . . . there reign with them the persuasions of falsity together with the cupidities of evil . . . The persuasions of falsity and the cupidities of evil are inseparable . . .

— . They think it is so from persuasive faith, which is faith for the sake of gain, or honours.

7627^e. He who is in evil as to life . . . is in persuasive faith . . .

7778⁴. With some evil men there is a persuasion that the truth of faith is truth. This Persuasive is supposed to be faith . . . This persuasion is what is called persuasive faith. Sig.

8013². The former do not see truths, and confirm them, from illustration; but from a persuasion concerning the doctrinals of the Church . . .

8711. An aversion to persuasions from falsity and evil. Sig. 'Gain' = the falsity and evil which persuade.

8928². If those of the Spiritual Church should believe (that there is an internal sense of the Word), it would not be from any internal perception . . . but from a persuasion from some other source.

9182. 'If a man shall persuade a virgin who is not betrothed' (Ex.xxii.16.) . . . 'To persuade' (here) = to entice to conjunction.

9297³. Persuasive faith. See FAITH ALONE, here. 9363.

9364. There is persuasive faith when the Word and the doctrine of the Church are believed and loved, not with the end of serving the neighbour . . . consequently not for the sake of life . . . but for the sake of gain, honours, and the reputation of erudition . . . 9365. 9366.

H. 466². Would not believe until they were persuaded by scientifics . . .

508³. The persuasion (of the Papists) is so strong that wherever it inflows, it . . . induces darkness . . .

518. Had persuaded themselves that they would come into Heaven . . .

526². What is persuasive is not in the life of man, but is outside of it . . .

S. 13². 'A scorpion' = their Persuasive.

—³. 'Tails like scorpions' = persuasions.

F. 11. Faith in what is unknown, if confirmed, becomes persuasion. Ex. 31.

P. 131. Faith induced by miracles is not faith, but persuasion; for there is nothing rational in it . . .

317. That everything which has been persuaded and confirmed remains permanently as the proprium with the man. Gen.art.

R. 425. Their power of persuading that their falsities are truths. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'A scorpion' = a deadly Persuasive; and 'a scorpion of the earth' = a Persuasive in the Things of the Church. (Continued under SCORPION.) 428.

428. In the Spiritual World there is a Persuasive which takes away the understanding of truth, and induces a stupor, and thus pain of mind; but this Persuasive is unknown in the natural world.

462^e. 'To enchant' = to persuade of falsity, and thus destroy truth.

— . Enchantment by persuasion. (See ENCHANT, here.)

M. 227^e. Similitudes and dissimilitudes originate from . . . persuasions which have been imbued, etc.

T. 11^e. Natural faith is only persuasion. 339. 345. 359.

40². In proportion as anyone persuades himself of these things . . .

470⁵. This direful persuasion . . .

639^e. It is the like with all things which are fixed by persuasion and confirmation . . .

796². Luther contracted there a power of persuasion. See LUTHER, here.

Ad. 1002. These Genii infuse persuasions also . . .

D. 811. (On the use of those who are persuaded of the truth of a thing without reasoning.) But those who are good are not persuaded in any other things than those which they understand to be true and good.

890. A Spirit who could be impressed by all persuasions . . .

897. Concerning interior perception and persuasion. Gen.art. 1405.

1647^e. When Spirits wanted to persuade me, I perceived an interior persuasion that it was so, and not as they wanted . . .

1728. Easily suffer themselves to be persuaded . . .

1776. That Spirits judge from the persuasion of man. Ex.

1779. Concerning interior persuasions, from the Lord: that men are persuaded in faith . . . by no means from self, but from the Lord.

1780. In respect to things which do not agree with the life of Spirits . . . they cannot be persuaded, except by the Lord alone . . .

1853. That Spirits are persuaded by externals concerning internals. Ex.

[D.] 2283². These influxes are effected by internal persuasion; to wit, that it has been so commanded by the Lord; and, when there is such a persuasion, they cannot possibly resist it . . .

2371. That the thoughts of Spirits which are only persuasions have not been perceived so well as those which were cupidities.—There are two things which rule minds: persuasions and affections; and when persuasions only have been in the thought of Spirits, they have not been perceived by me . . .

2383. Concerning the persuasion of the things which are of faith . . . Many persuade themselves that they have faith, when they have it not. . . When such (truths) are confirmed from various persuasions and also experiences, they are distressed . . .

2384. In order that a Soul may be in a Society of Angels, he must be entirely persuaded of these things . . .

2385. They call faith only Knowledges, whereas there is no faith unless in the Knowledges there is persuasion; and, in the persuasions, the desire for things confirmatory; thus love . . .

2467. To know is not to believe; there must be a persuasion of the Truth . . .

2602. (Compulsory things) are not the means of persuading internally . . . There must be what is voluntary; and then there is effected internal persuasion, which remains in many states; for without internal persuasion nothing remains.

2671². Concerning the persuasion of Truths. —³.

2703. For a man or a Spirit to be in an angelic sphere . . . he must be in persuasion concerning the Lord.—Knowledge must precede . . . then what is intellectual, which is the first of persuasion; then the persuasion thence, which is only intellectual; and then interior persuasion. Unless man is in the interior persuasion of the Things which are of faith in the Lord, he cannot be in an angelic . . . sphere . . .

2734. Nor can man come into persuasion, except with the Lord's operation . . . Thence the Lord persuades man; otherwise the Word becomes only knowledge . . .

2764. Concerning the sphere of the persuasions of evil belonging to certain Spirits.

2765². Hence the Spirits who are around . . . whom the Lord does not protect with as it were immediate aid, cannot be otherwise than persuaded, or violently brought to believe.

2772. How efficaciously their sphere acts for persuading, was evident when they persuaded others that I was insane.

2782. There is correspondence when there is persuasion. Ex.

2787. That in the other life persuasions can only be extirpated with great difficulty; and in fact, according to the deeper and wider root of the persuasion. Ex.

— A certain Spirit was wholly persuaded that (a direful thing he had done) was familiar to all; and therefore when he came into such thought, his persuasion at once diffused itself so widely, that there was scarcely anyone around me who did not suppose that he was guilty of that great crime.

2790. He thus arrives at a persuasion.

2816. Such, when they have imbued the nature, can be in the persuasion of any idea whatever, by removing all things which oppose or refute; so that nothing appears except the Persuasive . . .

2828^e. This lasted some time, with the persuasion that it is so . . . But I was kept in the persuasion that the other is the Truth . . . As it was kept in the persuasion which was communicated to me, I could not be extricated; but . . . still I was kept in the persuasion that the Truth is not to be receded from on that account . . .

2882. External Spirits do not know that persuasion puts on nature, and that they cannot be taken out thence. Ex.

2902. That evil Spirits cannot operate anything with those who have been persuaded. Ex.

2926. Persuasions put on the nature of the man; and such Spirits are associated with him. Ex.

2946². These things in the presence of those who have been of the doctrine of this faith, but not in interior persuasion; and therefore they could not deny . . .

2955. First, there are those who completely reject (my writings) because they are in another persuasion. . . The fourth kind (receive them) persuasively, so that it penetrates to the amendment of their life: they occur to them in certain states, and they make use of them.

2969. Spirits suppose that they are speaking from themselves . . . when affection and persuasion are infused by others . . .

2976. There are four spheres of faith: the sphere of knowledge; the intellectual sphere; the sphere of persuasion; and the interior sphere of persuasion. 2978. Ex.

2988. That persuasion cannot be insinuated except through courses and degrees of time. (Spirits who wanted to be different were told) that something of persuasion can indeed be given them . . . but to give persuasion is not sufficient, in one state and in one moment; for, when the state is changed . . . they are just as before; and therefore persuasions are given by many confirmatory things, little by little . . . and thus they are persuaded like the Angels, or are elevated into persuasion, by the Lord; for all states of persuasion are of the Lord.

2994. That pertinacity is . . . of persuasion.

3002. Concerning . . . the persuasion of the things which are of faith. Gen.art.

3107. When preaching, they were in a state of such persuasion.

3108. There is sometimes such persuasive preaching that those who believe nothing . . . seem to themselves to be as it were elevated into Heaven; but, as soon as they go out of Church, they believe nothing. . . When man is in such a persuasive state . . . the Lord operates, and inseminates . . . remains.

3200. That evil preachers can preach with persuasion . . .

3249. Concerning the bird; and concerning persuasion.

3363. If they acted into the left side of the head, it would be with their direful persuasion. . . They are in such a persuasion because their interior is so hostile to the Lord, that whatever they say, they infuse a very strong persuasion, and thus drive away everything good and true, no otherwise than as when the digits of the foot or hand are congealed by frost . . . Such was the persuasion . . . against which the Lord fought . . .

3365². They infused so much of persuasion, as that by their most chilly and pestiferous persuasion they could kill whomsoever they met.

—^e. The wrapping up in a cloth is preservation, lest their persuasions should operate more strongly than they can endure.

3374. It is not the force of argument . . . which makes their persuasions so deadly; but it is their phantasies . . . They are in such a persuasion that they murder everything alive; that is, good and truth.

3375. So that they are in the greatest persuasion; and thus infuse at the same time direful persuasions, and so mortify the ideas of a man or Spirit, like the frost which mortifies the members of man, driving away all the heat of good and truth.

3388. I spoke to them about persuasion; which is such that when the man is persuaded that evil is good, and falsity truth, then, when he hears others . . . he can seem to himself to be persuaded [of the contrary] from their well-connected arguments, eloquent speech, and the affection of the tone; and yet, when it is finished, he knows nothing of what the speaker has said . . . like those who . . . praise the sermon, and this for many years; but still, being in the persuasion of what is evil and false, their life is not at all amended . . .

3395. Concerning the sphere of persuasion.

3431. In all other things he was persuadeable above others.

3437². He confessed it was so; but, being in persuasion, he returns even to his own persuasion . . .

3441. I observed that when the persuasion of that preacher . . . operated in me, the perceptions of truth and good were as it were taken away. . . Hence it may be evident how powerfully the persuasions of certain men can operate in those whom they are instructing . . . Such is the force of the sphere of persuasion. 3461.

3493². For the sphere of certain persuasions is such that they as it were extinguish spiritual things . . .

3514. Thus at last are (the Dutch) persuaded; for they are not persuaded by means of instructions.

3541. Concerning the persuasion of certain [Spirits]. —There was a certain one who entered into me with persuasion, and attempted to inflict evil on me with the persuasion. He was thrust down towards the lower parts, because such persuasion is not permitted . . . Such are those with whom in the life of the body all things have succeeded, and are thence persuaded that whatever they did would succeed with them . . . Those above the head . . . supposed that they could do all things by means of persuasions, and can infuse their persuasions into others. The sphere of their persuasion is widely extended . . . It is external, so that they can do nothing against interior things . . . It is among the magical arts . . .

3569. That in the other life they are prepared, so that they can be kept in a state of persuasion. Ex.

3571. Certain were let into the state of persuasion of others, that they do not live from themselves . . . (Their anxiety.)

3580^e. It was not the abundance of the arguments (of the Antediluvians); but it was their persuasion . . . So that whatever they thought was thus persuasive. 3583.

3583. For their Persuasive is such as to suffocate . . . others by taking away their respiration . . . 3585. Des.

3585. They tried by their strong Persuasive to infuse their deadly [influx] into me . . .

3589^e. As the men grew up they became deformed, in that [the hair] hung round their faces. Such a Persuasive is attended with this.

3593. Certain . . . induced on me something of [this] persuasion . . .

3594². By a persuasion like that of the Antediluvians (these adulterers) excited almost all whom they met to perpetrate such crimes . . .

3596^e. (These unseasonably compassionate Spirits) suffer themselves to be easily persuaded by such deceitful and unmerciful ones . . . and, so long as the deceitful persuasion is inspired, they persist.

[D.] 3597. (The monks and Jesuits) from the habit contracted in life by such a persuasion can inspire into others that they, above all others, must be saved . . .

3598. The world called Christian is thus almost as was the antediluvian . . . acting invisibly and covertly ; and, in fact, from a persuasion almost alike . . .

3601. Such deceitful ones, who persuade to mercy, and have acquired this persuasion in the life of the body, keep themselves beneath the occiput . . .

3617. Those who had been in the persuasion that faith alone . . . saves . . .

3618. A certain Spirit had in the life of the body put on the persuasion that in the other life he should have a sweet sleep, even to the day of Judgment ; and hence, in the other life, from this persuasion he has contracted an external nature such that he can induce a sweet sleep upon anyone ; for a persuasion [contracted] in the life of the body is attended with this : that he is able to act from the persuasion ; and the means are at once at hand . . .

3657². As the Pontiff was in the persuasion that he was a god, and David also, they strove together from the persuasion ; but David conquered, because he was not only in persuasion, but in cruelty, and thus in the persuasion of subjugating . . .

3658. It came into the Pontiff's persuasion that if he should deny the Lord, whose vicar he had been, he would become a nullity ; and therefore he came into this persuasion ; and, when David noticed it—for in that state he can instantly perceive the persuasions of another—he turned him into a cloud . . . in which he supposed himself to be nothing . . . From this is evident the nature of persuasions when they concur.

3659². For the idea of interior persuasion is attended with this : that [everything] is done quickly.

3661. The quality of the persuasion of those who aim to be worshipped as a god. Des.

3683. (David) attempted to call up others . . . from his persuasion . . .

3688. They were in the persuasion that it was not they, but David, and that thus they were not in fault . . .

3694. From this it is evident what the life of persuasion is : that when man has been persuaded concerning the Truths . . . of faith, he then has a life of light ; that is, intellectual life ; which life is diverse according to the persuasions of the things which the man has conceived concerning faith. When he is in the persuasion of the . . . Truths of faith, he is nevertheless as yet in nothing more than a life of light ; and the life of light cannot enter into the life of love . . . for from the life of love is born the life of persuasions . . . But he who is solely in the life of persuasion cannot on that account be in the life of love . . .

3695. Those who are in the persuasion of true faith have it from the Lord ; for it is of true faith that there is no faith except from the Lord ; and therefore they cannot come into the persuasion of faith except from the Lord . . . It is of true faith not only to know this, but also to be persuaded concerning it.

3696. But whatever differs from true faith, and by which one is persuaded, derives a life of persuasion opposite to true life ; and therefore there are innumerable species of life from persuasion . . . The life of persuasion constitutes the shell, and the life of nature the kernel, which for the most part conjoin themselves ; while there is persuasion ; for persuasion inflows and masters cupidities ; as cupidities are wont to do which induce persuasion.

3702. As she was a Subject of [both] evil and upright Genii, she could be in a persuasive life . . . But still the sphere of her persuasion from so many Societies congregated in herself was such that they could scarcely be persuaded ; for by her persuasive ideas and representations she was still with them . . .

3704. Those who constitute the external skin, are such in the world as suffer themselves to be easily persuaded . . .

3714. There is (with Sirens) no internal bond . . . still less the persuasion of anything true and good.

3782. These other Spirits infuse into him their own cupidities and persuasions, in such a manner that he cannot know otherwise than that they are from himself. (The same thing has frequently happened to me.) I said, then, that the Spirits with man cannot infuse persuasions, if he has not been in that persuasion previously ; but that they can infuse cupidities ; and thus persuasions from cupidities . . .

3783. The reason why Spirits cannot induce persuasions, is that they do not enjoy the corporeal memory ; but put on that of the man.

3787. With those in faith . . . good affections together with the persuasion of truth and good are insinuated into them by the Lord . . .

3909. A certain (female Spirit) . . . inspired nefarious things, together with persuasion . . .

3913. (The lascivious) are such that they can receive the persuasions of the Antediluvians . . .

3968^e. If they were to act from persuasion in the same way as they do from phantasy, they would be still worse ; but, as they are devoid of persuasion, and [act] from phantasy alone, they could be tolerated in the World of Spirits.

3980. (This Spirit) was let into the state of his persuasion—that good works are of no account, but faith only—and from his persuasion diffused around among many such, there arose a sphere so general that the Spirits supposed themselves to disappear as if they were null . . .

4003^e. For there are states of persuasions, and states of cupidities.

4050. Concerning persuasions.—There are two lives, namely, that of persuasions, and that of cupidities, which at this day are distinct with the human race, who suppose that man can be saved by faith alone . . .

4051. Those who are in such a life of persuasion are vastated differently from those who are in a life of . . . cupidities. The life of persuasion is so vastated that he is reduced into plenary ignorance . . . and then into confusion, so that when he is thinking about those things, he is so confused that he is almost tortured. Thus there are various pains within, which torture when he returns into his life of persuasion, and which tortures are diverse according to the faith concerning which he has persuaded himself, or which he has confirmed. 4052.

4095. These (angelic ideas) are received according to the state of the persuasion and cupidities of the recipients, and also their contraries . . .

4096. When the loves (of the Most Ancient Church) were successively turned into cupidities, and thence into Falsities, there originated thence the direful persuasions of the Antediluvians; thus the life of persuasions.

—². But with men to whom the power of speaking with Spirits has not been opened, the case is different; for to him such Spirits are applied as are of an almost like persuasion; for if two contrary persuasions were present, they would not accord. It is different with me . . . When a man changes his persuasions, other Spirits are applied to him; and therefore, such as is the persuasion of the man, such is the persuasion of the Spirit; and the Spirit continually excites things confirmatory. Moreover, the Spirit who is with a man is led away into his persuasion, and puts on a like one.

—³. The life of cupidities is distinct. But, when cupidity has induced persuasion, then both lives act. Therefore it is good for man not to be persuaded concerning Falsities; but to be confirmed in truths; for he is not easily withdrawn from a persuasion he has taken up.

4115. Concerning the life of persuasion.—The life which remains after death is the life of persuasion and the life of cupidity. When a Spirit is in the life of his persuasion, he excites all things whatever in the memory of the man which conform with his persuasion, just as if the man knew it from himself. (From experience.) I supposed that the Spirit had taken it from his corporeal memory; but it is not so; but from that of the man . . . The Spirit merely comes into his own persuasion, and then the conformable things are excited . . .

4116. The life of persuasion regards what is true or false, and the confirmation of truth; being contracted from the Knowledges of Things and many other things.

4117. (Thus) persuasion, in the life of the body, can master cupidities. For example, when anyone persuades himself that a certain food is more wholesome than another, although . . . before the persuasion came, he had nauseated it, still he prefers it . . . But the life of cupidities is for the most part wont to induce persuasion; for that which is loved excessively is confirmed by many things even until the man is persuaded. D.Min.4613.

4119. With man are Spirits who are in a like persuasion and in a like cupidity, which Spirits may be called the Subjects of many; for the persuasion and the cupidity with the man at once excite those who are like him. Ex. . . But there still remains the general persuasion, or the regnant persuasion . . . and so there are Spirits with the man of a like kind until his persuasion and his cupidity are changed . . .

4202. The quality of the spheres of Spirits, originating from . . . other persuasions, is manifestly perceived. There inflows a General . . . which persuades, and all particular things then present themselves as confirmatory . . . The stronger such a . . . sphere is, the stronger is the persuasion, insomuch that often I could not feel otherwise than that falsity was truth, and evil good. Such a force of persuading is a general sphere . . .

4320. Concerning a certain kind of persuasions and of simulation.

—². (This Spirit was such) that his intellectual part was as it were persuaded, when the voluntary was not, being accustomed from the life of the body to say differently from what he willed; and this with asseveration, so that his Intellectual almost put on a certain voluntary persuasion . . .

4358. (Such preachers) are then in external persuasion . . .

4359. So that he could persuade many that he was innocent . . . They wondered that they should find such arts of persuasion so adroitly, so promptly and quickly, in the other life. It is done in a moment.

4398. Spirits conclude nothing from the memory of particulars, but from the persuasion which inflows . . .

4449. These Sirens . . . imbue the Lord in their thought and persuasion; and, wherever they are carried, they bear with them the persuasion as if the Lord is there; and thus pervert the sphere, equally as do the Antediluvians.

4452. At last they are surrounded with sulphur and the derivative fire, and . . . their persuasive exclamations in like manner . . .

[D. 4452]². It infects with persuasion those who have this in them . . .

4454. At this day that other part [of the mind] which had been restored, is destroyed in (these Spirits), and is thus made persuasive, as was [the mind] of the Antediluvians as to both [parts].

4475. There are persuasions completely assumed and formed, and affections completely simulated and deceitful, which act together . . .

4740². He then [acts] with persuasive faith, by means of which he enters into the affections of the good . . .

4748. (Charles XII.) was then in the Persuasive that the thing was . . . right in itself; because it was from his internal thought.

—². [Some] in the First and Second Heavens he attracted to himself by . . . his Persuasive.

4815^e. All who admit their persuasive heresy, (the Moravians) believe to be alive and saved . . .

4848. They then led themselves according to the form of some lower Heaven, or of the World of Spirits, and thus induced various persuasions, by means of influxes according to those forms.

4877. Such are those who . . . are in persuasive faith, and yet live evilly.

4934. Those from Christians who are in the persuasion that there is no Divine, have their Hell a little behind . . . where those are deepest down who have been in the greatest Persuasive; for there are degrees of persuasion. He who was in the greatest was Charles XII., who . . . was in so deadly a Persuasive, that he could murder men by means of his Persuasive.

4942. The preachers . . . are in persuasive faith that it is according to their doctrine . . .

5015. Concerning persuasive faith without saving faith: how hurtful it is. Ex.

5568. They were in the persuasion that Christ was present there. . . They can persuade as if the Lord were there, from such a faith in the world. . . If any simple upright Spirits are present, they at once draw them to their own side; for such is persuasion. 5739.

D. Min. 4670. Concerning the Persuasive, and the light of persuasion.

— . I was then with those who are in the light of persuasion. It is such that persuasive things inflow very vividly; but the moment there were not such things I was in thick darkness, although they were truths; and it was said that such light is thick darkness to the Angels . . .

4671. This light of persuasion is with those who are in truths, and want to exercise command by means of truths; thus to seem to be greater than others . . . There are many of this kind, and among them are women.

4672. There is the light of phantasy when there are falsities; the light of persuasion when there are truths.

4733². These Spirits (who induce diseases) cannot be driven away by any persuasions . . .

544. Their persuasive, and its effect and power. Sig. and Ex.

— . What this persuasive is . . . scarcely anyone in the world as yet knows; because it is the Persuasive of the spirit of a sensuous man in which he is when he becomes a Spirit; but not while he lives in the world. Ex. (But there) it infuses itself into the mind—animam et mentem—of another, and lulls and almost extinguishes his Rational and Intellectual, whence he cannot know otherwise than that what is spoken is true, even although it is most false. Those in such a Persuasive do not speak from any reason, but from blind faith without reason, because from the ultimate Sensuous; for in this there is no reason, but only a persuasive faith from such things as rise up from the body and inflow from the world, insuflated by the fire of the love of self. It is this fire which insuflates, draws forth, and infuses into another; and therefore those are especially in this Persuasive who have imbued falsities from the love of self, and have believed themselves to be wise above others. This Persuasive is called infatuating, because it induces a stupor on the understanding; and it is called suffocating because it takes away the free respiration of another; for everyone respire in conformity with the thought of his mind. But, as such a Persuasive is most hurtful and pernicious, because it induces as it were a swoon on the mind of another, so that he can see nothing rationally, Spirits are severely prohibited from using it; and those who do use it are separated from others, and are either chastised, or are let down into Hell. For, in the Spiritual World, everyone is allowed to confirm the sentiments of his mind, whether true or false, by means of rational and intellectual things; but not by means of any persuasive fascination. Refs. and Ill. 548. 549.

2994. Concerning pertinacity.

— . Pertinacity is of the imagination, of the cupidity, and of the persnasion. Pertinacity may be compared to a leader; and it has been shown me that there ought not to be the least pertinacity in man for him to be led by the Lord; but in proportion to the pertinacity, such is the proprium of man, which is taken away in those who are led by the Lord, not by breaking it, but by bending it with an indefinite variety.

Peter. Petrus.

See under JOHN, and SIMON.

A. 2135, Pref.². 'Peter, James, and John' = faith, charity, and the good of charity. 2760, Pref.³.

2760, Pref.². They suppose that these things were said of Peter . . . although they know that Peter was a very simple man . . .

3750². Peter does not appear to anyone, and is a simple Spirit, who has no more Power than anyone else.

3994⁵. 'Peter' (John xxi.) as elsewhere, = faith; and, as faith is not faith unless it is from charity . . . and thus from love to the Lord . . . the Lord first asks him whether he loves Him; that is, whether there is love in the faith . . .

4368³. 'The rock' upon which the Church is to be built = the faith of charity; so, consequently, does Peter; and thus to this faith have been given the keys to open and shut Heaven. 4738⁰.

6000⁵. That Peter denied the Lord three times in that night represented the last time of the Church, when the truth of faith is indeed taught, but is not believed.

— . That Peter represented the faith of the Church. Ref.

6073³. Therefore faith, which is Peter, said with indignation, 'What is this man?'

—^e. That faith rejected the Lord, is evident from the representation by Peter, in that he denied Him thrice . . .

6344⁰. These words (concerning the keys) were said to Peter, because by him was represented faith . . .

8093². Faith alone is described . . . finally by Peter, when he denied the Lord thrice.

8581³. Peter represents the faith which is from the Lord; (and it is this which has the power to open and shut Heaven).

9212⁸. Peter, when a child, = the faith of the Church such as it is in its beginning; and Peter when old = the faith of the Church such as it is in its end.

9410³. Peter represented faith. Refs. 10087².

10087⁴. Those in faith separated, not only do not follow the Lord, but are also indignant (that those in the goods of charity should do so), as was Peter, then.

10134¹³. Peter represented the faith of the Church; or, what is the same, the Church as to faith. . . His trinal denial signified the plenary denial of the Lord at the end of the Church . . . For the Lord is denied when there is no longer any faith; and there is no faith when there is no longer charity . . .

10182². It is this power (of truth from the good of love) which is meant by 'the keys' of Peter. But by Peter, who is there called 'a rock,' is meant the Lord as to the truth of faith from the good of love. Refs.

J. 57. 'Peter,' in the Word, = the truth of faith of the Church which is from the good of charity; in like manner a 'rock' (in the words) 'Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My Church;' by which is not meant that any Power has been given to Peter; but that it is in the truth which is from good . . . (thus) in the Lord. E.9².

R. 356. Reuben . . . = truth in the understanding, or faith . . . the like as by Peter . . .

790⁰. By 'the apostle Peter' is meant the Truth of the Church, or faith. 798⁵.

3648a. Peter does not appear now.

D. Min. 4631. See PAUL, here.

E. S². 'Peter' = faith. 9³.

9. The Lord imposed on Simon the name 'Peter' . . . because 'Peter,' like 'a rock' = the Lord as to truth from good, or faith from charity.

[E. 9.]³. That Jesus said to Peter three times, 'Lovest thou Me?' and that Peter said three times 'I love Thee;' and that Jesus then said, 'Feed My lambs,' 'Feed My sheep,'=that those who are in faith from love ought to instruct those who are in the good of love to the Lord, and in the good of charity towards the neighbour. Ex.

—⁴. That when [Peter] was young he would gird himself, and walk whither he would=that in the first time of the Church [its members] would imbibe truths from the good of charity, and that they would act from freedom . . . 'When thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and lead thee whither thou wouldest not'=that in the last time of the Church [its members] would no longer . . . know truths from any other source than because they are said by another, and thus would be in a servile state . . . 195¹⁴.

—⁵. As, in the last time of the Church, faith is such that it rejects the good of charity, by saying that faith alone makes the Church, and saves . . . therefore Jesus said to Peter, by whom such faith is there meant, 'Follow thou Me.' 'And Peter, having turned, seeth the disciple whom Jesus loved, following, and saith, Lord, what is this man?' by which is signified that in the last time of the Church faith would avert itself from the Lord . . .

19². Peter=faith, and thence the Lord as to faith, because faith is from the Lord.

209⁴. 'Peter' (id.)=truth from good which is from the Lord; thus faith from charity; and 'the keys' given to him, power over evils and falsities. These things were said to Peter when he had acknowledged the Divine of the Lord in His Human; by which is also meant that those have power who acknowledge the Divine of the Lord in His Human; and, from Him, are in the good of charity, and thence in the truths of faith. 333².

229³. From this (appearance) Peter, by whom was represented the faith of the Church, has been called the first of the apostles; when yet John was the first. Ex.

434³. As Peter represented the like as Reuben, he was the first of the apostles . . . 'Peter'=truth in light, and faith.

443⁴. The faith which is obedience, is signified by Peter when he is called 'Simon;' and the faith which is the affection of truth, when he is called 'Simon son of Jonas.' Ill.

—⁵. When Peter is called 'Simon,' he has a like signification to 'Simeon;' namely, obedience, the faith of charity, the affection of truth, and, in general, truth from good. Ex.

444¹¹. 'Peter'=truth in the understanding; 'James,' truth in the will; and 'John,' truth in act.

740¹¹. 'Jesus said to Peter, Get thee behind Me, Satan; thou art a scandal; because thou savourest not the things of God, but the things of men' (Matt.xvi.23). These things were said to Peter, because 'Peter,' in the representative sense,=faith; and, as faith is of truth, and also of falsity, as here, Peter is called 'Satan' . . . Peter represented faith in both senses; namely, faith from charity, and faith without charity; and faith without charity is faith of falsity.

805¹². This is what the Lord foretold to Peter . . .

812². These things (about taking the sword) were said to Peter, because by him was represented the truth of faith, as also the falsity of faith . . .

820². The reason Peter was the first of the apostles, was that truth from good is the first of the Church . . .

—⁴. These things (about the keys, etc.) were said to Peter, because by 'Peter' is meant truth from good which is from the Lord . . .

—⁶. From (John xxi.15-17) it is evident that Peter represented truth from the good of love to the Lord, and therefore he is here called 'Simon of Jonas,' (which) =faith from charity . . . That those who are in the doctrine of truth from love to the Lord should instruct those who will be of the Lord's Church, is meant by . . . 'Lovest thou Me?' Ex.

—⁷. What these things (in John xxi.18-23) mean, no one can know unless he knows that by 'Peter' is signified faith from charity, and also faith without charity; faith from charity in the Church when it is beginning; and faith without charity when the Church is ceasing. Ex.

—⁸. That 'Peter'=faith separated from charity. Ill.

—^e. (Thus) 'Peter,' in the representative sense,=truth from good which is from the Lord; also faith from charity: and, in the opposite sense, truth separated from good, which in itself is falsity; and also faith separated from charity, which in itself is not faith.

Ath. 208. 'Peter' (John xxi.)=those in faith alone . . . From the words to Peter it is plain that those in the doctrine of faith alone will not acknowledge the Divine Human of the Lord.

Inv. 35. The reason the keys of the Kingdom of the Heavens were given to Peter, is that he represented the Lord as to Divine truth . . .

3606. This idea, being their filthy phantasy, (caused them to seem to be like it).

3614. Man is so carried along by his cupidities, which produce phantasies . . .

3625. From (the reflections of thought) come . . . insanities and phantasies . . . Those in solitude of life easily fall into such things . . .

[D.] 3626. Some have so inrooted their phantasies that . . . they are completely immersed in them . . . These are called open insanities ; for they do not suffer themselves to be removed from this insanity or phantasy, appearing sane in all other things . . . All phantasies concerning spiritual things originate thence, in so far as they have induced persuasion.

3640. (The phantasies of those in the interior sphere.)

3644. Phantasy can cause him to appear above when he is below, and so on.

3647. For one phantasy produces another.

3653. By phantasy it was induced that with these knives they would cut my throat ; for evil Spirits are such, that in phantasy, they suppose themselves to be in the act.

3717. (The direful phantasies of Sirens, represented.)

3751. The Quakers inhere obstinately in their phantasies . . .

3797. The Quaker Spirits rushed by phantasies upon an innocent person ; but, as they acted by phantasies—as they are wont to do in life—they could not excite him . . . Such a phantasy may be called an illusive phantasy, when they suppose it to be him, when it is nothing but their phantasy . . . So that there is no other subject, but only a phantasy thus formed into his image, which, also, is an aerial phantasy . . .

3851. They elevated me among themselves by phantasy . . .

3869. By phantasies Spirits can present anything to view in another place . . .

3923. They contrived how to produce infants by phantasies . . . and thus infuse the phantasy that he is a husband.

3968^e. See PERSUADE, here.

4017. That distances are phantasies . . .

4086. That they appear so very high up, is a phantasy of their altitude . . .

—^e. When the phantasy of magic and deceit comes, they seem to be elsewhere . . . But still they are in Hell ; for the other place is only a phantasy.

4089. He becomes as one dead ; for nothing corresponds to his phantasies.

4155. An inundation is twofold . . . of phantasies on the left side of the head. Ex. (Compare A. 5725.)

4198^e. They want to obsess man, whence come the direful phantasies of man . . .

4305. On those who suppose all things to be phantasies . . . and that there is nothing real.

4339. Concerning phantasies.—It is wonderful that the phantasies of evil Spirits should appear as quite real . . . They touched their garments . . . and said that they were real ; but they can be taken away by phantasies, and others put on . . . All things which are from the Lord are real, and those who are from Spirits are not real . . . as a man who is in phantasies supposes evil to be good . . . If phantasies had not a semblance of reality, [these Spirits] could not be ; for they are mere phantasies . . . But good Spirits have no such phantasies.

4353. Concerning hypocrites, and their phantasies. (Troops of fleas.)

—². Where nothing is believed to be true, there is nothing but phantasy which is produced in its place.

4360. Concerning phantasies.—The phantasies with Spirits are as if they were alive. They suppose they have garments . . . The reason is that they [themselves] are mere phantasies, and their life consists of nothing but phantasies, because of falsities. In order that they may live, it has been provided . . . that their phantasies should appear to them as if they really existed. But with those who are in faith from the Lord there are no phantasies ; but appearances attended with all delight and happiness. Ex.

4380. On the phantasies which reign in Hell.

— . If they had not a life of phantasies, they would have none at all ; and therefore phantasies are to them as it were living, with every sense. . . They said they knew they were phantasies . . .

4381. The genera of phantasies are very numerous, and the species still more so ; and the Hells are the same in number . . . I have seen how they mutually torture each other by phantasies. Examps.

4428. (The phantasy that they possess treasures.)

4434. As they are permitted to act according to their phantasies and cupidities . . .

4468. She thought that by phantasies she would enter into my (bodily organs) . . .

4485. After death, Souls do not at once come into their consociations, because their phantasies are not those of their cupidities. Ex. 4487.

4512. (Punishments in Hell by phantasies.)

4541. Subjects whom they multiplied by phantasies . . .

4542. They have the phantasy that if they could by phantasies eject the filthy things in them, they would be free from all sins ; but they were shown that this is a phantasy. Examp.

4740. He had made these things for himself by phantasy. Enum.

4905. Concerning elevation into Heaven by phantasies.

5004. They made, from phantasy, as it were the Sun, where the Lord is.

5026. The Dutch know better than others what is phantasy, and what real appearance . . .

5172. They call those who change their garments and faces according to the quarters, phantastics.

5207. They adored that phantastical Sun . . .

5223. The phantasies of Hell.

— . They torture each other . . . by phantasies. By phantasies they make them into any monsters whatever.

5224. By phantasies Sirens induce on themselves lovely forms, and most ornate garments. They present beautiful houses . . . But, as they are (mere) external forms, they perish in a moment, and then foul things are presented to view. 5225, Des.

5455. (The Russians) operate very strongly by phantasies . . .

5786b. By phantasies they induce ways and streets . . .

5792b. They had made use of phantasies to procure for themselves an image of Heaven . . .

5799. The quality of magical and phantastical things. Ex. 5802.

5806. Concerning phantasy such as is in Hell.—All things which appear in the Hells . . . appear real, because they themselves are in phantasy. Examp.

5816. They had raised themselves up into the mountains and hills by phantasies . . .

5830. I wanted to speak with (the infernals), but they could not understand, because they were in phantasies . . .

5850. When the spiritual are speaking in this way, they are still not in phantasies; but if they are in evil, then, when they are let into their interiors, and come into Hell, they are in phantasies. Ex.

5896. Concerning phantasies.—The quality of phantasies was evident from a certain one who was in phantasies. Des.

5905. As their thought is of falsity, and is then phantastical . . .

—^e. They see things which are not, exactly as if they were, which is the reason there are mere phantasies there, and nothing real.

5929. By phantasies the evil ascend on high, and then believe they are in Heaven.

6013. Concerning those who are in phantasy. Kal-senius.

6042. Melanethon found out how by phantastical art to make appearances of decorations.

D. Min. 4551. Concerning the cruelty of some by fire and tow in phantasy.

4672. The light of phantasy is when there are falsities; the light of persuasion when there are truths.

E. 510². As they revolve (the ascent of mountains) in their phantasy, they attempt it . . . In phantasy they cast themselves on high . . .

553^e. From these persuasions come forth phantastical visions.

575². Unreal visions . . . are produced by Spirits by phantasies . . .

—³. In the Spiritual World there are also appearances which are not correspondences, which are produced chiefly by evil Spirits by phantasies. (Palaces, garments, etc.) But as soon as the phantasy ceases, all these things vanish, because they are external things in which there is nothing internal. Such visions, being from phantasies, = fallacies.

1050². Hence Heaven from its light inflows through the spiritual mind (of these profaners) into things not corresponding, and into things opposite thereto, in the natural man, from which comes forth a phantasy so direful that they seem to themselves to fly in the air like dragons, while flakes and chaff appear to them like giants and troops; and a little ball like the whole globe . . . The cause is that they have Heaven in the spiritual mind, and Hell in the natural . . . (They are in a perpetual delirium of phantasy. 1055⁴.)

De Conj. 11. (These lascivious women) know how to make themselves beautiful by phantasies and also how to decorate places with various utensils; but only for a few moments; for, when the phantasy ceases, the appearances cease, and then all things are foul.

Pharaoh. Pharao.

A. 31². See EGYPT, here. 1482. 5077. 5079. 5366. 6639. 6651. 6673. 6679. 6799. 6907. 7103. 7220. 7766. 8528.

42. 'Pharaoh' . . . by whom is represented human wisdom or intelligence; that is, knowledge in general; is called 'a great whale.' III.

665^e. Even Pharaoh, who exalted Joseph over Egypt, (represented the Lord's royalty). 1361².

1201². 'Pharaoh,' or 'Egypt' = scientific.

1482. 'The princes of Pharaoh saw her' (Gen. xii. 15) = the primary precepts.

1485. That the knowledge signified by 'Pharaoh' did well to . . . the Lord when a boy. Sig.

1487. 'Jehovah smote Pharaoh with great plagues' (ver. 17) = that the scientifics were destroyed; for 'Pharaoh' = knowledge in general, and therefore the scientifics which are of knowledge. (Ex. under KNOW-scire.)

1491. 'Pharaoh called Abram' (ver. 18) = that the Lord remembered; (for) 'Pharaoh' = knowledge. Knowledge itself, or the scientifics themselves, which the Lord imbibed when a boy, are here called 'Pharaoh.' Thus it is knowledge itself which thus addresses the Lord, that is, Jehovah through knowledge.

1499. 'Pharaoh commanded the men upon him' (ver. 20) = that scientifics left the Lord. 'Pharaoh' = knowledge. 1547.

2049^e. 'Pharaoh' = knowledge in general.

2588¹¹. 'Egypt,' and 'Pharaoh' = knowledge.

3325¹¹. The successive recession of the Church from charity, and its deflection to faith . . . is represented . . . finally by Pharaoh and the Egyptians, in that they treated evilly the sons of Israel. —¹², Ex.

3448¹⁰. 'The army of Pharaoh' = falsities thence.

4789. 'Pharaoh' = scientifics.

5080. 'Pharaoh was wroth' (Gen. xl. 2) = that the new natural man averted itself. 'Pharaoh,' or 'the king of Egypt' = the new natural man, or the new state of the natural man.

5094². The interior Natural is that which is represented by Pharaoh the king of Egypt . . .

5095. Pharaoh, or 'the king of Egypt,' in (Gen. xl.) = the new state of the Natural; consequently the interior Natural; for this is made new.

— . Pharaoh here represents the Lord as to the new state of the Natural, or as to the interior Natural.

[A.] 5118. 'Pharaoh's cup in my hand' (ver. 11) = the influx of the interior Natural into the exterior, and the beginning of reception.

5120. 'I gave the cup upon the palm of Pharaoh' (ver. 11) = appropriation by the interior Natural. 5126.

5133. 'Cause me to be remembered to Pharaoh' (ver. 14) = communication with the interior Natural.

5147. 'Of all the food of Pharaoh' (ver. 17) = full of celestial good for nourishing the Natural. 'Pharaoh' = the interior Natural, and also the Natural in general; for the interior and the exterior Natural make a one when they correspond. 5160.

5160. 'On Pharaoh's birthday' (ver. 20) = when the Natural was being regenerated.

5192. 'Pharaoh' (in Gen. xli.) = the Natural in general, which now rested, and left all things to the Celestial of the Spiritual.

5195. 'Pharaoh dreamed' (ver. 1) = what was foreseen concerning the Natural.

5208. 'Pharaoh awoke' (ver. 4) = a state of illustration in the Natural. 5218.

5244. 'Pharaoh sent' (ver. 14) = the propensity of the new Natural . . . to receive the Celestial of the Spiritual. Ex.

5249. '(Joseph) came to Pharaoh' (id.) = communication with the new Natural.

5251. 'Pharaoh said to Joseph' (ver. 15) = the perception of the Celestial of the Spiritual from the Natural . . . (for) the Lord is represented by both Joseph and Pharaoh . . . by Pharaoh, as to the Natural.

5264. 'What God doeth He hath told to Pharaoh' (ver. 25) = that it was given to the Natural to apprehend what was provided.

5272. 'This is the word which I have spoken to Pharaoh' (ver. 28) = that which the Natural thought from the Celestial of the Spiritual.

5274. 'He hath made Pharaoh see' (id.) = the apprehension of the Natural.

5282. 'Upon the dream being repeated to Pharaoh two times' (ver. 32) = because it was foreseen concerning both Naturals.

5286. 'Now let Pharaoh see' (ver. 33) = the looking forward of the Natural. Ex.

5296. 'Under the hand of Pharaoh' (ver. 35) = for necessity and consequent disposition in the Natural.

5304. 'The word was good in the eyes of Pharaoh' (ver. 37) = the complacency of the Natural.

5306. 'Pharaoh said to his servants' (ver. 38) = the perception of the Natural with all things there.

5308. 'Pharaoh said to Joseph' (ver. 39) = the perception of the Natural from the Celestial of the Spiritual.

5315. 5325. 5937.

5317. 'Pharaoh removed his ring from upon his hand' (ver. 42) = . . . that the Natural abdicated the power which it before had . . .

5326. 'I am Pharaoh' (ver. 44) = that . . . the Natural is from the Celestial of the Spiritual. Ex.

5336. 'In his standing before Pharaoh king of Egypt' (ver. 46) = when his presence was in the Natural. . . 'Pharaoh king of Egypt' = the new state of the Natural, or the new natural man; thus the Natural in which now was the Celestial of the Spiritual; and which the Celestial of the Spiritual now has made its own.

5337. 'Joseph went forth from before Pharaoh' (id.) = when the Natural in general was his.

5365. 'The people cried unto Pharaoh for bread' (ver. 55) = the need of good for truth in the Natural.

5366. 'Pharaoh said to all Egypt' (id.) = . . . apprehension in both Naturals, in general and in particular.

5449. 'Let Pharaoh live' (Gen. xlii. 15) = what is certain; (for this expression) is a form of asseveration. 5454.

5799. 'As thou art, so is Pharaoh' (Gen. xlii. 18) = that the Internal has dominion over the Natural.

5875. 'The house of Pharaoh heard' (Gen. xlv. 2) = through the universal Natural; (for) 'Pharaoh' = the Natural in general. 5933.

5902. 'He hath set me for a father to Pharaoh' (ver. 8) = that now the Natural is from . . . internal good. This, by influx, ordines all things in the Natural, and at last causes the Natural to be from itself.

5935. It was good in the eyes of Pharaoh' (ver. 16) = joy everywhere in . . . the Natural in general.

5941. 'Pharaoh' = the Scientific of the Natural in general.

6015. 'Pharaoh' = the Scientific of the Church in general; for Egypt = the Scientific of the Church; and therefore its king = this Scientific in general. III.

6042. 'I will go up and tell Pharaoh' (Gen. xlvi. 31) = communication with the Natural where are the scientifics of the Church.

6047. 'It may be that Pharaoh will call you' (ver. 33) = if the Natural in which are the scientifics of the Church is willing to be conjoined.

6059°. The Scientific into which these truths are insinuated, is 'Pharaoh' (in Gen. xlvii.).

6063. 'Joseph came, and told Pharaoh' (ver. 1) = the presence of the Celestial Internal in the Natural, where scientifics are, and thence influx . . . 'Pharaoh' = the Natural, and thence the Scientific in general.

6071. 'Set them before Pharaoh' (ver. 2) = insinuation into scientifics. 'Pharaoh' = the Scientific in general.

6072. 'Pharaoh said unto (Joseph's) brethren' (ver. 3) = perception concerning the truths of the Church in the Natural. 'Pharaoh' = the Natural and the Scientific in general.

6081. 'Pharaoh said to Joseph' (ver. 5) = perception in the Natural where scientifics are.

6092. 'Pharaoh said to Jacob' (ver. 8) = perception in the Natural where scientifics are concerning the general truth of the Church.

6099, 6100. 'Jacob blessed Pharaoh' = a devout wish for conjunction, and consequent fructification. 'And went out from before Pharaoh' (ver. 10) = separation as to time . . . from the Natural where scientifics are.

6115. 'Joseph brought the silver into the house of Pharaoh' (ver.14)=that it was all referred to the General in the Natural.

6138. 'We and our ground will be servants to Pharaoh' (ver.19)=total submission . . . to the Natural in general, which is under the auspices of the Celestial Internal. —^e.

6142. 'Joseph bought all the ground of Egypt for Pharaoh' (ver.20)=that he appropriated to himself the whole natural mind where scientifics are, and placed it under the general auspices in the Natural. —^e.

6145. 'The land was Pharaoh's' (id.)=that all things were subjected to the Natural which was under the auspices of the Internal.

6149. 'A part was assigned to the priests by Pharaoh' (ver.22)=that therefore it was ordained by the Natural, which was under the auspices of the Internal.

6150. 'Which Pharaoh gave them' (id.)=. . . according to ordination . . . in the Natural (which was) under the auspices of the Internal.

6153. 'I have bought you . . . and your ground for Pharaoh' (ver.23)=that he procured these things for himself, and subjected them to the General in the Natural, which was under the auspices of the Internal.

6156. 'Ye shall give the fifth part to Pharaoh' (ver.24)=remains, that these are for the General which is under the auspices of the Internal.

6163. 'We will be servants to Pharaoh' (ver.25)=that they abdicate what is their Own, and submit it to the Natural which is under the auspices of the Internal.

6236^e. By 'Pharaoh' is represented the Natural, but not as to truths, but as to scientifics . . . into which truths can be initiated . . . which is represented by the coming of Jacob and his sons into Egypt.

6511. 'Joseph spake to the house of Pharaoh' (Gen. i.4)=the influx of the Internal into the natural mind.

6523. 'All the servants of Pharaoh went up with him' (ver.7)=that he adjoined himself to the scientifics of the Natural. (For) 'Pharaoh'=the Natural in general.

6651. Pharaoh, who is here 'the king'=the Scientific in general . . . (here) the false Scientific, that is, the Scientific which is against the truths of the Church. Hence he is called 'a new king;' for he who was in the time of Joseph represented the Scientific which is in accord with the truths of the Church.

6661. 'They built store-cities for Pharaoh' (Ex.i.11)=doctrines from falsified truths in the Natural where are alienated scientifics.

6683. 'The midwives said to Pharaoh' (ver.19)=appereception concerning these scientific truths in the Natural. . . 'Pharaoh'=false scientifics in general.

6692. 'Pharaoh commanded all the people' (ver.22)=a general influx into the scientifics contrary to the truths of the Church. . . A general influx, because from Pharaoh, by whom is represented the Scientific in general.

6693⁴. 'Pharaoh' (Ezek.xxix.)=the Natural where is the Scientific. Refs.

6729. 'The daughter of Pharaoh went down' (Ex.ii.5)=what is religious there. . . Here, what is religious from false scientifics, because she was the daughter of Pharaoh, by whom is here represented the false Scientific. (See also 6739. 6745. 6750.)

6771. 'Pharaoh heard this word, and sought to kill Moses' (ver.15)=that the false Scientific, on appereceiving this, wanted to destroy the Truth . . .

6864. 'Go, I will send thee to Pharaoh' (Ex.iii.10)=the Holy proceeding . . . by which the infesting falsities would be dissipated. . . 'Pharaoh'=falsity.

6867. 'Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh?' (ver.11)=that he was not yet in such a state as to seem to himself able to go and remove the infesting falsities.

6907². These are the things which are represented by Pharaoh, in that he so often set himself in opposition; and the removal of such Spirits, and their detrusion into Hell, is represented by the destruction of Pharaoh and the Egyptians in the Sea Suph.

7031. 'Do (these portents) before Pharaoh' (Ex.iv.21)=against the infesting falsities.

7033. 'Say to Pharaoh' (ver.22)=exhortation (to) the falsity which is infesting the truths of the Church . . . 7090.

7094. 'Pharaoh said' (Ex.v.2)=contrary thought . . . by those who are infesting.

7097³. 'Pharaoh' represented those in the Hells who are in falsities, and infest those of the Spiritual Church; being mostly such as have said that faith alone saves, and yet have lived a life contrary to faith. (Their state in the Spiritual World des.). 7317.

7107. 'Pharaoh said' (Ex.v.5)=the will of those who infest the truths of the Church. 7110.

7142. 'They cried to Pharaoh' (ver.15)=indignation displayed before those who were infesting.

7159. 'Pharaoh'=falsity infesting. Refs. 7167.

7187. 'Pharaoh'=those who infest by means of injected falsities. Refs. 7224.

7228. 'Pharaoh,' when called also 'the king of Egypt,'=those who infest by mere falsities. 8142. 7237. 7243.

7268. 'I have given thee a god to Pharaoh' (Ex.vii.1)=the power of the Law Divine over those in falsities.

7272. 'I will harden Pharaoh's heart' (ver.3)=obstinaacy from the evil of falsity.

7275. 'Pharaoh will not listen to you' (ver.4)=that those in falsities will not receive.

7286. 'Pharaoh'=those who are in falsities and infest. 7390. 7396. 7397. 7429.

7295. 'Pharaoh and his servants'=those who infest by falsities.

7301. Pharaoh, of whom it is here said that he 'listened not' represents those who are in falsities and infest; and, so far as they infest, so far they are in evil from falsities; for infestation is from evil, and is effected through falsities.

7331. 'Pharaoh'=those who infest by means of falsities. 7348.

Philistine. Philistinus.

Philistia. Philistia.

See ANIMATE.

A. 703^f. By the Philistines are represented those who take up false principles, and reason thence concerning spiritual things, which is called 'man' as they call the Antellectual.

1127. 'From whom went forth the Philistines' Pharisaus = manna = a nation that is of man, that is, signified the knowledge of the Knowledge of truth and charity.

— In the Ancient Church all were called Philistines. He spoke much concerning faith, and said that salvation is 'in fact', and yet had no life of fact. Therefore they were called the unchristianized, that is, without charity. III and Ex. 310^f.

— Such are everywhere signified by the Philistines in the prophetic of the Word, and also in the historical. III.

— As by the Philistines' were signified the Knowledge of faith, Abraham signified that he and Isaac were . . .

— That the Philistines' = in general the knowledge of the Knowledge of faith, and in special, that which is faith and salvation in Knowledge alone. III.

1038. 'The Philistines' is more seen from natural knowledge concerning spiritual and celestial things, but they learn the Knowledge of faith and love, them in the memory with no other end than to not know them . . . As the Philistines' are said, they cannot improve the Knowledge of faith by reasonings from them, and thus from the themselves false doctrines; and therefore they . . . can with difficulty be regenerated, and receive charity. Ex.

1000. 'The Philistines' Pharisaus = the knowledge of the Knowledge of faith and charity.

1030^f. Tyre, Sidon, and Philistia = Knowledge.

1268^f. 'The Philistines' Israhel = those in the knowledge of the Knowledge of truth, and not in charity.

1302. By Philistia is signified the knowledge of the Knowledge of faith. 310.

1266. 'Abraham signified in the land of the Philistines many lays' Gen. xxi. 34 = that the Lord adjoined to the doctrine of faith very many things from the knowledge of human Knowledge.

— 'The land of the Philistines,' that is, Philistia = the knowledge of Knowledge.

1839^f. 'Philistia' Israhel = the knowledge of the Knowledge of faith; or, what is the same, those in the knowledge of the same, but not in the goods of faith.

3383. 'The king of the Philistines' Gen. xxi. 1 = internal things. . . For 'the Philistines' = the knowledge of Knowledge, which is also that of internal things. 3390.

3410. 'The Philistines envied Isaac' Gen. xxv. 20 = that those in the knowledge alone of Knowledge did not apprehend.

[A.] 3412. 'All the wells . . . the Philistines stopped up' (ver. 15) = that those in the knowledge of Knowledges did not want to know interior truths which are from the Divine, and thus obliterated them. 3420.

—². In the Ancient Church, and afterwards, those were called Philistines who studied life but little, but doctrine much, and who in process of time even rejected the things which are of life, and acknowledged for the essential of the Church the things which are of faith, which they separated from life; consequently, who made nothing of the doctrinals of charity . . . and instead of them vaunted the doctrinals of faith, and placed the whole of religion in these. Further des.

3419³. These doctrinals, of love to the Lord and of charity, . . . are rejected at this day . . . partly by those who are called 'Philistines,' and also 'Egyptians.'

3427². Those in the knowledge alone of Knowledges, called 'Philistines' . . . cannot but deny that there is an internal sense of the Word. Ex.

3459. In the good of truth are they who are here represented by . . . 'the Philistines;' namely, those who make faith the essential of the Church, and set it before charity. They who are such are in no other good than the good of truth. Ex.

3463. Such are the doctrinals of those called 'Philistines' in a good sense; that is, those who are solely in the doctrinals of faith, and as to life are in good, but in the good of truth . . .

4763⁴. By 'the Philistines' who killed Saul, were represented those in faith separated. Refs. 9468⁴.

4855. 'The woman' Samson took from 'the daughters of the Philistines' = truth from non-good; thus truth obscured. . . For 'the Philistines' = those in the doctrinals of faith, and not in a life according to them.

8093. 'God led them not by the way of the land of the Philistines' (Ex. xiii. 17) = it was provided by the Divine that they should not pass to the truth of faith which is not from good.

— . In the historicals, where it treats of the wars between the sons of Israel and the Philistines . . . by 'the Philistines' are represented those in faith separated, or with whom the knowledge of the Knowledges of faith is the principal thing, but not a life according to it; consequently those who teach and believe that faith alone saves.

8096². As to the assaults by those who are in the truth of faith which is not from good, who are signified by 'the Philistines' . . . in the other life they infest the upright, and continually assault . . . charity . . . until they have been vastated; that is, deprived of all the knowledge of the Knowledges of faith . . . At this day such are very numerous. (Their position, etc., in the World of Spirits.) 8099².

8313. 'Pain caught hold of the inhabitants of Philistia' (Ex. xv. 14) = despair of enlarging dominion with those who are in faith separated from good.

— . They are distinguished from 'the Egyptians' in that they exclude the goods of charity, believing that man is saved by faith without them. (Their subsidiary doctrines enum.) These are 'the Philistines,' and they are called 'the uncircumcised,' from the evils of the love of self and the world, in which is their life.

—⁴. 'The Philistines' . . . in the other life constantly affect dominion, by fighting against others, and this so long as they are not yet devastated as to the knowledge of the Knowledges of faith.

9340. 'To the sea of the Philistines' (Ex. xxiii. 31) = extension . . . to the interior truths of faith . . . For by the land of Philistia is signified the knowledge of the interior things of faith . . . because the Ancient Church was there. Ill. —⁴.

—⁴. The Philistines, like all the nations of Canaan, represented both the goods and truths of the Church, and also evils and falsities . . .

—⁵. That 'the Philistines' = the interior truths of faith. Ill.

L. 65. The Church was . . . afterwards turned into Philistia. P. 264².

F. 49. That those who are in faith separated from charity are represented in the Word by the Philistines. Gen. art.

—^e. The other religiosity (into which every Church degenerates), which derives its origin from the conceit of Own intelligence, is meant in the Word by 'Philistia.' At this day . . . to Philistia belong those who are in faith, and not in charity. 50, Ex.

50^e. As this religiosity, which is of faith separated from charity, continually wants to invade the Church, the Philistines remained in Canaan . . .

51. As 'the Philistines' represented those in faith separated from charity, they are called 'the uncircumcised,' by which are meant those devoid of spiritual love, and thence in natural love alone . . .

52. That those in faith separated from charity are represented by 'the Philistines.' Shown from the Word. 53.

P. 264³. Philistia, by which is meant faith separated from charity, would have profaned also the spiritual sense of the Word. Ex.

326¹². 'The Philistines' (who captured the ark) = those in faith separated from charity . . .

R. 812³. Until . . . the Philistines—who are those who profess faith alone—had been separated in the Spiritual World . . .

T. 200³. 'The Philistines' (in the spiritual sense of the Word) = faith without charity.

487⁴. 'Philistia' (Is. xiv. 29) = the Church separated from charity.

E. 275¹⁸. 'The Philistines' (Ezek. xxv. 16) = those in the doctrine concerning faith alone.

315¹⁶. 'Philistia' = truth without good, or faith without charity. 581⁸.

386³. Those who believe that the interior sight alone of the natural man is faith, and that by this they are . . . saved, denying that the good of charity effects anything . . . are meant by 'the Philistines;' and the congregation of them by 'Philistia.'

406¹³. 'The Philistines' = those in faith alone, or in faith separated from charity.

433⁷. 'The Philistines towards the sea' (Is. xi. 14) = those who separate faith from charity, or from good life . . .

—¹⁴. 'The Philistines' (Joel iii.4)=those who have falsified the truths and goods of the Word.

518¹⁷. 'The sea of the Philistines,' where Tyre and Sidon were,=the Knowledges of truth and good from the sense of the letter.

700²⁰. The Philistines represented and thence signified those who make nothing of the good of love and of charity, and thence nothing of the good of life, by placing everything of religion in knowledge and Knowledge . . . Hence it is evident why the Philistines so often fought with the sons of Israel, and that now the Philistines conquered and now the sons of Israel. The Philistines conquered when the sons of Israel had receded from the statutes and precepts . . . and the sons of Israel conquered when they had lived according to them. Ill.

727²¹. 'Philistia' = the religion concerning faith separated from charity. 741².

817⁶. 'The Philistines,' in the Word, =faith separated from love . . .

— . All the wars which the sons of Israel waged with the Philistines represented the combats of the spiritual man with the natural man, and thence also the combats of truth conjoined with good with truth separated from good . . .

—⁷. As this religion is with all in the Churches who love to live a natural life, the Philistines were not subjugated in Canaan as were the rest of the nations . . .

— . The Philistines represented a religiosity, separated from spiritual good . . . Hence, whenever the sons of Israel fell away from the worship of Jehovah . . . they were delivered to . . . the Philistines. Ill. . . But, when they returned to the worship of Jehovah . . . the Philistines were conquered. Ill.

—⁸. 'Philistia' = the Church, or those in the Church, who are indeed in truths from . . . revelation, but still are in filthy loves.

—¹⁰. 'The daughters of the Philistines' = the affections of falsity.

1029¹⁸. Then, from being a Church, it becomes either Babylon, or Philistia . . . Philistia, with those who love the world above all things.

Coro. 34². 'The Philistines' = those not in charity, and thence not in truths.

Philosophy. Philosophia.

Philosopher. Philosophus.

Philosophical. Philosophicus.

Philosophically. Philosophice.

Philosophize. Philosophare.

A. 196². Philosophers . . . speak of the spirit by terms which they themselves do not know . . .

—³. All who reason from sensuous, scientific, and philosophical things . . .

233². Cannot be apprehended by the senses, knowledge, or philosophy.

1385^e. Had confused truth and good by scientific and philosophical things.

1626^e. Has extinguished spiritual ideas by the terms and definitions of human philosophy.

1911⁵. The more the Rational thinks from scientific which originate from . . . philosophical things . . .

1919^e. This is true, philosophically; but still the philosophers themselves . . . think differently.

2124. At this day they not only reason from the senses, but also, by a philosophy unknown to the ancients, concerning Divine arcana.

2492². Those who have wanted to penetrate Divine arcana . . . by philosophical things . . .

2568⁵. The more they consult . . . philosophical things . . .

— . But those who think from the affirmative can confirm themselves . . . by philosophical things.

2588⁷. If one is wise in philosophical things, he can confirm himself by this : . . .

4574³. As the word form savours of human philosophy . . .

4658². (Origin of the philosophics of Aristotle.)

— . The philosophics (of the schoolmen) are means of being insane . . .

—³. A little child speaks more philosophically . . . than he could describe in volumes.

—⁵. When they had lived as men, they had been delighted with ideas . . . but without philosophy.

4966. The scientifics which are now called philosophics, such as those of Aristotle, were unknown to the Ancients.

—⁴. The scientifics which . . . are properly called philosophics, rather withdraw the mind from knowing such things, because they can also be applied to confirm falsities; and also let the mind into darkness when truths are confirmed by them; because very many of them are bare words, by which the confirmations are made, which are apprehended by few, and concerning which even these few dispute.

5556^e. Many have become such from the confounding of good and truth by philosophical things . . .

6326. A philosopher more celebrated and sane, who died some years ago, with whom I spoke concerning degrees . . .

—^e. The philosopher confirmed it, and avowed that such things had been known to him . . . and that the world should apply philosophical things to such uses . . .

H. 353. By the sciences are meant philosophics, etc.

M. 130. The Ancients, [who were] after the Most Ancients, acknowledged for wisdom the wisdom of reason; and these were called philosophers.

182. Three novitiates, of whom . . . the third was a philosopher.

—^s. The philosopher told like things about himself . . .

I. 1. Therefore the ancient philosophers and scholastics believed that influx from (the organs of the senses) was derived into the soul.

20. How, from being a philosopher I became a theologian . . .

[I. 20]⁴. What Christian theologian has not studied philosophy in the schools before he is inaugurated . . .

T. 79. There came some from the Christian world who . . . had been most celebrated philosophers . . .

695⁴. Excepting the philosophers . . .

Ad. 914. This understanding is not acquired through philosophy such as is this day in human minds ; for this rather destroys all faith ; but such as is philosophy in itself, which is true philosophy when it accords with the things in the Divine Word as do external things with internal, or as does nature in itself with Heaven . . . Such must be the philosophy of the human mind that by it is clearly seen what is spiritual and celestial ; and such also exists, because it is such in itself . . .

2/1076. Hence, as soon as they consult any philosophy, they fall into the worship of nature . . . and thus faith is almost unamendable, unless all their philosophy is first shaken off . . .

2/1283. Who doubts more about spiritual and celestial things than those who study philosophy . . .

D. 226². Man imbibes from himself, and from the operations of his mind, philosophical scientifics . . .

—^e. (Thus) how poor and [good for] nothing is philosophy . . .

302^e. Those who live there are such . . . as are of sound reason, and do not extend the philosophy of the mind into heavenly things.

341^e. Therefore faith is destroyed by human philosophy.

591. How they philosophize on this Earth. Des.

609. That philosophy is worthless. Ex.

649. That human philosophy has disclosed many Truths . . .

650. Thus philosophy can be present when it is a servant.

676. [Conversation] with a celebrated philosopher concerning certain things in philosophy.

767. As to philosophy, every part of it has hitherto done nothing else than darken minds, and thus close the way to the view of interior things . . . for it stops short in mere terms . . . Rational philosophy so confines the ideas that the mind cleaves in mere particulars . . . so that in the other life, a philosopher who has indulged much in such things, is stupid . . .

866. That philosophical things so confine the human mind that at last it can see nothing.

1602. Concerning philosophy, useful and useless.

— . They represented a wild boar, with blood sprinkled on his back . . . because I have interspersed philosophical terms, or have formed ideas philosophically.

1603. But they were instructed that my philosophics are nothing else than certain ideas pronounced in simpler terms. Examp.

—². Thus it is a kind of philosophical speech, more concise than other speech . . . and, indeed, more clear . . .

1604. But the abuse is that philosophers remain in terms . . . Thus an unlearned man has much more extended ideas, and sees what truth is better than a philosopher ; for such a one remains in the mire, like a swine . . . and becomes a wild boar in the forests ; for he ranges about . . . in Truths, which he tears to pieces and kills. 1605. 1606.

1607. By human philosophy or intelligence are also meant fables . . . and also the magic of the Egyptians.

2263. That the philosophy of men is only that of vocabularies.

2313. Concerning the philosophy of man : how it blinds minds.

2606. How base and worthless is the syllogistic philosophy . . .

2634. Natural knowledges and human philosophy not only obscure, but also completely . . . extinguish the light of spiritual Truths.

2637. Those who have been reduced into Falsity through philosophy . . .

3095. That philosophical Truths convince such more strongly . . .

3417. That philosophers who have taken up phantasies cannot believe . . .

3421. Whatever philosophical and scientific is with men, they turn into confirmations.

3479. When men reason from things philosophical, etc.

3703^e. From the confusion of truth and good by philosophics and scientifics . . .

3949. The philosophy (of Aristotle) has come forth from thought, (and not from terms to thought).

3950. The philosophy of such things is of no use, except for the sake of delight.

3952. Formerly they could think much better without philosophy . . .

4446. Aristotle formed his philosophics in the natural order . . .

4744. He had studied instrumental causes only, . . . as philosophics, etc.

D. Min. 4578. Some sciences completely destroy the faculty of thinking . . . as philosophics, when [a matter] is determined by a series of conclusions from definitions of terms . . .

4655. Concerning philosophy and freedom.

4657. (Philosophics included among the useful sciences.)

Phinehas. Pinchasus.

A. 1038⁴. By 'Phinehas' (Num. xxv. 12, 13) is meant the priesthood which was represented by him, which = love and the things of love.

7230^e. 'She bare him Phinehas' (Ex. vi. 25) = the derivation thence.

E. 502¹⁰. Mentioned.

Dephlegmate. Dephlegmare.

Dephlegmation. Dephlegmatio.

A. 5724². Those of them who correspond to the less vital viscid phlegm, keep the thought intent on these anxieties.

D. 5496^e. In the light of Heaven [they appear] like phlegm, with very little interior life.

D. Wis. x. 6². The blood of the heart is dephlegmated in the lungs . . . The quality of the dephlegmation and nutrition of the blood in the lungs with the good, and with the evil. Ex.

Phlegm. Pituita.

Phlegmy. Pituitosus.

A. 5386. In the brains there are the ventricles and mammillary processes which carry off the phlegmy things there . . . To these correspond . . . tenacities of opinions, and scruples of conscience in things not necessary.

5718. Such relate to the gross phlegm of the brain . . .

D. 1267. There are those who relate to the phlegmy or viscid excretions . . .

1791. Concerning those who constitute the phlegm in the brain.—They are Spirits who, because they want to dominate, and alone rule man, excite among other Spirits enmities, and even combats, to insanities . . . 1792.

1793. These are they who constitute the phlegm of the brain, which is wont to obstruct the lamina cribrosa, so that the excrementitious humour of the brain stagnates, whence come dulnesses and the like insanities. Further des. 1794.

D. Love v. 3. (The second use of the wind-pipe is) to purge the lungs from viscid phlegm.

D. Wis. x. 3. The phlegmy matter in the nostrils and mouth is partly from (the defecation of the blood in the lungs).

Phoebus. Phoebus. T.822^e.

Phoenix. Phoenix. Coro.40.

Phthisis. Phthisis.

M. 253^e. Scorbutic phthisis . . . and also certain phthises, by which the body is consumed (causes of legitimate separation). 470.

D. 1812^e. From (these spurious Spirits) come phthises, etc. Ex.

Phut. See PUT.

Phylactery. Phylacterium.

E. 395¹¹. 'The phylacteries which they make broad' (Matt.xxiii.5)=goods in the external form; for they were upon the hands, (which)=deeds . . .

Physical. Physicus.

Physics. Physice.

A. 6057. All the arcana of . . . physics, etc. are inscribed on (the human body).

6322². They believed that influx is physical and not spiritual. Ex.

9110. Physical influx is contrary to order . . . thus impossible. 9401². 9419^e. 10199². 10299³. W.166^e. I.1.19. T.695³. D.5686. E.1215^e.

H. 353. By the sciences are meant physics, etc.

T. 184. Demonstrate that three are one by various things in physics, etc.

665⁴. Among them were many skilled in the physical art.

696². (Argument) that influx is from nature, or physical.

D. 2299. Concerning those who want to enter into Divine mysteries by natural philosophy, or physical things—physicalia.

4744. He had studied instrumental causes only, . . . as physics, etc.

6071. See POLHEM, here.

D. Min. 4578. The useful sciences are physics, etc. 4657.

E. 739⁷. This order is called physical or natural influx, which is quite impossible in heavenly things.

Physician. Medicus.

Medics. Medica.

See MEDICINE.

A. 2661². 'The strong have no need of a physician' (Matt.ix.12). Ex. 8365^e.

6502. 'Physicians' = preservation from evils. (See MEDICINE, here.)

T. 665. One (of the four companies) consisted of physicians.

—⁴. Which, by physicians, is called ataxy.

D. Min. 4613. Takes up this persuasion (in regard to food) from some physician.

[A.] 10048. 'Thou shalt cut the ram into pieces' (Ex. xxix.17) = that interior things are to be ordained distinctly. Ex. 10057.

Pierce. Transfigere.

R. 26. 'Him whom they have pierced' (Rev.i.7) = that those in the Church who are in falsities will see. 'To pierce' Jesus Christ = to destroy His Divine truth in the Word . . . and 'to pierce the side' of the Lord = to destroy by falsities Divine truth spiritual and natural, thus the Word in the spiritual and the natural sense . . . E.38.

Pierce. Transfodere.

L. 16^e. That they 'pierced His side' = that they had completely extinguished all the truth and all the good of the Word.

Piety. Pietas.

Pious. Pius.

Piously. Pie.

Pietist. Pietista.

A. 9. In the third state, he, from the internal man, speaks piously and devoutly.

1110^e. Of those who have led a pious life, the Lord takes much care . . .

1679². He who believes that piety of life is not possible without merit being placed in works . . . extinguishes with himself all piety of life, and gives himself up to cupidities . . .

3147². In misfortunes . . . the man begins to think piously . . . and also to exercise the works of piety . . .

3688⁴. As in what is good and pious the Lord is present . . .

3769³. They may indeed read the Word . . . from piety . . .

8252. With the man of the Church there must be the life of piety and the life of charity. They must be conjoined. The life of piety without the life of charity is conducive to nothing; but the former with the latter to all things. H.360². 535³.

8253. The life of piety is to think piously and to speak piously, to pray much, to behave humbly then, to frequent places of worship, and then to hearken devoutly to the preachings, and to approach the Sacrament of the Supper frequently every year, and so with all the other things of worship according to the ordinances of the Church. N.124.

8254. The life of piety without the life of charity is to want to consult for one's self alone . . . But the life of piety with the life of charity is to want to consult for one's self for the sake of the neighbour . . .

8256. Hence the life of piety does not remain with man to eternity, except in so far as it accords with the life of charity.

8762^e. Hence those who think about eternal salvation place it in a life of piety . . .

10177⁵. What is holy and pious, but is not from love, is indeed heard, but is not gratefully received. Ex.

H. 535^e. A life of piety abstracted from a life of charity is difficult, and leads away from Heaven . . .

N. 123. Concerning piety. Chapter.

— . Piety without charity . . . does not make spiritual life; but piety from charity.

124. Divine worship consists . . . secondarily in (a life of piety). E.325⁶.

— . He who leads a life of piety (only), does not worship God. Ex.

125. External holiness is like such piety . . .

126. To be continually in pious meditation . . . and reading pious books . . . is not to renounce the world. Ex.

128. (Thus) a life of piety avails and is accepted by the Lord, in proportion as a life of charity is conjoined with it . . .

Life 9. He reads . . . books of piety, etc., and does not know whether he does these things from himself, or from God. Ex.

25. That if man thinks and speaks pious things, and does not shun evils as sins, the pious things are not pious. Ex.

—^e. The exercises of his piety are either merely a matter of habit, or are meritorious, or hypocritical. Enum.

30. The Word teaches that in proportion as man has not been purified from evils . . . his pious things are not pious. Ill.

P. 231⁴. The fourth kind of profanation is [committed] by those who speak pious and holy things . . . and yet at heart do not believe and love them. Ex. E.1061². 1062³.

M. 405. Love them on account of their actual piety, or piety of life . . . —².

T. 34². If man (then) worships God with actual piety, he becomes an image of God . . .

—³. But if he does not worship Him with actual piety, he puts off the image of God . . .

120. Even those who have been devoted to piety are perverted by them.

459⁴. He said, Piety inspired by piteousness is charity. Ex. . . My boat is piety; and besides, piety is useful for all things.

535^e. All pious men . . . will assent to this . . . but few will act accordingly.

568³. You have followed the pursuits of piety; but have you ever examined your internal man . . .

D. 1013. (The Spirits of the gall-bladder) are such as in life utterly despise what is pious . . .

3206. Sirens who by an appearance of piety enter into the minds of others . . .

3294. From misfortunes they have exhibited themselves as pious . . . But they are distinguished by the Angels in every state of piety.

4615. (Those who affect the tongue with pain) are such as . . . have simulated piety in every manner . . .

4740². As he has been among the pietists . . .

4855^e. Such are those in a life of piety, and not in one of charity.

4908. Some of these have been revengeful . . . but still have exercised piety.

5070⁵. See LAST JUDGMENT, here. 5342. 5377. 5378. 5392. 5768.

5135. He said he could not go bowed, like those in such piety. He was told that such piety does not make Heaven . . .

5939. Those who adore piously in places of worship: and, then, think solely about God, and nothing as to the life, correspond to adultery with a sister. $\frac{5}{2}$

5948³. Very many who had led a life of piety . . . but, as they had not loved any use, they were cast out . . . —⁴.

6038. See DEVOTION, here.

D. Min. 4612. He who adopts the principle that piety and the goods of charity effect nothing . . .

4660. They are modest and pious, but study self essentially . . .

E. 325⁴. Those who place all Divine worship in oral piety, and not in actual piety, greatly err. Ex. Actual piety is to act from what is sincere and right, and just and fair, in every work . . .

— (This) is external piety, (Des.) and is not piety, but hypocrisy, habit, or what is persuasive . . .

—⁵. Heaven is insinuated into the actual piety of man, and not into oral or external piety separated therefrom . . .

— When it was perceived . . . that their external piety did not proceed from actual piety . . . they were cast down.

803³. Their pious things are not pious things . . .

D. Wis. xi. 5. (These) are the uses of external charity, which charity is called piety.

De Conj. 97. Those who seduce by a show of piety . . . 98.

D. 3450^e. The quality (of those who have communion of wives) was shown by pigs in the light: thus they are filthy pigs.

4764. (Charles xii.) was sent into a very squalid Hell where there are pigs.

D. Min. 4566. He said he could thus lead man; but was told that he leads swine and pigs. . . He was sent into a pig that he might rule him—that is to say, into a pig into which had been turned one who had polluted himself with the obscenities of adulteries—and he became similar.

E. 659⁶. The reason the demons were cast into the swine, was that when they had lived in the world they had been in sordid avarice; for such avarice corresponds to swine . . .

1044⁴. 'Swine'=filthy loves, such as are in the Hells of adulterers. As these are in the infernal marriage . . . they utterly reject the Knowledges of goods and truths, and treat with ignominy . . . and therefore it is said, "Cast not your pearls before swine, lest they trample them with their feet, and turn and rend you' . . .

—^e. The changes of place were nothing but changes of state, my body remaining in the same place.

1274². Distance of place has no effect there.

1275. Change of place and distance is only an appearance, according to the state . . .

1277. It matters not that many are together in one place on Earth . . .

1376. The idea of place and distance with Spirits is not anything real, but appears as if it were. It is nothing but the states of their thought and affection which are thus varied . . .

—². Change of place is only an appearance, and a fallacy of sense. For there are two species of changes of place there; one . . . when it is said that all Spirits . . . constantly keep their own place in the Grand Man—which is an appearance. The other is, that Spirits appear in a place when they are not there; which is a fallacy. 1380^e.

1377. That place, change of place, and distance, are an appearance (there), is evident from the fact that all Spirits . . . appear constantly in their own places, and never change their places, except when their state is changed; and, as it is changed, so are the places and distances with them varied. But as everyone has a general state, which reigns . . . after these changes, they return to their own situation.

1378. Spirits, as to the organics which constitute their bodies, are not in the place where they are seen. Ex.

1379. They appear in the World of Spirits as changes of place; but in Heaven, as changes of state.

7418. The places where evil Spirits are. Des.

8103. Changes of state are signified by journeys from one place to another.

8325. It is states of truth and good, (or) of falsity and evil, which are represented by . . . distances and places (there). Refs.

8328. 'In a place for Thee to dwell' (Ex. xv. 17) = . . . a state of good from the Divine; because Heaven is meant.

8367. All the places to which the Israelites came = the state and quality of the Thing treated of.

8722. 'To come to a place' = to the state to which they shall be led.

8938. In the internal sense, 'place' is not meant, but every man with whom are faith and charity; for 'place' = state.

9210². As non-essentials; thus in the lowest place.
— . Regard themselves . . . in the first place.

9261². Those who appear in one place are in a like state of affection and thought . . .

9305. 'To bring thee to the place which I have prepared' (Ex. xxiii. 20) = introduction into Heaven according to the good of love and of faith.
—^e. Place (there) corresponds to the state of life; and therefore the place (there) appears according to the state of life; and, in itself, is the state. Refs.

10734. A Spirit is brought from place to place no otherwise than by changes of the state of his interiors; which changes appear to him as if they were moving from one place to another. Examp.

H. 41. The Angels of each Heaven are not in one place together . . .

149. From the form of Heaven everyone knows his own place.

191. The Angels have no idea of place and space. Ex.

195. When anyone is progressing from one place to another (there) . . . he arrives more quickly when he longs to do so, and less quickly when he does not long . . .

197. Hence it is that by places and spaces, in the Word, are signified such things as are of state. Enum.

422. The World of Spirits is a place intermediate . . . 428, Ex.

J. 32². When a Spirit is in such a state, he appears in many other places, and everywhere as if present in the body; but this is only an appearance; and therefore as soon as he is brought into his reigning love, he vanishes . . . and is with his own in the Society to which he is attached.

48². Therefore everyone is Known (there) from the quarter and place where he dwells . . . In like manner when they go from place to place. Ex.

3116. Spirits are not only seen in certain fixed places ; but their bodies [are also seen] in a fixed position. Ex.

3405. They then seemed not to be in their own place . . . They were no longer heard in their own place.

3605. Concerning the idea of place.—I observed that whenever I heard anything, I conceived the idea of a place . . .

— . When I have been long in one place, I can command my ideas better there . . . For the Spirits want to have the idea of place joined . . . I noticed, further, that one place has an advantage over another on account of the vicinity of the Spirits who seem to themselves to haunt it ; and also on account of the men who are near and in the house. 3608.

3608. That the ideas of Spirits are attached to place, and to the things which are in the place. Ex.

3644. The Spirits began to doubt whether it is a fallacy, or an appearance, that Spirits appear at the right, left, etc. ; supposing that such is their genuine place. But . . . it is thought which conjoins. Examps.

—². Places are allotted (there) according to the nature and disposition ; and therefore when the thought is perverted . . . he appears to himself to be elsewhere, which is a fallacy ; but when the place is constant to them, it is an appearance.

3857. The Spirits do not know but that they are in the place of which one is thinking . . . They are then without the reflection of place . . . (But when they are) Subjects, they have the reflection which the man has ; as that of place, persons, etc.

3942. As changes of places come from changes of Societies ; and phantasies and ideas cause them to be changed as to places . . .

4086. Although evil Spirits appear in other places, as overhead, this is a mere phantasy, and they are really in Hell.

4087. Unless the Societies were in Divine order . . . a Spirit could not possibly move himself from place to place . . . To be moved from place to place, which is translation and progression, is an appearance and a fallacy ; but it is circumstanced according to the variations of the idea or phantasy ; thus of the corresponding Societies which are inflowing . . . Hence appear the changes of place . . .

4403. That every place (there) is a change of state. Ex. 4652^e.

4716². When a Spirit comes into another place, he does not know where he was before . . .

5125. Heaven is not a place, but a state of life. Ex.

5162. The World of Spirits is not a fixed place . . . but is the state in which they are . . .

5312. All such know how to expatiate as to the thoughts, (and) thus to appear in many places.

5363. All the places (there) are appearances of Divine truth in ultimates.

5789a. Everyone (there), wherever he appears, is really in that place where is his reigning love . . .

6058. Every Spirit at last comes into that place (where) he is as it were in his own centre. Ex.

D. Min. 4554. The ideas of places also are presented simultaneously . . .

E. 50. All by whom the Word was being written were brought to the places which had the [required] signification.

543¹⁰. 'Their place is not known' (Nahum iii. 17) = that no (truth and good) are left.

606. 'The place of the Lord's feet' (Is. lx. 13) = all things of Heaven and the Church ; and, in a particular sense, the Church.

625⁴. The idea of place limits and bounds the thoughts . . . Angelic thought is devoid of places, etc.

654⁶⁶. 'Ye shall see this place no more' (Jer. xlii. 18) = that not anything of the Church shall be with them any longer.

—^e. 'Through dry places seeking rest' = a state of evil and falsity which are of his life.

Inv. 11. The Lord is in place ; but not by means of place . . .

Plague. Lues. T. 324^e. D. 1787.

Plague. Plaga.

A. 730. Plagues = vastations.

1487. 'To be smitten with plagues' (Gen. xii. 17) = to be destroyed.

2781³. 'Plague of horse, mule, camel, and ass' (Zech. xiv. 15) = intellectual things affected with plagues. 3048⁷.

3147¹⁰. All the captivities and plagues of the Israelites were to the end that . . .

7264. The process of their devastation is described by the eleven plagues (of Egypt).

7541. 'I will send all My plagues' (Ex. ix. 14) = that all the coming evils would rush on them together. 'Plagues' = evils.

—². It is according to order that one plague should follow another; and that the evil should thus be successively cast down into Hell. Ex.

7574^e. The miracles, or plagues, in Egypt, = falsities and evils. . . Each one = some kind of falsity and evil.

7766. 'Yet one plague [more]' (Ex.xi.1) = the last of vastation.

7879. 'No plague of the destroyer upon you' (Ex. xii.13) = that damnation from Hell shall not inflow.

7926. 'To inflict a plague upon Egypt' (ver.23) = damnation to those who have been in faith separated from charity. 7930. 7941.

9042. 'Hurt a woman with child' (Ex.xxi.22) = the injuring of the good which is from truth.

9056^e. 'Wound' is predicated of the injuring of good; and 'plague,' of the injuring of truth. Ill.

9057. 'Stripe for stripe' (ver.25) = something of affection in the Intellectual which is extinguished or injured. Ex. . . 'Stripe,' in the Original, is expressed by a word which means gore . . . Hence 'stripe' = truth injured or extinguished. This is signified by the plagues in the Apocalypse, etc.; and by 'the wounds' inflicted on the man who fell among thieves (Luke x.) . . . The Samaritan's binding up his wounds = the healing of that injured affection. (Compare E.444¹⁴.)

9090. See Ox, here.

9103². The injury remains there, like a scar . . .

9272⁷. 'The stroke of their wound' (Is.xxx.26) = the evil of life thence.

9437². 'Forty stripes' (Deut.xxv.3) = the penalty to the full.

10219. 'A plague' (Ex.xxx.12) = the penalty of evil.

—⁴. There are three plagues which follow those who attribute to themselves the truths of faith and goods of love . . . Enum. . . These three penalties are signified by the three plagues which were proposed to David. Enum. and Ex.

W. 345^e. (The origin of the plagues of Egypt.)

R. 456. 'Who were not killed by these plagues' (Rev.ix.20) = those not so spiritually dead from visionary reasonings, and from the love of self, the conceit of Own intelligence, and from the concupiscences thence.

—³. That 'plagues' = spiritual plagues. Ill.

498. 'To smite the earth with every plague' (Rev. xi.6) = to bring ruin upon the Church by falsities and evils of every kind.

503⁴. The plagues (of Egypt) significative of the cupidities of the natural man separated from the spiritual. Enum.

577. 'His wound of death was healed' (Rev.xiii.3) = the cure of that head of doctrine . . . E.786.

657. 'The seven last plagues' (Rev.xv.1) = the evils and falsities in the Church, such as are in its last state. . . . 'Plagues' = evils of love, and falsities of faith; for they are the things described in the following chapter. Enum. 670.

—². That 'plagues' = spiritual plagues, which affect men as to their souls . . . and which are evils and falsities. Ill.

—^e. The plagues of Egypt, which were in part like those described here = nothing else than evils and falsities.

670. 'The seven plagues' (ver.6) = all evils and falsities, universally understood.

674^e. 'The seven plagues of the seven Angels' (ver.8) = the evils and falsities which devastate the Church and make an end of it.

692. 'To have Power over these plagues' (Rev.xvi.9) = that from Him inflow all the good of love and truth of faith by which evils and falsities are removed.

715. 'The plague of it was exceeding great' (ver.21) = on account of those direful and atrocious falsities from confirming the dogma of justification by faith alone. (=the total destruction of genuine truth. Ex. E.1028.)

760. 'That ye receive not of her plagues' (Rev. xviii.4) = lest they perish; for by 'plagues' are signified evils and falsities; and at the same time destruction by them.

765. 'In one day shall her plagues come' (ver.8) = at the time of the Last Judgment the penalties of the evils which they have done will return upon them. Enum. and Ex. E.1124.

957. 'God shall add unto him the plagues which are written in this book' (Rev.xxii.18) = that (such) cannot but perish from the falsities and evils which are signified by the plagues described in this book.

T. 635. In seven chapters in the Apocalypse is described the devastation of the present Church, in like manner as is described that of Egypt; and both are described by similar plagues, each of which signifies some falsity which promoted its devastation even to destruction. (Parallel between the plagues of Egypt and those of the Apocalypse.)

E. 444¹⁴. 'To beat-infligere plagas' (Luke x.30) = to injure the mind and the spiritual life with falsities. (Compare 584^e.)

503³. Like things are signified by the plagues of Egypt as by (these) plagues in the Apocalypse; for by . . . the plagues of Egypt are signified those changes which precede the Last Judgment . . .

543⁶. The Egyptian plagues = spiritual plagues . . .

584. 'Who were not killed in these plagues' = who had not perished from the above-named cupidities. . . These are called 'plagues,' because by 'plagues,' in the Word, are signified such things as destroy the Spiritual life with man, and consequently the Church; consequently, which induce (spiritual) death; and which, in sum, relate to the cupidities springing from the loves of self and of the world . . . Ill.

633⁵. As reformation succeeds punishment, it is said that 'he shall not be smitten with many stripes' (Deut.xxv.3).

[E.] 646. 'To smite the earth with every plague' = that the Church with them perishes through the concupiscences of evil.

654⁷⁴. The plagues of Egypt = the vastation of the natural man as to all the truths and goods of the Church. Enum.

786. 'Wound of death' = discordance with the Word.

928. 'The seven last plagues' = the evils and falsities in the complex which completely devastate the Church. 949. 957.

962². 'Wound, and scar, and recent sore' (Is.i.6) = the evils of the will, and the derivative falsities of the thought, continually more.

—⁸. The miracles in Egypt, which were so many plagues, and are also called 'diseases,' = so many infesting evils and falsities, devastating and destroying the Church which is with spiritual men.

985. 'Having Power over these plagues' = no fear of the Last Judgment . . . and of the damnation and punishment of the evils and derivative falsities which have devastated the Church.

Plain. Planities.

See under FIELD-campus.

A. 1585. 'He saw all the plain of Jordan' (Gen.xiii.10) = those goods and truths which are in the external man. The plain near the Jordan = the external man as to all his goods and truths. Ex.

1592. 'Lot chose all the plain of Jordan' (ver.11) = that the external man is such.

1597. 'Lot dwelt in the cities of the plain' (ver.12) = that the external man was in scientifics.

2418. 'Stop not in all the plain' (Gen.xix.17) = that he should not tarry in any of (the doctrinals). 'The plain' = everything of what is doctrinal. Ill.

—². 'The plain of the earth' (Rev.xx.9) = the doctrinal things of the Church.

2450. 'And all the plain' (Gen.xix.25) = all things which pertained to those truths.

2456. 'When God destroyed the cities of the plain' (ver.29) = when they perished through the falsities of evil . . .

2702¹⁵. 'To descend into the plain' (Ezek.xlvii.8) = the doctrinal things which are of the Rational.

4236³. 'The plain of the earth' = the truth of the Church. 'A plain' = the truth which is of what is doctrinal.

4715⁴. 'Inhabitant of the valley and of the rock of the plain' (Jer.xxi.13) = the faith in which is no charity.

9340⁹. 'The plain of the Philistines' (Obad.19) = the truth of faith; for 'plain' = that which is doctrinal of faith.

10608². Those not yet made Angels dwell in the plains between the mountains and the rocks.

H. 583. The Spirits in the plains and valleys see each other . . .

M. 76. Beyond the valley there was a plain . . .

77². The summit of the mountain was a plain . . .

D. 4895^e. When (these rocks) become a plain, it is well.

5184. See LAST JUDGMENT, here. 5474. 5768.

E. 179⁷. 'The waters descending into the plain' = influx into the natural man.

223¹⁷. See CITY, here.

304². Those in the First Heaven dwell beneath in the plains and valleys.

342⁷. 'The plain into which the waters descend' = the ultimates of Heaven and the Church . . . 422¹⁵. 513⁷.

411²⁹. 'Valley,' and 'plain' = the ultimates of the Word . . .

449⁵. 'A plain' = good and truth in the natural man, because those in the Ultimate Heaven dwell in plains . . .

518⁴. 'The plain of the desert' (Is.xxxv.6) = where there is no intelligence.

Plane. Planus.

A. 762. Conscience is their plane . . .

1276. In a horizontal plane, and in a vertical one . . .

1555². (The formation of three planes in man.)

1937⁵. Freedom the plane of reception . . .

2280⁵. (The good of infancy is the plane for the good of wisdom.) 2306.

2679^e. Erroneous things serve for ultimate planes.

2776^e. The plane itself into which that light can operate . . . is the good of faith; thus conscience.

2915². Honour, decorum, etc., are planes with man upon which conscience is founded; and, consequently, intelligence and wisdom . . .

— . In these there is no plane . . .

3183. Man is first introduced into innocence in order that it may be a plane for all the other states.

3293². The spiritual life is terminated in the natural as in an ultimate plane . . .

3539². In the other life man has with him his natural affections, doctrinals, and scientifics . . . for these are the planes in which his interiors are terminated . . .

3639. All situations there are determined . . . according to planes; as, in the plane of the head, etc. 4321².

3679⁵. The natural memory serves Spirits and Angels as a plane . . .

3954. The sense of the letter serves the internal sense as a plane . . .

3957⁷. If there is not some recipient of good and truth, as a soil, or plane, in the interior man which lives after death, the influent good and truth cannot be received; and therefore man, while he lives in the world, ought to be solicitous to procure for himself interiorly such a plane . . . This plane is acquired through charity towards the neighbour . . . This plane is what is called conscience . . .

3969¹⁰. The Spiritual Kingdom is as a plane to the Celestial.

4167. There are in man two planes upon which are founded the celestial and spiritual things which come from the Lord. The one plane is interior, and the other exterior. The planes themselves are nothing else than conscience. Without the planes . . . nothing celestial and spiritual from the Lord can be fixed : it flows through like water through a sieve : and therefore those devoid of such a plane do not know what conscience is. (Continued under CONSCIENCE.) 5145⁴. 6207.

—³. These three planes act as a one with the regenerate ; for the one inflows into the other . . .

4288⁵. With those of the representative Church, externals served as a plane . . .

4353². The Natural must be the plane . . .

4360². Sensuous scientifics serve as planes for the Knowledges of spiritual things.

4403. Spirits known from their plane. Enum.

4588. The natural memory is there as a fundamental plane, into which interior truths and goods fall ; and if this plane is not receptive of (them), they are extinguished, perverted, or rejected.

4738³. In the plane of the sole of the foot.

4797. Still the genuine face is as a plane . . .

—². Into innocence as into a plane inflow love and charity from the Lord.

5032³. Therefore with them there is no plane into which Heaven can operate ; but whatever inflows from Heaven, flows through ; and, when it comes into the natural man, it is not received there . . .

5036³. The Angels then have a plane (in the man) into which they operate . . .

5079². The interiors of the Natural, man carries with him into the other life, where they serve as a plane for spiritual and celestial things. Ex.

5081. The things which inflow through the external way, are (really) called forth by the internal man, to serve as a plane for the celestial and spiritual things which inflow through the internal way.

5145³. When the degrees are terminated . . . every degree is a plane, in which rests . . . the good which inflows from the Lord. (Continued under DEGREE, and TERMINATE.)

5165². Without such a plane (as is formed by sensuous things in the exterior Natural) a man in the body cannot think about the things which are above sensuous things. Ex.

— . The speech of words is the plane in which is the meaning.

— . Therefore this plane (the exterior Natural) is the first formed.

5180. From the plane of the septum of the nose towards the plane of the left ear.

5492. The internal sense serves as a plane (to the affections of love and charity of the Inmost Heaven).

5651². The Natural is the plane in which the influx terminates ; and therefore unless the Natural . . . becomes nothing, good cannot inflow. 6406.

5874^e. When the understanding has been formed, scientifics form an ultimate plane, in which the man thinks no longer ; but above it. 6007.

5893³. (Thus) the truths of faith, inrooted by the affection of truth, are the plane into which the Angels operate ; and therefore those who have not this plane cannot be led by the Angels . . . for the operation of the Angels . . . passes through. But this plane cannot be acquired unless the truths of faith have been put into act . . . 6207. 6208. 6213.

5906^e. The progression takes place in order, from exteriors to interiors . . . for exteriors then serve as a plane for interiors.

5945². Such doctrinals, being the first which man learns, then serve him as an ultimate plane.

6491. (In embryos,) one part is always a plane for another.

6495². Into these (external) bonds, which make the ultimate plane, the Lord then inflows . . . But this plane is nothing in the other life . . .

6602. In the plane of the lower chest.

6645². The prior state then serves as a plane for the following one ; and so continually.

6750. Scientifics must first be learned, because they are a plane for the things of the understanding . . . (Thus) the Scientific is the first plane when man is being regenerated. 6751.

—². That the Scientific was also the first plane with the Lord . . .

6751^e. When man is being regenerated, the generals of faith, or the rudiments of the doctrine of the Church, are the first plane ; then come the particulars of doctrine ; afterwards, successively, things more interior. These planes are what are illustrated by the light of Heaven. Hence is the Intellectual, and the Perceptive . . .

6845^e. The Divine influx (then) inflows into the interior plane into which the man has been elevated.

7111². These emissaries appear . . . in planes from the head down to the soles of the feet.

7171. A little above the plane of the head.

7270². (The successive [planes] of creation.)

7358. The planet Mars appears . . . in the plane of the breast.

7761. The good which is formed through the truths of faith is the plane into which Heaven can inflow . . .

8002². Through the good of the Church is formed conscience, which is the plane into which the Angels inflow . . . whereas through natural good not any plane can be formed for the Angels.

8250. The part of the face devoid of life (is) for a plane interiorly . . .

8413^e. After regeneration . . . the delight of pleasures serves for . . . an ultimate plane, in which spiritual good . . . is terminated.

8487⁴. At last (these things) become the ultimate planes of celestial good.

9122. They cannot be saved, because they have no plane into which Heaven can inflow . . . for conscience is the plane and receptacle of the influx of Heaven.

[A.] 9334^e. The regeneration of man in the world is only a plane for the perfecting of his life to eternity.

9407². To these three things the speech of man serves for an ultimate plane.

10021². This state (of external innocence) is the plane of the new life when the man is being regenerated . . .

10110⁴. This good inflows with infants, that it may serve in advancing age . . . for a plane to receive truths. 10134².

10225⁷. A prior state is a plane for the following ones, continually.

10236². This (ultimate) Sensuous is the ultimate plane in which the life of man is terminated, and upon which it reposes . . .

10243². Such as is the quality of the natural man when he dies, such he remains . . . for this is the plane into which the interior things inflow. Ex.

10379. The Spirits (of the Third Earth) appear in the plane of the head . . .

10436². By the interior things of worship the man of the Church communicates with the Heavens, to which the external [thereof] serves as a plane upon which the interior things stand . . .

10734^e. I seemed to be elevated from the horizontal plane.

H. 341. The innocence of infants is the plane of all the affections of good and truth.

345. Those who die as adults have acquired a plane from the material world, and take it with them. This plane is their memory and its corporeal natural affection. This remains fixed, and is quiescent; but still it serves their thought after death for an ultimate plane; for the thought inflows into it. Hence it is that such as is this plane, and such as is the correspondence of the Rational with the things which are there, such is the man after death. But those who die as infants . . . have not such a plane; but a spiritual natural plane . . . and therefore they cannot be in such gross affections and thoughts.

356². The planes of this light, in which come forth the variegations as of colours, are the interiors of the mind.

370. Conjugal love is the very plane of the Divine influx. Ex. 371.

480². The reason man cannot be reformed after death by instruction, is that the ultimate plane, which consists of natural Knowledges and affections, is then quiescent, and cannot be opened, because it is not spiritual; and, upon this plane, the interior things of the mind rest . . .

553². There is a general likeness, from which, as from a plane of derivation, the several faces have some likeness.

R. 463². Out of man's will they make as it were an oval plane; and (affirm) that when the operation of the Holy Spirit approaches this plane, it deflects itself . . . T.462.

M. 436. (These spheres) meet in the rational plane with man; which is intermediate between Heaven and Hell.

439. For the ultimate plane, in which the delights of both (conjugal and scortatory love) cease . . . is the same.

446. That which is in the memory from parents and masters then serves (the understanding) for a plane.

447. The reason man progresses (from corporeal to sensuous, natural, rational, and spiritual) is that planes may be formed, on which the higher things may rest . . . The ultimate plane . . . may be likened to the soil . . .

—². As this is the ultimate plane (of the love of the sex) . . .

D. 856. Concerning a certain plane in man, as to his affections. Ex.

1701. The quarters . . . in the plane of the head, etc.

3391². Which is the first plane . . . 3393.

3397. Concerning inauguration into the first plane, or first faculty . . .

3852. Natural and corporeal things are the planes of their thought.

4037. How a plane of ideas, in which order is terminated, is formed in this world, and in this world only. 4038.

4042. The vessels of the memory are planes in which ideas are determined . . .

4167². The memory of man is their ultimate plane.

4396. That the worst men may have a plane to receive the truths of faith.

4399. As the ultimate plane is with man, in his affections . . .

4683. Because man is the ultimate plane.

4695^e. For they have no plane . . .

4696^e. Hence it is evident that a plane ought to be formed from the truths of faith, or from the Knowledges of good and truth in both doctrine and life . . .

5240^e. All (in the World of Spirits) when taken together, are not extended into a plane; but into a globe . . .

5552². Hence while man lives here he acquires a fixed plane, which cannot be changed after death . . . This plane he has with him, but it is altogether quiescent; but still his interior things cease in it. Unless it has correspondence with the internal things with him, it cannot be well with him . . .

5608. Man's natural thought is the plane in which cease all things of angelic wisdom . . . Into this plane fall all things which the Angels think. Hence, such as is the plane, such is their wisdom . . .

5617. This plane and ultimate is with an intelligent man, whether he is thinking about such things, or about other things, or whether he is sleeping . . .

— . Many men together may serve as one plane for one Angel. The Lord so disposes that what is wanting in one is in the other . . .

D. Min. 4545. The first plane is the inmost of the Rational . . . The second plane is the middle of the Rational . . . The third plane is that of the conscience of what is just and right . . . The fourth plane is that of honourableness and decorum . . . These planes can be conjoined, and the interior inflow into the exterior; and then the last plane, namely, that of honourableness and decorum, is good . . .

4546. But when the exterior plane is separated from the interior . . . it is only simulatory . . .

E. 30². All spiritual things cease in natural ones; for in these they have their ultimate plane . . .

Plane-tree. Platanus.

A. 4013³. Some species of trees signify exterior goods and truths, which are of the natural man; as the poplar, hazel, and plane-tree.

4014. 'Hazel and plane-tree' (Gen. xxx. 37) = the power thence of natural Truths. 'The hazel and plane-tree' = natural Truths.

—^e. 'Fir-trees,' and 'plane-trees' (Ezek. xxxi. 8) = natural things . . . 'plane-trees,' as to truth.

T. 78. On the north were groves full of plane-trees, etc., and other foliaceous trees.

944. Women who . . . have given themselves up to pleasures . . . become like furies.

945. It is otherwise with those who have been born into the pleasures and Delights of life . . .

—^e. To esteem pleasures . . . as nothing in comparison with the Lord . . . is what is meant by renouncing them, in the Word.

954^e. Those who have been delighted with mere pleasures . . . delight to stay in privies . . .

994. 'Every creeping thing that is alive'=all pleasures in which there is good which is living.

—'. As man's affections are perceived only in his pleasures, inasmuch that he calls them pleasures.

—². Pleasures are of two kinds: those of voluntary, and those of intellectual things. In general, there are the pleasures of the possessions of land, and of wealth; the pleasures of honours, and of offices in the commonwealth; the pleasures of conjugal love, and of love towards infants and children; the pleasures of friendship, and of social intercourse; the pleasures of reading, of writing, of being wise; and many others. There are also the pleasures of the senses. Enum. These kinds of pleasures, being felt in the body, are called of the body. But no pleasure ever comes forth in the body unless it comes forth and subsists from some interior affection . . .

—³. The things which are interior in order even from the inmosts are the source of pleasures. . . The pleasures are only the ultimate effects. . . Yet it may be evident . . . that all pleasures are such as are the affections interior in order; and that they receive from these all their essence and quality.

—⁴. As the affections interior in order are felt in the extremes . . . as pleasures, they are called 'creeping things' . . .

—⁵. Elsewhere also in the Word pleasures are called 'creeping things; clean, and unclean;' that is, the pleasures of which the delights are alive, or heavenly, and the pleasures of which the delights are dead, or infernal. Ill.

—⁷. Filthy pleasures, also, which originate from the proprium, and thus from its filthy cupidities, are called 'creeping things.' Ill.

995. 'They shall be food for you' . . . Any pleasure not only affects man, but also sustains him, like food. Pleasure without delight is not pleasure; but is something inanimate: it derives from delight that it is, and is called, pleasure. Such as is the delight, such is the pleasure . . . (Thus) such as is the life of the interiors, such is the delight of the pleasures . . .

—². Some opine that no one ought to live in the pleasures of the body . . . who wants to be happy in the other life . . . But no one is forbidden to enjoy the pleasures of the body and of sensuous things; namely, the pleasures (as above enum., 994²). For these are the extreme affections which originate from the interior ones . . .

—³. And as genuine pleasures have this origin, they are denied to no one. Nay, they (in this case) indefinitely surpass the delight which is not thence . . . for example, the pleasure of conjugal love . . .

—⁴. That the pleasures mentioned above are never denied to man . . . and that they are first really pleasures when from their true origin, may be evident from the fact that very many who have . . . had all pleasures in abundance . . . are among the blessed . . . And as they had regarded all their pleasures from charity and faith, they had regarded them from use . . . The use itself was the greatest delight to them; and thence was the delight of their pleasures.

996. For the pleasures which are in the extremes originate from delights interior in order. Ex. . . Therefore . . . man's delight of pleasures is vile relatively to his delight after death . . . (Continued under DELIGHT-jucundum.)

997. Those in charity . . . from which is all the delight of pleasures which is alive, do not regard the enjoyment of pleasures except for the sake of the use . . . Therefore every pleasure which is from charity has its delight from the use . . .

1029. The exterior (things with man) are scientifics and pleasures. Sig.

1327⁴. Man is permitted to live in pleasures, etc., (rather than to profane).

1357. The third (kind of idolatry) is that of the love of pleasures. Sig.

1486. The pleasures (of scientifics) are 'the maid-servants and she-asses.'

1514. With those who have indulged in mere pleasures . . . the odour of the sphere is excrementitious.

1528. The life of cupidities and of the pleasures thence sometimes appears like a coal fire . . .

1542. One thing which prevents man's becoming celestial, is the pleasures from the cupidities which he favours.

—^e. That the pleasures which . . . constitute the outermost sensuous man, left the Lord. Sig.

1547. For in proportion as man indulges in the pleasures which originate from cupidities, he is drawn away from the celestial things which are of love and charity, because there is in them love from self and from the world . . . But there are also pleasures which altogether agree with celestial things, which in the external form appear alike. But the pleasures which originate from cupidities are to be restrained and wiped off, because they block up the approach to celestial things. These are the pleasures which are treated of in (Gen. xiii.).

1563. The organic vessels of the external man, which are to be the recipients of the particulars and singulars of the internal man, are not opened except by means of the senses . . . Those which belong to the will are opened by pleasures and delights.

—². It must happen that . . . pleasures and delights insinuate themselves which cannot agree with celestial goods; as is the case with all those things which regard corporeal and worldly things as ends, (which) drag the external man downwards . . . and therefore unless such things are shaken off, the internal man cannot agree with the external. Sig.

1568. There are many things in the external man with which the internal man can dwell; as the affections of good, and the Delights and pleasures thence originating; for these are effects of the goods of the internal man, and of its joys and happinesses, and which, when they are effects, altogether correspond . . .

1773^e. The heat of those who are immersed in filthy pleasures (putrefies).

1824². The exterior Celestial is . . . also all the pleasure which is from the affection of good.

1860. Whatever favours man's pleasure . . . he feels as good . . .

1941². So long as man lives in the body, the (Divine) seed . . . is in the midst of jungles and thickets, which are scientifics and pleasures . . .

2184⁷. The good of the Natural is the delight which is perceived from charity . . . from which delight comes forth the pleasure—volupe seu voluptas—which is properly of the body.

[A.] 2203. 'Shall I (Sarah) have pleasure?' (Gen. xviii. 12)=that this was not its affection.

2757. Those who had indulged in pleasures; but had not extinguished the natural desire to procreate offspring.

3425². He who is in what is opposite believes that . . . all the pleasures of the body and the world are to be renounced . . . whereas in themselves they are not opposite to spiritual life; but correspond. For they are means to an end; namely, that the internal man may . . . live content in a healthy body.

— The internal and external man are opposite when the . . . pleasures become ends . . .

3849⁴. The most external affections are those of the body, and are called appetites and pleasures.

3951^e. Therefore he who is a spiritual man does not despise bodily nourishment, nor yet its pleasures; but he does not have them for an end . . .

4038². The delight, pleasure, and cupidity in (the Natural) pertain to the will, and are called natural goods.

4054. There is an incredible number of Societies which have no end of use; but only that of being among their friends, and in pleasures there . . .

4117³. 'Gilead'=the first good, which is that of the sensuous things of the body; for it is the good, or pleasure-volupte-of these into which the man who is being regenerated is first initiated. 4255⁴. 4748.

4464². If his life has been in . . . pleasures from hatreds . . . revenges . . . adulteries, self-eminence . . . clandestine rapines, avarice, deceits, luxury, and the like, his spiritual sphere is as foul as that of carcasses and dung.

5025. Spiritual truth and good will that man should have nothing of pleasure in dignities . . . but in services . . . and thus should have pleasure in the use of dignities. The merely natural man is altogether ignorant of what this pleasure is . . . and makes pleasure from dignities for the sake of self the lord, and pleasure from dignities for the sake of societies . . . the servant.

—^e. As the natural man feels no pleasure thence . . . he regards it as vile . . . and as nothing, relatively to the pleasure which he feels inflowing through the senses of the body, and through cupidities . . . But this pleasure is dead, because from Hell; whereas the pleasure from spiritual influx is alive, because through Heaven from the Lord.

5059^e. Excrements correspond to adulterous pleasures.

5214^e. Glory and pleasure (as ends) are of no use, because they are of no benefit to the neighbour.

5395. There are those who live . . . for no other end than that of pleasure. Such cannot be in company with good Spirits . . . for with these use makes the delight . . . Those who have lived solely for themselves and for pleasure . . . are beneath the buttocks; and, according to the species, and the ends, of the pleasures, pass their time in filthiness.

5723. Those who have been habituated to . . . pleasure only (cause a severe oppression in the stomach).

5786². The External dominates when man has as an end the pleasures of the body and the senses . . .

—³. Freedom from proprium is to indulge in all pleasures whatever, etc.

6188³. 'Beds of ivory'=the pleasures of the lowest Natural, which are the pleasures of the proud.

6201². In sensuous life are very many who indulge in corporeal pleasures . . . At this day such Spirits abound . . . The influx from them prompts man to . . . live for himself and the world, and not for others, except in so far as they favour him and his pleasures. For man to be elevated from them, he must think about eternal life.

6310^e. In this gross lumen are . . . also those who have lived in mere pleasures . . . They consequently think filthy things . . .

6315. (Such a man) is alternately in sensuous and in interior lumen. When he is in . . . pleasures, he is in sensuous life. Des.

6392². They do not know that there is any other happiness than . . . in living in pleasures, etc.

6564^e. (When the interiors are closed) pleasures and appetites carry everything away. Des.

7161⁴. The stink of the Hells . . . where are those who have had filthy pleasures as an end.

8378. Hence comes the insanity of placing all the delight of life . . . in luxury and pleasure . . .

8410. That thus they would enjoy the good of pleasures as much as they liked. Sig. and Ex.

8413². When the good of charity is to be insinuated . . . the delight of pleasures, which has made the natural life, is removed. When this delight is removed, the man comes into temptation; for he believes that if he is deprived of the delight of pleasures, he is deprived of all life . . . But he does not know that when this [part] of life is removed, there is insinuated by the Lord in its place spiritual delight and good. It is this good which is signified by 'the manna.' The former good or delight is meant by the flesh and bread in the land of Egypt, and the privation of it by the 'hunger.'

—³. But . . . the man who is being regenerated is not deprived of the delight of the pleasures of the body and lower mind; for, after regeneration, this delight is fully enjoyed; more fully than before, but in an inverted way. (Continued under DELIGHT—ju-cundum.)

8744. When the external man is not regenerate, he places all good in pleasure—volupte, gain, etc.

9140. 'A beast of burden' = the pleasure or appetite of the body. Ex.

9276. These affections . . . are those of sensuous things, which are called pleasures and Delights.

9341³. 'Euphrates,' in this sense, = the pleasure originating from the loves of self and of the world . . .

10407². 'A calf' = the delight of pleasures, etc.

H. 488⁵. Those who have passed their life in mere pleasures . . . loving these as the highest good of life, in the other life love excrements and privies . . . for the reason that such pleasures are spiritual filthinesses. D.3211. 4141.

500. By will, is meant . . . also all the delight and pleasure which are of the affection and love . . . since what a man wills . . . he feels to be delight and pleasure; and, conversely, what a man . . . feels to be delight and pleasure, he wills.

W. 363². There are many things of love . . . as affections, etc., and their pleasures and Delights.

P. 215⁹. See PLEASURE—libitum, here.

R. 952². 'Dogs' . . . in special, = those in mere corporeal pleasures, especially those in the pleasure of feasting.

M. 16². In the body itself (the delights of the soul) are felt as pleasures.

294¹. The wife of such a man has only pleasures; which, on the part of the man, are to be called the pleasures of scortatory love.

—⁷. In externals, the pleasures of insanity appear like the deliciousnesses of wisdom; but not in internals . . .

—⁸. The pleasures of scortatory love descend to the lowest Hell, and, on the way, and there, conjoin themselves with the pleasures of all infernal loves; and thus enter into their own infelicity . . . The reason is that the pleasures of this love are also the pleasures of insanity.

496. In the second degree (of the natural man) are those who . . . set the heart on luxuries and pleasures of every kind. These are properly meant by the sensuous.

D. 755. Concerning the difference between the deliciousnesses of pleasure, and true happiness.

2128. Concerning pleasures.—When separated from interior pleasure, the pleasures of the body and senses are as gross as those of beasts, because they are of the body only; as the pleasure of drinking. But interior pleasures, in which is peace, or innocence, are sweet . . .

2170. As there are genera and species of pleasures . . .

2508. That pleasures are never denied to men . . . 3623, Ex.

2523. That . . . pleasures are not rejected, but applied.

—^c. For pleasures are the life of the body . . .

4547. These are voluptuous; in excrements.

4627¹³. He who is in this gross lumen . . . is also in the pleasures of the body . . .

4629⁷. In such lumen also are the voluptuous.

D. Min. 4794. King Frederick was led into privies . . . by which was signified that he had been given to mere pleasures.

E. 789⁹. The delight of the flesh, which is called pleasure—volupte, etc.

991³. The reason there is all Delight and pleasure in the love of prolificating . . .

4871. A pledge of conjunction. Sig. and Ex.

9212. 'To pledge' = to receive a token for goods communicated; for a pledge is a token for goods which are lent. When spiritual things are understood . . . a pledge = sensuous truth. Ex.

9213². 'Thou shalt not receive for a pledge the mill or mill-stone' (Deut.xxiv.6). Ex.

—¹. 'Thou shalt not take for a pledge a widow's garment' (ver.17) = to take away, by any means whatever, the truths which desire good.

—⁴. 'To take a pledge' (vers.10-13) = the response.

—⁶. 'To stand outside and take a pledge' (id.) = not to oblige or incite another to confirm one's own truths; but to hear him, and take his answers such as they are in him. Ex.

M. 20³. He said, Receive these pledges; and, when she had received them, he kissed her, and said, Now thou art mine . . .

300. That after a declaration of consent pledges are to be given. Ex.

Plenty. Abundantia.

A. 5192. 'The seven years of plenty of provision in the land of Egypt' (Gen.xli.)=the scientific to which good from the Celestial of the Spiritual can be applied.

5275. The years of plenty of provision=states of the multiplication of truth in the Natural . . . In general, by the seven years of plenty of provision, and the seven years of famine, in the land of Egypt, are described the states of man's reformation and regeneration; and, in the supreme sense, the states of the glorification of the Lord's Human. 5276, Ex. 5292. 5339. 5342.

5278. 'All the plenty of provision . . . shall be given to oblivion' (ver.30)=the removal of truth, and the apparent privation thereof in both Naturals.

5342³. From this age, man is imbued with truths by instructions . . . and, in proportion as he is in the affection of good, truths are conjoined by the Lord with the good with him, and are stored up for use. This state is what is signified by the seven years of plenty of provision. These truths adjoined to good are what, in the proper sense, are called remains. 5349.

Pleura. Pleura.

A. 5188. Such relate to . . . the tubercles which grow on the pleura and other membranes.

5378². As the pleura encompasses and shuts in all the viscera of the thorax.

8980^e. (Such cuticular Spirits) are of many genera and species, as are the cuticles or coats in the body . . . There are those which encompass the interiors in general; as the peritoneum, the pleura, the pericardium . . . They are all relatively servants-servitia.

9216. That which is ultimate contains all the interiors, and is their General; for they cease in it, and thus rest upon it; as, for example . . . the pleura relatively to the viscera of the thorax.

W. 384. The heart and lungs . . . are encompassed by a covering of their own, which is called the pleura. 402^e.

P. 180³. The pleura, which is the common covering of the chest, or of the heart and lungs . . . by various circunvolutions, and then by protrusions from itself, finer and finer, enters into the inmosts of the lungs, even in the smallest bronchial branches, and into the very follicles which are the beginnings of the lungs; not to mention its subsequent progress through the trachea into the larynx towards the tongue. There is (thus) a perpetual connection of the outermost with the inmosts; and therefore as the outermost acts or is acted upon, so also the interiors, from the inmosts, act or are acted upon; which is the reason why when this outermost sheath, the pleura, is congested, or inflamed, or ulcerated, the lungs labour from their inmosts; and, if the disease grows worse, all the action of the lungs ceases, and the man dies. T.60².

D. 1721. Concerning those who constitute the interior membranes of the body; as the pleura. (See MEMBRANE, at A.5557.)

1723. These Spirits . . . constitute the pleura, which surrounds the chamber of the thorax, and, through the pericardium, insinuates itself into the lungs; and thus they pass into the pharynx and larynx . . .

Plough. Arare.

Ploughing, A. Aratio.

Plough, A. Aratrum.

Plougher. Arator.

A. 5117⁷. 'The ploughman - arans - reaching the reaper' (Amos ix.13). Ex.

5895. 'In which shall be neither ploughing nor harvest' (Gen.xiv.6)=no appearance of good and the derivative truth. 'Ploughing'=preparation from good to receive truths.

— The reason 'ploughing'=good, is that a field, which is ploughed, = the Church as to good . . . Hence 'to plough'=preparation from good to receive truths. The oxen, too, with which [the ground] was ploughed = goods in the Natural.

—². As this was the signification of 'ploughing,' it was forbidden 'to plough with an ox and an ass together' (Deut.xxii.10). . . 'To plough with an ox'=good in the Natural; and 'to plough with an ass'=truth there . . . (and) the Angels could not have a separate idea of good and truth . . . and therefore did not want to look at such ploughing.

—³. That 'to plough,' etc.=such things as are of good and its truth. Ill.

—⁵. 'No one putting his hand to the plough, but looking backwards, is disposed for the Kingdom of God' (Luke ix.62)= . . . let not him who is in good, betake himself thence to those things which are of the doctrinals of faith.

—⁶. It was on this account that it displeased Elijah, that Elisha, who was in the field ploughing, when called, asked that he might first kiss his father and mother . . .

—^e. In the opposite sense, 'ploughing'=the evil which destroys good; thus vastation; as in Jer. xxvi.18.

10669. 'In ploughing and in reaping thou shalt rest' (Ex.xxxiv.21)=as to the implantation of truth in good, and its reception. 'Ploughing'=the implantation of truth in good.

—². The reason 'ploughing' = the implantation of truth in good, is that by a field is signified the Church as to good; thus the good of the Church; and by the seed which is inseminated, is signified the truth of faith.

—⁴. 'Will the plougher plough the whole day to sow . . .' (Is.xxviii.23) . . . describes the reformation and regeneration of the man of the Church . . . 'To plough' = to implant truth in good.

—⁵. That 'ploughing,' from correspondence, = the first of the Church in general; and also in particular with everyone who is being regenerated. Ill.

— . 'To plough with an ox' = to prepare by means of good; 'to plough with an ass' = by means of truth; (and) in a state of good are all those in the Celestial Kingdom; but in a state of truth are all those in the Spiritual Kingdom; and he who is in the one cannot be in the other.

T. 347³. He who learns Truths and does them, is like one who sows his seed and ploughs it down-dearst.

E. 355³⁴. Will he plough with oxen? (Amos vi. 12) = is there any perception of good?

374⁹. 'To plough to sow' (Is.xxviii.23) = to learn.

376⁶. 'The ploughman reaching the reaper' = that he who receives good . . . shall also perform use; thus that they will be together with the man of the Church.

430¹³. Elisha ploughing with twelve yoke . . . = the formation of the Church through truths from good from the Word.

519⁶. 'Oxen ploughing' (Amos vi.) = the will of good.

Ploughshare. Ligo.

E. 734³. That then, by the consent of all, combats will cease, is signified by, 'They shall beat their swords into ploughshares . . .' (Is.ii.4). . . 'Ploughshares' = the goods of the Church which are cultivated by means of truths; for a field which is cultivated by ploughshares = the Church as to the good of life.

560. 'Stings' (Rev. ix.) = the cunningnesses and craftinesses for the persuading of falsities.

—³. That 'stings' = cunningnesses, is evident . . . for in common discourse the cunningnesses in speech by which men are deceived are called stings, and the speech itself is called sharp. In special, however, by 'stings' are signified interior falsities, which are such as cannot be shaken off, because they are from the scientifics and fallacies of the senses. . . In the Spiritual World interior falsities are represented in various ways by sharp things; as by . . . pointed things in various forms; and this when the intention is to do hurt; and therefore it is forbidden to present such things to view there.

—⁴. These falsities are signified by 'stings.' Ill.

D. 4722. Concerning . . . Polhem.—This mechanician, having in the life of the body constantly meditated how to construct moving machines, and succeeded therein above others . . . had confirmed himself in the belief that there is no God; that everything is from nature; and that the life in man and beast is something mechanical . . . He did not want to know what the life after death is; what the internal man; what Heaven and Hell; what the Divine beyond dead nature; what Providence beyond the blind fate of nature, and chance. He had confirmed himself against these. But, as the imaginative force which he had in the body still lasts, he therefore learns and teaches there how various things can be created; as birds . . . He was in a dark chamber, and showed his art; and was seen there sitting upon the dead bones in a coffin; because he had not acknowledged what is alive, but what is dead.

C. J. 71. The reason a more internal religion was not opened by Mohammed, was on account of polygamy, which exhales uncleanness towards Heaven; for the marriage of a husband with one wife corresponds to the marriage of the Lord and the Church.

72^e. Polygamy was permitted them because they are Orientals, who without this permission would have burned for foul adulteries more than Europeans, and would have perished. M.342^e. T.833^e. D.5061. De Conj.46.

P. 256. A religion which ordains that it is not allowable to marry a number of wives . . . is rejected by those who for ages have been polygamists.

M. 75⁹. (There was no polygamy in the Golden Age); for they could not think of more than one wife. With those who did so, the heavenly blessednesses of their souls instantly withdrew . . . to the extremes of their bodies . . . and together therewith the distinguished marks of virility; and when this was perceived they were cast out of the land.

77. (The people of the Copper Age) replied, Are not polygamical marriages scortatory?

—⁵. If polygamists invade us, they are cast out into the darkness of the north; (which) is dulness of the mind and ignorance of Truths.

78⁴. (The people of the Iron Age) live with two or three wives, and some with more; because they are delighted with variety, obedience, and honour as of Majesty. Ex.

[M. 78]⁵. There flowed out from the women's apartment a libidinous effluvium, (which) was from polygamical love, which is connubial, and at the same time scortatory.

141. That chastity is predicable of monogamical marriages only . . . For conjugal love enters according to the increase of wisdom, and this according to the implantation of the Church by the Lord. This cannot be effected with polygamists, because they divide conjugal love; and this love, when divided, is not unlike the love of the sex, which, in itself, is natural.

296². You will rarely meet a man who will not reply in favour of polygamical marriage; and this is the love of the sex: but . . . almost all women will reject polygamical marriages; from which it follows that with women there is the love of one of the sex; thus conjugal love.

339. (Polygamy, with a Christian, is both natural and spiritual adultery.) Ex.

343. In the lower Mohammedan Heaven they (practise polygamy).

344. The quality of the heat of the conjugal love of polygamists . . . was perceived by me like the foul heat of a bath.

345. That polygamy is lasciviousness. Ex.

— Polygamical love is love divided among a number, and divided love is not conjugal love . . . Hence the former love is lascivious, and polygamy is lasciviousness. The reason polygamical love is the love of the sex, is that it differs only in being limited to the number which the polygamist may take . . .

—². The reason polygamical love is a love of the external or natural man, is that it is inscribed on this man; and whatever the natural man does from himself is evil . . . and evil in regard to the sex . . . is scortation; but, as this is ruinous to society, in place of scortation there has been induced its likeness, which is called polygamy.

346. That conjugal chastity, purity, and holiness are not possible with polygamists. Ex.

347. That a polygamist, so long as he remains a polygamist, cannot become spiritual. Ex.

348. That polygamy is not sin with those with whom it exists from religion. Ex.

— To prevent polygamy from being sin to them, they remain natural . . .

—^e. And hence do not know that there is anything of evil, or of lasciviousness, in polygamy.

349. That polygamy is not sin with those who are in ignorance about the Lord. Ex.

—^e. Hence comes polygamy.

350². (Such a man) is not to blame if . . . he believes polygamical love to be the only conjugal love.

351. That of these, although polygamists, those are saved who acknowledge God, and from religion live according to the civil laws of justice. Ex.

352. But that no (polygamists whatever) can be consociated with the Angels in the Christian Heavens. Ex.

369. That there is (only) natural jealousy with polygamists. Ex.

— Conjugal love with polygamists is natural.

370. The jealous fire into which polygamical conjugal love breaks out is anger and revenge. Ex.

460. With more than one (mistress) there is what is polygamical within, which induces on men a state merely natural . . .

465. That (concubinage conjointly with a wife) is polygamy, which . . . is to be damned out of the Christian world. Ex.

466². This Christian Conjugal perishes through polygamical scortation; (or rather) with a Christian polygamist it is closed up and intercepted; but is resuscitabile in his descendants.

—³. That this Conjugal is destroyed, with a Christian, by polygamical scortation, is very evident from the fact, that he cannot, like a Mohammedan polygamist, love a concubine and a wife equally . . .

T. 380. (Such charity and faith) are from a polygamical bed or marriage. Ex.

D. 5197. The vastation of those in Christendom who had confirmed themselves in polygamy. Des. De Conj. 44.

De Conj. 43. If a Christian man were to marry a number of wives, it would be as if he had two Churches with him; and also as if truth were to derive its essence from two goods . . . Hence it is that love truly conjugal is never possible between one man and a number of wives; for thus it would be lasciviousness which would enter; and besides love cannot be divided, because it is from the affection of the one according with the thought of the other; and this unanimity, and cohabitation, which makes the essence of conjugal love, is not possible (with a number). In a word, with such there is not the Christian Church; and therefore when an Angel in Heaven merely thinks about a plurality of wives, the Celestial and the Angelic perish; both the joy and the wisdom with him; and he falls from Heaven. 45.

47. In the other life, the Mohammedans at first take a number of wives, besides concubines; but as, in the Spiritual World, there is a conjunction of lower minds, and those of a different lower mind cannot be together, they separate of their own accord, and at last are conjoined with such a woman as is of a like lower mind. Thus do they gradually separate themselves from their women, and are at last united to one . . . But those who persist in polygamy, in course of time become so invalidated and impotent that they nauseate marriage, because it carries what is lascivious with it.

48. Those of them who are in their Heaven have only one wife; they have rejected a plurality . . .

Poop. Puppis. T.32^e.

Poor. Pauper.

Poverty. Paupertas.

A. 561. Remains are . . . also states of mercy towards the poor and needy.

1877. Think none can enter Heaven but the poor . . .

2129⁴. The rich will enter equally with the poor.

2336⁴. 'To bring in the poor, maimed, deaf, and blind' (Luke xiv.21) = such as were so called in the Ancient Church, and were such as to faith; but were in the life of good, who should thus be informed concerning the Lord's Kingdom; thus the gentiles who were not yet instructed.

2417⁸. (The poor a class of the good.)

3419³. ('The poor,' and other such classes, enum., and ill.)

3688³. As he knows from the Word that he ought to give to the poor, and that whoever gives to the poor has reward in Heaven, he therefore does good to beggars more than others . . . not considering that such as beg in the streets for the most part live an impious and wicked life. (Continued under BEGGAR.) Still, he ought to do this good in the beginning of regeneration. —⁵. 3701⁴.

3820². Those in external truths know only this general: that good is to be done to the poor; and they do not know how to discern who are truly poor; and still less that by 'the poor,' in the Word, are meant those who are spiritually so . . . But those in internal truths know who are the poor . . . and do good to everyone according to his quality.

4459⁴. Take this truth . . . that to be poor and needy is to be rich and abounding (in Heaven). . . He is called poor and needy who believes from the heart . . . that of himself he possesses nothing, knows nothing, is not wise, and has no power; and in Heaven he is rich and abounds . . .

4730². Who knows otherwise than that love towards the neighbour is to give to the poor?

4783⁵. Those in faith separated cannot but believe that the works of charity are solely to give to the poor, and aid the miserable.

[A.] 4981. 'The blessing of Jehovah' = . . . to be content to be . . . among the less honoured and the poor.

5008². It is a truth natural not spiritual . . . that good is to be done to the poor, widows, and the fatherless; and that to do good to them is the charity which is commanded in the Word . . . But those in truth spiritual natural . . . set it in the last place that the poor, etc., are meant; for they say in their hearts that all are not poor who call themselves poor; and also that among them are those who live the worst . . . and that by 'the poor,' in the Word, are meant those who are spiritually such; namely, those who know and confess in heart that they have nothing of truth and good from themselves; but that all things are given them freely. . . (Thus) to do good to the poor, etc., is an ultimate of truth to those who are in spiritual natural truth; and this truth is like a garment which invests interior things . . .

—⁴. That the poor and miserable will inherit the heavenly kingdom is to them an ultimate truth; for they store up interiorly that those are poor, etc., who are spiritually such . . . But those in truth natural not spiritual say that only those can inherit it who are reduced to poverty . . .

5028². The spiritual man, equally with the natural man, says that good is to be done to the poor, widows, and orphans; but the spiritual man thinks that good is not to be done to the poor, etc., who are evil, and who call themselves the poor, and yet are rich . . . and he thence concludes that by 'the poor,' etc., in the Word, are meant those who are spiritually such. But the natural man thinks that good is to be done to the poor, etc., who are so named . . . and whether they are evil or good he cares not; and what it is to be spiritually such he neither knows nor wants to know.

5573². In Heaven there are equally the rich and the poor. They objected that . . . if they were to be saved . . . they must give all they have to the poor . . . But it was given to reply that the case is not so . . . D. 3503.

5945. (A doctrinal of scientifics, which is especially of service to those who are for the first time being inaugurated into the interior truths of the Church, is) that good is to be done above all others to widows, to orphans, and to the poor in the streets. Such doctrinals are signified by 'the carriages of Egypt.' (They are) the first which man learns, and afterwards are of service to him as an ultimate plane. Ex.

7318. Truth is falsified when it is said that no one can enter into Heaven except him who is miserable and poor; and also when it is said: unless one gives all he has to the poor, and reduces himself into miseries.

8120. It is believed that charity towards the neighbour is to give to the poor, etc., But . . . he who renders aid to a poor or indigent evildoer, through him does evil to the neighbour; for by the aid which he renders him, he confirms him in evil, and supplies him with the means of doing evil to others . . .

8478³. If (those who trust in the Divine) become poor, they are not sad . . . They know that to those who trust in the Divine all things succeed for a happy state to eternity . . .

9209². It is frequently said in the Word that good is to be done to the poor and needy. Those in external truths . . . believe that good is to be done to everyone who needs aid, especially to beggars, who above all others call themselves the poor . . . They who do this from obedience . . . do well; for, through this external, they are initiated into the internal of charity and of mercy, (which) consists in clearly discerning who, and of what quality, are those to whom good is to be done, and how to each. Ex.

—³. It is the external of charity which is described in the literal sense of the Word by the injunction that good is to be done to the poor and needy. But the internal of charity is what is described in the internal sense, (where) the internal man is understood as being in poverty and need, to which good is to be done; for by the poor and needy in this sense are understood those who are in defect and ignorance of good and truth, and yet long for good and truth. . . How these are to be assisted, the Word teaches in the letter. Ex. and Ill.

—⁴. Those are called 'the poor,' who have not the Word, and thus know nothing about the Lord, and yet long to be instructed; and therefore it is said that 'to the poor the Gospel is preached' (Luke vii. 22).

—⁵. That by 'the poor and needy,' are meant, in the internal sense, those who being outside the Church are in ignorance of truth, because they have not the Word, and yet long to be instructed, and by that which they know are yet in a little good; and, within the Church, those who from various causes are ignorant of truth, but still, from some good, long for it. Ill.

—⁵. 'I am needy and poor' (Ps. lxx. 5) was said by David, who was not poor and needy; from which it is evident that spiritual poverty and need are meant.

—⁶. 'The needy,' here, = those who are in little truth; and 'the poor' (Ps. xxxv. 10), those who are in little good, and are being infested by evils and falsities . . .

9231². See LAZARUS, here.

9253. 'A poor man thou shalt not regard in his cause' (Ex. xxiii. 3) = that no favour is to be shown the falsities in which are those who are in ignorance of truth. 'A poor man' = those who are in few truths, and also in falsities, from ignorance; but those of them who are in good want to be instructed in truths; whereas those who are in evil do not want to be instructed . . .

10227. 'A rich man shall not give more, and a poor one shall not give less . . .' (Ex. xxx. 15) = that all, of whatsoever faculty, ought equally to ascribe to the Lord all things of truth from good.

—¹⁹. By 'the poor' are meant those who do not possess these Knowledges of truth and good, but still long for them. —²², Ill.

—²³. 'The poor and needy seeking water' (Is. xli. 17) = those who long for the Knowledges of good and truth.

H. 357. Concerning the rich and poor in Heaven. Chapter.

—². Heaven is for all who live a life of faith and love, whether rich or poor. . . The rich come into Heaven as easily as the poor . . . There are both rich and poor there; and many rich in greater glory and happiness than poor.

358. Man has no need to give what he has to the poor, except in so far as affection leads him. D.5794^e.

364. The poor do not come into Heaven on account of their poverty; but on account of their life.

— . Poverty seduces and leads man away from Heaven equally as opulence. Among the poor are very many who are not content with their lot, who seek many things, and believe riches to be blessings; and therefore when they do not receive them, they are angry, and think evilly about the Divine Providence. They also envy others their goods, and equally defraud others when there is an opportunity; and they also live equally in filthy pleasures. But it is otherwise with the poor who are content with their lot, sedulous and diligent in their work, and love labour better than idleness; and who act sincerely and faithfully, and at the same time live a Christian life. (A conversation with rustics and others of the common people concerning charity and faith.)

365. The reason it is believed that the poor come into Heaven easily, and the rich with difficulty, is that the Word has not been understood. . . The 'rich,' there, mean those who abound in the Knowledges of good and truth . . . and 'the poor,' those who are deficient in these Knowledges, and yet long for them . . . —^e, Ill. 420.

T. 156². That 'the spirit' of man = such things as are of his mind, is evident from . . . 'Blessed are the poor in spirit; for of such is the Kingdom of the Heavens' (Matt. v. 3).

425. That the benefactions of charity are to give to the poor, and to aid the indigent; but with prudence. Gen. art.

— . It is the common belief that charity is merely to give to the poor . . .

427. For charity is often described in the Word as giving to the poor . . . Those called 'the poor,' etc., = those who are such spiritually. 'The poor' = those not in the Knowledges of truth and good.

428. Those who are naturally compassionate . . . believe that it is charity to give to any poor person . . . and make no inquiry as to whether the poor and indigent person is good or evil. (The evil of this shown by comparisons.)

D. 1327a. By the miserable and poor are meant those who are spiritually miserable and poor, whether they have been rich or poor in the world . . . and who suffer persecutions by those things which are false and evil, and who endure them, as in temptations; thus who fight against the crew of devils.

1328. The truth rather is that fewer beggars, and fewer of the poor as to the life of the body . . . come into Heaven than others. How miserable is the life of many sailors and soldiers, and that of many of the lowest of the common people! and yet they think nothing whatever about the eternal life . . .

3503. There is no respect of persons in the other life, but the rich are saved equally with the poor . . . and the greater part of the poor are worse than (the rich business men of the Dutch), and are rejected. (Continued above, at A. 5573.)

D. Min. 4583. The poor are they who thirst and hunger for goods and truths, and know that they have few if any; nor do they desire gold and silver, nor copper and iron, supposing that they would be too much for them: these also are given them.

E. 118. 'And poverty, but thou art rich' (Rev. ii. 9) = the acknowledgment that they know nothing from themselves. . . By 'poverty' is here meant spiritual poverty . . . for these things are said to the Church. To be spiritually poor, and yet to be rich, is to acknowledge at heart that one knows, understands, and is wise, not at all from self; but that he knows, understands, and is wise, is all from the Lord. Ex.

—². The reason he who is spiritually poor, is yet rich, is that he is in the spiritual affection of truth. Ex.

—³. 'The poor and needy' = those who believe that they know nothing from themselves; and also those who do not know because they have not the Word. Ill.

— . From this last passage it is evident that 'the poor and needy' = those who long for the Knowledges of good and truth. —⁴.

223²². 'The poor,' etc., = those who are not in truths and goods, but yet long for them. 236⁹.

238. 'And miserable and poor' (Rev. iii. 17) = that neither do they know that they have no Knowledges of truth, nor Knowledges of good. . . 'Poor' = that they are in no Knowledges of good.

— . Spiritual misery and poverty are nothing else than a defect of the Knowledges of truth and good; for the spirit is then miserable and poor . . .

—². By 'the miserable,' in the Word, are meant those not in truths, because not in the Knowledges of them; and by 'the poor,' those not in goods, because not in the Knowledges of them. Ill.

—³. (This passage shows) that by 'the miserable and poor' are meant those spiritually such, but who long for the Knowledges of truth and good. —⁴.

—⁵. (The reason both) 'the miserable and the poor' are mentioned together, is that by 'the miserable' are meant those who are in the defect of the Knowledges of truth; and by 'the poor,' those who are in the defect of the Knowledges of good.

242¹⁸. 'The poor whom He will save' (Ps. lxxii. 12) = those not in the Knowledges of truth and good, but who long for them.

[E.] 412²⁵. 'To grind the faces of the poor' (Is. iii. 15) = to destroy the affections of Knowing truths with those who are in ignorance of truth, and still long to be instructed.

481³. 'The poor and needy' = those in the defect of good from ignorance of truth, and who yet long for them.

483². The gentiles are here called 'poor and needy' from defect and ignorance of truth . . .

612⁵. 'The poor to whom the Lord will evangelize' (Is. lxi. 1) = the gentiles, who are so called because they have been in ignorance of truth from the fact that they have not had the Word. —. 811¹⁸.

652³¹. 'The poor,' etc. (Luke xiv. 21) = such in the spiritual sense, who, because they had not the Word, have been in ignorance of truth, and thence in the defect of good; but still longed for truths, through which they would have good.

811¹⁸. 'The poor' = those in few truths, who long for them to sustain their soul by them.

817⁹. 'The poor' = those not in truths, but who still long for them; 'the needy' = those not in goods, but who still at heart want them.

836. 'Rich and poor' = the wise and the simple. Ex.

893⁴. 'To give to the poor,' in the spiritual sense, = to do the works of charity.

D. Wis. xi. 4. To give to the poor, etc., is not meant in the Word by 'fruits,' 'works,' etc.

J. 55(n). The attributing of two natures to the Lord . . . was done in a Council for the sake of the Pope, that he might be acknowledged as His vicar. D. 4551. De Dom. 69.

C. J. 59. Rarely does anyone who has been Pope act as Pontiff there; yet he who was Pope of Rome twenty years ago, was set over them, because he had cherished in his heart that the Word is more holy than is believed, and that the Lord is to be worshipped. But, after discharging the pontifical function for some years, he abdicated it, and betook himself to the Reformed Christians . . . When the great northern city (of the Papists) was destroyed, I saw him carried out on a couch . . . Something quite different happened to his successor.

1080. The total rejection of the dogmas by which the papal Consistory has falsified the truths, and adulterated the goods, of the Word, and thereby profaned the holy things of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

1089. Domination over the truths of the Church, is (signified) because their chief, who is called Pope and Pontiff, makes his own dictates to be of equal holiness, and of like inspiration, with the truths of the Word; and also because it is from their doctrine that he is allowed to change the truths of the Word according to the changes of the state of the Church . . . Sig.

1118³. It is from what is implanted that in Gentile Christendom (worship is made) before the Pope, the shoes of whose feet . . . are kissed; and they would have saluted him as a God, if religion had allowed it. These things are from what is implanted, namely, that men want to worship a God whom they see . . .

1130². They say that the dictates of the Pope are equally holy with those which are of the Word, and that all things of the Church are to be accommodated to its state; consequently that they are to be changed when its state demands it; and that these accommodations and changes take place from the inspiration with the Pope. (Thus) in place of (the truths of the Word) there have been enjoined such things as entirely favour their love of dominating . . .

161. This posterity of the Most Ancient Church was not evil . . .

194. The third posterity of the Most Ancient Church. Tr. (Compare 1123.)

206^e. This posterity of the Most Ancient Church was not as yet such.

208. This was the fourth posterity of the Most Ancient Church . . .

230. The dominant evil of this posterity was the love of self . . .

310. When men are such, the seed thence remains with their descendants . . .

313². (Hereditary evil) thus increases in the descending posterity.

464. (The doctrine) was preserved for the use of their posterity. Sig.

800. That those of the last posterity of the Most Ancient Church became extinct. Sig.

920³. When the Church declined, as in their descendants . . .

— . In the last posterity . . . they apprehended nothing . . .

—^e. This worship . . . emanated to their descendants . . .

1025. 'Seed,' in the literal sense, = posterity . . .

—³. The Angels do not perceive their posterity.

1128. Such was the posterity of the Ancient Church when it began to perish.

2906³. 'The posterity of years' (Ezek.xxxviii.8)=the last time of the Church.

L. 4. 'In the posterity of days' (Is.ii.2).

R. 39. That (these things) might be revealed to posterity. Sig. 63.

M. 77⁴. We are of their posterity . . .

D. 4080. Thus it passes to posterity.

E. 654⁷⁰. 'Thy posterity shall be consumed by fire' (Ezek.xxiii.25)=that the remains thence will perish through earthly loves.

Posthumous. Posthumus.

T. 816^e. The mind of man is his Spirit, or posthumous man . . .

5M. 7. I have often heard novitiates instructed in this way about their posthumous life.

Pot. Catinus. D.5419.

Pot. Olla.

A. 3316⁴. The 'pot of pottage' (2 Kings iv.38-41). Ex.

3812⁵. 'Set on the pot' (Ezek.xxiv.3)=violence offered to good and truth. . . 'The choice of the bones with which the pot was filled'=truths.

4744². 'An empty pot' (ver.11)=that in which is uncleanness and scum; that is, evil and falsity.

S408. 'In our sitting by the flesh pot' (Ex.xvi.3)=a life according to liking, and such as they had lusted for; (for) 'a pot'=a containant of good; and, in the opposite sense, a containant of evil. Ex. . . As 'a pot'=this, there is also signified by it the Corporeal or Natural of man, because these are containants of good or evil. Hence, in the universal sense, by 'a pot' is signified man; and, in a still more universal one, a people, or a city; and then the flesh=the good, or evil, in them. Ill.

—⁵. By 'a pot' is also signified doctrine, from the fact that it contains the good and truth of the Church. Doctrine is signified by 'the pot' in 2 Kings iv. 10105³.

10105³. Thus to boil in a pot=to bring together into doctrine; and thus prepare for use.

—⁴. 'The pot' (Ezek.xxiv.3)=doctrine.

—⁵. 'The pot' (Ezek.xi.3)=the doctrine of falsity from evil . . .

—⁷. 'Pot' (Zech.xiv.21)=the doctrine of charity and faith; thus the doctrine of truth from good.

Potency. See under POWER=potentia.

Potion. Potio. D.3486.

Potiphar. Potiphar.

A. 4789. 'Potiphar Pharaoh's chamberlain' (Gen. xxxvii.36)=the interior things of scientifics. Ex. 4965, Ex. 4966.

5006. 'The wife of Potiphar'=truth natural not spiritual.

Pottage. Puls, Pulmentum.

A. 3316. 'Jacob cooked pottage' (Gen.xxv.29)=a heap of doctrinal things. Ex.

— . In the Original it is 'he pottaged pottage;' that is, he heaped it together.

—³. When pottage or pulse=puls seu pulmentum—is read of, the Angels perceive . . . doctrinal things not yet conjoined with good, thus an inordinated heap of them.

—⁴. That 'pottage' or 'pulse'=a heap. Ill.

— . 'Pottage' (2 King iv.)=a heap made up of scientifics ill compacted.

3332. 'Jacob gave Esau bread and pottage of lentils' (Gen.xxv.34)=the good of life gifted with the good of truth and the good of doctrinals. . . 'Pottage of lentils'=the good of doctrinals; for 'pottage' or 'pulse'=a heap of doctrinals; and 'lentils,' their good.

S408⁵. 'Pottage' (2 Kings iv.)=the good of the external rituals of the Jewish Church. (=a heap of doctrinals, such as was that of the Jews. 10105³.)

M, 444a. Of diverse evils makes one pottage. 453.

T. 296³. The doctrine of his faith may be compared to pottage made of chaff.

4013. In the brain, where they are like pulp=pultis.

E. 618⁶. 'The pottage,' into which they put the bitter gourds, (2 Kings iv.)=the Word falsified; and 'the meal' with which it was healed = truth from good . . .

Potter. Figulus.

Potter, Of a. Figulinus.

Earthen. Fictilis.

A. 2276². 'The potter' (Zech.xi.13)=reformation and regeneration.

6669⁴. 'Thou art our Father: we are the clay, and Thou our potter' (Is.lxiv.7), 'the clay'=the man of the Church who is being formed; thus the good of faith by means of which man is formed; that is, reformed.

—⁵. As formation is effected by means of the good of charity and the truth of faith, and these are signified by 'the clay,' and 'the vessel of the potter' (Jer.xviii. 1-6), therefore the prophet was commanded to go into the house of the potter.

—⁶. Elsewhere, also, Jehovah or the Lord is called 'the potter,' and the man who is being reformed, 'the clay.' Ill.

R. 149. 'As the vessels of a potter=figulina—shall they be broken in pieces' (Rev.ii.27)=as of little or no account. It is said 'the vessels of a potter,' because by these are signified the things which are of Own intelligence; all of which are falsities, and in themselves of no account. So in Ps.ii.9. E.177.

T. 72. 'Shall the clay find fault with the potter . . .'

D. 1967. Natural Truths . . . are earthen vessels for spiritual Truths. Ex.

E. 177. 'Earthen vessels'=those things in the natural man which are from Own intelligence concerning the Things of Heaven and the Church; and these are falsities.

[E. 177⁵]. That 'earthen vessels'=the things which are from Own intelligence; thus the falsities which are in the natural man. Ill.

— The reason 'the vessel of a potter,' or 'an earthen vessel'=what is false, is that a potter is he who forms, and the vessel is that which is formed. When man forms it, it is false; but when the Lord forms it with man, it is true. Hence it is that 'the vessel of a potter'=either falsity or truth; and 'the potter,' the former [of it].

—⁶. From the formation of man by means of truths, the Lord Himself is called 'the potter.' Ill.

—⁷. As the Jews falsified all the truths of the Word . . . their falsities are called 'the broken up vessels of a potter' (Is.xxx.14). —⁸. —⁹.

242⁴. 'Earthen—testac—pitchers, the work of the hands of the potter' (Lam.iv.2)=evils of life from the falsities of doctrine which are from Own intelligence.

727^e. Occurs.

Pound. Mina.

A. 5291⁵. He who 'laid up the pound in a napkin' (Luke xix.20)=those who procure for themselves the truths of faith, and do not conjoin them with the goods of charity . . . 7984⁴.

P. 210². If you want to be led by the Divine Providence, use prudence, like a servant who faithfully dispenses the goods of his lord. This prudence is 'the pound' which was given to the servants to trade with, and of which they gave account.

R. 427^e. 'The ten pounds'=much; and 'the five pounds,' little.

T. 393. Even if (the understanding) is not cultivated by the talents and pounds of learning.

527². Like the trader who had hidden . . . his pound in a napkin.

E. 193¹⁰. 'The pounds' (Luke xix.)=the Knowledges of truth and good from the Word. 'To trade' with them=to procure for ourselves spiritual life and intelligence by means of them. 'To lay them up in a napkin'=solely in the natural memory of the man.

675⁷. 'The ten pounds' which he gave to the ten servants to trade with=all the Knowledges of truth and good from the Word, with the faculty of perceiving them; for 'the pounds,' which were silver and money, =the Knowledges of truth and the faculty of perceiving; and 'to trade'=to procure for ourselves, by their means, intelligence and wisdom. Those who procure much (of these) are meant by the servant who by his pound gained ten pounds; and those who procure some, by him who by his pound gained five pounds . . . Those who possess truths in both memory and life, are enriched with intelligence in themselves to eternity, and therefore it is said that they should take away the pound from him who had gained nothing by his pound, and should give it to him who had ten pounds.

700⁷. This is what is meant by the pounds which were taken away from the evil, and given to the good. Ex.

Pound. Pinsere.

1011. 'His blood shall be poured out' (id.)=his condemnation. 1012.

1016. 'Be ye poured out in the earth' (ver.7)=increase of good in the external man. 'To be poured out' is predicated of goods. Ex.

2567⁵. The spirit is said to be 'poured out' (Joel ii.29) upon lower truths and goods, when they accede and confirm.

4735¹². To pour out innocent blood=to violate what is holy. Ill.

6976. 'Shalt pour it out upon the dry' (Ex.iv.9)=immission into the Natural.

7675. An outpouring into all things there. Sig. 7683.

8719². Prayers which they then ardently pour forth—fundunt.

9127. 'To pour out blood'=to inflict violence on truth Divine . . . Ex. —⁵. Ill. 9262⁴. 9264^e.

9303³. Their thought pours itself out into the universe without determination.

10011. 'Thou shalt pour—fundes—upon his head' (Ex. xxix.7). Ex.

10283. 'To pour—fundere' (Ex.xxx.32)=to communicate.

— 'To pour' is predicated of liquids . . . and 'to pour out—effundere,' of Divine, celestial, and spiritual things.

H. 360². Unless the affection pours out into acts . . .

R. 687. 'To pour out the blood' (Rev.xvi.6)=to falsify the truths of the Word; thus to pervert them. E.975.

T. 395. The mind can be effused, and can effuse itself . . .

D. 4458. Their Subject could effuse an idea . . .

E. 329²⁷. 'To pour out innocent blood'=to destroy the good of love and of charity. Ill.

730²⁰. The effusion of innocent blood=the adulteration of the Word as to its truths.

—²³. The influx of Heaven into those who are being reformed, is signified by, 'the spirit shall be poured out upon you from on high' (Is.xxxii.15).

1708^e. The things procured by Own power are said to be 'born in the house.'

1752. The Lord from His Own power gave the Angels force, and as it were power, to fight with Him; for all the power the Angels have is from the Lord.

1807. When he sees the immensity of heaven, he thinks . . . of the infinite power of the Lord.

2083^e. 'To sit at the right hand of power' = to have all Power in the Heavens and on earth.

2177⁴. The hand, or palm, = power.

2694³. When anxiety and grief are induced on them from the fact that they can do nothing from themselves, and this to despair, the Persuasive is broken, and the state is changed, and they can be brought into the belief that . . . all power, prudence, intelligence, and wisdom, are from the Lord.

2826¹⁰. 'The strength of a horse' = Own power of thinking truth; 'the legs of a man' = Own power of doing good.

2921. When the power of Divine good, or omnipotence, is treated of, He is called 'Jehovah Zebaoth,' and 'Lord.'

— . From the power of good, men and Angels are also called 'lords.' In the opposite sense, those are called 'servants' who have no power, or who have power from the others.

— . 'Prince of God' = the Lord as to the power of truth.

3091². The power here treated of is from truth . . . In the Word, power is especially attributed to truth. . .

The power which appears to be from truth, is itself from good, through truth.

3106. The power of the affection of truth. Sig.

3125. But with men, truth is never conjoined with good by Own power, but by the Lord's power. Ex.

3417^e. One Angel has more power-potentior—than myriads of infernal Spirits; not from himself, but from the Lord; and he has it . . . in proportion as he believes that he can do nothing from himself . . . and this he can believe in proportion as he is in humiliation and in the affection of being of service to others . . .

3858¹⁵. Goods and truths have in them all power from the Lord; and therefore the Angels also are called 'powers.'

3910. 'God' is predicated from ability-posse, or power.

— . Ability is predicated of truth, when being is predicated of good; for good has power by truth. Ex.

3927. Own power, in the supreme sense. Sig. 3975. 3977.

—². But man never sustains any spiritual temptation . . . from his Own power . . .

3983. To know the animus and power. Sig. and Ex.

4013. The Own power of natural good. Sig. and Ex.

4014. The derivative power of natural Truths. Sig.

4015. The disposition of the power of interior truth. Sig. It is the power of the spiritual man in the natural. Ex.

—². (Hence) power is predicated of truth . . . Not that there is power in truth from itself; but in good, and thus in truth from good; that is, in truth through good from the Lord.

4060⁴. 'The powers of the heavens shall be shaken' (Matt. xxiv. 29) = that the foundations of the Church (will) perish.

—⁷. 'With power and great glory' (ver. 30) = (the revelation) of the internal sense, in which is the Lord. . . . 'Power' is predicated of the good, and 'glory,' of the truth, therein.

4076. 'To serve' . . . when predicated of the Lord, = Own power.

4100. That all things were from His Own power, and nothing given by anyone. Sig. 4182.

4383. In the particulars there are singulars in potency.

4402⁵. As 'El,' and 'Elohim' = the Lord as to truth, they also = Him as to power; for truth is that of which power is predicated; for good acts through truth when it is exercising power; and therefore when power from truth is treated of, the Lord is called 'El,' and 'Elohim,' or 'God.' Hence, too, it is, that 'El,' in the Original, = 'the Mighty One-Potens.'

4459⁴. In Heaven, he who . . . believes from the heart . . . that nothing of power is from himself, but that all the power he has is from the Lord, is called 'the least,' and yet is the greatest, because he has power from the Lord. —.

[A.] 4592⁷. Everything of power in good is through truth.

4608^e. 'Naphtali,' in the supreme sense, = Own power.

4751². (A miser) regards himself as the greatest in power.

4757. Power is ascribed to truth, because good exercises power through truth . . .

4802². For in the other life, truths have power with them.

4876. Power is predicated of truth. Refs.

4924. The power (of good) hidden. Sig.

4932. Those in the Grand Man who correspond to the hands, arms, and shoulders, are those who are in power through the truth of faith from good; for those in (this) are in the power of the Lord; for they attribute all power to Him . . . and, in proportion as, not with the mouth, but with the heart, they attribute no power to themselves, they are in greater power. Hence the Angels are called 'powers,' and 'Powers.'

5327. That from the Celestial of the Spiritual is everything of power in the Spiritual. Sig.

5328. And everything of power in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

5428². The nature of angelic power. Ex.

— . He is the most powerful—potens, who believes, wills, and perceives that everything of power is from the Lord, and none from himself; and therefore those who are powers in Heaven are utterly averse to all power from themselves.

5488. Without any power of theirs. Sig. 5496. 5664.

5544. As faith in the understanding . . . has but little power to be trusted in—for the truth of faith has its power from the good of charity—(there is signified) as much as was in his power.

5623. Truth received in the powers; (that is) in the faculties of receiving. Sig.

5662. That they would no longer procure truths by Own power . . . Tr.

6289. Influx into the power of his obscure appereception. Sig. and Ex.

6343. That through (faith) good has power. Sig. and Ex.

— . As to power; namely, the power of thinking and willing, of perceiving, of doing good, of believing, of dissipating falsities and evils, it is all from good by means of truth.

— . 'Strength'=the power in good; but 'forees,' the power of truth.

6344. 'The beginning of my forees'=that through faith is the first power in truth. Ex.

— . In Is.xl.29, 'strength' is predicated of good; 'forees,' of truth; 'power,' of both.

— . That through faith there is power in good, and the first power in truth, (is thus). All the power in the Spiritual World is from good through truth. Without good, truth has nothing whatever of power; for truth is like the body, and good the soul thereof; for the soul to effect anything it must be through the body. (Thus) truth without good has no power whatever . . . When the faith of truth is first born through good, there then appears power in truth; and this power is what is called the first power in truth through faith. Ill.

—⁴. What the power in truth from good is, can scarcely be known to anyone in the world; but to those in the other life; thus from revelation thence. Those who are in truth from good . . . are in power through truth from good. In this power are all the Angels; and therefore they are called 'powers;' for they are in the power of restraining evil Spirits; one Angel thousands at once. They exert their power especially with man, by defending him, sometimes against many Hells, and this in a thousand and a thousand ways. They have this power through the truth which is of faith from the good which is of charity. But as they have faith from the Lord, it is the Lord alone who is power with them.

—⁵. That in truths from good is all power, and in falsities from evil no power, is very well known in the other life . . .

—⁶. That there is such power in truths from good cannot be apprehended by those who have the idea of truth and its faith as of something merely cogitative; when yet the Cogitative of man from his Voluntary makes all the strength of the body, and if it was inspired by the Lord through His Divine truth, man would have the strength of Samson; but it pleases the Lord that man should have strength through faith from love as to those things which are of his spirit, and conduce to eternal salvation.

— . All the Angels, from Divine truth, are called powers; and also in proportion as they are receptions or receptacles of it, they are powers. Des.

— . That there is such power in Divine truth cannot be believed by those who have no other idea of truth than as of thought or discourse, in which there is no power in itself, except in so far as others do it from obedience. But Divine truth has power in itself, and such power, that through it Heaven and the world were created, with all things in them.

230. (But) the Angels have no power whatever from themselves ; but all the power they have is from the Lord ; and they are powers in proportion as they acknowledge this. Whoever of them believes that he has power from himself, instantly becomes so weak, that he cannot resist one evil Spirit.

231. It is the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord which has all power in the Heavens . . . and in proportion as the Angels are receptions of it, they are powers . . . So far, therefore, as an Angel is truth from the Divine and good from the Divine, so far he is a power, because so far the Lord is with him . . . (Thus) one Angel is not in the like power as another.

—². Those are in the greatest power who constitute the arms in the Grand Man, because they are in truths more than the rest, and into their truths there inflows good from the universal Heaven . . .

232. But the Angels are receptions of Divine truth in so far as they are receptions of Divine good ; for all power is in truths from good, and none in truths without good ; and, also, there is all power in good through truths, and none in good without truths. Power comes forth from the conjunction of both. It is the like with faith and love . . .

—². What great power the Angels have through truths from good, is evident from the fact that when an evil Spirit is merely looked at by the Angels he falls into a swoon . . .

233. As all power is in truths from good, there is no power whatever in falsities from evil . . . and therefore those in Hell have no power against truth and good. But the nature of their power among themselves, and the nature of the power of evil Spirits before they are cast into Hell, will be told in what follows.

539. All power in the Spiritual World is of truth from good, and there is no power whatever of falsity from evil. The reason all power is in truth from good, is that the Divine Itself in Heaven is Divine good and Divine truth, and in the Divine is all power. The reason there is no power whatever of falsity from evil, is that all power is of truth from good, and in falsity from evil there is nothing of truth from good. Hence it is that all power is in Heaven, and none in Hell . . .

P. 19². As the evil have nothing of power, the universal Hell is not only as a nothing before the Lord, but is altogether a nothing as to power. But it is wonderful that all the evil believe themselves powerful, and all the good believe themselves not powerful. 55³. We have not found the common love of the sex chaste except with these who from love truly conjugal are in continual potency; and these are in the highest Heavens.

—⁷. Spiritual love exists solely with those who are in love truly conjugal, and thence in eminent potency . . . As they are in supereminent potency, they cannot do otherwise than love the sex, and at the same time be averse to what is unchaste. Hence they have the chaste love of the sex, which . . . derives its sweetness from eminent but still chaste potency. They possess eminent potency from a total renunciation of scortation; and, as the wife alone is loved, it is chaste.

113. (The Africans said,) You Christians deduce conjugal virtue or potency from various rational and natural causes; but we Africans deduce it from the state of man's conjunction with the God of the universe . . . When the love is from this state, and this is stable and perpetual, it cannot but operate its own virtue, which is like it, and thus stable and perpetual. Love truly conjugal is known only to those few who are near to God; consequently the potency of this love is known to no others. This potency, with that love, is described by the Angels in the Heavens as the deliciousness of a perpetual spring.

148. The external Conjugal (then) derives its delight from the blessedness which is in the internal, and at the same time its life, and the deliciousnesses of the potency of this life.

An Angel who is in Divine truths from the Lord, although as to the body weak as an infant, can put to flight a troop of infernal Spirits . . . It is the like with men, who are in Divine truths from the Lord . . . The reason there is such strength in Divine truth, is that . . . through Divine truth God created the universe; and all the laws of order through which He created it are truths. Sig.

74. 'His face as the sun shineth in its power' (Rev. i. 16) = His Divine love from which are all things of Heaven.

79². All the power of man from his body is transferred into the hands . . . Hence 'arms' and 'hands' = power; but this power is natural power . . . But spiritual power is to will the good of another; and, in so far as one can, to want to transfer into him that which is in ourselves: it is this power which is signified by 'the hand' in the spiritual sense, and its communication and transference by 'to touch with the hand.'

205. 'Having the key of David' = who has power through Divine truth. Ex.

— . The Lord has all power in the Heavens and on earth from Divine good through Divine truth. For, in general, good without truth has not any power; nor has truth without good; for good acts through truth. Hence it is that the Divine good and Divine truth proceed from the Lord united, and, in proportion as they are received conjointly by the Angels, these are in power.

209. That they have power from the Lord against evils and falsities in proportion as they make truths from the Word of life, and acknowledge the Divine of the Lord in His Human. Sig. and Ex.

—³. Something shall now be said concerning the power which they have from the Lord against evils and falsities. All the power which Angels and also men have is from the Lord; and, in proportion as they receive the Lord, they have power. He who believes that there is power against them from the proprium of man is much mistaken. Ex. . . In proportion, therefore, as a man is conjoined with the Lord through love, he has power. . . Those in celestial love have much power; and those in spiritual love have a little power.

—⁴. But it is to be known that all the power which Angels and men have from the Lord is from the good of love; and, as the good of love does not act from itself, but through truths, therefore all the power is in the good of love through truths; and, with the spiritual, from the good of charity through the truths of faith. . . Good without truths has no quality, and where there is no quality there is no force or power. (Thus) all power is in good through truths, or in charity through faith, and none in charity without faith, nor in faith without charity. This is meant by 'the keys' given to Peter. Ex. . . By (what was said to Peter) is also meant that those have power who acknowledge the Divine of the Lord in His Human, and, from Him, are in the good of charity and thence in the truths of faith.

333. The power which the Lord alone has through Divine truth united to Divine good, and the derivative power of those who are of His Spiritual and Celestial Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

In these there is indeed, in themselves, no power, because all power is in truths; but still there is much power in the falsities which are from the fallacies of the senses, and consequently in the reasonings from them, with the men of the Earth, before they are in truths from good. Ex. 783², Ex.

783. 'The dragon gave him his power, and his throne, and great Power' (Rev. xiii. 2) = that (such) through reasonings from fallacies strengthen their own doctrinals, and corroborate them, and thus powerfully seduce.

—³. It is from this that those in falsities are called 'mighty,' 'strong,' etc.

—⁴. Evil Spirits believe themselves to be mighty above all others, for the reason that they prevail against those who are in evils and the derivative falsities. . . . But this power may be compared to an ant against an ant. . . . the power of which is relative to their mutual forces. . . .

E. 114⁸. Why they say that the Power which belonged to His Human was given Him by the Father . . . It was because they have transferred to themselves all His Divine Power . . . (Thus) they no longer attribute any Power to the Lord.

—⁹. Benedict XIV . . . had believed that the Lord has no Power, because He had transferred it all into Peter and thence into his successors; and (that) their saints have more Power than the Lord, because they retain it from God the Father; whereas the Lord has abdicated all, and given it to the Pontiffs.

223²³. 'To have Power over ten cities'=intelligence and wisdom.

293. The reason 'Power,' here, =salvation, is that all Divine Power regards this as the end; for man is reformed by the Divine Power . . . Those who claim this Power do not know what salvation is . . . To claim Divine Power is to claim Power over the Lord Himself, which Power is called 'the Power of darkness' (Luke xxii. 53).

A. 1094. What is the prayer of the mouth, if the mind is not in it, but babbling?

1999². (Why the Lord prayed to the Father.)

2535. 'He shall pray for thee' (Gen.xx.7)=it will thus be revealed.

— . Prayer, regarded in itself, is talking with God; and some internal view then of the matters of the prayer, to which there answers—correspondet—something like an influx into the perception or thought of the mind, so that there is a certain opening of the man's interiors towards God; but this with a difference according to the man's state, and according to the essence of the Thing which is [the subject] of the prayer. If [it is] from love and faith, and if it is only celestial and spiritual things, concerning which and for which, he prays, there then comes forth in the prayer a something like revelation, which is manifested in the affection of him who is praying, as to hope, comfort, or a certain internal joy. Hence it is that 'to pray,' in the internal sense, =to be revealed. Still more here, (because) by the prophet is meant the Lord, whose prayer was nothing else than internal speech with the Divine, and at the same time revelation. III.

2580. 'Abraham prayed to God' (ver.17)=revelation. Ex.

3285. 'Isaac prayed to Jehovah' (Gen.xxv.21)=the communication of the Divine which is the Son with the Divine which is the Father. 'To pray'=to be communicated; for prayer is nothing but communication. . . This communication was in the Lord . . . 3291.

278. 'Which are the prayers of the saints' (Rev.v.8) = thoughts which are of faith from affections which are of charity with those who worship the Lord from spiritual goods and truths. By 'prayers,' are meant the things of faith, and at the same time those of charity, with those who utter the prayers; for prayers without these things are not prayers, but empty sounds.

393. 'Prayers' = the things of charity and thence of faith in worship.

859³. Those who . . . are somewhat moved by prayers uttered with affection . . .

T. 108. See PRAY-orare, here.

329⁴. Before . . . purification from evils, prayers to God are not heard. Ill.

D. 2435. Concerning the prayers of infants.—The prayers of infants are much more heard in Heaven than the prayers of adults, and still more fully than the prayers of those who have closed the way to interior things by thoughts of natural Things, and of the things of the memory; and still more fully than the prayers of those who are blinded, and thus have no faith . . . (Continued under LORD'S PRAYER.)

2082. In the other life their prayers for anyone are not granted, and not even those for themselves.

3126. Concerning prayers.—Prayers to the Lord, if made from conscience, as a duty, are good; but if thereby something is obtained, or merited, it is . . . evil.

3254. (It seems as if) pious prayers . . . inflow into Heaven . . . But . . . it is a fallacy. Ex.

3677. Concerning prayers.—Prayers effect nothing when they are such that we merely intend to deprecate our evils . . . Sins are not remitted except from the heart with a certain . . . internal pain, and thus an acknowledgment of filthiness, in which, and after, prayers avail . . . Otherwise, prayers, etc., rather confirm man. Ex.

3678. Certain are wont to flee to prayers, at all evils and misfortunes . . . There is no aid from this.

5668. (Infants there) learn prayers from their nurses through influx from Heaven.

5815². Those who had believed that salvation consists in prayers . . . and had lived well. (See LAST JUDGMENT, here.)

5970. Before whom I read the prayers customary in England before the Holy Supper . . . When they are reading these prayers in the churches they believe (them). . . They afterwards consulted together about that prayer, and some wanted to change it . . . J. (Post.) 214.

6088³. They eat with them by entreaty.

D. Min. 4573. So that their prayers were for the end of self. Ex.

4603^e. Everyone is allowed to approach the Lord with prayers . . .

4813. When he prayed about any Thing, and did not obtain it, he was very indignant . . .

4817. (In this cavern) are those who have devoted themselves to prayers . . .

E. 182^e. For the Lord leads their prayings through Heaven to Himself.

248^e. Those also err who believe that they can dispose themselves for influx by prayers, adorations, and the externals of worship. These effect nothing, unless the man abstains from thinking and doing evils; and, through truths from the Word, he as of himself leads himself to goods as to the life. If a man does these things, he then disposes himself; and then the prayers, etc., avail before the Lord.

324¹⁸. This worship (from spiritual good) is signified by 'the prayers of the saints' . . . 325, Ex.

325. By 'prayers,' in the internal sense, are meant all things of worship.

—². As prayers are not from the mouth, but from the heart through the mouth . . . it is said, 'Keep the door of my lips . . .' And as David laments that evils still avail against him, he says, 'Because my prayers are as yet in their evils' (Ps. cxli. 3, 5).

—³. Worship does not consist in prayers . . . but in the life of charity. Prayers are only its externals; for they proceed from the man through his mouth; and therefore such as is the man as to life, such are his prayers. Ex. . . Therefore, such as is the affection, such is the praying. Spiritual affection is what is called charity towards the neighbour . . . the praying is the proceeding. (Thus) the essential of worship is the life of charity, and the instrumental of it is gesture and praying; or, the primary of worship is the life of charity, and its secondary is praying . . .

—⁶. As Divine worship consists primarily in the life of charity, and secondarily in prayers, therefore by 'prayers,' in the spiritual sense, is meant worship from spiritual good; that is, from the life of charity . . .

—⁷. 'Prayers' are also mentioned in many places; but, as prayers proceed from the heart, and the heart of man is such as is his life of love and charity, therefore 'prayers' = this life, and worship from it. Ill.

—⁸. As prayers proceed from the life of charity, and are according to it, therefore, in order that it may be done according to the prayers, it is said, 'When ye stand praying—orantes, forgive . . .'

—¹¹. As the prayers are such as is the heart of the man, and therefore are not the prayers of any worship if the heart is evil, it is said, 'If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear.'

—^e. (Thus) praying, in the spiritual sense, is worship from love.

— (Such) place piety in prayers, and not in life.

391¹⁶. 'I will make them joyous in the house of my praying' (Is. lvi. 7) = that He will gift them with spiritual truths: 'the house of praying,' or the Temple, = the Heaven where are spiritual truths.

410⁸. 'My house shall be called a house of prayers' (Matt. xxi. 13). . . As worship was carried on in the Temple at Jerusalem, it is called 'a house of prayers' . . . 'prayers' = worship.

493³. By 'the prayers' with which the incense should be offered (Rev. viii. 3) are not meant prayers, but the truths from good through which are prayers; for these are the things which are prayed with man, and in these prayers is man constantly when he is in a life according to these truths. That by 'prayers,' in the Word, are meant the truths from good which are with man; and not the prayer of the mouth. Ref. 494.

781¹⁵. That they cannot be heard on account of falsities, is signified by . . . 'he obstructs my prayers' (Lam. iii. 8).

9357^e. Such things are presented to the Angels . . . when the Word of our Earth is read and preached.

9412². 'To teach in the streets'=to preach truths from the Lord's Word; for they formerly preached in the streets, because streets=the truths of the doctrine of the Church.

10309². There are many such in Hell, who are present with and inspire . . . preachers who imitate Divine worship through affections of good and truth from proprium; which is permitted by the Lord, because they thus perform a use; for good men receive the Word from them well; because the Word, from whose-soever mouth it goes forth, is received by a man according to the quality of his good.

10735. A Spirit who had been a very pathetic preacher. (Compare D.4832.)

10754. The preacher was greatly delighted with that virgin . . .

10755. The preacher was brought into the state in which he had been in the world when he wanted to preach . . .

10833. (In the Sixth Earth) they hear preachings; and the preacher . . . teaches them truths Divine which lead to the good of life. (The preachers know these truths) from revelation. Ex.

H. 221. The preachings (in Heaven) are according to the doctrines; and . . . there are temples in which the preachings take place.

222. The preachings in the temples are of service only as means for their instruction in the Things of life.

223. The preacher stands in a pulpit on the east; before his face sit those who are pre-eminently in the light of wisdom, and to the right and left of these, those who are less so. They recline in the form of a circus, so that all are in view of the preacher. At the two sides, where his view does not go, there is no one. . . . No one is allowed to stand behind the pulpit: if anyone is there, the preacher is confused. It is the same if anyone in the congregation dissents; and therefore he must avert his face. The preachings are made with such wisdom, that those in the world cannot be compared to them; for in the Heavens they are in interior light.

225. All the preachers are from the Spiritual Kingdom . . . because in that kingdom they are in truths from good; and all preaching is made from truths. The reason there are none from the Celestial Kingdom, is that there they are in the good of love; and therefore they see and perceive truths, but do not speak about them . . . And yet there are preachings there also, because they are thereby illustrated in the truths which they had known, and are perfected by many which they had not known before. As soon as they hear them, they acknowledge them, and thus perceive them . . .

226. All the preachers are appointed by the Lord, and thence are in the gift of preaching; and no others are allowed to teach in the temples. They are called preachers; not priests; for the reason that the priesthood of Heaven is the Celestial Kingdom . . .

227. All the doctrines according to which the preachings are made, regard life as the end . . .

271². The things which (the celestial Angels) hear from preaching do not enter into their memory; but immediately into the perception and the will, and become of the life.

393. Those who in the world have loved the Word, and from longing have sought out truths there . . . for the sake of the use of life . . . in Heaven are in illustration and in the light of wisdom . . . and discharge the office of preachers; and those who excel in wisdom from illustration are in a higher place.

598. Man learns spiritual goods from reading the Word, and from preaching.

C. J. 42³. (The English) complain of the preachers at the west (of London, who leave it doubtful) whether good is to be done or not.

—^e. These preachers are deprived of the priesthood.

W. 148. They grow warm with God . . . as when a preacher is speaking from zeal.

333. Uses for receiving the Spiritual from the Lord . . . are imbibed from . . . preachings and books; and, in the Christian world, through doctrines and preachings from the Word.

P. 4². Whatever comes forth derives from its form . . . that which is called predicate . . .

154. It is a law of the Divine Providence that man be led and taught through the Word, doctrine, and preachings from it . . . Gen.art. 171, Ex.

172⁶. That this is done mediately through preachings, does not take away what is immediate. Ex.

—⁶. This is also according to the knowledge of preachers, who say that they speak not from themselves, but from the Spirit of God . . .

259². As, according to these laws, there is (only) mediate influx through the Word, doctrine, and preachings . . . dissensions and heresies are inevitable . . .

291. The priest who believes that he preaches from a holy zeal, prays that the Holy Spirit may teach him . . . and when their preaching is praised, they piously reply that they have spoken . . . from God.

R. 143. The interiors of that doctrine are the things put forth in . . . their preachings.

258. 'I saw a strong Angel proclaiming with a great voice' (Rev. v.2) = the Divine truth . . . inflowing deeply into the thought . . . That which is proclaimed with power inflows deeply into the thought. (= exploration from the Lord's influx. E.302.)

417⁷. (The preaching of the solidian clergy not understood.)

531. Lo, he lies dead in the street . . . who preached repentance . . . and the man Christ only.

—². Did not the Lord Himself preach (these things); and command His disciples to preach the same?

533². There are temples in Heaven, and preachings in them . . . N.7, Ex.

M. 66^e. Substance not formed is not anything, because nothing can be predicated of it; and a subject without predicates is an entity of no reason.

87. Good without some attribute—adjecto—is of no predication . . .

380¹¹. As, of love and wisdom spaces and times cannot be predicated, but states . . .

485. Therefore they are called predications . . . and, after death, imputations. For predications are made by a man according to his rational lumen . . . and imputations are made by the Lord . . .

4833. On the state of evil preachers when they are preaching. Ex.
4853. He felt I was present, and therefore could not preach.
4904. Because they have preached clandestinely . . .
4929. They are distinguished by the priest who is preaching; for the thoughts of their minds are communicated. But those who come with a mind to hear whether the things he preaches are true . . . impede the preacher so that he cannot preach; and he therefore admonishes them to go out. Hence other preachers can rarely be present, because they observe such things; and therefore those of them who are there, hide themselves in a certain way, lest they should take away from the preacher the spirit of holiness.
4936. They have Churches in the other life, and they preach, in some places continually, so that persons can enter and go out at all times . . . They can be discriminated by the preacher merely from their situation . . .
4937. But when one of another doctrine comes thither, and thinks therefrom about the things which are being preached, the preacher is disturbed, and cannot preach; and therefore they either sit with averted faces, or else go out . . . The intelligent preachers know this . . . for the affection is completely varied according to . . . the turning of the face to them.
4938. I was in such a temple, and heard one preaching, but with averted face; because it is my custom to think about the things which are being preached . . .
4942. Preachers (with rare exceptions) except the simple, are in persuasive faith that the truth is according to their doctrine . . . Within reign enviousness and hostility . . . but there are some who are interiorly good; that is, who suffer themselves to be led by the Lord.
4943. They perceive in what affection the preacher is . . . Preachers are distressed by this, hardly knowing what to say. In this lies the difference between the preachings in the other life and the preachings in the world: in the world the affection of the love of self and of gain may sound like the affection of the love of good. Ex.
5514. On the Hell of preachers who care nothing for the Word and for doctrine from the Word.
- 5589b. Thus do preachers speak, each from his doctrine, without interior ideas; letting themselves solely into exterior affections . . .
5603. The preachers (in the other life) preach on the Word.

5641. As many preachers are wont to do ; who, when in their preaching, believe that it is so . . . 5917^e.

5667. Preachers sometimes visit the maidens there, and examine them.

5668³. There are preachers there for the infants.

5922^e. Melancthon has preached sometimes . . .

5941. Those in the spiritual love of truth, which is perceived by their delight in hearing preachings . . .

5972. On the temples and preachings. Ex.

— . It is from this cause that all hear the preaching unanimously as one man ; (for) if the preacher says anything which is opposed, they all refuse in their minds to accept it ; and this is noticed by the preacher ; for he then feels such a resistance that he can scarcely utter those things, and this with variety according to the resistance. But when they accept, the preacher is as it were in his illustration, and easily utters, teaches, and confirms these things. When there is resistance, the preacher does indeed know the source of it ; but still he turns himself hither and thither ; namely, to those who are in the head there, to those in the breast, in the loins, and in the feet. Those in the feet do not perceive as the rest do, and therefore he can say what he likes before them, but still he cannot keep his sight with them long, and is therefore compelled to try with various things what will fall into the hearing ; and, when he has found it, he urges it in his preaching.

—². When anyone . . . hears him, and looks into Heaven, the thoughts of all are varied, and are kept in the hearing of truths, and if these are not being preached rightly, the preacher wavers, tries, sticks fast, until he comes into truths ; and, when he teaches them, the hearers all acknowledge and receive . . . Hence it is evident that the Lord disposes all in the temple by means of Angels and Spirits above or outside of them . . .

— . A certain one said that they hear and receive from delight whatever the preacher says, and hence there is rarely any resistance ; but he was told that delight derived from habit admits whatever is said ; but this delight alone effects nothing ; for it does not teach or amend them ; but if the delight is to learn truths . . . it does teach and affect, and thus amend ; for it passes into the life and heart, and the Lord then leads the man by means of it, even when he is unaware of it.

6024². Hence preachers who (have been in faith alone) in the world, cannot preach in the Spiritual World ; for although they are compelled to preach life and good acts, it is heard from their tone that they understand no other good acts than merely moral and civil ones . . .

and therefore they are no longer allowed to preach ; but only those who in the world have understood spiritual works.

6103. The preachers prevailed . . .

E. 193². A preacher who loves himself and the world above all things . . . can speak as from zeal for the Divine . . . and (then) think in like manner. But this state is the state of his thought from the memory of the body . . . for, when left alone, he thinks contrary to those things . . .

233⁴. Very few live thus from the doctrine (of faith alone) ; although it is believed by the preachers, that all [do so] who hear their preachings . . .

250³. This (good of life) the doctors and leaders preach when they are preaching from the Word, and this they teach everyone who approaches the Holy Supper . . . But as soon as they return . . . to their doctrine of justification by faith alone, they no longer believe those things . . . —⁵. —^e.

302. 'To proclaim with a great voice' = exploration from the influx of the Lord.

303^e. Is predicated of . . .

619¹⁶. (John the Baptist) preached according to the predictions in the Word . . .

700¹⁶. The holy preaching of Divine truth. Rep.

722. Predicates follow their subjects.

803². I. Let a man . . . learn from preachings the dogmas of his religion.

810². This is why those who institute preachings from the Word appear as if they were in truths ; yet the same persons, when they make preachings from doctrine . . . are in falsities.

817. A like preaching, etc., with those who separate faith from the life of faith. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'To speak' = preaching from doctrine ; thus doctrine and the derivative preaching. Ex.

825³. A man preaches . . . from the Lord when he lives according to the laws of his religion . . . He is taught by the Lord daily . . . what to preach, etc.

828³. With (the celestial Angels) truths are in the life . . . and do not manifest themselves except before the perception while . . . their ministers are preaching them from the Word. They are also perfected . . . from preachings, etc.

831². As the celestial Angels are perfected in wisdom through hearing, there are intermediate Angels, who are called celestial spiritual Angels, who preach and teach truths in their temples.

971. The preaching of the Lord's justice from His Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

[E.] 978. The preaching of the Lord's justice from His Celestial Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

1024². The Word is in each Heaven . . . and preachings are made from it, as on earth.

1103. The Divine Essence . . . is the predicate, and God . . . is the subject; and therefore to say that the Essence is God, is to say that the predicate is the subject . . .

1173². That the Lord does not teach man truths immediately . . . but mediately through preachings, etc. . . and that man is then illustrated according to the affection of truth from use. Ex.

J.(Post.) 29. (The English) hear preachers of faith alone . . . and, when they hear it, the preaching sounds as if full of wisdom . . . but when they go home, they know nothing of what has been said . . .

159. Preachers who know something of the doctrine of their Church, after they have been instructed in the schools, and have arrived at their functions, care for them and for the Word no further than that they can preach . . . and thus live in idleness . . . and are not Christians. They are sent into the Hell in the northern quarter . . . and then become stupid.

187. A preacher who appeared like the dragon . . .

222. All those preachers who had confirmed themselves in faith alone . . . are not admitted to preach; the sacerdotal garment is taken away from them; and they afterwards do not know that they have been preachers. Very many are admitted to preach; but as soon as they preach faith alone . . . all go out . . . and thus those preachers who can recede are amended: they receive the doctrine of Heaven . . .

272^e. There are also preachers who dwell in the south (of London) who preach altogether that evils are to be shunned . . .

275. The preachers in the west further des.

283. When (the Moravians) are asked why their preachers are clothed in blue . . . they dare not say that they should be clothed like the English preachers in a black gown. Ex.

354. The (English) preachers make up their sermons so that the learned understand their own theology, and the unlearned theirs . . .

De Verbo 3. Many of these (celestial spiritual Angels) are preachers in the Third Heaven.

De Conj. 15. When a preacher comes to these harlots, they hold psalm-books in their hands, from phantasy, and thus deceive the preachers.

82. The delight of natural love falsifies the Word chiefly in preachers.

C. 122. So if anyone is listening to a preacher, and he says that he speaks from God, from zeal for their souls, even those who do not love God, and who believe nothing, may be affected, and love him . . .

Can. Holy Spirit iv. 8. The Divine meant by the Holy Spirit proceeds . . . through the clergy to the laity, through preachings . . .

Inv. 17. All things which the priests preach from the Word about faith . . . charity, conversion, repentance

. . . fall as it were into a bucket, when orthodoxy enters and explains them. . . All things are overthrown.

Preacher. Praeco.

R. 531. Absolve us . . . by his herald the priest.

—². You preacher of sin and repentance.

—³. We have heard from an audacious preacher of sin . . .

M. 7². Acclamation was made by a herald . . .

Precede. Pracedere.

A. 2235³. When 'judgment' precedes, it = love through faith; but when 'justice' precedes, it = faith from love.

3089^e. Such an (impure) affection must precede.

3350. No one wants to precede—praecesse—others.

3995². Truth (then) apparently precedes . . . Good then manifestly precedes.

8864⁴. The things which precede reign in the things which follow.

Precept. See COMMAND—praecipere.

Preceptor. Praeceptor.

I. 10^e. Affirms it (merely) from the mouth of a preceptor.

D. 3441. That preceptor or preacher. 3445. (Compare 3431².)

Precious. Pretiosus.

Preciousness. Pretiositas.

See under STONE.

A. 1327⁷. 'Every precious thing,' etc. (Jer.xx.5) = the Knowledges of faith.

2540². Things of slight importance to man are precious to the Angels. 2551². 2574^e.

3166. 'He gave precious things to her brother' (Gen.xxiv.53) = spiritual things for natural good. . . That 'precious things' = spiritual things. Ill.

3579³. 'Precious things of Heaven' (Deut.xxxiii.13) = spiritual things, which are 'the dew.'

8609. A precious stone = higher or interior truth.

9407⁵. A precious stone = truth translucent from the Lord's Divine. Ill.

9476². As the truths and goods of faith are signified by precious stones, intelligence and wisdom are signified by them.

9643⁴. 'A precious stone' (Rev.xxi.) = the truth of faith from the good of love. Refs.

9863². That the precious stones which were in the breastplate = Divine truths from Divine good. Ill.

9865. For precious stones represent according to their colours. Ex.

J. 56⁷. They accumulate precious things the same as in the world; for there are far more precious things in the Spiritual World . . .

R. 360³. These 'precious things' (Deut.xxxiii.) = the Knowledges of good and truth, from which is doctrine.

789. 'To be made rich by her costliness' (Rev.xviii.

19)=to be made acceptable to God by the holy things of that religiosity. Ex. E. 1176.

—². That the holy things of the Church are signified by 'precious things.' Ill.

T. 44^e. Their exaltation to uses, and the derivative preciousnesses.

418². Who loves a stone except from its preciousness?

E. 242²¹. 'Kings' daughters are among the precious ones' (Ps. xlv. 9)=the affections of truth themselves.

295¹⁰. 'The precious things of the earth' (Deut. xxxiii. 16)=spiritual goods and the derivative truths which are of the Church.

401²⁴. 'The precious things of heaven, the dew, and the abyss lying beneath' (ver. 13)=spiritual celestial things in the internal and external man. 'The precious things of the produce of the sun, and the precious things of the product of the months' (ver. 14)=all things which proceed from the Celestial Kingdom and the Spiritual Kingdom . . .

405³¹. 'The precious things of heaven' = Divine spiritual things. 448⁷.

422¹⁹. When the goods of charity are genuine, they are called 'precious things of the hills of an age' (ver. 15). (=genuine truths such as were in the Ancient Church. 448⁷.)

684¹⁸. 'Kings' daughters'=spiritual affections of truth, which are called 'precious' when the truths are genuine.

1120². 'Precious,' in the Word, is said of truths.

1146. 'Precious wood' (Rev. xviii. 12)=excellent good; thus rational good.

Precipitate. Praecipitare.

Precipice. Praecipitium.

Headlong. Praecipites.

A. 50². The Angels prevent him from precipitating himself into ultimate evil.

1049². This proprium desires nothing so much as to precipitate itself into Hell.

1683². It is the man himself who precipitates himself into Hell. 1861¹².

1820^e. When they approach the first threshold . . . they precipitate themselves backwards.

2132. They precipitate themselves thence. 2438³. 2733². 2749. 3938⁶. 6677².

5850². Unless Angels and Spirits were with men . . . they would precipitate themselves into the deepest Hell.

5854². Unless man were withheld by the Lord, he would continually precipitate himself into the deepest Hell. 6484². 6489^e.

8945⁴. Therefore they cast themselves down headlong. 9281². H. 525^e. W. 423.

R. 611². They cast themselves down by a precipice, which then appears to them. M. 10⁵.

M. 305². If the successive order of conjugal love is precipitated . . .

312. That conjugal love precipitated without order . . . burns up the marrows, and is consumed. Ex.

T. 597^e. If anyone had been admitted (into spiritual temptation), he would have . . . precipitated himself more deeply into Hell.

691². When the Lord shows Himself more fully . . . some precipitate themselves deeper into Hell.

D. 2924. Lest they precipitate them into slaughter.

3115^e. Man continually studies to precipitate himself into the worst evil.

3406. They ran by a headlong way . . . When I awoke, I thought (with horror) of that precipice . . .

3932. They precipitate themselves into the penalties.

E. 455¹⁹. 'Those who precipitate themselves' (or 'the rash') (Is. xxxii. 4)=those who easily seize upon and believe the things which are said: thus falsities also.

Preconceived. Praeconceptus. D. 2369.

Predestinate. Praedestinare.

Predestination. Praedestinatio.

Predestinarian. Praedestinarianus.

A. 6488. Discourse about predestination . . . Reply was heard from Heaven that no one is ever predestinated to Hell, but all to eternal life.

P. 202^e. There is not anything predestinated.

322. That . . . there is no predestination. Gen. art.

— Sound reason dictates that all have been predestinated to Heaven, and none to Hell. Ex. 329, Gen. art.

330. That it may appear how hurtful is the belief in predestination as generally understood, these four propositions are to be . . . confirmed. I. That any predestination except to Heaven is contrary to the Divine love. Ex.

—³. II. That any predestination except to Heaven is contrary to the Divine wisdom. Ex.

—⁴. This does not take away the truth that all have been predestinated to Heaven . . .

—⁸. IV. That any of the human race have been damned by predestination, is a cruel heresy. Ex.

R. Pref. ve. (The Roman Catholics) establish predestination; saying that no one knows whether he is in the number of the predestinated . . . except by special revelation.

M. 105^e. The priest added predestination as a cause of potency, saying, Are not marriages predestinated, and (therefore) the proliferations . . .

386. The Divine proceeding . . . operates the effects of the ends which the Lord predestinated in the creation.

B. 64. That from the faith of the present Church have been born enormous births; as . . . predestination. 66, Ex.

66³. What more hurtful . . . and cruel . . . could be hatched, than [than the dogma] that some of the human race have been damned by predestination . . .

67. The third offspring hatched by the mother wolf, or predestination.

68². It may be said that it is by what is provided and predestinated that . . .

T. 56^e. How delirious are they . . . who teach that God can . . . predestinate the soul of anyone to eternal death . . .

72. A company of Spirits reasoning about imputation and predestination . . .

— . A supralapsarian predestinarian.

—³. How can Justice itself . . . predestinate anyone to Hell ?

485. That without free will in spiritual things . . . there would be no imputation, but mere predestination, which is detestable. Gen.art.

486. Predestination is an offspring of the faith of the present Church. Ex.

—². The dogma concerning predestination . . . flowed out of that faith almost inevitably, which took place first with the predestinarians; then [was made] by Godeschaleus; afterwards by Calvin and his followers; and at last was firmly established by the Synod of Dort, and was carried into their Church as the Palladium of religion . . . by the Supra- and Infra-Lapsarians.

—³. (The hurtfulness and cruelty of predestination.)

487. Discussion about predestination with five members of the Synod of Dort. (—³.) Being compelled to speak from their internals, they said that the Word is a mere windy thing, because it predestinates all to Heaven; that religion is only for the common herd, because where there is predestination, religion is nothing; that predestination is not according to a life from the civil laws of justice, but is from the mere good pleasure of God; that all things taught by the Church are rubbish, except that there is a God; that spiritual things, if they penetrate deeply into a man, make him a detestable monster before God; and that the faith from which they had deduced predestination, is effected according to predestination; and that when it is given men are like stocks.

—⁵. They asked Swedenborg to select something from the Word about predestination. He read to them Is. lix. 5; but they could not bear to hear it explained.

—^e. From these things it is evident that the decree of that Synod concerning predestination is not only an insane heresy, but is also a cruel heresy; and therefore is to be eradicated from the brain so that not one speck of it is left.

488. The monstrous faith that God predestinates men to Hell. (Exhibited by comparisons.)

490². (Thus) every man is predestinated to Heaven . . .

628. They have thus fallen into the detestable error concerning predestination.

634^e. How can councils be trusted, when that of Dort, by a unanimous vote, decreed a detestable predestination, and exalted it as the palladium of religion !

664. They suppose that 'the elect' mean those predestinated to Heaven by God, either before or after their birth, and that faith . . . is given to them alone . . . and that the rest are reprobated, and left to themselves to go to Hell by any way they please; when yet . . . no election is made either before or after birth, but all are elected and predestinated, because all are called, to Heaven; and the Lord after death elects those who have lived well and believed rightly, after they have been explored.

797³. When (Calvin) observed that (the members of that Society) neither knew nor could apprehend anything about predestination, he betook himself to one corner of it . . . This was provided that he might recede from his error concerning predestination; and that the ranks of those who, after the Synod of Dort, adhered to that detestable heresy, might be filled up; who were all relegated in succession to that cavern.

—⁴. When it was asked by the modern predestinarians, Where is Calvin? . . .

—⁵. (Calvin said), It is predestination alone which determines all things of religion. (Swedenborg disusses predestination with Calvin, and quotes his sayings on the subject, on hearing which all the servants of the Lord withdrew from him, and he betook himself into that cavern. Their lot there, des.)

So3. The dogma of predestination is born inevitably from these mystical things . . . Hence the laity talk much together about predestination; some grasp it with both hands; some with one, and laugh at it; and some cast it from them . . . for they know nothing of the mystical things of faith, from which that viper has been hatched . . . Therefore the dogma of predestination with the laity, and also with the clergy, is like an image in the human form placed on a rock in the sea, (which some captains strike their sails to as a mark of reverence, some wink at and salute, and some hiss at.)

D. 267I. That all are predestinated to life.

4285². It has been foreseen and thus as it were predestinated . . .

4290. See INFANT, here.

E. So2⁴. This involves predestination, from which flows every kind of security of life with the evil, and the deprivation of all hope with the good; when yet all have been predestinated to Heaven; and those are called 'the elect' who learn truths and do them.

Coro. xlvi. Thence has necessarily flowed forth predestination, through which religion is abolished.

Predetermination. Praefinitio.

Predetermined. Praefinitus.

Presence. Praesentia.

Present. Praesens.

See OMNIPRESENCE.

A. 730^e. With the Lord, and consequently with Heaven, it is the same whether a thing is future, or present : what is future is present.

823. When his enmities . . . return, those whom he has hated are presented—sistuntur—present . . .

904. The presence of the Lord with this man of the Church (Noah). Sig. and Ex.

—². In love towards the neighbour, the Lord is present . . . not so much in faith without love.

—³. The presence of the Lord first exists—datur—with man when he loves the neighbour. The Lord is in love, and, in proportion as man is in love, in the same proportion the Lord is present ; and, in proportion as the Lord is present, in the same proportion He speaks with man.

981. 'God blessed'=the presence and grace of the Lord. Ex.

—². It is said presence, because the Lord is present solely in charity. . . The Lord is present with every man ; but, in proportion as a man is distant from charity, in the same proportion is the presence of the Lord, so to speak, more absent . . .

1023. 'I set up My covenant'=the presence of the Lord in charity. 1032. 1038. 1055.

—². In proportion as the voluntary proprium of man can be separated from this intellectual proprium, in the same proportion the Lord can be present with him . . .

1032². While (these gentiles) live in the world, the Lord is present with them in their charity and innocence . . .

1038. There is, indeed, the actual presence of the Lord with every man; but it is nearer or more remote altogether according to his approach to love, or his distance from it.

—^s. That there may be the presence of the Lord, and of love, in all the will, and in all the thought. Sig. Such is the presence of the Lord, and of the mutual love from Him, with the Angels.

—^e. (The rainbow)=the presence of the Lord in charity; thus His remembrance with man. 1044, Sig. and Ex.

1044^b. In proportion as there is the presence of the Lord in the intellectual proprium, in the same proportion must the voluntary proprium be removed. (For) the intellectual part of a regenerated man, from charity, in which the Lord is present, is Heaven; and his voluntary part is Hell; and in proportion as the Lord is present in Heaven, in the same proportion is Hell removed. . . The sign, therefore, that the Lord is present, is that the Voluntary of man is being removed . . .

1059. That the sign of the Lord's presence in charity was not only with the man of the Church, but also with the man outside the Church. Sig. and Ex.

— . The Lord is even more present (with the gentiles); because there is not so great a cloud in their intellectual part, as there is, in general, with those called Christians.

1100. With these ('Japheth') the Lord is equally present; for the Lord operates through charity, wherever it is. So . . . the Lord is much more present with children than with adults . . .

1114. Spirits . . . can see as present all whom they had known. . . They are present-adsunt—in a moment, and that most presently.

1153. For the Lord is present in love; thus in worship.

1274². Spirits of whom others are thinking . . . when the Lord concedes it, are present-adsunt—in a moment . . . What, then, are they not before the Lord, to whom all and each cannot but be most present . . .

1276^e. There is a like situation of all things around each Angel . . . The presence of the Lord is attended with this.

1382^e. In the present (of the Angels) they have past and future things together; so that in all their present there is the Eternal and Infinite of the Lord. 2493^e.

1395^e. When those whom they had hated are presented present . . .

1398. The Spirits could not endure the presence of the Angel . . .

1442^e. The celestial things of charity are attended with this; for in them alone is the Lord present . . .

1506². The other Spirits could not endure his presence, because he wanted to be greater than others.

1947. Therefore, in temptations, the Lord is more present.

2063^e. For only in good, which is solely of charity, the Lord is present.

2334. In all temptation there is doubt concerning the presence and mercy of the Lord. Ex.

2441². That the presence of the Lord is the same thing as the last time, which is called 'the Judgment,' is from this: that His presence separates the good from the evil, and has with it that the good are elevated into Heaven, and the evil cast themselves into Hell. Ex.

2706. The presence of the Lord with the spiritual. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'God with' anyone = the Lord's presence.

— . The Lord is indeed present with everyone; for life is from no other source . . . and in Hell itself; but diversely according to the reception of life. With those who receive the life . . . wrongly, and pervert it . . . the Lord is present, and rules their ends as far as possible for good; but His presence with them is called absence . . . But with those who receive the life . . . presence is predicated, and that according to the degree of the reception. It is as with the sun, which is present with heat and light in vegetation according to the reception.

2788. Nay, all the Eternal is present to Him.

2915. For the presence of the Lord with man is in good; and therefore in what is just and fair, and honourable and decorous. . . But with those not in these things—namely, from the heart or affection—nothing of Heaven can be inseminated; (and therefore) the Lord cannot be present there. The Lord's presence is predicated according to the quality of the good . . .

3559. Inmost perception from presence. Sig.

3691⁵. For in charity itself the Lord is present; and therefore those in it are called His 'images.'

4198. The presence of the Lord's Divine Natural in the good represented by Laban. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'To look,' or 'watch,' = presence; for he who looks at another . . . is present with him in sight. Besides, 'to see,' when predicated of the Lord, = foresight and providence; thus also presence through these. As regards the presence of the Lord, He is present with everyone, but according to the reception. . . Those who receive His presence in good and truth, are in the life of intelligence and wisdom; whereas those who receive His presence . . . in evil and falsity, are in the life of insanity and folly; but are still in the faculty of being intelligent and wise.

—^e. The quality of the presence is signified by 'Mizpah;' that is, the quality of those in the goods of works, or with the gentiles.

4299. To sustain the Divine presence. Sig.

—². Conscience is a new will and understanding from the Lord; thus it is the presence of the Lord with the man, and is the nearer in proportion as the man is in the affection of good or of truth. If the presence of the Lord is nearer than (this), the man comes into temptation. Ex.

4311. That the Lord was representatively present (with the Israelites). Sig. and Ex.

— . That He was not present as with those who have been regenerated . . .

[A.4311]². How the Lord is present with those who are within the Church. Ex.

4380. More general presence. Sig. and Ex.

4623. Those in the affection of good and truth are in the Lord's life . . . for in good and truth through affection the Lord is present . . . (But) in evil and falsity the Lord is not present.

4686. With these, the Lord is present; because He is in charity; and, through charity, in faith. 4689.

5229. For as soon as any Spirit remembers another, he is presented present; and so present that they talk together . . . 5975. D.3076.

5336. When the presence of the Celestial of the Spiritual was in the Natural. Sig. 5337, Ex. 5638.

5430. 'To remember' = presence; for the thing which is remembered is presented present.

5703. All things disposed into order by His presence. Sig. and Ex.

—². When the Lord is present, all things are disposed into order by His presence itself. The Lord is order itself; and therefore where He is present, there is order; and where there is order, there He is present.

5962. (The Celestial of the Spiritual) present no longer with them in that way. Sig. and Ex.

—². It is morning with Spirits and Angels when the Lord is present . . .

—⁴. It is evening with the Angels when they do not perceive the Lord to be present . . .

5963. The varying states in the other life, are according to the perception of good and truth with them, thus according to the perception of the Lord's presence . . . for they who are in the perception of the Lord's presence, are in the perception that everything which happens to them tends to their good, and that evils do not reach them.

6006. The presence of the Lord in that state. Sig.

6259. Presence. Sig.

6365. That the infernal and diabolical crew will flee away at his presence. Sig. and Ex.

— . No one of the infernal crew . . . can endure the presence of (a celestial) Angel. Ex. 6369.

6442. That when the Lord is present the deliverance of the good will be effected. Sig. and Ex.

6469. When the Angels have inflowed to my perception, the presence of the Lord has been manifestly apperceived; a sign that they are in the Lord's life.

6476^e. (Thus) the Lord is present in every single thing of His Prayer.

6495. The influx which is from the Lord is the good of celestial love, thus of love towards the neighbour: in this love the Lord is present; for He loves the universal human race . . . and, as the good of this love is from Himself, He Himself is in it; thus He is present with the man who is in (it).

6518. The presence (of the Internal) in the natural mind. Sig.

6677. The infernals cannot stand at the presence of good; for the Lord is present in all good . . .

6707. The Lord is present in good, because it is His, and He is present according to the quality of it; (therefore) the differences of the neighbour are circumstanced according to the presence of the Lord in the good . . .

6806. For it is charity which . . . causes the Lord to be present with man.

—³. As these are in evil, they are in a different presence, which is as it were absence; although the Lord is not absent; but the man or Spirit who is in evil, is he who is absent.

—^e. In a word, in the other life, similitude of state causes them to appear present . . . and dissimilitude of state causes them to appear absent. 6866².

6849. Lest they should be injured by the presence of the Divine Itself. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'To look at God' = the presence of the Divine Itself; for the Lord is presented present before man no otherwise than by an internal looking, which is effected through the faith which is from charity . . .

6893. The presence (of the Divine of the Ancient Church). Sig.

— . Thought itself makes presence; for he who is being thought of appears as if present before the internal sight. In the other life this takes place actually; for when anyone is thought about intensely, he is presented present. Hence it is that friends meet there, and also enemies, and that, from these, hard things are suffered.

7017. For when one proposes anything to himself, he perceives it as present.

7056^e. Therefore, when there is conjunction (of truth proceeding immediately with truth proceeding mediately) the Lord appears as present; and His presence is perceived: but when there is no conjunction, the Lord is as absent; but His absence is not perceived, unless it is known from some perception what His presence is. 7058².

7195^e. For, in a state of temptations, the Lord is more present than out of it.

7390. The presence of the law Divine. Sig. 7451. 7587. 7637.

— . 'To call' = presence, because to call is to want to speak with him, and to communicate what one thinks; and, in the other life, it is from a law of order that he is presented present with whom anyone wants to speak, and longs to communicate his thoughts.

7498. 'To come,' or 'enter,' to anyone, = presence, or appearance. . . For he who is thinking about anyone places him present to himself; and . . . in the other life, he about whom anyone is thinking from a longing to speak with him, is presented present.

7519. (The power) to excite the falsities of cupidities, through presence, with those infesting. Sig. and Ex.

7724. For the Lord is present in good.

7777. The presence of the Divine everywhere then. Sig.

7867. 'The Passover of Jehovah' = the presence of the Lord, and deliverance by Him. 7917.

7869. The Lord's presence with those who have infested. Sig. 7925.

7926². The presence of the Divine the source of damnation to those in faith (alone). Sig. The Lord does not present Himself present with those in Hell in order to inflict damnation ; but still it is His presence which effects it ; for the Hells continually desire to infest the good . . . but the Lord constantly provides that those in the ultimates of Heaven shall be in safety and quiet ; and this is effected through His presence with them. Then, when the infernals introduce themselves where the Lord is present—that is, into His presence—they cast themselves into the evils of vastation, and at last into damnation ; for the presence of the Lord, into which they rush, inflicts such things . . .

7989. The presence of the Lord with those in truth and good, and with those in evil and thence in mere falsity. Sig. and Ex.

— For through the presence of the Lord those are illustrated who are in good and thence in truth ; and those are blinded who are in evil and thence in falsity : also through the presence of the Lord those are brought forth from damnation who are to be elevated into Heaven . . . and through the presence of the Lord those are brought into damnation who are to be cast into Hell ; for they are in evil according to the degree of the Lord's presence. . . In what follows, the presence of the Lord is described by the pillar of cloud by day, and the pillar of fire by night, to lead them ; and His presence both with those in good and truth, and with those in evil and falsity, by the pillar placing itself between the camp of Israel and that of the Egyptians ; and by the fact that when Jehovah looked from it towards the camp of the Egyptians, they immersed themselves in the Sea Suph.

8017. A state of the presence of the Lord. Sig.

8039. That they underwent temptations with the Lord constantly present. Tr. 8105. 8110.

8137. The effect of the Lord's presence on the evil. Sig.

—³. For the evil flee from the presence of the Lord ; that is, from the presence of the good and truth which are from Him ; for . . . by this presence they are circumfused with their own evils and falsities : because these then burst forth from them . . .

8197². The presence of the Lord, which is here signified by 'the pillar,' is heavenly light itself . . . But the same light causes thick darkness with the evil . . .

8206. For the Lord is present in good and truth ; and the presence of the Lord moves away evil and falsity on every side . . . and prevents them from rushing in. Sig.

8209^e. When man has been reformed . . . good removes evil ; because the Lord is present in good.

8214. For the presence of the Lord with the evil presents this effect (namely, that the falsities and evils which they strive to inflict, relapse upon themselves). Sig. 8226, Sig. 8334^e.

8227. His Divine presence has solely for its end the protection and Salvation of the good ; and, when the Divine is present with these, and is protecting them against the evil, then the evil burn still more against them, and still more against the Divine itself . . . and therefore rush on it ; and, in proportion as they do so, in the same proportion, by a law of order, they cast themselves into punishments, vastation, damnation, and at last into Hell.

8264^e. For to cast the evil into Hell, and elevate the good into Heaven, by mere presence, is Divine.

8265. That by His presence alone falsities from evil have been damned and cast into Hell. Sig.

— For the evil can by no means endure and sustain the Divine presence ; for by the Divine presence they are tortured and as it were deprived of animation . . . Hence the life of those in falsity and evil labours at the Divine presence ; and then feels Hell in itself, according to the presence. Lest, therefore, they should be completely destroyed, they are veiled over with their own falsities and evils, as with mists, which are of such a nature that they infringe upon, repel, or suffocate, the Divine influx. Sig.

8286. Falsities collected into a one through the presence of Heaven. Sig. and Ex.

8296. The presence of the Lord with the Angels. Sig.

8306. From His mere presence they had damnation and Hell. Sig.

8321. By continual victories, the Lord subjugated all such, and then, through His presence, caused that they were cast into Hell.

8343. That from His mere presence the falsities of faith and the evils of life have cast themselves into Hell. Sig. and Ex.

8427. 'Glory' = the presence and advent of the Lord. Ex.

—³. For the Lord is present in the truth which is from Himself.

8443. The presence of the Lord in truth accommodated to apperception. Sig. and Ex.

8444. The truth which proceeds from the Divine of the Lord, in which is the presence of the Lord. Sig. and Ex.

8532. In the Divine presence. Sig. 8535.

8567. At the last (in temptations) there is doubt almost amounting to denial of the presence of the Divine.

8652. The mercy and presence of the Lord in the Church. Sig.

—^e. For where there is the reception of mercy, there is presence ; which is chiefly in the Church, because . . . through the Word there is the presence of the Lord.

8792. 'To descend,' when said of Jehovah, = the Lord's presence through influx ; thus His advent.

— That people could perceive His presence only externally ; for their internal was devoid of good and truth, in which the Lord is present with others.

8816. Commotion of all things at the presence of the Divine. Sig. For the Divine is such that no one can endure it except in a kind of cloud. . . Those in good do indeed tremble at the presence of the Divine ; but it is the holy tremor which precedes reception : whereas those in evil are in terror at the presence of the Divine, and flee away, and then are involved in their falsities as with a dusky cloud, and are hidden. Sig.

[A.] 8826. The presence of the Lord in Heaven. Sig.

8853. This (proprium, or Dominant) is present in man's thought, and also in his will, constantly.

8939. The presence of the Divine then, and influx. Sig. and Ex.

8945. For the Lord is more present in interior things.

8985². For in Heaven, where there is thought, there is presence; and the presence bends to itself the thoughts of those in the Society, and thus disturbs the influx from the Divine there.

9213⁵. When they dissent, (the others) disappear . . . The reason is that parity of thought conjoins, and presents presence; for the thought is the internal sight.

9296². For in all the present the Lord foresees evil, and provides good . . .

9297. The continual appearance and presence of the Lord also in the truths of faith. Sig. and Ex.

—². When man is regenerate, the Lord is present not only in the good with him, but also in the truths which are from good. Ex.

9329. (The consternation of all falsities) at the presence of the Lord. Sig.

9378. The conjunction and presence of the Lord through the Word in general. Sig. and Ex.

9405. The advent and presence of the Lord in the Word. Sig. and Ex.

9415. The presence of the Lord with (that people) through an intermediate. Sig. and Ex.

—². For the Lord presents Himself present with man: not man with the Lord; for all the good of love and truth of faith comes from the Lord . . . and therefore there is the presence of the Lord with those who admit Him; that is, with those who receive in faith and love the truth Divine which is from Him. Ill.

9480. The consequent presence of the Lord in the representative Church. Sig. and Ex.

9546. Thus the presence of the Lord with peace and with heavenly joy, from mercy. Sig.

9594^e. The presence of the Lord is according to the degree of reception.

9680². The Lord is in the Middle Heaven, but He is more present in the Inmost Heaven. Ex.

9682². How the case is with the presence of the Lord in the Inmost Heaven; and how it is with His presence in the Middle Heaven; and also in the Ultimate one, may be evident from what has been shown concerning the influx of good and truth from the Lord. The presence of the Lord is effected through influx; and the influx is according to the life of good and truth. Ex.

—³. As to what further concerns the presence of the Lord in Heaven, and, through Heaven, with man, it is to be known that the Lord is above the Heavens . . . but still He is present through the light and heat from the Sun . . . From these things it is evident that the Lord is present where the good from Him is received.

9784. 'In the Tent of the assembly' = the presence of the Lord.

—^e. 'The Tent' represented Heaven; and Heaven is Heaven from the presence of the Lord there . . .

9787. For with the Lord sequent and future things are together in the present . . .

9841^e. For love presents him who is loved present in itself.

10048². With those being regenerated, interior and exterior things are ordained by the Lord for all the sequent states, insomuch that the present things involve the future ones; and the future things in like manner when they become present ones; and this to eternity . . .

10106². Through the light and heat from the Sun, the Lord is present in the Heavens, and so present, that it is as if He is altogether there; for He infills the Heavens, and makes them.

10127^e. For the Lord is present with every man with the good of love; for He loves all . . .

10130³. All presence (there) is according to similitudes of loves; and all absence is according to the dissimilitudes of them.

10146. 'Before' = presence, and the presence of the Lord is in proportion to the reception of the good of love and truth of faith from Him. . . The Lord is indeed present with every man; but He is present with the good otherwise than with the evil: with the good He is present in every single thing which they think from the truth of faith, and which they will from the good of love, and so present that He Himself is the faith and the love in them; consequently He is with them as one who dwells with them. Ill.

—². But with the evil the Lord is not present in every single thing, because they have neither faith nor charity; but He is present in general, through which presence they have the faculty of thinking and willing, and also of receiving faith and charity, but only in proportion as they desist from evils. But in proportion as they do not desist from these, in the same proportion He appears absent . . . Hence it is that those in Heaven are in the Lord's presence; and those in Hell, in His absence. Ex.

10147. The Lord's presence and influx. Sig. 10153. 10154. 10197. 10276.

10153⁴. It is believed that the Lord is present in the truth which is called of faith; but He is not present in truth without good; but, where good is, there He is present in truth through good; and in truth in the proportion that it leads to good, and proceeds from good. Ex.

10276². All the influx and presence of the Lord takes place immediately, and also, in the lower Heavens, mediately through celestial good . . .

10277. As the influx and presence of the Lord is in love and faith . . .

10569². 'The eyes of Jehovah' = the Divine presence of the Lord in the truths and goods of faith and love with men on earth and with Angels in the Heavens. The reason the presence of the Lord is in the truths and goods of faith and love, is that these are from the Lord Himself; and when the Lord is present in these with men and Angels, He is then present in what is His own with them, and not in their proprium. —³.

10574¹⁴. As the Divine appeared as a cloud. 'a cloud' = the Divine presence; and, where there is the Divine presence, there is Divine truth . . .

10645². The Lord is present with man in his truths which are from good . . . The Lord does not dwell with an empty man; that is, with a man who does not know His truths and do them. In those truths which are from good—that is, which a man wills and does—is the Lord present with man . . .

H. 1². 'The coming of the Lord in the clouds of heaven with power and glory' = His presence in the Word.

57^o. In proportion as man is in good, the world with him is subordinated to Heaven . . . and then the Lord is present with him in both as in His Heaven . . .

121. The Lord in Person is constantly encompassed with the Sun; but He is in presence (in Heaven) by aspect: for it is a general thing in Heaven that they appear as present in the place where their aspect (or look) is fixed or terminated. . . This presence is called the presence of the internal sight.

147. Hence is evident the quality of the Lord's presence in the Heavens: that He is everywhere, and with everyone in the good and truth which proceed from Him . . . The perception of His presence is in their interiors: from these the eyes see . . . Him outside themselves . . .

194. In the Spiritual World, one is presented present to another, provided he longs intensely for his presence; for he thus sees him in thought, and presents himself in his state. And vice versa.

199. (Spaces cannot be measured in Heaven, but can be seen only from the state) the cause of which is that the Lord is present with everyone according to the love and faith, and that all things appear near or far off according to His presence; for from this are determined all things in the Heavens. Through this also the Angels have wisdom, for through this they have extension of the thoughts; and through this there is a communication of all things which are in the Heavens . . .

494. In the other life, when anyone is thinking about another, he in thought presents his face to himself, and at the same time many things which are of his life; and, when he does this, the other becomes present as if he had been summoned. Such things come forth there from the fact that thoughts are communicated there, and there are no spaces such as there are in the natural world . . .

549^o. From this comparison it may be seen that the presence of the Lord is perpetual with everyone; but that it is diversely received.

580². (A fifth kind of infernal arts relates to) ejections out of themselves, and consequent presences elsewhere . . .

594². Some of the media (for restraining the infernal Societies) relate to a stronger presence of the Lord.

J. 32². When a Spirit is in (externals), he appears in many places, everywhere as if present in the body; but this is only an appearance; (for he is actually only in the Society where are those in a like love).

L. 46¹. To Proceed is nothing else than to illustrate and teach through presence, which is according to the reception of the Lord; whence most after death . . . receive the idea that the Holy Spirit is the presence of the Lord with man through Angels and Spirits, from which, and according to which presence, man is illustrated and taught.

S. 53. The reason doctrine is to be drawn and confirmed from the sense of the letter of the Word, is that the Lord is present there with man, and no where else . . .

78. The Lord is present with man . . . through the Word; because He is the Word; and in it as it were speaks to man . . . The Lord is present with man through the reading of the Word, but is conjoined with him through the understanding of truth from the Word.

99². Before His Advent into the world, the Lord was indeed present with the men of the Church, but mediately through Heaven; whereas since His Advent . . . He is present with the men of the Church immediately; for in the world He put on also the Divine Natural, in which He is present with men. T. 109.

W. 110^o. The Lord is equally present with those in the Ultimate Heaven as with those in the Third. That which causes the appearance of distance is in the subjects . . .

170^o. Through this conjunction (of the Creator with the created universe) the Lord is present in every work created by Him; for every created thing is, finally, for the sake of man.

291². Like the sphere of affections and thoughts which encompasses every Angel, whereby his presence is presented to those near and far off . . . The substances contiguous to his body . . . excite the atmospheres . . . and thereby present the perception as of his presence with others . . .

P. 29. When anyone, there, thinks about another from the affection of speaking to him, the other at once becomes present . . . In like manner when anyone is thinking about another from an affection of love: but by this affection there is effected conjunction; by the other, only presence. . . In the natural world the like takes place with men in the affections and thoughts of their spirit . . . 50. 326.

50². Hence it is that with every man there are Spirits present who are in a like affection; and they are as present as if one were included in their Society. Space and time effect nothing towards the presence, because affection and the derivative thought are not in space and time . . .

59. The Divine is not in time, and hence all future things are present to it . . . But those who think from time and space perceive this with difficulty . . . because they think from the present in the world, and not from the present in Heaven . . .

—². To think thus is to think from the Eternal at the same time as from the Present.

[P.]91. In the Spiritual World, where spaces are only appearances, wisdom makes presence, and love conjunction; and vice versa. . . This is the reason why those who reject the doctrine concerning the Lord, remove themselves from Him . . . But those who do not reject the doctrine, but the life, are present, but still are separated. Ex.

285. It follows that the Lord's presence . . . is also in the . . . most singular things of the understanding and thought, and also of the will and affection, and thence in the most singular things of the speech and action.

326⁴. In proportion as anyone knows the Lord, and from knowledges thinks about Him, in the same proportion the Lord is present . . . and in proportion as anyone does not know the Lord, in the same proportion He is absent.

—⁶. (To know, speak, and think of God) if one does not live well, causes nothing but presence . . .

333^e. For all the future is present to Him; and all the present is eternal to Him.

R. 13². Past and future things are present in Him. Sig.

54. That from such a presence of the Lord there is a failing of man's Own life. Sig. and Ex. . . The life proper to man cannot bear the presence of the Lord, such as He is in Himself. . . But still the Lord moderates and tempers His Divine so that man can bear His presence. This He does by veiling over. . . By (these) He is present with everyone who worships Him. Ill.

55. For the presence of the Lord with man is adjunction; thus conjunction through contiguity; and this contiguity becomes closer and fuller as the man loves the Lord . . .

160. Dead worship, or worship only external, causes the presence of the Lord, but not conjunction; whereas external worship in which interior things live, causes both presence and conjunction.

217. That the Lord is present with everyone in the Word, and is urgent there to be received. Sig.

380. That these are in the presence of the Lord. Sig.

796². The acknowledgment and worship of the Lord, and the reading of the Word, effect the presence of the Lord . . .

882. That the Lord will now be present with men in His Divine Human. Sig. and Ex.

883^e. Conjunction with the Lord is given only to those who approach Him immediately; presence to the rest.

937². In the Spiritual World, Knowledge and acknowledgment effect all presence . . . Therefore when anyone knows another, either from report, from intercourse with him, or from relationship, he is presented present while he is thinking about him from the idea of this Knowledge . . . This state derives its origin from the fact, that the Lord is present with everyone according to his faith . . . The faith and derivative presence of the Lord are given through the knowledges of Truths from the Word . . .

949³. The Holy Spirit is the Lord; for it is His Divine presence.

M. 72. The truth of faith causes the presence of the Lord; and the good of life . . . conjunction with Him. . . . The reason the truth of faith effects presence, is that it is of light . . . B.92.

158. As spaces (there) are appearances, distances and presences are also appearances . . .

171. Presence and absence (there) are according to spheres . . .

341². There are, with man, the presence of the Lord, and conjunction with Him. To approach Him effects presence; and to live according to His precepts, conjunction. His mere presence is without reception; but His presence and conjunction together are with reception.

—³. In the Spiritual World, everyone is presented present from thought about him; but no one is conjoined with another, except from the affection of love . . .

T. 30³. As God is in all time without time, in the Word the past and future are spoken in the present. Ill.

64. An Angel or Spirit is presented present to another in a moment, provided he comes into the like affection of love and derivative thought . . . (Shown from experience.)

—². The reason Angels and Spirits have such presence, is that every affection of love and derivative thought of the understanding, is in space without space, and in time without time . . .

— . When anyone recalls what he has seen in various places . . . he is in those places, as if they were present.

—³. Nay, the sight of the body emulates the same presence. Ex. . . Such presence have both the sights, the intellectual and the corporeal; for the spirit sees through the eyes; but no beast has a like presence, because beasts have no spiritual sight.

70³. For God, through His Sun, is present with both heat and light.

580³. The reason all can be regenerated and thus saved, is that the Lord is present with every man with His Divine good and truth . . .

719. That the Lord is present, and opens Heaven to those who approach the Holy Supper worthily; and that He is also present with those who approach it unworthily, but to these He does not open Heaven. Gen.art. 728.

— . The reason the Lord is present with both the worthy and the unworthy, is that He is omnipresent . . . but with the good—that is, the regenerate—He is present both universally and singularly. Ex.

—². But the presence of the Lord with those who approach unworthily, is His universal presence; but not His singular one; and His universal or external presence causes a man to live as a man, and to enjoy the faculty of knowing, understanding, and speaking rationally from the understanding . . . Whereas with those who also will and do truth and good, there is a presence of the Lord both universal and singular, or both internal and external.

728. The whole Lord is present in the Holy Supper, and His whole redemption. III.

—². When man is being regenerated, the Lord is indeed present . . . but for man to actually enter Heaven, he must actually present himself to the Lord . . . in His glorified Human, in which He is present (at the Holy Supper). Ex.

766. The Lord is present with man, and is urgent to be received ; and, when man receives Him . . . it is His first advent . . .

774. The presence of the Lord is perpetual with every man, both evil and good ; for without His presence no man could live ; but His advent is solely with those who receive Him . . . The perpetual presence of the Lord causes man to become rational, and to be able to become spiritual . . . The mere presence of the Lord, and the consequent illustration of the understanding, may be compared to the presence of the solar light . . . but His advent, to the advent of the heat . . .

780. In order that the Lord may be constantly present—adesse, He has unfolded to me the spiritual sense of His Word, in which is Divine truth in its light ; and in this He is continually present ; for His presence in the Word is (solely) through the spiritual sense . . .

D. 2590. That Spirits know (only) from reflection, that they are present. Ex.

2886. On certain Spirits . . . who, when they come, seem to have the presence of the Lord with them.

3958. The past, present, and future are all eternal (to the Lord). They wondered it should be said that the present is eternal . . . Still, our present is eternal to Him.

3973. The Angels have no idea of past and future things ; but both are in their present.

4095^a. Consider the Divine, to which the most singular things are present from eternity . . .

4139^a. That Spirits appear present . . . although they are far away ; and that they operate in as present a manner as if they were there. Ex.

4226. On . . . the continual presence of the Lord with the Angels. Ex.

—^c. With the celestial Angels in like manner there is the presence of the Lord, although they do not know it . . .

4359^e. In the other life all faculties . . . become more present ; for they then act from nature.

4711^e. Spirits appear present according to the consent and affirmation. (From experience.)

4748². In punishments and dangers (Charles XII.) was more present in his internal diabolical life, than out of them.

5014. Thought there effects such presence. . . This is the difference between presence with Spirits, and with men.

5647^e. There is at once presence with the book . . .

D. Min. 4618^e. When such an idea occurs (there) the person is presented present.

4772. He then began . . . to infest me by his presence . . .

E. 25. Presence and Providence. Sig. and Ex.

— . The reason 'aspect' = presence. Ex.

— . Hence, in the Spiritual World, those appear present with whom another longs to speak, provided he has had some idea about him from seeing him in the world ; and especially if both have had.

—^e. All the presence of the Lord is Providence.

76. The presence of the Divine majesty. Sig. and Ex.

77². Man's state when the Divine presence removes proprium . . . and then infils him. III.

80. The Lord is indeed present with all in the universe ; but more nearly or remotely according to the reception of good through the truths with them from Him ; for it is good in which the Lord is present with Angel, Spirit, and man ; hence, according to the quantity and quality of good from the Lord with them, such is His presence. If His presence exceeds this, it causes straitness and tremor ; but recreation, by accommodation to reception. Sig.

87. The past, present, and future, = all things.

213. That the Lord is present in charity, and not in faith without it. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'To love,' when said of the Lord, = that He is present.

— . The Lord is present in man's affection or love ; thus in the life of his spirit . . . consequently He is present in charity . . . and, as the Lord is present in the charity with man, it is evident that He is not present in faith without charity.

—². Love effects conjunction, and consequent presence.

—^c. That the Lord is present with him whom he loves. III.

248. 'I stand at the door, and knock' = the perpetual presence of the Lord. Ex.

—². There are two things which are in the freedom of man from the perpetual presence of the Lord. Ex.

282. 'To fly' = circumspection and presence. Ex. and III.

—^c. Therefore, when any people or things appear afar off, and an Angel or Spirit, from intense affection, wants to meet, or examine (them), he is at once present there. The like is the case with the thought. Ex.

297². With the Judgment, the case is that the Lord is present with all . . . Those in good . . . follow . . . but those in evil . . . do not . . .

349². That life is in man . . . is only an appearance which arises from the perpetual presence of the Lord . . .

412¹⁶. He infils an Angel with His sight, and thus with His presence, from afar . . .

—¹⁹. The Lord is present with each and all, even with those in . . . sins, by which presence He gives them freedom to receive Him . . .

462. In the Spiritual World those appear present with whom there is conjunction . . . Sig.

628. In the Spiritual World, thought with the intention and will to see another, to speak with him, and to give a command to him, causes him to be present; for in that World there are no distances which are constant . . . But similitude of affection and thence of thought causes presence . . . This comes from this Universal: that the Lord is present with all according to their love to Him, and their love towards the neighbour, and the derivative thoughts. From this universal principle come forth all the distances, that is, the presences and absences, between Angels and Spirits; and therefore when anyone longs to speak with another, that is, thinks about him from the intention or will of speaking with him, he is at once present, or he himself is present with him. J.(Post.)81.

[E.] 815⁵. All mental view from acknowledgment presents another present to itself . . .

—¹². There is indeed the presence of the Lord with all . . .

850. The presence of the Lord in Heaven and in the Church to separate the good from the evil . . . Sig. and Ex.

— . The presence of the Lord is perpetual with all who are in Heaven and the Church; but it is a peaceful, tranquil, conserving, and sustaining presence, through which all things in the Heavens and on earth are kept constantly in their order and in connection, and are reduced into it. In like manner in the Hells. But the presence which is here meant by 'standing upon Mount Sion,' is an active extraordinary presence of the Lord, to the end that His Divine may inflow through the Heavens into the lower things, and there separate the good from the evil . . .

1073². As the Divine truth is the Lord in the Heavens, the Lord Himself is also present in each and all things of His Word, as He is in His Heavens . . .

1087⁴. This (Last Judgment) the Lord could achieve from the Divine in Him . . . through His Human . . .; and not from His presence or abode in the men of the Church, as formerly. Ex.

1096³. By the thought of light (as distinguished from the thought of love) man has presence in Heaven; but not conjunction with Heaven; for the thought of light alone (merely) presents the man present to the Lord and the Angels . . .

1165². (He says to himself) present things I know; future ones I will not think of.

1219³. Many have become present to me from far distant lands . . .

1224². That the Lord is present also with those outside Heaven and the Church . . . Ex.

D. Love iii. This is the cause of the appearance of distance between the Lord as a Sun, and Heaven where the Angels are. Still, the Lord Himself is present in Heaven, but adaptedly to reception. Nor is the presence of the Lord like the presence of man, which infls space; but it is presence without space, which is, that He is in the greatest and the least things . . .

Inv. 11. That the presence of the Lord's love is with those who are in faith in Him. Ex. That the Lord Himself is present, is evident from this: that spiritual love has no place. . . In a word, in the Spiritual World there is presence according to the love. Therefore the Lord is omnipresent; and yet does not move. He is in place, but not by means of place; and is in space and extension, but not by their means.

23. The presence of the Lord was taken away from a certain devil; and the devil lay dead . . . It is from the perpetual presence of the Lord that man has the faculty of thinking, understanding, and willing.

28. For the Lord inspires men; and, when He is present, He is present by means of the Heavens, as is the soul by means of its body.

41². (Thus) no one has the Lord present with him, unless he knows His quality. Ex.

42. He who does not directly and immediately approach the Lord with an idea about Him, is not presented present. Ex.

Present, To. Presentare. M.47a^e.

Present, To. Sistere.

See under PRESENCE.

A. 41. When the proprium is presented to view . . .

1311². The judgment itself, or penalty of evil, is presented in lower and lowest things.

1379^e. Many other representative things are there presented conspicuously.

1391. The ideas of their thought are representative; thus all things are presented copiously.

1393. Thus are delightful and happy things presented without impediments.

1496. Truths themselves are (there) presented clearly to view.

1619. The things of the other life can never be presented to view before the sight of the body.

1632. When celestial and spiritual things . . . inflow into nature, such things are presented actually.

1767. When the Word is being read by (such) a man, it is presented by the Lord before the Angels in such beauty . . . 1768.

1773². Their approach presents such colours.

1873. So that it may be presented to the understanding.

5246². This state (of temptation) when presented to view there; for all spiritual states can be exhibited to the sight there . . . 5881.

6451². Life does not rest except in the ultimate of order, where it stands still.

6484². This can be presented to view to the Angels.

7297. 'The magicians did the like' = to present the like in appearance.

— . To present truths so that they appear as falsities.

—³. 'Sorceries' = the arts of presenting truths as falsities, and falsities as truths.

—^e. By phantasies, the evil present before the eyes beautiful things as foul, and foul ones as beautiful.

7298². In the other life, as soon as some truth is presented before good Spirits by a manifest experience, something opposite is presently presented. Ex.

8248. How the thoughts are presented through the face.

8249. Thus could the affections . . . and ideas . . . be presented to the life . . .

8533^e. The quality and quantity of anyone's good . . . can be presented to view in the light of Heaven.

9280³. The spiritual sense is presented in Heaven, when man is reading the Word holily.

10736^e. An idea of thought . . . about any Thing, is (there) presented to the life.

10809². The sun of the world is (there) presented in their idea as what is black . . .

H. 112. Things through which (uses) are presented in act, or effect . . .

240^e. The ideas of . . . any Angel or man are presented to view in the light of Heaven, when the Lord pleases.

466. Many things are there presented to view which with men only fall into ideas. The exterior memory is there presented to appearance like a callosity . . .

475. The whole man is presented in the deeds . . .

478. That (these truths) may be presented to apprehension before the senses.

481³. The interiors and exteriors of the mind are (there) presented to view, whenever the Lord pleases.

W. 218. Through forces (endeavour) presents motion.

296. That these three things in the Lord . . . are presented in appearance outside the Sun . . .

T. 728². Man must actually present himself to the Lord; and as the Lord actually presents Himself to man . . .

Present, To be. Adesse.

A. 1114. They are present in a moment . . . 1274². D. 3076. 5669. 5697^e. E. 1219².

1316. The Lord can never be present; man's proprium removes the Lord.

2338^e. Prayers that He be present.

4549. To provide, properly, is to be present with anyone . . .

6574². With those in temptation, the Lord Himself, both immediately, and mediately through Angels, is present . . .

D. Min. 4574. Those who in the world had associated with others with no other end than that they might be present. Tr.

Present. Honorarium.

A. 1171. 'A gift,' and 'a present' (Ps. lxxii. 10) = worship.

1172. Occurs.

Present. Munus.

A. 349. 'An offering' (or 'present') (Gen. iv. 3) = worship; (for) all the sacrifices were called 'offerings.' Ill. 355. 1171.

2906⁶. 'The offering of Judah' (Mal. iii. 4) = worship from celestial love; and 'the offering of Jerusalem' = worship from spiritual love.

3079³. 'An offering in a clean vessel' (Is. lxvi. 20) = a representative of the external man relatively to the internal. That which brings the present is the internal man.

4262. 'A present for Esau his brother' (Gen. xxxii. 13) = Divine things initiated into celestial natural good. . . 'A present' = initiation . . . because it was made to secure goodwill and favour.

—². The presents made in old times signified various things. . . Those given to kings and priests on approaching them, signified initiation; and those offered upon an altar, worship. For all the sacrifices, in general, of whatever kind, were called 'presents' (or 'offerings'); but, in special, the meat-offerings . . . for 'meat-offering,' in the Original Language, means 'a present.'

—³. That presents were given to kings and priests, on approaching them. Ill. 4364, Ex.

—⁴. The presents given to priests and kings were as if [given] to Jehovah.

—^e. That the presents which were sent = initiation. Ill. Here, their presents are called 'initiation.'

4367. Refusal to accept a present insinuates affection. Sig.

4730³. The fundamental of charity is to act rightly and justly in everything relating to any duty or function.

5619. 'Make a present descend to the man' (Gen. xliii. 11) = to obtain grace. . . In the Ancient representative Church it was customary to give something as a present to the judges, and afterwards to the kings and priests, when they approached them; and this was even commanded. The reason was that the presents which they gave them represented such things with man as ought to be offered to the Lord when He is approached, which are the things which are from freedom . . . From this must man give a present to the Lord when He is approached . . .

—^e. These presents were initiations; and initiations are to obtain grace.

5671. 'They prepared a present' (ver. 25) = insinuation; for 'a present' = to obtain grace. 5675.

5992. The office of the Angels is to inspire charity and faith, etc., etc.

6023². The neighbour is loved when anyone discharges his function rightly for the good of others . . .

9229⁸. 'Which is greater, the gift or the altar which sanctifieth the gift?' (Matt. xxiii. 19) . . . By 'the gift,' or sacrifice, were signified the things of faith and charity which are from the Lord.

9265. 'Thou shalt not receive a present' (Ex. xxiii. 8) = aversion for any gain whatever; (for) 'a present' = everything worldly which is loved; whether it be opulence, dignity, reputation, or anything else which is flattering to the natural man. These things, in general, are called gain; and, in the internal sense, are meant by 'a present which blinds and perverts.'

9266. 'Because a present blinds those whose eyes are open' (id.) = that gains cause truths not to appear . . . As also in, 'A present blinds the eyes of the wise' (Deut. xvi. 19).

[A.] 9293. 'Not to see My faces empty' (Ex.xxiii.15); that is, without a present, =testification for the reception of good, and thanksgiving; for the presents which were offered to Jehovah=such things as are offered to the Lord by man from the heart, and are accepted by the Lord. It is with presents as with all the deeds of man. Ex. . . The like is the case with presents, in that it is the will in them which is regarded by the Lord. Hence it is, that by the presents offered to Jehovah . . . are signified such things as are of the will . . . Ill.

—². (Thus) the presents offered to the Lord were testifications of such things as are offered with the heart; which are the things of faith and charity.

—³. 'The gifts' offered by the wise men. Ex.

—⁴. 'To bring a present, and to bring a gift' (Ps. lxxii.10)=the good of love and of faith. (=to worship. E.406⁹.)

—⁵. It is the goods of love and of faith in the Lord which . . . are meant by 'an offering to Jehovah' (Is.lxvi.20).

—⁶. As by a present offered to Jehovah is signified the good of love and of faith, it is said that 'they bring to Jehovah an offering in justice' (Mal.iii.3).

9938. See GIFT—donum, here.

10137⁷. 'To offer a present in oil to the king' (Is.lvii.9)=to worship Satan from evils. 'A present in oil' is a meat-offering.

10793. The office of (priests) is called the priesthood.

R. 508. 'They shall send presents to one another' (Rev.xi.10)=consociation through love and friendship. . . For a present consociates; because it produces love, and makes friendship.

M. 231². Those who had been judges of friendship and of presents. Des.

—^e. The office given them is to prepare vermilion wherewith to bedaub the faces of harlots.

300³. It is at their pleasure to bestow these presents either before betrothal, or after it. Ex.

T. 114. See FUNCTIONS—munia, here.

146. Illustration and instruction . . . belong to their office.

412². According to the amplitude of the function . . .

779. The Lord has . . . sent me to this office.

E. 325⁹. 'To offer a gift upon the altar' (Matt.v.23, 24)=all Divine worship, because with that nation Divine worship consisted principally in offering burnt-offerings and sacrifices. 391²⁰.

412²⁶. To be enriched with these (Knowledges) is signified by 'to bring a present' (Ps.xlv.12).

E. 661². As presents capture minds, and consociate, it was customary in ancient times to give presents to a priest and a prophet, and also to a prince and a king, when they approached them. Ill. And therefore also the offerings upon the altar . . . and also the meat and drink-offerings were called 'presents.' Ill. This was because external presents signified internal or spiritual presents; those, to wit, which proceed from the heart, and which are therefore of the affection and the faith. And as through these conjunction is effected, therefore by 'presents,' in the spiritual sense are signified conjunction, when predicated of God; and consociation, when predicated of men.

746¹⁹. 'A gift upon the altar'=the worship of the Lord from love and charity.

811¹⁹. That the Lord will do these things gratis, is signified by 'not for price nor present' (Is.xlv.13).

863¹⁴. 'The daughter of Tyre shall send a gift' (Ps. xlv.12)=worship by those in the Knowledges of truth.

C. 134. By ministries, are meant priesthoods and their duties; by functions, are meant various offices which are civil; by employments, are meant works, such as those of artificers; and by offices, are meant various studies, businesses, and domestic-servantships. Of these four consists the commonwealth, or society.

137. That all offices and employments, regarded as to goods of use, make a form which corresponds to the heavenly form. Gen.art.

— . Everyone there is in some ministry, function, office, or employment . . .

149. That in this form everyone is a good of use according to the extension of his office or employment. Gen.art.

158. That . . . if (such a man) sincerely, justly, and faithfully performs the work which belongs to his office and employment, he becomes a form of charity. Chapter.

196. Those who perform [the duties of] their employments solely for the sake of the necessaries of life; or of a name; or a salary. Des.

— . Those of the Present Church in faith alone, are meant by 'the dragon,' etc.; and its contentions with those who will be of the New Church, are meant by 'the gathering together of the kings of the earth to battle.'

913³. The state of the Present Church is thus described (in Dan.ii.43); (which=faith without truth commingled with the truth of the Word). This is the state of the Church at this day. What it will be afterwards, is described (in Dan.ii.45; and more fully in Dan.vii.13-18,27).

B. 16. Part Third will demonstrate the discordances between the dogmas of the Present Church, and those of the New Church. But we will dwell a little on these now, because it is believed by both clergyman and layman, that the Present Church is in the light of the Gospel itself. . . Neither does the Present Church see otherwise, because it has withdrawn the understanding from faith, and yet has confirmed its dogmas by a kind of sight beneath the understanding. . . The discordances in general are as follows.

35². That the same thought (of three Gods) is continued into the rest of the doctrinals of the Present Church . . .

40. That the dogmas of the Present Church, which are founded upon the idea of three Gods . . . appear erroneous, after the idea of one God, in whom is the Divine Trinity, has been received in its place. Ex.

47. That the faith of the Present Church cannot be conjoined with charity, and produce any . . . good works. Ex.

51. That from the faith of the Present Church redounds a worship of the mouth and not of the life. Ex.

53. (Character of the doctrine of the Present Church.) Gen.art. 60. 64. 66.

58. That the dogmas of the Present Church cannot be learned without great difficulty . . . nor can they be preached and taught without using great care and caution lest their nakedness should appear . . . Ex.

70. That the last state of the Present Church . . . is meant by 'the consummation of the age,' and 'the Advent of the Lord' then. Ex. T.758.

71. By the destruction of the Temple . . . is also meant the destruction of the Present Church.

72. (Blindness of the Present Church to its own condition.)

92. 'To shorten those days'=to put an end to the Present Church, and instaurate a New one. (T.182.) The reason no flesh could otherwise be saved, is that the faith of the Present Church is founded upon the idea of three Gods, and with this idea no one can enter Heaven; consequently neither with that faith, because this idea is in each and all things of it; and besides, in that faith there is nothing of life from the works of charity. Ex.

95. That the opening and rejection of the dogmas of the faith of the Present Church . . . are meant in (Rev. xxi.5). Ex.

96. That the Falsities of the dogmas of the faith of the Present Church are first to be opened and rejected . . . Ex.

103. That the faith of the New Church cannot possibly be together with the faith of the Present Church. Ex.

T. 15². Such is the state of the Present Church . . .

64. I have spoken with . . . the instaurators of the Present Church: Luther, Calvin, and Melancthon.

94. In Present Christian Churches it is general to call the Lord . . . the Son of Mary, and rarely the Son of God, unless they understand a Son of God born from eternity . . .

182. 'The dragon'=those in the faith of the Present Church.

206². From this faith (in three Gods) depend each and all things of the Present Church . . .

343². What the Present Church lays down concerning faith . . .

355. That the Present Church has separated faith from charity . . .

380². I fear that the Arian and Socinian abominations still lie hidden in the general spirit of the men of the Church at this day.

451. The charity of the Present Church is spurious. Ex.

463². That the Present Church . . . banishes free will, . . . may be evident from the Formula Concordiæ. 465.

508⁴. As the dogmas in Present Christian Churches have been framed not from the Word; but from Own intelligence . . .

536. All who do good from religion, after death reject the doctrine of the Present Church . . .

582. What would the universal human race be, if the faith of the Present Church were to last . . .

Can. Trinity x. 2. That no flesh would be saved, unless that affliction and abomination of desolation were taken away, is because through the faith of the Present Church there is no conjunction with God, and thence no salvation. 3, Ex.

Scia. 12. The faith of the Present Church has separated religion from the Church. (13.) Has falsified the Word. (14.) Has destroyed the Church so completely that there is no truth of the Word which has not been falsified.

21. From the faith of the Present Church no good work can flow which is not either meritorious or hypocritical.

Inv. 9. The man who has completely confirmed himself in the faith and doctrine of the Present Church, is capable of making no account of repentance, the law of the decalogue, together with works and charity . . .

8678. 'They have been proud over them' (Ex.xviii.11)=the endeavour and force of dominating over those of the Church.

— The reason 'to be proud'=the endeavour and force of dominating, is that this endeavour and the derivative force are in all pride; for pride is to love self before others, and to set self before them, and to want to exercise command over them. And those who want this also despise others in comparison with themselves; and also, from hatred and revenge, persecute those who . . . do not worship them; the love of self, which is pride, is such, that . . .

A. 382. 'Prophets' = those who teach; 'priests' (Lam.iv.13) = those who live according to the things.

1038⁴. The priesthood represented by 'Phinehas' = love and the things of love; like all the priesthood of that Church.

1097. Here, celestial men are called 'the priests of Jehovah;' and spiritual ones, 'the ministers of God.'

1241². The externals of worship, in addition to the priesthoods and things of the priesthoods, were . . .

1259^e. The priesthood of the Lord is predicated of nations, because of celestial things . . .

1361². So all priests whatever represented the Lord: the Sacerdotal itself is representative: the priests who were evil and unclean, in like manner . . .

1409⁴. All the priests, of whatever quality, represented the Sacerdotal of the Lord.

1416⁴. 'A kingdom of priests,' which is the Lord's Kingdom . . . predicated from the celestial things of love . . .

1664⁷. As the priests represented the Lord, who alone fights for man, their office is called 'warfare.'

1728. 'He (Melchizedek) was a priest' (Gen.xiv.18) = what is holy of love.

— Two things are predicated of the Lord: that He is a King, and a Priest. . . Priest, or priesthood, = what is holy of good, (which) is the Divine Celestial. . . The Lord as a Priest governs . . . from Divine good . . . (Continued under KING.)

2015⁴. 'Priest' = the good of charity.

—¹⁰. The priests represented His Divine good. . . All the laws by which the Lord governs the universe as a Priest . . . are goods.

— That these two things are conjoined in the Lord, was represented by the Royal conjoined with the Sacerdotal. Ill. 2258, Ex.

2362⁴. (Why the priests were not to marry widows, but virgins.)

2567³. 'As people, so priest' (Is.xxiv.2) = no interior truths and goods.

2607². 'Priest' = good.

2826⁷. Levi = the priesthood.

2830². Inaugurations into the priesthood were effected through spiritual things; for through spiritual things man is introduced into celestial ones . . .

3009^e. The Sacerdotal with them represented the Divine marriage of truth in good; and is signified by the name 'Jesus.'

3325^o. Aaron represented the Lord as to the priesthood; that is, as to the Divine love.

3703¹⁵. 'The daughter of a priest'=the affection of good.

3704⁵. As priests represented the Lord as to Divine good, they were called 'fathers.' Ill. and Ex.

3875⁴. For 'the priesthood,' in the internal sense of the Word, is nothing else than the Holy of love.

4013. Why the priests carried a rod.

4262². The signification of the presents made to the priests.

4281³. Both good and evil high priests could represent the things of the Lord's Divine priesthood . . .

4368³. Such are made sad, and angry, because they want to claim the power (of the keys) for the priesthood.

4677³. As the high priests represented the Lord as to the Divine Celestial, or Divine good, Aaron was clothed in garments which represented Divine truth . . .

4844¹⁶. As a widow represented the truth of the Church without its good . . . the priests were forbidden to marry a widow who was not the widow of a priest. Ill. The virgins whom they were to marry represented the affection of truth; and the widow of a priest, the affection of truth from good; for, in the representative sense, 'a priest' is the good of the Church.

5332. 'The daughter of the priest of On' (Gen.xli.45) =the truth of good; for . . . 'a priest'=good.

5619^e. The priests represented the Lord as to Divine good. Refs. 9477².

6148. 'The ground of the priests he bought not' (Gen.xlvii.22). Ex. . . 'The priests'=good.

—³. As to 'priests' signifying goods: there are two things which proceed from the Lord: good, and truth. The Divine good was represented by the priests . . . Hence it is that 'priests'=goods. . . The priesthood and royalty . . . were conjoined in one person, because the good and truth which proceed from the Lord are united . . .

—⁵. On account of the wars and idolatry of that people, they were divided, and . . . those who engaged in holy things were called priests . . .

—⁷. That the priests represented the Lord as to Divine good; and that thence by them is signified good. Ill.

—⁹. 'Jesus Christ hath made us kings and priests . . .' (Rev.i.6; v.10): they are said to be made . . . 'priests' from the good which is of charity.

6775. 'The priest of Midian had seven daughters' (Ex.ii.16)=the holy things of that Church. . . 'A priest'=the good of love. 6782. 6827.

6914³. Like evil priests . . . who within are devils, who can preach the doctrinals of their Church with such ardour . . . as to move the hearts of their hearers to piety; and yet are in the love of self and of the world; for the thought of honour and of gain reigns with them universally, and from this fire they are excited so to preach. There are evil Spirits with them, who are in the like love and thought, who lead them, and to whom are adjoined simple good Spirits.

8121^e. A priest who teaches truth, and leads to good, for the sake of truth and good, exercises charity. But he who does these things for the sake of himself and the world, does not exercise charity, because he does not love the neighbour, but himself.

8625. There are two things which are predicated of the Lord, namely, the priesthood, and the royalty. His priesthood corresponds to the Celestial Kingdom . . . for the Lord is called 'a priest' from Divine good.

8643. See JETHRO, here.

8770. 'Ye shall be to Me a kingdom of priests' (Ex. xix.6)=that then will be the good of truth . . . that is the good into which the man of the Spiritual Church is introduced through truth. . . 'Priests'=good; for the Sacerdotal of the Lord, which is represented by the priests, = Divine good.

—². There was (with them), first, a kingdom of judges; then a kingdom of priests . . . and by the kingdom of priests, who were also judges, was represented the Divine good from which is Divine truth. (Continued under KING.)

—³. The Celestial Kingdom is what is called the priesthood.

8832. 'The priests also who approach to Jehovah shall sanctify themselves' (Ex.xix.22)=those who are in spiritual good . . . because, by the sons of Israel, whose priests they were, were represented those who are of the Spiritual Church . . .

[A]. 9025³. Among priests . . . are those who teach . . . the truths of the Church from the literal sense of the Word, and those who teach . . . from doctrine from the Word . . . The latter differ very much from the former in perception. Ex.

9295². 'The priest' who 'waved the sheaf'—that is, who vivified the goods of truth—represented the Lord . . .

9670⁵. The priesthood, in which Aaron officiated, represented the Lord as to Divine good. 9804.

9806². Those who officiated in the ministry of worship were called 'priests;' and as all worship is effected from good . . . by 'priests' is signified good itself.

9809. 'To officiate to Me in the priesthood' (Ex. xxviii.1)=a representative of the Lord; (for) 'the priest-hood,' in the supreme sense,=every office which the Lord performs as the Saviour; (that is) from the Divine love . . . Hence by 'the priesthood,' in the supreme sense, is signified the Divine good of the Lord's Divine love. —², III.

—⁶. As the priesthood was a representative of the Lord as to all the work of Salvation from the Divine love, therefore all Divine worship belonged to the office of the priest; (as the sacrifices, etc.). It also consisted in explaining the Divine law, and in teaching, when the priests were at the same time prophets.

—⁷. As the Lord in respect to the whole work of Salvation was represented by the high priest, and the work of salvation itself by his office, which is called the priesthood, (no inheritance was given them).

—⁹. (In these series) 'priests'=goods in the complex. III.

—¹⁰. As the high priest represented the Lord as to Divine good . . .

9937. The priesthood in which Aaron officiated represented all the office which the Lord discharges as the Saviour. —². —⁴.

9946. The Divine good in the Heavens was represented by the priesthood of Aaron; and the Divine truth from the Divine good there, by the priesthood of his sons.

9957. 'They shall officiate to Me in the priesthood' (Ex. xxviii.41)=a representative of the Lord as to all the work of Salvation from the Divine Human. Ex.

9985. The glorification of the Lord as to the Human is signified by the inauguration of Aaron and his sons into the priesthood. Tr.

9989. 'To officiate to Me in the priesthood' (Ex. xxix.1)=all the work of Salvation by Him. 'The priest-hood'=a representative of the Lord as to the work of Salvation.

10017. 'They shall have the priesthood' (ver.9)=the Lord as to all the work of Salvation in successive order. (For) the priesthood represented by Aaron, is the work of the Salvation of those in the Celestial Kingdom, which Kingdom is properly meant by 'the kingdom of priests;' the priesthood represented by his sons, is the work of the Salvation of those in the Spiritual Kingdom proximately proceeding from the Celestial Kingdom . . .

and the priesthood represented by the Levites, is the Lord's work of Salvation proceeding again from the former.

—². The work of the Salvation of those in celestial good, is represented by the priesthood of Aaron; the work of the Salvation of those in spiritual good, is represented by the priesthood of the sons of Aaron; and the work of the Salvation of those who are thence in natural good, is represented by the priesthood of the Levites . . .

10019. There were two things through which inauguration into the priesthood was effected: anointing, and the filling of the hand. By the anointing was effected inauguration to represent the Lord as to Divine good . . . and by the filling of the hand . . . as to Divine truth from Divine good. Ex.

—³. For by the priesthood was signified all the Lord's work of salvation.

10040². It is of the Divine Providence that the Catholic priest drinks up the wine. Ex.

10152. '(I will sanctify) Aaron and his sons to officiate in the priesthood to Me' (Ex. xxix.44)=a representative of the Lord in both (the lower and the higher Heavens) as to the work of Salvation. Ex.

10279. The priesthood of Aaron and his sons=the Lord's work of Salvation in successive order. 10348.

10793. Governors over those things with men which are of Heaven, or over ecclesiastical things, are called priests; and their office, the priesthood.

10794. As concerns priests, they must teach men the way to Heaven, and also lead them. They must teach them according to the doctrine of their own Church, and must lead them to live according to it. The priests who teach truths, and, through them, lead to the good of life, and thus to the Lord, are good shepherds of the sheep; but those who teach, and do not lead to the good of life, and thus to the Lord, are evil shepherds. The latter are called by the Lord 'thieves and robbers' (John x.7-16).

10795. Priests must not claim for themselves any Power over the souls of men; because they do not know in what state are the interiors of a man; still less must they claim Power to open and close Heaven, because this Power belongs to the Lord alone.

10798. Priests must teach the people, and must lead through truths to the good of life; but still they must force no one, because no one can be forced to believe contrary to that which he has thought from the heart to be true. He who believes differently from the priest, and does not make disturbances, must be left in peace. But he who makes disturbances must be separated; for this also is of the order for the sake of which is the priesthood.

10799. As priests are governors to administer the things which are of Divine law and worship. . .

H. 24. The Celestial Kingdom is called also the Lord's Sacerdotal.

74². Such a belief (about Angels and Spirits) reigns with the learned, and also . . . with priests.

226. All the preachers (in the Heavens) are constituted by the Lord . . . They are called preachers, and not priests. The reason they are not called priests, is that the priesthood of Heaven is the Celestial Kingdom; for the priesthood=the good of love to the Lord, in which are those who are in that Kingdom.

J. 63. Priests from the Reformed were sent to instruct (the good Papists).

C. J. 40^o. The English there have given them priests of great learning and ability . . . J.(Post.)8.

L. 16⁶. That the Lord was condemned by the chiefs of the priests, and by the elders=that He was condemned by all that Church. T.130².

S. 44. By Aaron's priesthood was represented the Lord as to Divine good, and as to the work of Salvation. T.218.

Life 39. That good loves truth, may be illustrated by comparison with a priest. A priest, if he is in the good of the priesthood, which is to provide for the salvation of souls, to teach the way to Heaven, and to lead those whom he teaches, in proportion as he is in this good, he from love and its desire procures for himself the truths which teach, and through which he leads. But a priest who is not in the good of the priesthood, but in the delight of his function from the love of self and of the world . . . also from love and its desire procures for himself those things in abundance according to the delight . . .

72. A man a priest, who is in the good of love towards the neighbour, whenever he teaches and leads, does a good work, because from the love of saving souls.

P. 109. Such are the priests who at heart make nothing of the neighbour, and do not fear God; and yet preach about the love of the neighbour, and the love of God.

197. Such are priests, especially, who love themselves above God, and the world above Heaven; or, what is the same, who worship God for the sake of the honours and gains, and yet have preached that charity and faith, all good and truth, also all wisdom, nay, prudence, are from God, and nothing from man.

—². Two priests disputing with an ambassador about human prudence . . . The priests, being then in theological zeal, said that nothing of (it) is from man . . . The Angels said to the ambassador, Put on the garments of a priest, and believe yourself to be a priest, and then speak . . . They afterwards said to the priests, Put off your garments . . . (The result.) M.354.

235^e. They may be angry with the defenders of the Divine Providence, provided they are not priests . . .

291. Therefore a priest who believes himself to preach from holy zeal, prays that the Holy Spirit may teach him . . . and, when his preachings are praised, he piously replies that he has spoken not from himself, but from God.

R. 8⁶. 'Prophets,' and 'priests,' in these places . . . mean the universal Church . . . 'Priests' mean it as to the good of life.

20. 'Hath made us kings and priests'=who gives that those who have been . . . regenerated, are in wisdom from Divine truths, and in love from Divine goods. . . 'Priests' is said from Divine love; and therefore those who are in . . . love from the Lord, are called 'ministers,' and 'priests.' Ill. 283. 284.

—². The Celestial Kingdom is what is called the Lord's 'priesthood;' and, as all who are there, are in love from goods, they are meant by 'the priests' which the Lord will make those to be, who are in love from Him.

21⁴. It is fitting for a priest to be present and minister at a wedding on earth: but not in the Heavens, on account of the representation of the Lord Himself and the Church . . . But even (there) a priest administers at betrothals; and hears, receives, confirms, and consecrates the consent. Consent is the essential of marriage . . .

24. After they had congregated, the priest ascended the pulpit, and preached a sermon full of the spirit of wisdom. Des. He added a votive prayer, and descended. As the hearers were going out, the Angel asked the priest to speak a few words of peace with his ten companions . . .

[M.] 182¹. (A priest narrates how his order received the statements of Swedenborg regarding the other life.)

266. The high priest of the heavenly Society was clothed in a woollen gown—toga—refulgent with flaming crimson, and in a tunic of resplendent linen beneath it. He said that he was the minister of the Church there, because in being of service to them he ministered holy things for the uses of their souls; and that both (he and the Prince) were in perpetual joys from the eternal happiness which is in them from the Lord; and that all things in that Society are splendid and magnificent . . . for the reason that their love of dominating is not from the love of self, but from the love of uses . . . Fully Ex.

T. 79¹. He looked to see whether any priest was present . . .

—⁵. The priest said . . . —⁷.

—⁸. They turned themselves away from the priest.

106. (The state) of every student who is being initiated into the ministry before he becomes a priest; and of a priest before he becomes a pastor; and of a pastor before he becomes a primate.

114. That in the Lord there are two offices, the sacerdotal, and the royal, is known in the Church . . . From the sacerdotal office, the Lord is called 'Jesus' . . . and also 'Jehovah,' and 'Lord' . . . These two offices are distinguished from each other as are love and wisdom . . . and therefore whatever the Lord has done and operated from Divine love or Divine good, He has done and operated from His sacerdotal office . . . In the Word, also, 'priest,' and 'priesthood,' = Divine good . . . This was represented by the priests in the Israelitish Church. Redemption pertains to both offices.

134². Then a priest came, and said . . . The Angel was transfixed with astonishment.

—⁵. The priest understood the things said by the Angel . . . and then he groaned, and said, What is to be done? All at this day so preach . . . The Angel said, I have observed that the priests prepare eye-salve from the Word not interiorly understood, which they put on the eyes blinded by their faith . . . therefore go to him who stands there—and he pointed at me—and he will teach you from the Lord . . .

138. All of the Holy Order . . . are first instructed there concerning the Divine Trinity, and especially concerning the Holy Spirit . . .

185³. (A priest in the arctic regions there: his sermon, and forms of worship: a conversation with him after the sermon.)

318. Priests who minister solely for . . . gain or honour; and who teach such things as they see or might see from the Word not to be true, are spiritual thieves; because they deprive the people of the means of salvation, which are the truths of faith. These are also called 'thieves.' Ill. 320^e.

380⁴. If they are priests, they are like pirates at sea . . .

415. It is not meant that the priesthood is to be loved . . . and the Church from it; but that the good and truth of the Church is to be loved, and the priesthood for its sake: this latter is of service only, and is to be honoured in proportion as it is of service.

422². A priest who teaches truths from the Word, and through them leads to the good of life, and thus to Heaven, as he consults for the souls of the men of his Church, eminently exercises charity.

441². Like these are priests who perform the duties of their ministry solely for the sake of the emoluments.

504³. Does not the priesthood at this day teach from the Word that . . .

508². The pulpit in that temple signified the priesthood and preachings.

666². A priest who has a spiritual willingness to teach truths for the sake of the end that his flock may be saved, has conscience; but he who [acts] for the sake of any other reason as the end has not conscience.

D. 2696^e. What a priest signifies in a lower sense.

3421^e. Hence, perhaps, it happens, that priests as it were at once change their mind when they become priests, and become more unmerciful than all others.

3462. As he was a priest, and priests are wont to shield each other, however flagitious . . . he was delivered into the company of priests, who wanted to shield him, because he was a priest; from their false opinion that unless priests are shielded, the priesthood will suffer . . . From this may be evident what is the quality of priests in general, thus of their bishops . . . that from this assumed false principle they are willing to defend the most wicked, and so allow the Lord's Church to suffer, rather than admit that the most wicked man be removed from the priesthood, when yet it is to have the care of souls, and not of a criminal, who may thus seduce and pervert whole congregations, and precipitate them to Hell. But such things are cared not for by most priests and their bishops, indulging in their worldly and corporeal things, and thinking not a whit about the Church and the salvation of souls. While I write these things, they have acknowledged that they are such, and, being somewhat ashamed, recede.

3519. (The Dutch) call their priests worldly priests. Ex.

3597. Priests and leaders especially inspire others with this unseasonable compassion—that they must live if the whole world should perish. . . Such are represented by a priest clothed in a black garment . . .

4227. They are tenacious of revenge, as for the most part are the priests who are in such faith.

4543^e. I was told to reflect on the quality of such as are priests . . .

4757^e. Two (of these naturalists) were priests.

4841. In a dream I seemed to be in the company of many priests . . .

4904. There were some who have rejected the priestly office, saying that the priesthood is universal, thus with all. Some of these have read the Word quite diligently, but, as they have lived evilly, they have seized upon abominable dogmas thence. Of these there are many. These, too, have been cast down from Heaven, but at the back, because they have preached clandestinely . . .

5532. Visitation on the Protestant priests at the Last Judgment . . .

5533. When they become priests, they do indeed read the Word, and know it; but still care no more for it than that they may preach from it. Des.

5723. I saw a great number of priests carried off from Heaven . . .

6027¹⁰. See MARRIAGE, here.

6094. Why inaugurations into the priesthood are effected through the touch of the hand upon the head.

6101⁴. How other (English) priests were subordinated to destroy (the Writings).

—⁵. All those priests were brought forward and were judged according to their own doctrine and life according thereto.

6104. Many priests were convoked, and divided, and the simple ones removed; and the learned interrogated as to the quality of their faith . . .

E. 31. 'Hath made us kings and priests' = that from Him we are in His Spiritual and Celestial Kingdom.

—⁵. 'Priests' = those in the good of love; (thus) those in the Celestial Kingdom. —⁸.

—^e. That the priests who do not acknowledge the Lord = the contrary. Ref.

155⁴. 'Ye shall be called the priests of Jehovah, the ministers of our God' (Is. lxi. 6). The priests are called 'ministers' because they represented the Lord as to the good of love. Hence those in the good of love are called 'priests.' Refs.

—⁵. The Lord's Celestial Kingdom is called His 'priesthood.'

205. By 'the priests' in the Word was represented the Lord as to Divine good.

219². 'Priests' (Jer. i. 18) = adulterated goods.

229⁴. By Levi was represented the good of charity, and therefore this tribe was made the priesthood; and the priesthood is the first of the Church.

235⁷. 'Priest and prophet' (Is. xxviii. 7) = those who teach goods and truths; and, in the abstract sense, the goods and truths of the Church.

237³. 'The priest' (Ezek. vii. 26) = one who teaches.

—⁴. 'His priests and princes together' (Jer. xlix. 3) = the goods and truths of life and doctrine.

329²⁵. 'Priests' (Lam. iv. 13) = those who lead through truths to good; here, in the opposite.

332. 'Hath made us to our God kings and priests' = that they, from the Lord, are in the truths and goods of the Church and of Heaven.

375¹³. That they anointed those who officiated in the priesthood, and also their garments. Ill.

—⁴. That the priesthood in general represented the Lord as to the work of His Salvation. Ref.

376³¹. 'The priest and the prophet err through strong drink . . .' (Is. xxviii. 7) = that those who ought to be in the doctrine of good and truth are such; and, abstractedly from persons, that their doctrine itself is such . . . 'Priest and prophet' = the doctrine of good and truth.

—³⁴. 'Priests' (Jer. xiii. 13) = those in Divine goods; 'prophets,' those in doctrine.

412²³. 'Priests' represented the Lord as to Divine good; and thence signified the good of the Church.

444². As this affection (charity) is the very essential of the Church, the tribe of Levi was made the priesthood.

—³. The reason the priesthood was given to that tribe, was that it represented love and charity . . . The like is signified in the Word by their 'priesthood' and 'ministry.' —⁷, Ill. —¹².

—¹⁴. 'The priest' (in the parable of the man who fell among thieves) = those who have no love to the Lord; and 'the Levite,' those who have no charity towards the neighbour.

475³. When Aaron and his sons were being inaugurated into the priesthood . . .

—⁴. The priests represented the Divine Holiness, which is pure without a blemish. Rep.

527⁵. See MINISTER, here.

624¹⁷. 'Priest' and 'prophet' are often mentioned together; and by 'priest' is meant one who leads to live according to Divine truth; and by 'prophet,' one who teaches it. Ill. —¹⁸.

—¹⁸. In the abstract sense, by 'priests,' and 'the priesthood' is meant the good of love, consequently also the good of life; and by 'prophets,' the truth of doctrine, consequently the truth which leads to the good of life. In a word, prophets teach; and priests lead.

637¹⁰. 'Priests' = the goods of the Church; and 'princes,' the truths thence.

659²². 'Princes' = principal truths; 'priests,' the goods of doctrine; 'prophets,' the truths of doctrine.

684²⁸. 'Thy priests clothed with justice' (Ps. cxxxii. 9) = worship from love with those in celestial good; for 'priests' = those in the Celestial Kingdom. 700¹⁰.

[E.] 700³⁰. Uzzah had not been anointed, as were the priests and Levites. Ex.

734¹⁴. (Thus) the priesthood is a warfare; but a warfare against falsities and evils.

750¹². 'Priests' = those who teach good; 'elders,' those who teach truth.

831^e. The higher Heavens, where are the celestial Angels, constitute the Lord's priesthood; for His priesthood is Divine good.

863². 'Her priests groan; her virgins are sad' (Lam. i.4) = that the affections of good and the affections of truth are destroyed.

—⁶. 'Her priests have fallen by the sword' (Ps. lxxviii.64) = that the goods of the Church, which are the goods of works, of charity, and of life, have been destroyed through falsities.

1007. From all conjunction of evil and falsity in the Spiritual World there flows forth a sphere of adultery . . . This flows forth especially from priests who have taught falsely and lived evilly; for these have adulterated and falsified the Word. From these . . . adultery is excited; but the adultery which is called sacerdotal adultery . . . De Conj. 18. 82, Gen. art.

1034³. The Lord is called a 'priest,' from Divine good.

1187². With a priest whose principal end is the love of money or possessions, the means are the ministry, the Word, doctrine, erudition, preaching from these, and through them the instruction of the men of the Church, and their reformation and salvation. These means are esteemed by him from the end and for the sake of the end; but still are not loved; although with some it appears as if they were loved . . .

—³. It is the like with a priest whose principal end is the love of eminence above others . . .

— . But, if the instruction, reformation, and salvation of souls is the principal end, and opulence and eminence are the means, then the man priest is quite different, for he is spiritual, whereas the former one is natural. With a spiritual priest, opulence and eminence are blessings; but with a natural one they are curses. (From experience, and Ill.)

D. Love xiii². The Church, Country, society, and the citizen, thus the neighbour, are loved by a priest, if he teaches and leads them from a zeal for the salvation (or health) of their souls.

xvii³. There are in the world . . . priests, leaders of the ministry, who preach with ardour as if from zeal . . . and who thereby perform eminent uses for the Church . . . many of whom do this from mere natural affection, which is for the sake of themselves, that they may be honoured and promoted to dignities, or for the sake of the world, that they may acquire gain and become rich. These ends with some so kindle the affection to perform uses, that sometimes they perform more eminent uses than those who are in the spiritual affection of use . . .

C. 160. Charity with a priest.—If he looks to the Lord, and shuns evils as sins, and does sincerely, justly, and faithfully, the work of the ministry enjoined upon him, he does the good of use continually, and becomes a charity in form. And he does the good of use, or the work of the ministry, sincerely, justly, and faithfully, when the salvation (or health) of souls affects him. And, in proportion as this affects him, truths affect him, because through them he leads souls to Heaven; and he then leads souls through truths to Heaven, when he leads them to the Lord. His love then is sedulously to teach those truths from the Word; because, when he teaches them from the Word, he teaches them from the Lord. Ill.

174. The externals of the body which are of worship, are . . . with priests, also to preach, and to teach privately.

1850⁴. After this, a new Heaven and a new earth were created, namely, a new Church, which is to be called the Primitive Church, which was begun by the Lord, and was afterwards successively strengthened, and which at first was in charity and faith. The destruction of this Church is foretold by the Lord in the Evangelists, and by John in the Apocalypse, which destruction is what is called 'the Last Judgment;' (when) a New Church will be raised up in some country, this one remaining in its external worship, as the Jews do in theirs . . .

[A.] 2341³. In the Primitive Church the Holy Supper was called a feast.

2417³. Such was the Primitive Church or that of the gentiles after the Lord's Advent: this, in its beginning, had no other doctrinal than that of love and charity; for this was taught by the Lord Himself; but, successively, after His time, as love and charity began to grow cold, the doctrinal of faith commenced, and, with it, dissensions and heresies, which increased in proportion as they leaned on this doctrinal.

Prior. Prior.

Priority. Prioritas.

A. 1910^e. There is nothing which . . . is not composite, and which does not come forth from what is prior to itself. 9128³. 9473. H.9. W.303.

3219^e. It is contrary to order for the posterior to inflow into the prior . . .

3324². The good itself which is of life is prior (to truth).

—³. The priority is in good, and not in truth. Ex.

3325. That as to time the doctrine of truth was apparently prior. Sig. and Ex.

—². By prior, or the priority, which is signified by 'birthright,' is meant not only priority of time, but also priority of degree . . .

349S. Exteriors depend on interiors, as posteriors on priors . . .

3603². What the apparent priority of truth is. 3607³.

—³. Thus good becomes in the prior place . . . 3607³.

4009^e. As, in the Sensuous, as in the ultimate of order, prior things are together . . .

4489⁴. The internal or prior way . . . The external or posterior way.

4523³. Everything in the world comes forth . . . from what is prior to itself; and this prior . . . from what is prior to itself . . .

4667². The Rational is higher, or interior; or according to the wonted formula, prior; and the Natural is lower or exterior, consequently, posterior.

4994. That this good is prior in time, not in state. Sig.

— . Natural good not spiritual is prior in time; and spiritual natural good is prior in state. . . To be prior in state is to be more eminent as to quality.

5122^e. For the prior has regard to what is sequent in a continual series; and produces series of consequences to eternity.

5373³. Prior things must be in ultimates in order to come forth and appear in that sphere; and besides, all prior things tend to ultimates . . . and therein come forth together; like causes in their effects . . .

5377. Without correspondence with the Grand Man . . . nothing would have connection with what is prior to itself . . .

—². When the prior is taken away, the posterior necessarily falls; in like manner if the prior is separated from the posterior.

5413^e. It is a general law . . . that the prior can subsist with its own prior; but not without it with the posterior. Ex.

6040. The Natural perceives . . . from what is prior to itself; and (this) prior perceives from what is prior still to itself . . .

6280^e. 'Former years' (Mal.iii.4)=the states of the Ancient Church.

6465. Thus posterior things come forth by formations from prior ones. Hence it is that . . . the posterior depends on the prior, inasmuch that it cannot subsist without the prior; for the posterior is kept in its connection and form by the prior. (Thus) also in the posterior are all the prior things in their order.

6484. He continued there his former life, as do all.

8714^e. Intermediates are . . . between things in a prior degree and those in a posterior one; for the sake of conjunction.

9135. The prior and posterior states of regeneration. Ex.

9224². The right of priority and superiority (of truth) over the good of charity; yet the (latter) is actually prior . . .

[A.] 1009¹. The Spiritual and the Natural are distinct as are the prior and the posterior . . .

10614². As the prior is in the posterior successively . . .

H. 38². Discrete degrees are discriminated as are the prior and the posterior . . .

S. 7. These three degrees are distinguished from each other as are . . . the prior, the posterior, and the postreme; but they make a one by correspondences. W.184².

W. 90². (The communication between the two worlds is not as) between purer and grosser; but as between prior and posterior . . .

119². Causes are prior, and effects posterior; and prior things cannot be seen from posterior ones; but posterior ones from prior.

185^e. The difference (between cause and effect) is as between the prior and the posterior, or as between that which forms and that which is formed.

204. It appears as if prior things must be less perfect than posterior ones, or simples than composites; yet prior things, out of which posterior ones are formed . . . are the more perfect. The reason is that the prior or simpler are more naked, and less covered over with substances and matters devoid of life; and are as it were more Divine . . .

—^e. For all that is prior, the more prior it is . . . being more perfect . . . is the more exempt from injury.

208. For every ultimate consists of prior things, and these of their primes.

340. The Spiritual World is distinct from the natural as is the prior from the posterior . . .

P. 157⁵. There is nothing but what is from what is prior to itself; and this from what is still prior to it; and so at last from the first, which is in Itself. I.11⁴. E.349⁵.

M. 31. They know no other than that they are in the former world . . .

—². The difference between the substantial and the material is like that between the prior and the posterior; and the prior, being in itself purer, cannot appear to the posterior, which in itself is grosser; nor can the posterior . . . appear to the prior . . . consequently an Angel cannot appear to a man, nor a man to an Angel.

326³. He said, What is the Spiritual unless it is a purer Natural? I replied, The difference is not such; but is such as is between the prior and the posterior, between which there is no finite proportion; for the prior is in the posterior as the cause in its effect; and the posterior is from the prior as the effect from its cause. Hence it is that the one does not appear to the other.

T. 33². All posteriors are (thus) receptacles of priors, and these of priors yet, and so in order of the primitives of which the (spiritual) Sun consists . . .

Ad. 633. Interiors, or priors, so called, because they are nearer to their first.

D. 1836. Posteriors acknowledge their priors as parents from which they come forth and subsist.

5615. As ultimates are directed by the Lord from priors, so on the other hand are priors from ultimates. —^e.

739⁷. To view the world by a prior way . . . is to view it from the light of Heaven.

795. What the prior and posterior are. Ex. . . (Thus) charity is actually prior, and faith posterior . . . as that which produces is essentially prior to that which is produced; and as esse is prior to existere . . .

1125². The distinction (between the degrees of life) is like that between priors and posteriors; for a posterior degree comes forth from the prior one; (and) that which is of a prior degree is less general . . . D.Love xi.².

A. 2417⁸. (Those 'in prison' a class of the neighbour.)

4956². The bound, or those 'in prison' (Matt.xxv.)= those who acknowledge that there is nothing but falsity in them.

5036. 'He put him in the house of the prison' (Gen. xxxix.20)=as to false speaking against good; for 'to put into the house of the prison' and keep him bound there=to let into temptations as to false speaking against good. Ex. 5037, Ex.

5037. What is called 'the house of the prison' is all that place which is proximately below the soles of the foot and round about, where those are kept who are in vastation; that is, who have been in principles of falsity and in a life of evil from falsity, and yet in good as to their intentions. Ex. . . The place where they are, or rather the state in which they are, is signified in general by 'the house of the prison;' and the places themselves by 'pits.' —², Ill.

—². 'Prison' is here expressed by another word in the Original Language.

—³. The truths of faith are said to be 'in houses of prisons' (Is.xlii.22) when they are no longer acknowledged.

5043^e. 'The house of the prison'=the vastation of falsity; thus temptation. 5044.

5085. 'The house of the prison'=among falsities. 5096.

5246². A state of temptation, relatively to the state after it, is like the state of a pit, or prison, squalid and unclean. Ex.

6144². When they come out of that state they are like those condemned to death liberated from prison.

6621. My thought was as it were held in prison . . .

7260. They called those 'in prison' to whom they ought to come.

R. 856. 'Satan shall be loosed out of his prison' (Rev.xx.7)= that all who had confirmed with themselves the falsities of faith should be let out.

D. Min. 4585. All who are kept bound by evil are 'in prison;' as they know . . .

E. 122. Those in the spiritual affection of truth . . . are detained in such a prison whenever they do not understand the Word, and yet want to understand it. Ex.

239⁸. That they are to be brought out of ignorance and falsities, is signified by 'to lead the bound out of the prison' (Is.xlii.7).

811¹². Jeremiah 'delivered into the prison' (Jer.xx. xxvii.) represented that the like would be done with the Church and its doctrine, which is signified by the whole of Judah being carried away into the Babylonish captivity.

1015^e. By 'the prison' (Matt.v.25) is meant Hell.

J. (Post.) 230. In such a prison are kept all, both men and women, who have lived evilly; that is, have given the reins to sins; and, before they come there, everything which they had learned from the Word is taken away from them . . . and also the Knowledge of whom they had been in the world . . .

10517. (The Spirits of the Third Earth) are upright, so that they may be called probities. Des.

C. J. 54. Calvin is upright . . . D. 6041. De Just. 63.

M. 164. The virtues which pertain to the moral wisdom of the men are called probity, etc.

T. 145. A man who is honourable, upright, pious, and religious . . .

D. 2683^e. Within, there are inseminated by the Lord, mercy, charity, probity, piety, justice . . .

2919. Concerning probity from fear.

— True probity and goodness are of the Lord, and are manifested by this: that he wills well to all. (The others) can be kept in the probity of fear; nay, this probity can be increased even to the adoring of the Lord; but, as soon as they are beyond fear, they return to wickedness.

2943. Evil Spirits can be kept in . . . a sphere of probity . . .

— Yet the sphere of probity and goodness comes from the Lord . . .

3074. On the sphere of the opinion of probity.

3167. The sphere of this dignity is so conjoined with that of probity and goodness . . .

4384. How the evil states of the upright return in the other life. Ex.

4418. Augustus was an upright man . . .

4881. They make nothing of a life of probity.

D. Min. 4727. On those who have acquired reputation by external probity.

E. 342⁴. They had been sensuous in the world, yet upright . . .

624². Two kinds of men upon whom the Judgment is executed; one consists of the upright, the other of the wicked—improbis. The upright are Angels in the Ultimate Heaven, most of whom are simple . . .

Problem. Problema. M.315². T.697.

Proceed. Procedere.

See PROCESSION; and under HOLY SPIRIT, and TRINITY.

A. 2149. 'The three men'=the proceeding Holy, etc.

2245^e. When the Human was conjoined with the Divine, the Proceeding was also together with them.

2288^e. Thus He rules the universe from the Divine Itself and the Human Divine through the proceeding Holy.

2319. 'The two Angels'=the Lord's Divine Human and proceeding Holy, to which belong Judgment.

2320. 2321, Ex.

2320^e. That the Holy proceeds from the Lord. Sig.

2321. The Holy itself proceeding from the Lord's Divine Human is what separates the evil from the good. Ex.

2329³. Consequently the Divine Human and proceeding Holy are Jehovah. Ill.

—⁴. All the Holy which is of the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Lord.

2332². The Lord miraculously moderates and tempers the Holy which proceeds from Him.

2343². (These things He does) through His Divine Human and proceeding Holy.

2993. Natural things proceed thence according to all the differences of truth and good . . .

3207². Good itself is holy, because it is the Divine which proceeds from the Lord . . .

3704^e. The Holy Spirit is the . . . Holy which proceeds from the Lord through Spirits or Angels; that is, from His Divine good through the Divine truth.

3938². The esse of man is . . . the recipient of the Eternal which proceeds from the Lord.

—³. Existere can (now) be predicated of the Lord only as a certain Proceeding from Him. That which proceeds from Him is that which appears as the existere in Him.

3956³. This union (the heavenly marriage) proceeds from Him.

3969¹⁶. But from the Divine good proceeds the Divine truth: (just as) light is not in the sun, but proceeds from it . . .

—¹⁷. The Divine Spiritual which proceeds from the Lord, is called 'the Spirit of Truth,' and is Holy Truth.

3997. For all spiritual and celestial good proceeds from the Divine Holy of the Lord.

4091. For whatever the Lord provides, proceeds from Him; and whatever proceeds from Him is holy.

4126². A spiritual sphere which proceeds from the other (Spirit).

4180². Divine good and Divine truth continually proceed from the Lord . . .

—⁵. As the Divine truth proceeds from the Divine Human, and not from the Divine Itself . . .

4252a. The Holy which proceeds from the Divine. Sig.

4299³. From the Lord proceeds nothing but holy good and truth and mercy. 4307.

4381. 'I will proceed slowly' (Gen.xxxiii.14)=a successive state of preparation.

4577². After the Lord was glorified, from Him as from Divine good proceeded and proceeds Divine truth . . .

4669. Joseph represents the Divine Spiritual which proceeds from His Divine Human . . .

4687³. This is the Very Thing Itself from which truth Divine now proceeds and inflows into Heaven.

4692⁴. For the Divine Existing is the Divine itself proceeding from the Divine Esse, and, in an image, is a Man.

4724². All the Divine truth in the universal Heaven proceeds from no other source than the Lord's Divine Human . . .

—³. (Thus) the Divine truth does not proceed immediately from the Divine Itself . . .

4735. All the Holy in Heaven proceeds from the Lord's Divine Human, and thence all the Holy in the Church.

—⁴. For the Divine truth proceeding from His Divine Human is the Holy itself. —⁷.

—⁷. The Holy which proceeds from the Lord is 'the Spirit.'

4809³. For the Angels are recipients of the truth proceeding from the Lord's Divine good.

4973⁵. The Divine truth (now) proceeds from the Divine good.

4980². The Spiritual in its essence is the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord . . . 6685.

4997. All the good which proceeds from the Lord.

5044⁵. The Angels perceive that which proceeds from the Lord . . .

5117⁹. Spiritual celestial good: so is called the Divine in Heaven proceeding from the Lord.

5256. That which proceeds from (the Divine Human) is life.

5307. 'The Spirit of God' is that which proceeds from the Divine; thus from good itself; for the Divine is good itself, and that which proceeds from it, is truth in which is good. . . The Spirit itself does not proceed; but the truth itself in which is good; that is, the holy truth . . .

5321². Nothing of doctrine can proceed from the Divine Itself, except through the Divine Human; that is, through the Word . . . That which proceeds from the Divine Itself immediately cannot be apprehended even by the Angels in the Highest Heaven ; because it is infinite . . . But that which proceeds from the Lord's Divine Human can be apprehended.

[A.] 5337. 'To go forth,' or proceed, in the spiritual sense, is to present one's self before another in a form accommodated to him . . . Ill.

—². Thus it is said that truth proceeds from good, when it is the form of good ; or when truth is good in a form which the understanding can apprehend. (So) the understanding proceeds from the will, when it is the will formed . . . (So) thought proceeds, when it becomes speech ; and the will, when it becomes action. Ex. (So) the external man proceeds from the internal, and that substantially ; because it is nothing else than the internal man so formed that it may act in a suitable manner . . . (Thus) to 'go forth,' or proceed, when predicated of the Lord, is the Divine formed as a man ; and thus accommodated to the perception of believers.

5689. For the medium proceeds from the Celestial of the Spiritual . . .

—². That which proceeds from anything derives its essence from that from which it proceeds . . .

6148³. There are two things which proceed from the Lord, namely, good and truth. . . The good and truth which proceed from the Lord are united . . . They proceed united. —⁵.

6179. For that which proceeds from the Lord is the Divine truth from Divine good.

6280. The Divine Human from eternity is what is called 'Sent,' or 'Angel,' by which is meant the proceeding ; for this is the same as Angel.

—³. The Divine Human which is in Heaven is the Divine truth which proceeds from Him, which is the light from Him as a Sun. Ex.

6338. The Universal which proceeds from the Lord effects this. —, Ex.

6373^e. The Lord came into the world . . . in order that the Divine truth might proceed from His Divine Human itself . . .

6374. That from His Divine Human should proceed truths which can be received. Sig.

6845. See HOLY, here. 6864.

6870. Knowledge that the Divine should proceed from Himself. Sig.

—. 'To be sent' = to proceed ; thus 'to be sent by God' = to proceed from the Divine, and also = the Divine proceeding from Him ; for that which proceeds from the Divine, receives the Divine, and advances it further. 10561^e.

6880^e. The Divine truth proceeding from the Lord is the veriest reality . . . for whatever proceeds from Him is the veriest reality in the universe.

6948. The power proceeding from His Divine Natural. Sig.

—. 'To throw forth' = proceeding ; thus influx.

7004. That the things he utters proceed from the Divine Human. Sig. and Ex.

—. 'To put in the mouth,' when predicated of the Lord, = to proceed ; for the Word which is uttered by a Spirit or Angel, proceeds from the Lord's Divine Human.

—². The Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord immediately and mediately. (See DIVINE TRUTH, here.) 7270². —³.

7005. That truth Divine must proceed through the Divine Human from the Divine Itself. Sig.

7055. With man there can be truth proceeding mediately from the Divine which is not conjoined with the truth which proceeds immediately. Examps.

7167^e. The Divine Law is the truth Divine proceeding from the Lord ; and that which proceeds from Him is Divine good and truth . . .

7200^e. For the truths of faith and the goods of love proceed from the Lord ; and the things which proceed from Him are of Him insomuch that they are Himself.

7499. Divine truth proceeds from Divine good, as the Son from the Father, and is also said to be 'born.' Ex.

7499². After the Lord had fully glorified Himself . . . the Divine truth itself proceeded from His Divine Human. This Divine truth is what is called 'the Holy Spirit.'

8337. Moses = the truth of faith which proceeds immediately from the Lord ; thus internal truth ; Aaron, the truth of faith which proceeds mediately from Him ; thus external truth ; and hence Miriam = the good of faith which proceeds mediately from Him.

8472. The Divine good which proceeds from the Lord, communicates with all in Heaven . . .

8704. Truth proceeding immediately. Sig. 8705.

8864³. Truths which are truths all proceed from Him ; and the things which proceed from Him are Himself.

9262². From proprium, nothing but what is evil and false proceeds.

9303. For the Divine Human proceeds from Jehovah as the Father . . . and the proceeding from the Father is the Divine truth from that Divine good ; thus is the Divine Existere from the Divine Esse ; and is signified by 'Angel.'

—². It is said in the Church that from the Father proceeds the Son ; and that from the Father through the Son proceeds the Holy Spirit ; but what it is to proceed or go forth is as yet unknown. . . They say that to proceed is a word of union (but they really have no idea what it means). —³.

—⁴. The idea of the Angels of what to proceed means. Ex.

9405. The Word is the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord ; and that which proceeds from the Lord is the Lord Himself.

9407¹². That Divine truth is the Lord Himself, is evident from the fact, that whatever proceeds from anyone is himself : For instance, that which proceeds from a man when he is speaking or acting, is from his Voluntary and Intellectual ; and (these) make the man's life ; thus the man himself. . . Hence it may be evident that that which proceeds from the Lord, is the Lord ; (and) this is the Divine truth. 9503. 9682³.

—¹³. The Divine sphere which proceeds from the Lord, which is called the Divine truth, is universal . . . It appears before the eyes of the Angels as light . . .

9627. 'The redundant superfluity' = the proceeding.

9628. The ultimate of Heaven, namely, the proceeding. Sig.

9644. The truth which proceeds from the good which is from the Lord's Divine Human. Sig.

9813. 'Sons' = the things which are born from another as a father, thus which proceed.

9845^e. Goods and truths proceed in the order in which they are successively born.

9912. For to proceed is to inflow.

—². The good of charity towards the neighbour proceeds from the good of mutual love.

9961³. For that which proceeds from the Lord and inflows into the Heavens, is the good of love; and that which is received there by the Angels is the truth thence . . .

10017^e. For the things which proceed are his from whom they proceed; for the proceedents or successives derive their esse thence.

10617. The Divine Itself, the Divine Human, and the Divine proceeding. Sig. and Ex.

—². The Lord as to the Divine proceeding, is Divine truth.

10646. From the Divine nothing can proceed but the Divine.

H. 7. Still, it is the Divine which proceeds from the Lord, which inflows with the Angels, and which is received by them, which makes Heaven in general and in part. The Divine which proceeds from the Lord is the good of love and the truth of faith . . .

13. The Divine proceeding from the Lord is called in Heaven Divine truth. (Continued under DIVINE TRUTH.) 127, Ex.

17. That the Divine proceeding from the Lord, which affects the Angels, and makes Heaven, is love. Ex.

29^e. In such a (tripartite) order is the Divine which proceeds and descends from the Lord.

139. The Divine good and truth which are from the Lord as a Sun, are not in the Lord, but from the Lord. In the Lord there is only Divine love, which is the Esse from which those come forth. To come forth—existere—from esse is meant by to proceed. Ex.

140. The Divine which proceeds from the Lord . . . is called for the sake of distinction Divine truth, although it is Divine good united to Divine truth. It is this Divine truth which is called the Holy which proceeds from Him.

371. The Divine which proceeds from the Lord inflows principally into conjugal love.

— . From the Divine love proceeds Divine good; and Divine good is received by Angels and men in Divine truths . . .

460. All the good and truth which proceeds from the Lord, and makes Heaven, is in the human form . . .

472. Everyone knows that every deed and work proceeds from the man's will and thought . . .

474. Thought (makes the man) only in so far as it proceeds from the will; and the deeds or works proceed from both . . . (thus) the will is the man himself; for the things which proceed belong to, that from which they proceed. To proceed is to be produced and presented in a suitable form, so that it may be apperceived and appear.

592^e. The Divine alone, which proceeds solely from the Lord, can resist all the Hells.

C. J. 62^e. The Lord's 'heel' is the proceeding Divine in ultimates, which is the Word in the sense of the letter.

L. 2. As the Word is Divine truth, it is also the Divine proceeding; and this is not only from the Lord, but is also the Lord Himself.

32⁸. All the Divine which proceeds from Jehovah God, from its primes in Heaven to its ultimates in the world, tends into the human form.

46². There is no other Divine which proceeds from the Lord than the Divine which is Himself.

—³. (The trine in an Angel consists of) soul and body and proceeding. That which proceeds from him, is himself outside of him.

—⁴. To go out and proceed is nothing else than to illustrate and teach through Presence, which is according to the reception of the Lord.

S. 3². There are two things which proceed from the Lord: Divine love and Divine wisdom; or, what is the same, Divine good and Divine truth. 19. Life 32.

6. From the Lord proceed the Celestial, Spiritual, and Natural, one after the other. That is called the Celestial, which proceeds from His Divine love; the Spiritual, which proceeds from His Divine wisdom . . .

—². It follows that the Divine which proceeds from the Lord to its ultimates, descends through three degrees . . .

19. For the Word is the Divine Proceeding.

44⁴. In the ultimate senses of the Word is the Divine proceeding in its fulness.

100. For all the good and truth proceeding from the Lord, is, in its form, a man.

Life 32. The Divine good and Divine truth are a one in the Lord, and thence proceed as a one from Him; but they are not received as a one by Angels and men . . .

W. 57. The Divine good and Divine truth, which are God, and appear to proceed from Him, although they are in Him.

86. It is the Divine love and Divine wisdom proceeding which appear as a Sun . . .

93. That Sun is not God; but is the proceeding from the Divine love and Divine wisdom of God Man. Gen.art.

— . By that Sun . . . is meant the first proceeding from Him, which is the highest of spiritual heat . . .

94. Spiritual heat and light, which decrease in proceeding.

95. (Thus) the first proceeding of love is heat; and the first proceeding of wisdom is light.

—^e. Heat and light are proceedents; and, because they are proceedents, they are also correspondences.

[W.] 97. The first proceeding from His love and wisdom is spiritual fire, which appears . . . as a Sun.

99. That spiritual heat and light, by proceeding from the Lord as a Sun, make a one . . . Gen.art.

— . The things which proceed make a one through correspondence.

— . Thus spiritual heat is the Divine Proceeding from the Divine Esse ; and spiritual light is the Divine proceeding from the Divine Existere.

100. The heat and light which proceed from the Lord as a Sun are what, by eminence, are called the Spiritual . . . The reason (they) are called the Spiritual, is that God is called 'a Spirit'; and God as a Spirit is this Proceeding. From His own Essence itself God is called 'Jehovah'; but through this Proceeding He vivifies and illustrates Angels and men.

146. That the Divine love and Divine wisdom which proceed from the Lord as a Sun . . . are the Divine proceeding, which is the Holy Spirit. Gen.art.

— . It is called the Divine proceeding, and yet no one knows whence it is called Proceeding . . . because it has not been known that the Lord appears as a Sun, from which proceeds heat . . . and also light . . . and, so long as these things were unknown, it could not be known but that the Divine proceeding is a Divine per se . . .

—². But now . . . a just idea may be had concerning the Divine Proceeding . . . that it is one with the Lord ; but proceeds from Him as heat and light from the Sun . . .

147. As the Divine Proceeding from the Lord as a Sun is in the Light and Heat, and as light and heat inflow first into . . . the atmospheres, which are the recipients of clouds, it may be evident that just as the interiors . . . are veiled around with such clouds, so is he a receptacle of the Divine Proceeding. Ex.

148^e. Because the Lord through His Divine proceeding not only kindles the will with spiritual heat ; but also illustrates the understanding with spiritual light.

151. That the Lord created the universe . . . by the medium of the Sun, which is the first proceeding of the Divine love and Divine wisdom. Gen.art. 152. 154. 174. 176^e. 204.

158. The heat and light thence proceeding are dead.

291. That Sun . . . is called a Proceeding, because it has been produced from the Divine love and the Divine wisdom, which in themselves are substance and form, and the Divine proceeds through this.

299². For the light and heat which proceed from the Divine Sun cannot proceed into nothing, thus not into a vacuum ; but into a containant which is a subject ; and this containant is called the atmosphere . . .

P. 4. That the Divine love and Divine wisdom proceed from the Lord as a one. Gen.art.

55. The Infinite and Eternal in itself is the Divine Itself . . . But the Infinite and Eternal from itself is the proceeding, or the Lord in others . . . and this Divine is the same as the Divine Providence.

58². That the Divine proceeding effects this (marriage of good and truth) in the human race, is known from those who when infilled with the Divine proceeding, called 'the Holy Spirit,' prophesied . . .

219². Therefore from man can proceed only what is temporal ; and from the Lord what is eternal. Ex.

— . The infinite cannot proceed from the finite . . . Still, the infinite can proceed from the finite, not indeed from the finite, but from the infinite through it. And so the finite cannot proceed from the infinite . . . yet the finite can be produced from the infinite ; but this is not to proceed, but to create. . . Therefore, if from the Lord there proceeds what is finite, as is the case with many things in man, it does not proceed from the Lord, but from the man ; and it may be said [to proceed] from the Lord through the man, because it so appears. Ex.

230². As the Word is the Divine proceeding, it is 'the name of God.'

326⁶. These (precepts) are God ; for He is Himself His own Divine proceeding . . .

R. 45. 'The garment reaching down to the foot' = the Divine proceeding, which is Divine truth.

46. 'The golden girdle' = the Divine proceeding and at the same time conjoining, which is the Divine good.

961². The light of Heaven, from which their thought, and in which their discourse proceeded . . .

—³. In the Lord Jesus Christ . . . there is (also) the Divine proceeding, to which corresponds the activity in man.

— . From the Divine a quo, through the Divine Human, is the Divine proceeding.

M. 386. That two universal spheres proceed from the Lord to conserve the universe . . .

— . The Divine proceeding from the Lord is called a sphere, because . . .

—². These universal spheres proceed from the Sun . . . From the Lord through that Sun proceeds a sphere of light and heat . . . to operate . . . uses.

389. Hence whatever proceeds from the Lord is in an instant from primes in ultimates. 397.

T. 139. Like these three : soul, body, and Proceeding . . .

140^e. This Proceeding is 'the Power of the Highest.'

167. That Operations make the third essential, is because these proceed from the soul and body together ; and the things which proceed are of the same essence as those things which produce them.

652³. There actually is a sphere elevating all to Heaven which continually proceeds from the Lord . . .

778. Whatever proceeds from a man derives its essence from (his love and intelligence) . . . and therefore all things which proceed from a man, whether it be action or discourse, make the man, and are the man himself. (So with the Lord.)

D. 4442. (In that sublime idea of the Lord) the holy proceeding was all the sphere thence . . .

6045. The Divine proceeding is everywhere . . . As the Divine proceeding is also God . . .

E. 24. 'The Spirit of God' = the Divine proceeding, or Divine truth united to Divine good in Heaven and in the Church ; and (this) Divine proceeding forms and creates an Angel . . .

25. For the things which proceed from Him, are not only His, but are Himself.

27. The Divine truth proceeding from the Divine good makes Heaven . . .

65. All articles of dress = things which proceed. Ex.

—². The Lord's garments = the Divine proceeding, which is Divine truth united to Divine good . . .

84³. It is His Divine proceeding which is called 'the Spirit of Truth' . . .

96³. That which proceeds immediately from His Divine Itself does not reach man . . .

146⁶. For the Lord is Divine Love Itself, and that which proceeds from Him is Divine good united to Divine truth . . . 288³.

183¹⁴. As the Divine proceeding, which is Divine truth, inflows with men both immediately and mediately . . .

251². (Thus) the Divine proceeding from the Lord is admitted by the way of the heart . . .

288³. 'The heavens' = the Divine which proceeds from the Lord ; because the Heavens are from His Divine . . .

295². The heat (in Heaven) is the Divine good proceeding ; and the light is the Divine truth proceeding.

329¹⁴. There are two things which proceed from the Lord's Divine Human : Divine good, and Divine truth. Sig. 343.

340¹¹. 'The name of Jehovah' = the Divine proceeding, which, in general, is called Divine truth and Divine good.

343. The Divine proceeding from His Divine Human, which is Divine good united to Divine truth. Sig.

392². That the Divine proceeding is Himself. Ex.

— . This sphere is the Divine proceeding from the Lord, which, in its essence, is Divine truth.

417. The Divine proceeding from the Lord into the universal Spiritual World. Sig.

418⁴. 'To stand beside Him' = to proceed.

419. By various degrees of remission and increase of the Divine proceeding from the Lord as a Sun . . .

422¹⁵. Before the Lord's Advent, the Divine proceeded from His Divine called 'the Father ;' but this did not reach to ultimates after the Church had been vastated. 433⁶, Sig.

464. Divine good united to Divine truth is the Lord in the Heavens ; for it is the Divine proceeding, from which are all things of Heaven . . . Refs.

617²⁰. The Lord's 'flesh and blood' = the Divine proceeding from the Lord . . . For it is the Divine proceeding, which is Divine good and Divine truth, which gives eternal life to man, and causes the Lord to abide in man, and man in the Lord ; for the Lord in man is in His own Divine . . . The reason the Lord Himself is meant by ('the flesh and blood') is that the Divine proceeding is the Lord Himself in Heaven and in the Church . . . 635³.

635². For it is the Divine proceeding, which is called Divine good and Divine truth, whence are the good of love to God and the good of charity towards the neighbour, and the derivative truth of doctrine and truth of faith . . .

639. Which are Divine things proceeding from the Lord, and are His in Heaven and in the Church. Sig. and Ex.

—². For all the Esse of Heaven and of the world proceeds from the Lord ; for it is the Divine proceeding which has created and formed all things of Heaven and of the world. This Divine proceeding is called 'the Word' in John i ; and 'the Word,' there, is the Divine proceeding which is called Divine truth . . . As this extends itself on every side around the Lord as a Sun, it is properly said to 'stand before Him' . . . and this, in its essence, is the Lord in Heaven, because it is the Divine proceeding, and that which proceeds is His from whom it proceeds ; nay, it is Himself ; just as the heat and light proceeding from the sun are the sun's. Therefore, all the Angels, who are recipients of this proceeding which is called the Divine truth, turn themselves to the Lord ; and thus are continually in His presence ; for . . . the Divine proceeding looks to the Lord as its centre . . .

644²³. 'The Father in the Heavens' is the Divine proceeding ; for all who receive it are called (His) 'sons.'

665³. This Divine proceeding (which is called the Divine Truth) is what illustrates man, and is what inflows with him when he is being reformed and regenerated . . . Ill.

678³. (Thus) the light of Heaven . . . is the Divine Love proceeding.

683². For the things which proceed from Him are Himself. The Lord in Heaven is nothing else than the Divine proceeding.

688³. 'God,' in the Word, = the Divine proceeding which is called Divine truth. — .

701⁴. Conjunction is effected by Him with Him through the Divine which proceeds from Him.

—¹¹. That the Divine proceeding, which is the Divine Truth, thus the Word, is 'a covenant,' because it conjoins. Ill.

726³. And that which proceeds, produces.

—⁴. This heat . . . and light . . . are called, in special, the Divine Truth ; and this, together with the auras, which also are spiritual, is called the Divine proceeding . . . The Lord has infinite power through the Divine Proceeding, which is called, in general, the Divine Truth.

—³. Primes are what proximately proceed from Him . . .

— . But Divine power is power through the Divine proceeding, which is called the Divine Truth.

746⁹. The Lord called them 'brethren' . . . from the Divine which proceeds from Him. The reason is that all in the Heavens are receptions of the Divine which proceeds from Him ; and the Divine which proceeds from the Lord . . . is the Lord in Heaven, and also in the Church . . . In a word, the Divine proceeding, which is the Divine of the Lord in the Heavens, is the Divine born from the Lord in Heaven ; and therefore, from this Divine, the Angels, who are recipients of it, are called 'sons of God.'

[E. 746]. By 'the King,' also, who calls them 'brethren,' is signified the Divine proceeding, which, in one word, is called the Divine Truth, or the Divine Spiritual, which, in its essence, is the good of charity.

750^e. As the Divine proceeding, wherever it comes, forms an image of the Lord . . .

797. The Divine Truth proceeds from the Lord as a Sun ; and that which proceeds is His from whom it proceeds ; nay, it is Himself ; and therefore the Divine Truth . . . is the Lord in Heaven . . .

864². All the Angels . . . live according to the laws of order, which are His precepts ; that is, they live in the Divine which proceeds from the Lord, which is called the Divine Truth. As they live thus, they live in a heavenly aura, or in a heavenly ether . . .

888. 'The Lamb'=the Divine Human of the Lord ; here, the Divine proceeding from the Lord, which is Divine good united to Divine truth in the Heavens.

926³. It is said that they are from a spiritual origin, because they come forth from the Divine which proceeds from the Lord as a Sun ; and the Divine proceeding from the Lord as a Sun is the Spiritual. Ex. . . That which proceeds, in general, appears as light, and is felt as heat . . .

926⁴. It is the Divine proceeding from the Lord, which is called Divine good and Divine truth, from which are all the love and all the wisdom the Angels have . . . consequently (these) are the Lord with them.

941. For that which proceeds from anyone, is himself.

972. The Infinite Existere, which also is the Eternal, is the Divine proceeding . . .

1071^e. The Divine Truth proceeding from Him is 'the Spirit of Truth,' which goes forth and proceeds from Him and at the same time from the Father in Him.

1077². The Word is the Divine proceeding from the Lord, which is Divine good and Divine truth reciprocally united.

—³. From this reciprocal union of the Divine and the Human in the Lord proceeds the reciprocal union of Divine good and Divine truth, which proceeds from the Divine Love . . .

1092. 'An Angel descending from Heaven'=the Divine proceeding from the Lord in Heaven and in the world.

1111³. The Esse of an Angel is . . . his soul ; his Existere is . . . his body, and the Procedere from both is that which is called the sphere of his life. Without this last, the Angel cannot exist.

—⁴. The Divine called 'the Father,' and the Divine Human called 'the Son,' appear before the Angels as a Sun ; and the Divine proceeding thence as light united to heat . . . Thus . . . the Divine which is called 'the Holy Spirit' is the Divine Procedere from the Divine Existere and from the Divine Esse. This Trine is the Lord in Heaven : His Divine Love is what appears as a Sun there.

1112³. Before the Lord assumed the Human . . . God was a Man in like manner, and had the Divine Itself, the Divine Human, and the Divine Proceeding ; that is, the Divine Esse, the Divine Existere, and the Divine Procedere . . .

1115⁵. The Angels . . . acknowledge His Divine called 'the Father,' see His Divine Human, and are in the Divine Proceeding ; for the universal angelic Heaven is the Lord's Divine Proceeding . . . Therefore the Angels in Heaven are in a Man, which is the Lord's Divine Proceeding . . .

Ath. 62. That the Son from eternity was . . . the Divine proceeding, from which is Heaven ; thus the Divine forming. Ill.

68^e. Of the Divine Proceeding, from which is the universe of Heaven and the universe of the world, the idea of an extense can be held, especially in the natural world.

82^e. Some say that God is everywhere ; but it was shown that the Divine Proceeding is everywhere, like the light and heat from the sun.

116. That the Lord from eternity was the Divine Proceeding ; thus the Divine Human, may be seen from the fact, that the whole Heaven is a Grand Man, and the Divine Proceeding makes it. That this was the Divine Human. Ill. Moreover, God cannot appear as a Man, except from the Divine Proceeding.

120. Men are in an idea of the universe from space, which idea does not reach God, unless there is an idea of the Divine Proceeding ; nor should the idea of the Divine Proceeding, in the Spiritual World, be taken from space ; but only in the natural world.

127. To proceed, which is said of the Holy Spirit, is like the light and heat from the sun . . .

132. The Divine good proceeding is 'Jesus' . . . The Divine proceeding, which is the Word, is 'the Son of Man.'

145. The extension of the Divine into the universe is that which can be predicated of the Divine Proceeding, which is the Divine Truth . . .

149. By the Son of God from eternity is meant the Divine Proceeding, which is called the Divine Truth from which is Heaven ; and thence also the Lord in the world was the Divine Truth, which afterwards proceeded from Him. 156. 158. 175.

174. That the Lord is also the Divine Proceeding . . .

176. The Good proceeding is called by the Lord the 'Father in the Heavens' . . . But Divine truth proceeding is called by Him 'the Son of Man.'

177. The quality of the Divine Proceeding before the Lord's Advent, is described by circles, by degrees, by the Heavens, and by the interiors of man. . . But when there was no longer a reception of the Divine in the ultimate degree . . . the Divine Proceeding could not be extended thither ; and therefore He took on the Human, from which the Divine Proceeding might go forth, which can also be in ultimates, and thus preserve the Heavens, and save the human race. Thence is the omnipresence of His Human in the Holy Supper.

178. For the Divine Proceeding is such that in the greatest and least it is a Man. For, such as it is in the greatest, such it is in every least, and in nature, where the Divine Proceeding is in ultimates. Ex. That there is such a nature in every degree, namely, that the affection clothes itself with a body, and this from the Divine Proceeding, is because that which proceeds from the Lord, proceeds from the several things of His body, both interior and exterior. Hence it is that the Divine Proceeding is the Lord in the Heavens, and is called 'the Son of Man,' and also 'the Comforter,' and 'the Holy Spirit.' From this it is evident what His omnipresence is . . . As affection and love put on that human form in every Heaven, or in every degree, it follows that the Human which is put on is the Divine Truth, and that those are in the Divine Proceeding, and are truly men, who are in love and thence in truths.

D. Love iii. The Divine Love, which is life itself, is not simply love, but is the Divine proceeding; and the Divine proceeding is the Lord Himself. The Lord is indeed in the Sun . . . but still love with wisdom is also Himself outside the Sun. The distance is only an appearance. Ex.

iv. The spiritual essence . . . regarded in itself, is the Divine Itself proceeding, accommodated to every Angel . . . and also to every man . . . For the Divine which proceeds from the Lord, is Divine from primes down to ultimates . . .

vii. For the Divine proceeding from the Lord, which is life and form, is a man in the greatest and in the least. D. Wis. iii. 4².

xiii³. As (the Grand) Man is the Divine proceeding from the Lord; and the Divine proceeding is the Lord in the Church and in Heaven, it follows that these are all in the Lord.

D. Wis. iii. 1. By the Lord is here and elsewhere meant the Divine which proceeds from Him as the Sun of Heaven; by which and through which all things in the universal world have been created; (and) which is life itself.

vii. 1. All the Spiritual, in its essence, is a man; thus all of love and wisdom which proceeds from the Lord; for this is the Spiritual. The reason all the Spiritual, or proceeding from the Lord, is a man, is that the Lord Himself . . . is a Man; and from Him cannot proceed anything but what is like [Him]; for the proceeding Divine is not, in itself, mutable and extended; and that which is not extended is such everywhere. Hence is His omnipresence.

xii. 5². The Divine proceeding is that which appears round Him to the Angels as a Sun. From this proceeds His Divine through the spiritual atmospheres . . .

Angelic Idea. God, through His Divine proceeding, created the universe . . . and, as the Divine proceeding is also life itself, all things were created from life and through life; and the Divine proceeding nearest is that which appears before the Angels as a Sun . . . and the Divine proceeding is Divine love and Divine wisdom, which, at a distance, has such an appearance. This Divine proceeding is what the Ancients effigied by clear golden or lucid circles round the head of God. . . From that Sun, as a great centre, proceed circles, one after another, and one from another, down to the ultimate . . . and these circles . . . are spiritual atmospheres, which are infilled by the light and heat from the Sun . . . and, in the ultimate, by means of these atmospheres, and afterwards by means of the natural atmospheres, which are from the sun of the world, was effected the creation of the earth . . . The first proceeding was continued down to ultimates through discrete degrees . . . as producer and products in a continual series . . .

Can. God 10. God, through His Divine Proceeding, has omnipotence, omnipresence, and omniscience.

v. 5. Two things proceed from Jehovah God, through the Sun in the midst of which He is: heat and light . . .

Inv. 41^e. The Knowledges which proceed from Him: and the things which proceed from Him are Himself.

2746. Had thus extinguished the desire . . . for the procreation of infants . . .

2757. Still had not extinguished the natural desire of procreating offspring.

H. 315^e. Divine order . . . goes to the ultimate . . . and, by media there collected, reintegrates and produces itself further, which is done by procreations. J. 20.

382a. Marriages on earth are also for the sake of the procreation of offspring; but not in the Heavens. Instead of this procreation, there is, in the Heavens, the procreation of good and truth. Ex.

402^e. Conjugal delight . . . is more excellent than all others on account of its use, which is the procreation of the human race, and thence of the Angels of Heaven.

J. 6. That the procreations of the human race on earth will never cease. Gen.art.

P. 332³. The procreations of wisdom from love are like seeds, by which procreations man becomes like a garden.

M. 183⁵. Therefore all things in the universe are procreated and formed from use, in use, and for use.

254. Impotence is a cause of separation, because the end of marriage is the procreation of offspring.

386. That two universal spheres proceed from the Lord to preserve the universe . . . One is the sphere of procreating, and the other is that of protecting the things procreated. Ex.

390. For the love of procreating is continued into the love of the thing procreated. The quality of the love of procreating is known from its delight, in that it is supereminent and transcendent. In this delight is the state of procreation with men—viros . . .

400. That the sphere of the love of procreating progresses in order from the end through the causes into the effects, and makes periods, through which the universe is preserved in its foreseen and provided state. Ex. 401.

403. The love of procreating, and the derivative sequent love of the things procreated, are implanted in the conjugal love with women; but these two loves are divided with them, when the end, which is the love of procreating, commences its progression. . . The love of procreating, which, with a woman makes a one with her conjugal love, is then not alike.

409. Conjugal love is implanted in every woman from creation, and, together with it, the love of procreating, which is determined to and flows unto the procreated offspring, and, from the women, is introduced into the men.

D. 6051³. Wisdom increases through the marriages in the Heavens, which, there, is instead of procreation.

E. 724³. 'Father,' 'mother,' 'sons,' 'daughters' = the goods and truths which procreate, and the goods and truths procreated. But it is to be known that the goods and truths which procreate are in the spiritual man, and the goods and truths procreated are in the natural . . . Hence it is evident, that those spiritual procreations, like the natural procreations from father and mother, are multiplied like families . . .

D. Wis. viii⁶. That the angelic mind cannot be procreated, and be multiplied by procreations, except in man. Ex.

— . With the Angels no other procreation and thence multiplication is possible than spiritual, which is that of wisdom and love . . . But in the natural world there are matters, through which and from which, procreations, and afterwards formations, can be effected . . .

xii. 5³. A natural origin has been added, that things may be at the same time material and fixed, for the sake of the end of the procreation of the human race, which is not possible except in ultimates, where there is what is full . . .

285. Lest they should profane the holy things of faith. Sig.

301². For the things which have been commingled by profanations adhere commingled. As soon as any idea of what is holy arises, the idea of what is profane conjoined with it is present; which causes that he cannot be in any Society except in one of the damned. Whatever is present conjoined with any idea of thought, is most exquisitely perceived. The profane things thus adjoined to holy things cannot be shaken off except with infernal torture so great, that if man knew he would beware of profanation as of Hell itself.

302. The Jews would profane if they knew . . . Sig.

—^e. It is one who acknowledges, and afterwards blasphemous and profanes, who is here meant.

303. Therefore no one can profane holy things, unless he is so persuaded that he acknowledges, and yet denies. Ex.

306. 'To keep the way of the tree of lives'=lest he might profane holy things.

VOL. V.

408. When there is no faith, faith cannot be profaned. . . Those who do not believe cannot profane.

410^e. New light then shines forth, because they can then no longer profane . . .

571. When man is such that he immerses the truths of faith in his insane cupidities, he then profanes truths. (Then) the moment that remains are brought forth they are again profaned by the things which are profane. For profanations of the Word produce a kind of callosity, which obstructs and absorbs the goods and truths of remains. Therefore let man beware of the profanation of the Word of the Lord . . .

576². 'The Ammonite and the Moabite'=the profanation of the celestial and spiritual things of faith.

582. They immersed the doctrinals of faith in their cupidities . . . and the birth thence = that they . . . profane the holy things of faith; (for) they then cohere in every idea, and, in the other life, ideas are what are mutually communicated; and therefore as soon as any idea of what is holy and true is brought forth, what is profane and false is adjoined, which is instantly perceived; and therefore such cannot but be separated and be thrust down into Hell.

623. 'Violence'=when men inflict violence on holy things by profaning them . . .

639. Secular writers. —^e. 1066³. 1756².

661. It is otherwise with those who have no doctrinal things of faith . . . They cannot so profane holy things, and so close up the way for remains; and consequently cannot expel the Angels of God from themselves.

1001². Eating flesh with the blood, represented in Heaven profanation, or the commingling of what is holy and what is profane. 1003.

—⁵. That what is celestial . . . should not be commingled with the proprium of man, which is profane. Sig.

1002. To eat the flesh of animals, regarded in itself, is a something profane . . .

1007^e. Profanation is here treated of, the mention and consequent representation of which is not tolerated in Heaven.

1008. To avenge profanation. Sig.

— . Few know what profanation is . . . Profanation is manifold. He who completely denies the truths of faith does not profane . . . But he profanes who knows the truths of faith, and still more he who acknowledges, talks about, preaches, and persuades others of them, and yet lives in hatreds, revenges, cruelty, rapine, and adulteries, and confirms with himself such things by many things which he scrapes together from the Word, perverting them, and thus immersing them in these filthy things. He it is who profanes. These are the things which especially inflict death on man; (for) in the other life, profane and holy things are completely separated; profane things in Hell, and holy ones in Heaven. When such a man comes there, in every idea of his thought . . . holy things adhere to profane ones. He cannot there bring forth a single idea of what is holy, without the adherent profane being clearly seen . . . Thus, in each thing he thinks profanation stands forth ; and, as Heaven abhors profanation, he cannot but be thrust down into Hell. Ex.

[A. 1008]^e. But those (do not) profane holy things who in simplicity have believed the things in the Word, even if they have believed things not true . . .

1010. The Lord's life is charity, which is not in man, because man is filthy and profane, but is with man.

—². The like is the case with profanation. He who profanes the Word . . . not only hates the Truth, but also extinguishes or murders it. . . In the other life, those who have profaned . . . hold in deadly hatred the Lord and all the goods of love and truths of faith, because they are contrary to their intestine hatreds, rapines, and adulteries, which they had veiled over with a show of holiness . . .

—³. That profanation is 'blood.' Ill.

1059^e. Still more (is there thick darkness) with those who profane the truths of faith, which the gentiles cannot do ; because . . . no one can profane that of which he does not know the quality and existence. This is why more gentiles are saved than Christians.

1094^e. (By naming Jehovah, the Jews) could profane what is holy, which the gentiles cannot do.

1182. Worships of which the exteriors appear holy, while the interiors are profane. Sig.

1183². That holy things were profaned. Sig.

1292. That their worship became more unclean and profane. Sig. and Ex.

1313. Those not of the Church . . . cannot profane holy things.

1326. 'Babel' = worship in which interiorly is the love of self, consequently all that is filthy and profane. The love of self is nothing but the proprium ; and how filthy and profane this is. Ex. . . Hence comes all the profanation of worship . . . The holy can never be with the profane . . . This is why there is no internal worship with such.

1327². When the danger of the profanation of what is holy was thence imminent, the state of this Church was changed. Sig.

—³. The profanation of what is holy has with it eternal damnation. No one can profane what is holy except him who has the Knowledges of faith, and who acknowledges them . . . Internal things are what can be profaned ; for in (these) there is what is holy. . . So with a man who does not believe there is a life after death, but still has external worship : he cannot profane the things which are of eternal life, because he does not believe in their existence. It is otherwise with those who know, and who acknowledge ; and this is why man is permitted rather to live in pleasures and cupidities, and thereby to remove himself from internal things, than to come into the Knowledge and acknowledgment of internal things, and profane them. For this reason the Jews are permitted to immerse themselves in avarice . . . for they are such that if they were to acknowledge, they could not but profane . . . The like is the case with many within the Church ; and (also) with the nations outside the Church : the latter can profane the least of all.

—⁶. Those who were in the Knowledges of internal things . . . and profaned them . . . and the penalty of the profanation. Sig.

1363^e. Internal idolaters can profane holy things, but external idolaters cannot ; and therefore, to prevent holy things from being profaned, external idolatry was tolerated.

1370. The profanations themselves of these things constitute the genera and species of the idolatries.

1878. The lot of those who have profaned the Word.

2056^e. Those within the Church who profane the goods and truths of faith. Sig.

2196^e. In man there is nothing but what is evil, unjust, and profane.

2220. The false profane ; and the evil profane. Sig.

2321^e. Each, according to the profane with them, flees into his own Hell.

2327². A state of true humiliation is impossible, unless they acknowledge that of themselves they are profane and damned.

2332. The Holy Divine inflowing into the profane which is with man . . . is like a consuming fire.

2342. See FERMENT, here.

—³. Lest they should be contaminated with anything profane, what was leavened was so severely interdicted . . . for those who profane celestial and spiritual things cannot but perish.

2354². Such worship Him holily exteriorly ; but conceal this profane interiorly.

2357². He who once acknowledges and believes, if he returns to a life of evil, profanes what is good and holy ; but he who does not acknowledge and believe cannot profane ; and therefore care is taken by the Divine Providence that a man should not be admitted further into acknowledgment itself and faith of the heart than he can be afterwards kept in them ; and this on account of the penalty of profanation, which is the most grievous in Hell. This is why it is conceded to so few at this day to believe that the good of love and of charity is Heaven in man, and that all the Divine is in the Lord ; for they are in a life of evil. Sig. 2520^e, Sig.

2986³. The gentiles cannot profane holy things by evils of life ; for no one can profane what is holy who is ignorant of what it is.

3024⁶. That they were not to contract matrimony with the daughters of the Canaanites, had regard to these spiritual things : that good and falsity, and evil and truth, should not be conjoined ; for thence comes profanation. (As in) 'Judah hath profaned the holiness of Jehovah, in that he hath loved and married a daughter of a strange god' (Mal. ii. 11).

3373². The Jews would have denied (these interior truths) in their hearts, and would thus have profaned interior goods and truths . . . which is the reason why any interior things so rarely stand forth in the letter of the Old Testament. 3398². 3479². 4288¹. 4289. 4429². 4751³. 4847². 6963².

3398. That Divine truth might have been adulterated, and thus profaned. Sig. and Ex.

—². As to the profanation of truth, the case is this. Divine truth cannot possibly be profaned except by those who have before acknowledged it. Those who have entered into truth through acknowledgment and faith . . . if they afterwards recede from it, there continually remains the print of it within, which is recalled together with the falsity and evil; and thus the truth is profaned, because it adheres to these. Such therefore have continually in them what damns; thus their own Hell; for when infernals approach a sphere where there are good and truth, they instantly feel their own Hell; for they come into that which they hate, consequently into torment; and therefore those who have profaned truth dwell continually with that which torments them, and this according to the degree of the profanation. As this is so, it is most especially provided by the Lord that Divine good and truth should not be profaned; and it is provided especially by this, that the man who is such that he cannot but profane, is withheld as far as possible from the acknowledgment and belief of truth and good . . .

—⁴. This is why the Lord did not come into the world, and reveal the internal things of the Word, until there was no good whatever left with the Jews, not even natural good; for they could then no longer receive any truth with internal acknowledgment—for it is good which receives—and thus they could not profane. Sig.

— . For the same reason the arcana of the internal sense are revealed now; because at this day there is scarcely any faith . . . and, when this is the case, they can be revealed without danger of profanation, because they are not interiorly acknowledged.

3399². Those of the Spiritual Church cannot adulterate good so far as to profane it, because they cannot receive good so as to have a perception of it; but they can profane truth, because this they can acknowledge. But in the last time of the Church they cannot acknowledge truth . . .

—³. Those who can profane good are of the Celestial Church . . . as was done by the Antediluvians . . . and, that the profanation of good should no longer come forth, is signified by (the cherubim at Eden).

3402. That Divine truth and Divine good are not to be opened . . . from the fear of eternal damnation if they are profaned. Sig. and Ex.

—³. To know good and truth . . . and to talk about them, is not to have them; but to be affected with them from the heart . . . No one is allowed to accede to them with affection and faith, unless he is such that he can remain in them to the end of life. But those who profane, cannot be withheld from them.

3703². The profanation of what is holy. Tr. 3941⁵.

3754^e. The fourth state (of the perversion of good and truth in the Church) which is the profanation of good and truth. Tr. (in Matt.xxiv.19-22).

3755³. 'Then shall be great affliction, such as was not since the beginning of the world . . . ' = the highest degree of the perversion and vastation of the Church as to good and truth, which is profanation. For the profanation of what is holy induces eternal death much more grievous than all the other states of evil; and the more grievous, in proportion as the goods and truths which are profaned are more interior . . .

3757. Refs. to passages on the subject of profanation. H.456(h). N.172.

3898². The reason the Lord spoke in this way was that they should not understand the Word, lest they should profane it . . . But the interiors of the Word are now opened, because the Church is so far vastated . . . that though men know and understand, they do not acknowledge, much less believe, except a few who are in the life of good . . .

3899. (In Matt.xxiv. 23-28) it treats of the state of the Church . . . with those in special who are in holy external worship, but in profane internal; that is, who orally profess the Lord with holy veneration, but at heart worship themselves and the world, so that the worship of the Lord is their means for gaining honours and wealth. These, in proportion as they have acknowledged the Lord, heavenly life, and faith, in the same proportion, when they become such, profane.

4031³. That which compels . . . infuses something holy; but, when . . . the man returns to his former affections . . . that holy conjoins itself with the evils and falsities, and becomes profane, which is such that it leads into a Hell the most grievous of all. For he first acknowledges and believes, and is also affected with what is holy, and then denies, and even holds in aversion. That those who once acknowledge in heart, and afterwards deny, are those who profane; but not those who have not acknowledged in heart. Refs.

4424. They are kept in evils, and thence in falsities . . . lest through the Knowledges of good and truth they should communicate with Heaven, and through evils and the derivative falsities with Hell, and thus hang between the two; and also lest they should profane goods and truths, which is done when they are commingled with falsities and evils.

4601. 'Reuben lay with Billah . . . ' = the profanation of good through separated faith. . . 'Then profanedst thou it' (Gen.xlix.4). 6349.

—². The profanation of good through separated faith takes place when the truth of the Church and its good are acknowledged and believed, and yet the life is contrary to them. For with those who separate the things of faith from those of charity in understanding and thence in life, evil is conjoined with truth, and falsity with good. It is this very conjunction which is called profanation. It is otherwise with those who although they know what are the truth and good of faith, still at heart do not believe in them. . . . The profanation of good through separated faith is also represented by Cain . . . by Ham . . . and by the Egyptians being drowned in the Red Sea. 6348.

[A. 4601]³. Those who know what the truth and good of faith are, and yet do not believe in heart, as is the case with the most part at this day, cannot profane, because their Intellectual does not receive, and imbue itself therewith.

4689². That (the Lord's Human is Divine; that He alone rules Heaven and the universe; and that His Divine is the all in Heaven) could not be openly revealed, because it was foreseen . . . that the Christian Church would turn aside from charity to faith, consequently would separate itself from Him, and thus would not only reject, but also profane the Holy which is from His Divine Human; for faith separated from charity cannot do otherwise.

4759². To those who have no remains . . . what is holy . . . is either filthy or profane.

4847². A holy internal conjoined with an idolatrous external becomes profane.

4868^e. As they know internal things, and acknowledge them in childhood, yet deny them in adult age, they are described in the Word by filthy adulteries . . . for they are profanations.

4922⁶. The profanation of good and truth is described by: 'I saw a woman sitting upon a scarlet beast, full of names of blasphemy . . .'

5128⁵. There are two things which not only close up the way of communication (with the Rational), but also deprive the man of the faculty of ever being able to become rational: they are deceit, and profanation. . . . Profanation is that which commingles falsities with truths, and evils with goods. By these two, the Rational completely perishes. . . . Profanation commingles the remains.

5135⁶. Profanation, and the consequent taking away of good and truth, is signified by the deed of Achan . . .

5217^e. A subject in whom truths and the opposite falsities subsist together, is called 'lukewarm'; and one in whom falsities and truths are commingled is called profane.

5268. 'Seven, in the opposite, = what is profane. Ill.

5508². If Providence were to act visibly . . . there would be danger that a man . . . would believe that it was of Providence, and afterwards would go into the contrary: thus truth and falsity would be conjoined in the interior man, and truth would be profaned, which is attended with eternal damnation. Therefore man is preferably kept in unbelief. . . .

—⁴. The Israelites could be compelled without danger of the profanation of what is holy. Ex.

5897⁸. For this is the commingling of truth and falsity which is called profanation.

6959. That if those of the Spiritual Church had faith they would become profaners of truth. Sig. and Ex. 6972.

—². In childhood and adolescence they have faith in the doctrinals of their Church, but they have faith from parents and masters, and not from themselves; and therefore, if they afterwards recede from faith, they do not profane truth except slightly, which profanation can be removed by Divine means. . . . But if a man has faith in the doctrine of the Church and in the Word from himself, that is, by confirmations with himself, and then afterwards recedes, and denies with himself that which he had before believed, and especially if he lives contrary to the truth which he had confirmed with himself, and either explains it in his own favour, or altogether rejects it, he profanes the truth; because he commingles and conjoins truth and falsity within himself. These become like skeletons, and have as little life left as have the bones relatively to the organic life of the flesh. Yet a harder lot is theirs who profane good than that of those who profane truth. Those of the Spiritual Church can profane truth, but not so much good.

6963. 'His hand was leprous as snow'=the profanation of truth. (Continued under LEPROSY.)

6971². When an avenue for the influx of the light of Heaven has once been opened, and afterwards closed, the man is compelled to look downwards . . . lest the truths he has once acknowledged, and which remain in his interior man, should be contaminated with falsities, and thus profaned.

8394. After a man has examined himself, acknowledged his sins, and done repentance, he must remain constant in good to the end of life; for if he afterwards relapses to his former life of evil, he profanes; for he then conjoins evil with good, and thus his 'latter state is worse than his former one.'

'To take the name of God in vain' properly=to turn truth into evil; that is, to believe that it is truth and still live in evil; and also=to turn good into falsity; that is, to live holily and still not believe. Both are profanation. Ex. . . This conjunction cannot be loosed . . . except by a tearing asunder, which takes away all spiritual life; and therefore they are sent into a Hell the most frightful of all, where they are direfully tortured. This is meant by (the blasphemy against the Holy Spirit; and also by the return of the evil Spirit with seven others worse than himself). Ex.

9021². 'To curse father and mother'=profanation; for those within the Church who altogether deny the Lord and the things of His Kingdom and Church, profane.

—^e. (But) the denial of the Lord is not profanation with those outside the Church. Ex.

9049⁵. The reason these interior things of Heaven are here opened by such things as are in the world, was to prevent worldly men from understanding them . . . lest they should profane the interiors of the Word; for they would thus cast themselves into a Hell the most frightful of all, which is the Hell of the profaners of the Word. Ill.

—⁵. Those who are 'healed,' and again return to falsities and evils, profane.

9188². So far as possible, the Lord withholds man from the conjunction of truth and good with falsity and evil, because this conjunction is profanation; but still many of those in the Church cannot be withheld; because from their infancy they have imbibed such things as are of the Church from the Word and from doctrine from the Word; and some of them have imbued them, and made them of their faith; and, when they have grown up, and have begun to think . . . from themselves, they have made of no account the things which had been made of their faith, and instead of them have seized upon falsities, and have also imbued them. These are they who have conjoined in themselves truths with falsities; for the truths which have once been made of the faith remain, and cannot be eradicated; and the falsities which afterwards become of the faith conjoin themselves with them. It is this conjunction which is signified by 'sorceries.'

10117². To conjoin what is Divine with the proprium of man . . . is to profane. Hence it is said, 'Whoever eats of what is left until the morning, profanes the holy thing of Jehovah . . .' (Lev. xix. 7).

10174. Consequently, adulteries are profane.

10217⁸. The end is when truth is altogether profaned.

—². The state of the man with whom there is profanation, is that he has communication with the Heavens, and at the same time with the Hells; through truths with the Heavens, and through falsities of evil with the Hells. Hence, in the other life, they are torn asunder, by which everything of interior life perishes. After the dilaceration they scarcely appear as men, but as burnt bones, in which is but little life.

—³. But it is to be known that there are very many genera of profanations, and of these very many species. For there are those who profane the goods of the Church; and those who profane its truths. There are those who profane much; and those who profane little. There are those who profane interiorly; and those who profane exteriorly, more, and more. There are those who profane through faith against the truths and goods of the Church; and those who profane through life; and there are those who profane through worship. Hence there exist many Hells of profaners, which are distinct from each other according to the diversities of the profanations. The Hells of the profanations of good are at the back; but those of the profanations of truth are beneath the feet and at the sides. They are deeper than the Hells of all other evils, and are rarely opened.

10393. That interior things with the Israelites were completely closed, lest they should profane the holy things of Heaven and the Church, is signified by the tables of the Law being broken by Moses, etc. 10492³.

10652. The profanation of good, and the profanation of truth. Sig. and Ex.

—². The first conjunction of the affections of evil with truths . . . is not as yet profanation; but the second conjunction is profanation; for this takes place when evil is applied to truth, and truth to evil, which is done by a wrong interpretation of the truth and the application of it to evil; and thus by the insertion of the one into the other. From this, truth no longer remains truth, but is mortified and profaned. Sig.

—⁶. The death of (the 24,000) = the extinction of all truths. This takes place with those who profane.

H. 456². To confirm anything by visions with those in falsities is dangerous; because they would first believe and afterwards deny, and thus would profane that truth itself; for to profane is to believe and afterwards to deny; and those who profane truths are thrust down into the lowest and most grievous of all the Hells. Ill.

J. 64. They are carried into . . . the gulfs where are the Hells of profaners.

73⁶. In the former state, the man who would have understood the spiritual sense, would have profaned it.

L. 18³. If imputation were possible, an impenitent man would impute to himself the Lord's merit, and think himself justified thereby; which would be to defile what is holy with profane things, and to profane the Name of the Lord; for it would be to keep the thought in the Lord, and the will in Hell . . .

S. 67³. 'To commit adultery' (in the celestial sense) = to deny the Lord's Divine, and profane the Word.

P. 133². He who, after worship, returns into his evils, profanes the goods and truths of worship, and the lot of profaners after death is the worst of all. Ill.

226. That if man afterwards recedes from these things, and goes into what is contrary, he profanes holy things. Gen. art. There are many kinds of the profanation of what is holy, but this kind is the most grievous of all; for profaners of this kind after death become no longer men. They do live, but continually in delirious phantasies . . . and, as they are no longer men, they are not called he, or she, but it. . . The cause is that when a man first acknowledges Divine things, and believes them, and afterwards recedes and denies them, he commingles holy with profane things; and, when these have been commingled, they cannot be separated otherwise than by the destruction of the whole. Fully ex.

228. No man thus profanes holy things who does not know them . . .

—². (Reception in infancy alone does not cause profanation; nor a life of evil followed by repentance.) Ex.

229. In the most general sense, by profanation is meant all impiety; thus by profaners are meant all the impious, who at heart deny God, the holiness of the Word, and thence the spiritual things of the Church. These are holy things, and they speak impiously about them. But these are not here treated of; but those who profess God, hold the sanctity of the Word, and acknowledge the spiritual things of the Church . . . The reason these profane, is that what is holy from the Word is in them and with them, and this which is in them, and which makes something of their understanding and will, they profane. But in the impious . . . there is nothing holy which they can profane. They are profaners; but are not the profane.

230. The profanation of what is holy is meant in the Second Precept . . . 'Thou shalt not profane the name of thy God.' And that profanation is not to be committed, is meant in the Lord's Prayer, by 'Hallowed be Thy name.' Ex.

231. The first kind of profanation is by those who make jokes from the Word, and about the Word; or from the Divine things of the Church, and about them. Ex. . . This kind of profanation is lighter or more grievous according to the acknowledgment of the holiness of the Word, and the indecorum of the conversation.

—². The second kind of profanation is by those who understand and acknowledge Divine truths, and yet live contrary to them. Ex. Those profane more lightly who only understand, and those more grievously who also acknowledge. Examp.

—³. The third kind of profanation is by those who apply the sense of the letter of the Word to confirm evil loves and false principles. Ex.

—⁴. The fourth kind of profanation is by those who speak pious and holy things with the mouth, and also simulate the affections of the love of them in tone and gesture; and yet at heart do not believe and love them. Ex.

—⁵. The fifth kind of profanation is by those who attribute Divine things to themselves. Ex.

—⁶. The sixth kind of profanation is by those who acknowledge the Word, and yet deny the Divine of the Lord. Ex.

—⁷. The seventh kind of profanation is by those who first acknowledge Divine truths, and live according to them, and afterwards recede and deny them. This is the worst kind of profanation, because they commingle holy with profane things, insomuch that they cannot be separated, and yet they must be separated in order for them to be either in Heaven or in Hell . . .

—⁸. The profane of this kind are meant by 'the lukewarm' . . . This kind of profanation is described in Matt. xii. 43-45 . . .

—⁹. That the Lord provides that man should not interiorly acknowledge truths and afterwards recede, is meant in John xii. 40. 233⁹.

233⁴. Hence comes a recession from good, and a return to evil, which is the worst kind of profanation.

—⁷. That when man is in evil, many truths can be introduced into his understanding, and be stored up in the memory, and yet not be profaned. Ex.

264². That if the spiritual sense of the Word had been revealed before, the Church would have profaned it; and, through it, the holiness of the Word. Ex.

R. 198. 'To the Angel of the Church of the Laodiceans write' = to those and concerning those in the Church, who believe alternately from themselves and from the Word, and thus profane holy things. Ex.

204. 'Because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew thee out of My mouth' = profanation, and consequent separation from the Lord. . . To be separated from the Lord, is to be in neither Heaven nor Hell, but in a place separated, bereaved of human life, where there are mere phantasies. The reason is that they have commingled truths with falsities, and goods with evils; thus holy things with profane ones; so that they cannot be separated . . .

213. 'Lest the shame of thy nakedness should appear' = lest the good of celestial love should be profaned and adulterated. Ex.

214. 'Anoint thine eyes with eye-salve . . .' = that the understanding may be healed, lest the genuine truths of wisdom should be profaned and falsified. Ex.

316. 'Hurt not the oil and the wine' = that it is provided by the Lord, that the holy goods and truths, which lie hidden interiorly in the Word, should not be violated and profaned.

473. Before the dragon has been cast out, this doctrine . . . if not rejected, would be . . . profaned.

540. 'The seven diadems on the heads (of the dragon)' = all the truths of the Word falsified and profaned.

541³. If the falsification proceeds to the affirmation that the Lord in the Word has not commanded good works for the sake of the conjunction of man with Himself, but only for the sake of conjunction with the world, then the truths of the Word are profaned; for thus the Word is made no longer a holy Book, but a profane book.

686². It is of the Divine Providence that those in faith alone should falsify the truths of the Word; because if they knew them so as to interiorly think them, they would profane them. Sig. and Ex.

723. That religiosity upon the Word profaned by them. Sig. and Ex.

— 'Blasphemy' = the denial of the Divine of the Lord in His Human, and the adulteration of the Word, thus profanation; for he who does not acknowledge the Divine of the Lord in His Human, and falsifies the Word, but not of set purpose, does indeed profane, but lightly; whereas those who ascribe to themselves all the power of the Lord's Divine Human, and moreover deny it; and who apply all things of the Word to acquire for themselves dominion over the holy things of the Church and of Heaven, and moreover adulterate the Word, profane grievously.

758. That they have put forth nefarious dogmas, which are adulterations and profanations of the good and truth of the Word. Sig. and Ex.

4721. A plastered chamber of brick work seen. There was a bed by the wall; and he who was there seemed like nothing else than some black, burnt bony thing, from which there rose at the wall a black vapour. There was what is profane there . . .

4854. On the Hell of the profane.—The Hell of the profane is diametrically beneath man, under his conjugials . . . There are very many there at this day; for into that Hell come those who have believed the things of Heaven and the Church, and have afterwards, in themselves, denied them; and also those who in compliance with custom frequent holy things, and believe, and yet live evilly; but not those who have lived evilly and have not believed. (The scenery there des.) 4855. 5877.

5662a. They wanted to make one Church out of many by doctrinals, and not by life, so that they had almost profaned goods.

—^e. They were cast down, lest they should profane the good with others.

5878. Profaners cause a foul heaviness in the breast.

5950. The profane have their Hells in the west, far away, towards the south there, deep down. When they become profane they are no longer men; for in the light of Heaven they appear like charred skeletons; and therefore are spoken of in the neuter gender . . . By degrees they lose human life, and become like ghosts, and seem to themselves to fly in the air; now as females; now as males; now as infants; and in other forms . . .

5996. Concerning a cadaverous breast . . . He stank like a corpse . . . chiefly from the fact that when he was a young man he loved his wife well, and detested adulteries; and afterwards went into the contrary, and approved of adulteries; whence came the profanation of conjugal love.

6051^e. Therefore marriages are not to be profaned by adulteries.

D. Min. 4669. Whence come profane things. Examp.

4703. The Hell of the profane is to the left, under the earth. . . These are said to relate to mice. Their operation des.

— Those who have not profaned the holy things of the Church, because they have good and truth within. Sig. For those who profane have nothing of good and truth within, but only without, when they are speaking; whereas those who do not profane have good and truth within.

375⁴. 'Not to hurt the oil and the wine' = to prevent the profanation of the interior goods which belong to the internal sense; for if they were known and believed, and were afterwards denied, or, also, if one were to live contrary to them, then they would be profaned; and to profane interior goods and truths is to conjoin one's self with Heaven and with Hell at the same time, which is to completely destroy spiritual life . . . which cannot be separated, but must be torn asunder; and, when they are torn asunder, everything of spiritual life is destroyed. Hence it is that after death profaners are not Spirits in the human form, as others are, but are mere phantasies, and appear to themselves to fly hither and thither without any thought, and at last are separated from others, and are cast down into a Hell the lowest of all, and, as they do not appear in the human form . . . they are called it, that is, non-man.

—⁶. The reason the internal sense has now been opened, is that the Last Judgment has been executed . . . and thus it has been provided that profanations should not come forth.

434¹⁷. 'Then profanedst thou' (Gen. xlix.) = conjoined with the love of self and of the world . . .

519^e. The commixture of good and evil, and of truth and falsity, is not the profanation of good and truth. Profanation is solely with those who have first received truth and good in heart and faith, and afterwards deny them in heart and faith.

540⁹. The profanation of truth through reasonings from scientifics falsely applied. Sig.

587¹⁷. 'To drink out of the vessels of the Temple,' and at the same time to worship idols, = the profanation of good and truth through evils and falsities in worship: and, as by profanation everything spiritual of man perishes; and without what is spiritual man is not man, Belshazzar was [slain].

700¹⁵. Hence Jericho then signified the profanation of good and truth. —¹⁸.

706⁹. 'To convert and be healed,' here, = to profane, which is done when truths and goods are acknowledged, and especially when the Lord is acknowledged, and is then denied.

710⁷. 'Woe to those that are with child . . .' = that those who receive goods and truths cannot keep them; because Hell then prevails, and takes them away, whence is profanation.

741²⁰. The profanation of the Truths which are from good, is signified by 'the land shall be profaned under its inhabitants' (Is. xxiv. 5).

935². 'Thou shalt not profane the name of God' contains also not to despise and reject from the heart the Word, doctrine therefrom, and thus the Church.

949³. In proportion as he does not profane the name of God, thus also in proportion as he shuns the cupidities originating from the loves of self and of the world, in the same proportion he loves the holy things of the Word and of the Church; for these are 'the name of God,' and (these) cupidities profane them. 959². —⁴.

960¹⁴. Divine truth (or the Word) is profaned when its holiness is denied; which is done when it is contemned, rejected, and treated with opprobrium . . .

962¹¹. As by the profanation of the name of God is meant the denial of the holiness of the Divine truth . . . it follows that the name of God is interiorly profaned through a life contrary to the precepts of the Decalogue. For there is a profanation interior and not exterior, and there is a profanation interior and at the same time exterior, and there can also be some exterior and not at the same time interior. Interior profanation is effected through life; exterior through speech. Interior profanation . . . becomes also exterior after death . . .

985³. Therefore the genital members . . . are not to be profaned by the unchaste love of adultery . . .

1005². (The commixture of seeds) as is done in adulteries, is profane. Ex.

1025⁴. 'Thou shalt not profane the name of God,' in its three senses.

1049³. But the man does not profane who in childhood up to adolescence is in faith and a life according thereto, and who afterwards in the age of manhood recedes from faith and the life of faith. The reason is that the faith of childhood is a faith of the memory . . . whereas the faith of the age of manhood is a faith of the understanding . . . This faith can be profaned, if the man recedes from it, and lives contrary to it . . .

—⁴. In a word, whatever a man thinks, speaks, and does from the understanding with the will favouring, is of his life . . . and this, if it is holy, is profaned by recession. But the profanations of this kind are more grievous or more light according to the quality of the truth and the derivative faith, and according to the quality of the good and the derivative life.

[E.] 1050². The cause of this horrible state of profanation after death, and of the state of phantasy which results therefrom. Fully Ex.

—^e. Hence it is that a profane one is no longer called a man, nor, he or she, but it; for he is a brute.

1051². This (worst) kind of profanation exists especially with those who acknowledge the Lord and His Divine, and the Word and its holiness. The reason is that the Lord alone, through truths from the Word, opens Heaven to the man who lives according thereto; and without Heaven being opened this profane cannot exist. Hence it is evident that the Gentiles . . . cannot induce on themselves such a profane. Nor the Jews . . . Nor the impious who have been such from their childhood . . .

1053². The second kind of profanation . . . is with those who have domination as the end, and the holy things of the Word, of the Church, and of worship, as the means. Ex. 1054². 1055².

—^e. In this kind of profanation are all those who are in sacred ministries, and who seek their own honour and glory through the holy things of the Church . . .

1055³. But this second kind of profanation of the holy things of the Church is not like the first kind of the profanation of them. The first kind exists with those with whom communication with Heaven has been effected through the opening of their spiritual mind; but this second kind of profanation exists with those with whom the spiritual mind has not been opened . . . The lot of these profaners after death . . . is that they are in hatred against the Lord, Heaven, the Word, the Church, and all its holy things. They come into such hatred from the fact that dominion is taken away from them . . .

1058². In the third kind of profanation are those who adore Divine things with devout gestures, and pious lips, and yet in heart and spirit deny them . . . Ex. 1059², Ex.

1061². The fourth kind of profanation is to lead a life of piety (des.) and yet to make of no account the precepts of life (des.). Ex. 1062², Ex. 1063², Ex.

—^e. This kind of profanation is not hypocritical, like the former one. Ex.

1062^e. Of this kind those profane more who defend their vices . . .

1064². The fifth kind of profanation is not like the rest . . . for it is to jest from the Word, and about the Word. Ex.

1141. All goods and truths . . . profaned by the Babylonians. Sig. 1142. 1143. 1144. 1145. 1146. 1148. 1150. 1151. 1152. 1153. 1154. 1155. 1156.

1158². For it is better for man to be constantly evil, than to be good and afterwards evil; for thus he becomes profane. Hence comes the permission of evil. Ex.

—³. There are many kinds of profanation, but this kind is the most grievous of all. Their lot after death is terrible: they are not in Hell, but beneath Hell, and there they do not think, or will, but they see and act; they see things which are not, and do not see things which are; and they act as if they were acting all things, and yet they act nothing, being altogether deliriums of phantasy. And, as they do not think or will, they are no longer men (and are called it). Such do those become who have once been reformed, and do not remain so. The cause of this horrible lot is this. By their reformation there is effected communication with Heaven; goods and truths inflow which open the interiors of their minds, and remove evils to the sides. . . . If they do not remain in this state . . . those evils flow back, and commingle themselves with the truths and goods. Thus Hell mingles itself with Heaven in them, so that they cannot be separated; for whatever has once been impressed on the mind of a man by love is never extirpated. Therefore, after death, as the goods cannot be separated from the evils, nor the truths from the falsities, the whole mind is destroyed, so that they no longer have any thought or will; and that which remains is like a shell with the kernel taken out, or like the skin and bones without the flesh . . . Know, therefore, that there is no danger in coming from evil to good; but that there is danger in coming from good to evil. 1160², Ill.

1182². 'To be cast into the depth of the sea' = into Hell. The reason this 'is better,' is that to know goods and truths, and to pervert them, is to profane.

Prophet. Propheta.

Prophecy. Prophetare.

Prophecy. Prophetia.

Prophetic. Propheticus.

Prophetess. Prophetissa.

See FALSE PROPHET.

A. 66². The third style of the Word is the prophetic, which was born from the style of the Most Ancient Church. But it is not continuous . . . and is scarcely intelligible except in the internal sense, where are the greatest arcana, which follow in a beautiful connected order, and regard the external and the internal man, many states of the Church, Heaven itself, and, in the inmosts, the Lord. 1139. D.2721.

302^e. (The prophetic style was to prevent profanation.)

382. 'Prophets'=those who teach. 1460².

1116^e. Representatives like those seen by the prophets. 1532.

1462⁷. 'A prophet'=one who teaches, thus the doctrine of Knowledges.

1532. The visions of the prophets were nothing else than openings of their interior sight. Examps. 1619. 4527^e.

1756³. When moved by the prophetic Spirit . . .

1786. Visions were different to Moses from what they were to the prophets. Ex.

1871². This is especially the case with the prophetic Word of the Old Testament.

1925. There were Angels who . . . spoke through the prophets. —⁴, Ex.

1966. On prophetic visions and dreams. Gen.art. 1970. 1975. 1976. 2179². —³.

2310. That there is an internal sense in the propheticals may be believed more easily . . .

2353². 'Prophets.' here, =those who teach falsities. 3301².

2534. 'Because he is a prophet' (Gen.xx.7)=that thus it would be taught.

— . 'A prophet,' in the sense of the letter, =those to whom there is revelation ; and also, abstractedly, the revelation itself : but in the internal sense, one who teaches ; and also, abstractedly, the doctrine itself. And as the Lord is doctrine itself, or the Word which teaches, He is called 'a prophet.' Ill.

—³. 'To prophesy' = to teach. 2567⁵.

2576¹⁴. 'Came ye out to see a prophet ? I say . . . more than a prophet' (Matt. xi. 9). 'A prophet' = the externals of doctrine and worship.

2592. (Delight of a heathen) when I read to him something from the propheticals.

2606. The prophetical Books enum.

2608. (Prophetical parts where there is no sense in the letter.)

2686. The prophetical writings in the Ancient Church. 2897, Ex. 2898.

2826¹⁰. Where, in the prophets, good is spoken of, so also is truth.

3010. 'False prophets' (Matt. xxiv. 24) = those who teach truths not Divine, or falsities.

3316⁴. 'Sons of the prophets' = those who teach.

3652. 'Spoken of by Daniel the prophet' = by the prophets ; for when any prophet is mentioned in the Word by name, it is the prophetic Word itself which is meant. . . By 'Daniel' is meant all the prophetic concerning the Lord's Advent, and the state of the Church.

— . Vastation is much treated of in the prophets, and by it in the sense of the letter is signified the vastation of the Jewish and Israelitish Church ; but, in the internal sense, the vastation of the Church in general ; thus that which is now at hand. T. 758.

3693². 'The sun shall go down upon the prophets' (Micah iii. 6) = that they will no longer have truth and the doctrine of truth. 'Prophets' = those who teach the truths of doctrine.

3698². (This) was from the proprium of the prophet.

3869⁵. 'To hear Moses and the prophets' = to know the things in the Word, and to have faith in it ; thus also to will them.

3900². 'There shall arise false Christs and false prophets' = the falsities of that doctrine.

4652². (Thus) the Spirit spoke with the prophets not as a man with a man, but as a spirit with a man, that is, in him. Ill.

4677⁵. The prophets were clad in coats of hair, because by the prophets was represented the Lord as to the truths of doctrine . . .

4682. Hence, by the prophets, in the Word, to whom truth Divine was manifested either by speech, by visions, or by dreams, are signified those who teach truths ; and, in the abstract sense, the truths of doctrine.

—². 'To prophesy' = to teach and preach them.

—³.

5110⁶. The form in which He appeared to the prophets.

5121³. Such were most of the revelations of the prophets in the Jewish Church : they heard a voice, they saw a vision, or they dreamed a dream ; but, as they had no perception, they were merely verbal or visual revelations . . .

6148¹⁰. 'Priests' = goods ; 'prophets,' those who teach.

6212. It is known from the Word that there was an influx from the World of Spirits and from Heaven into the prophets, partly by dreams, partly by visions, and partly by speech ; and also, with some, into the speech itself, and into the gestures themselves ; thus into the things which are of the body ; and that they then did not speak from themselves, or act from themselves, but from the Spirits who then occupied their bodies. Examps.

—⁴. (Thus) was I instructed how the prophets, through whom Spirits spoke and acted, were possessed ; namely, that the Spirits occupied their bodies, inasmuch that scarcely anything was left except that they knew that they existed. There were certain Spirits for this use, who did not want to obsess men, but only to enter into the corporeal affections of the man ; and, when they entered into these, they entered into all things of the body. . . The Spirits who possessed my body, as formerly the bodies of the prophets, said that at the time they knew no otherwise than that they had life as in the body.

—^e. There were also other influxes with the prophets ; namely, that they exercised their own discretion and thought, only that the spirits were speaking with them, for the most part inwardly in them ; the influx not being into the thought and will, but merely discourse which came to their hearing.

6333². The reason the Word is prophetical, is that when it is read it is not understood by the man except obscurely ; and when it is understood obscurely by such a man as there is now, it is perceived by the Angels clearly.

6632⁶. 'The Law and the prophets' = the Word in each and all things.

6752. Elias represents the Lord as to the prophets . . .

7055³. The prophets wrote as the Spirit from the Divine dictated ; for the very words which they wrote were uttered in their ears. With them was the truth which proceeds mediately from the Divine, that is, through Heaven, but not the truth which proceeds immediately ; for they had not a perception of what each thing signified.

7268². Hence Aaron is here called Moses' prophet . . . that is, one who utters adequately to the understanding the Divine truth which proceeds immediately from the Lord, and which transcends all understanding. And, as a prophet is one who teaches and utters Divine truth adequately to the understanding, 'a prophet' = the doctrine of the Church. 7269, Ex. R. 8⁵.

7553³. 'The prophets who see vanity and divine a lie' (Ezek. xiii. 9) = those who teach evils and falsities. 9248.

8337. 'Miriam the prophetess' (Ex. xv. 20). Ex.

8408⁵. 'The prophets' = doctrines from the Word.

8781². The Word in the letter, especially the pro- phetic one, is nothing else (than the density of a cloud) relatively to the internal sense.

[A.] 8902¹⁴. 'Prophets and apostles' (Luke xi.49)=the truths and goods of the Church.

9188⁸. That 'prophet' (Dent.xviii.15) is the Lord. Ill.

—^e. 'A prophet'=one who teaches; in the abstract sense, doctrine; thus the Lord as to the Word or Divine truth.

9198². 'No prophet is accepted in his own country' (Luke iv.25)=that the Lord and the Divine truth from Him are less received and loved at heart within the Church than outside it. . . 'A prophet,' in this sense, = the Lord as to the Divine truth, thus as to the doctrine of the Church.

9229⁶. 'Prophets'=the doctrine of truth which is through the Word from the Lord.

9263⁷. 'Prophets'=those who teach the truths and goods of faith; and, in the abstract sense, the doctrines of faith. Ill.

9341⁷. That the prophetic Word would perish. Rep.

9372⁵. 'More than a prophet'=that the Word is more than any doctrine in the world.

—⁶. That 'all the prophets and the Law prophesied until John.' Ex.

9457². Such things appeared also to the prophets, when their interior sight was opened. Ill.

9806². The Lord is called 'a prophet' when truth is treated of.

9809⁹. 'Prophets' (in the series 'kings,' 'princes,' 'priests,' and 'prophets')=doctrines.

9820². The prophets are called 'holy' because by them is signified the Word, which is the Divine truth; and, in special, doctrines from the Word.

9954⁹. The reason the prophets were anointed, was that the prophets represented the Lord as to the doctrine of Divine truth, consequently as to the Word. E.375¹⁵.

10683⁶. 'A disciple'=the truth of life; 'a prophet,' the truth of doctrine.

H. 254. How the Lord spoke with the prophets.—Not by an influx into their interiors, but through Spirits who were sent to them, whom the Lord filled with His aspect, and thus inspired the words which they dictated to the prophets. . . As the words came forth immediately from the Lord, each of them is filled with what is Divine, and contains in itself an internal sense. . . A Spirit who is filled with the Divine knows not but that he is the Lord. . .

J. 50. The Mohammedans who had acknowledged the Lord as the Greatest Prophet. . .

59². 'Prophets'=those who teach truth, and through it lead to good; and 'false prophets,' those who teach falsity, and by it seduce.

L. 15². The prophets represented the Lord as to the Word, and thence as to the Church; and the Lord was the Prophet. Ill.

—^e. By the Lord as the greatest prophet, is signified the Church itself and the Word itself. 16⁵, Ill.

28. The prophets were called 'sons of man' because they represented the Lord as to the Word, and thence signified the doctrine of the Church from the Word. . . For the spiritual signification of 'a prophet' is the doctrine of the Church from the Word; and, when said of the Lord, the Word itself. Ill. S.35.

52. That Jehovah Himself. . . spoke the Word through the prophets. Ex.

— . When the prophets were in vision, they were not in their bodies, but in their spirits, in which state they saw such things as are in Heaven. But when Jehovah spoke with them, they were in their bodies, and heard Jehovah speaking. These two states of the prophets are to be carefully distinguished. Ex. and Ill. R.36. 945².

53. It is not said in the prophets that they spoke the Word from the Holy Spirit, but that they spoke it from Jehovah. . . Ill. R.36^e. T.158.

P. 230³. By 'the name,' and 'the reward,' of 'a prophet,' is meant the state and happiness of those who are in Divine truths.

R. 8. 'The words of this prophecy' (Rev.i.3)=the doctrine of the New Jerusalem; for by 'a prophet,' in the abstract sense, is signified the doctrine of the Church from the Word; thus, here, the doctrine of the New Church; and the like by 'a prophecy.'

—². 'The reason 'prophet' and 'prophecy'=the doctrine of the Church from the Word, is that the Word was written through the prophets. . . and therefore when 'a prophet' is mentioned, since his function was to write and teach the Word, there is meant the Word as to doctrine, or doctrine from the Word. Hence the Lord, being the Word itself, was called 'the prophet.'

— . That by 'a prophet' is meant the doctrine of the Church from the Word. Ill.

—³. 'To receive a prophet in the name of a prophet'=to receive the doctrine of truth because it is true. E.102⁶.

—⁶. 'Prophets and priests'=the universal Church as to the truth of doctrine and the good of life. Ill.

36^e. The Word was not revealed in a state of vision, but was dictated by the Lord to the prophets viva voce. And therefore it is nowhere said that they spoke from the Holy Spirit, but from Jehovah.

132². 'To kill the prophets' (1 Kings xviii.4,13)=to destroy the truths of doctrine from the Word.

133. 'Who calleth herself a prophetess' (Rev.ii.20)=who make it the doctrine itself of the Church, and found all their theology upon it. By 'a prophet,' in the Word, is signified the doctrine of the Church; in like manner therefore by 'a prophetess.' (=the doctrine of all falsities. E.160.)

173². The prophets and apostles are called 'holy' because by 'prophets' and 'apostles' are signified the truths of doctrine of the Church.

478. By 'the mystery of God evangelized to the prophets' (Rev.x.7) is signified that which has been foretold by the Lord in the Word, and has hitherto been hidden.

483. 'Thou must prophesy again. . .' (ver.11)=that they must be further taught.

509. 'Those two prophets tormented them . . .' (Rev. xi.10)=that these two essentials . . . are in opposition . . .

526. 'To give reward to His servants the prophets . . .' (ver.18)=the happiness of eternal life to those who are in truths of doctrine from the Word . . .

687. 'The blood of saints and prophets have they poured out' (Rev.xvi.6)=that (faith alone) when received, perverts all true doctrinals from the Word.

790. 'Ye holy apostles and prophets' (Rev.xviii.20) =the men of the Church who are in goods and truths from the Word. . . 'Prophets'=truths from good from the Word.

801. 'In her was found the blood of prophets and of saints' (ver.24)=the adulteration and profanation of every truth of the Word and of the Church. . . 'Prophets'=all who are in Divine truths from the Word; and, abstractedly, the truths of doctrine from the Word.

819. 'The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy' (Rev.xix.10)=that it is the all of the Word and of the doctrine thence.

943. 'The Lord God of the holy prophets' (Rev.xxii.6)=the Lord from whom is the Word of both Covenants; for by 'prophets' are signified those who teach truths from the Word; and, in the abstract sense, the doctrine of truth of the Church; and, in a wide sense, the Word itself, (thus) the Word of both Covenants.

944. 'Blessed is he that keepeth the words of this prophecy' (ver.7)=that the Lord will give eternal life to those who keep and do the truths or precepts of the doctrine of this Book, now opened by the Lord.

946. 'I am . . . of thy brethren the prophets' (ver.9) =those who are in the doctrine of the New Jerusalem.

947. 'Seal not the words of this prophecy' (ver.10)=that the Apocalypse is not to be closed up.

957. 'Everyone that heareth the words of the prophecy of this Book' (ver.18)=those who read and know the truths of doctrine of this Book now opened by the Lord. 958.

391¹⁹. 'The blood of the prophets'=the falsification of the truths of doctrine.

409⁶. 'Prophets,' in the Word, = the doctrine of Divine truth; thus the Divine truth as to doctrine.

483¹¹. 'Prophets'=false doctrines.

559⁴. 'A prophet'=the doctrine of truth, and thence the knowledge of truth; but here the doctrine and knowledge of falsity.

[E.] 569²⁰. 'A prophet' = doctrine from the Word.

577⁷. 'Prophets' = those who teach truths, and the intelligent; and, abstractedly, the doctrine of truth, and intelligence.

587¹³. 'A prophet' = one who teaches truths; and, in the abstract sense, the doctrine of genuine truth which is from the Lord. 600²⁰.

590². The incantations in which the prophets were skilled. Ex.

601⁸. 'His servants the prophets' (Amos iii.7) = those who are in the truths of doctrine, and receive.

612. 'His servants the prophets' (Rev. x.7) = the truths of doctrine, here, the Word.

619³. The prophet John.

624⁴. The reason 'to prophesy' = to teach the Word, is that by 'a prophet,' in the supreme sense, is meant the Lord as to the Word; and, in the relative sense, one who teaches the Word; but, in the abstract sense, the Word itself, and also doctrine from the Word. Hence, 'to prophesy' = to teach the Word and also to teach doctrine from the Word. Fully ill.

—¹³. By 'prophets,' in the spiritual sense, are meant all whom the Lord leads, and with whom also the Lord inflows, and reveals to them the arcana of the Word, whether they teach them, or not. —¹⁵. —¹⁶, Ill.

—¹⁵. The prophets of the Old Testament were not illustrated as to the understanding; but only received in the hearing the words which they were to say or write, without understanding their interior and still less their spiritual sense.

— . In the opposite sense, by 'prophets' are signified perversions and falsifications of the Word, and falsities of doctrine. Ill.

—¹⁶. 'To kill the prophets' = to extinguish Divine truth by the falsification of the Word.

—¹⁸. In a word, prophets teach; and priests lead.

695¹⁹. 'So persecuted they the prophets who were before you' = that formerly they had in like manner assaulted the truths of doctrine.

727¹². 'The judge and the prophet' = the doctrine of good and of truth.

811⁶. All the prophets represented the Church as to doctrine from the Word.

—¹². By 'a prophet,' in general, is signified the doctrine of the Church from the Word.

1037². Therefore, when the eyes of the spirit were opened with the prophets, they saw such things as represented the Divine celestial and Divine spiritual things of the Church; and also such things as represented the future things which would happen in the Churches.

A. 645^e. The expiation or propitiation of the Lord is protection from the inundation of evil.

9506. 'Thou shalt make a propitiatory (or mercy-seat) of pure gold' (Ex. xxv.17) = the hearing and reception of all things of worship from the good of love. 'The propitiatory' = the cleansing from evils, or the remission of sins, consequently, the hearing and reception of all things which are of worship. That 'the propitiatory' = the cleansing from evils and the remission of sins, is evident from the places in the Word where propitiation or expiation is mentioned; and that it = the reception of all things of worship, is because those who have been propitiated or expiated, that is, cleansed from evils, are alone heard . . . and therefore Aaron was not allowed to approach the propitiatory until he had cleansed and expiated himself and the people.

—². (Moreover) Jehovah spoke with Moses upon the propitiatory between the cherubs. T. 283².

50². The Angels (then) bend man by his Own cupidities . . .

131. A posterity of the Most Ancient Church who affected proprium. Tr. 133. 137. 142.

132. As man . . . wants to be led also by himself and the world, or from proprium, proprium is here treated of, as being conceded to him.

134. He is therefore let into a state of proprium, and proprium is given him. Sig.

135. That celestial and spiritual life were adjoined to proprium, so as to appear as a one. Sig. 160^e.

136. That innocence was insinuated into the proprium, so that it should not be ungrateful. Sig.

138. 'A help as with him'=proprium, which is also called a rib built into a woman. 140. 142.

141. Innumerable things might be said about proprium, as to how proprium is with the corporeal and worldly man, how with the spiritual man, and how with the celestial man. Proprium, with the corporeal and worldly man, is his all; he knows nothing but proprium; if he should lose proprium, he would suppose himself to perish. With the spiritual man, proprium appears similar; for although he knows that the Lord is the life of all . . . he does not so much believe as say it. But the celestial man . . . perceives it to be so, and never desires proprium; and yet . . . proprium is given him by the Lord, which is conjoined with all perception of good and truth, and with all happiness. The Angels are in such proprium, and in the highest peace and tranquillity, for in their proprium are those things which are the Lord's, who rules their proprium, or them through their proprium. This proprium is the veriest Celestial; but the proprium of the corporeal man is the Infernal.

146^e. Those who desire proprium begin to despise the things of the Lord . . .

147. 'The rib'=the proprium of man in which there is little vitality, and a proprium which is dear to him. 'The flesh in place of the rib'=a proprium in which is vitality. 'A deep sleep'=the state into which he was let that he might seem to himself to have proprium . . . for in that state he knows not but that he lives . . . from himself. 148, Ex.

149. 'Bones'=proprium, and indeed proprium vivified by the Lord. Ill.

—². The proprium of man, when viewed from Heaven, appears as a bony, inanimate, and very deformed thing; but when vivified by the Lord, it appears fleshy.

— . The Lord alone has proprium; from proprium He redeemed man; and from proprium He saves him. The Lord's proprium is Life; and, from His proprium He vivifies man's proprium, [which in itself is dead.

The Lord's proprium is signified by, 'A Spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see Me have.'

150. The state of man when in proprium, or when he supposes that he lives from himself, is compared to a deep sleep.

— That the proprium of man in itself is dead. Shown from experience.

151. 'The rib'=the proprium not vivified; 'the woman'=the proprium vivified by the Lord; 'to bring her to the man'=that proprium was given him . . . (that is) a proprium vivified by the Lord.

152. It was the woman who was beguiled; for nothing ever beguiles man but his proprium; or, what is the same, the love of self and of the world.

154. There is never anything evil and false which is not proprium, and from proprium; for the proprium of man is evil itself. . . When things proper [to man] are presented to view in the World of Spirits, they appear so deformed that nothing can be depicted more so, with a diversity according to the nature of the proprium; so that he to whom the things proper to him are presented is horrified, and would flee from himself as a devil. But the propriums which have been vivified by the Lord appear beautiful with a variety according to the life . . .

155. The heavenly marriage is . . . in the proprium; and the proprium vivified by the Lord is called His 'bride,' and 'wife.' The proprium thus vivified by the Lord has a perception of all the good of love and truth of faith; and thus has all wisdom and intelligence conjoined with ineffable happiness.

—². The quality of this vivified proprium (is) that the Angels perceive that they live from the Lord, and, when they do not reflect, they know no otherwise than that they live from themselves . . . This proprium is meant in . . . 'a woman shall compass a man' . . . for the proprium is such that it encompasses, as a rib made flesh encompasses the heart.'

156. 'Bone of bones and flesh of flesh'=the proprium of the external man; 'bone,' proprium not vivified; 'flesh,' the proprium vivified . . .

157. Those who could be called their own-proprium-of the same family . . .

159. Because they desired proprium, which is of the external man . . . they no longer perceived the internal man to be distinct from the external . . .

161. As this posterity desired to live in the external man, or in proprium, it was granted them; but the Celestial Spiritual was insinuated therein.

164. The proprium of man is nothing but evil . . . but when charity and innocence from the Lord are insinuated into proprium, it appears good and lovely. These as it were abolish proprium, or the man's evil and falsity.

190. The third state of the Most Ancient Church so affected proprium as to love it. Tr.

191. The love of self, or their own love, is signified by 'the woman.' 194. 208.

206². Not to have proprium (they suppose) to be nothing.

207. (Cupidity, phantasy, and intelligence) are of proprium, or of 'the woman.'

210. What proprium is.—The proprium of man is all the evil and falsity which springs from the love of self and of the world, and from not believing in the Lord, or the Word, but in self, supposing that what they do not apprehend sensuously and scientifically is nothing. Ex. . . . This, then, is the proprium of man, which in itself is infernal and damned.

214. They are called 'naked,' because left to proprium; for those left to proprium, or to themselves, no longer have anything of intelligence and wisdom, or of faith.

215. That proprium is nothing but evil and falsity, is evident from the fact that whatever Spirits say from themselves is false and evil. Des.

—^e. 'A graven image'=the falsity which is of proprium; 'a molten image'=the evil which is of proprium.

237. The Church so loved self or proprium that it could no longer apprehend anything of truth. Tr.

241. Everyone may know from his Own experience. 379².

249. 'Nations'=those who trust in proprium.

252. The heavenly marriage is such that Heaven and the Church are united to the Lord through proprium, inasmuch that it is in the proprium; for without proprium there is no union; and when the Lord insinuates innocence, peace, and good into this proprium, it then still appears as proprium, but heavenly and most happy. (The difference between) the heavenly and angelic proprium, which is from the Lord, and the infernal and diabolical proprium, which is from self, is like that between Heaven and Hell.

253. From the heavenly and angelic proprium the Church is called in the Word 'woman,' 'wife,' 'bride,' 'virgin,' and 'daughter.' Ill. 261. 262.

256. The Lord was born in a Church which had lapsed into an infernal and diabolical proprium . . . that of His own power He might unite the Divine celestial proprium to the human proprium, in His Human essence, so that they should become a one in Him.

714. Man . . . regarded in his proprium is nothing but a beast.

730. In temptation, man is in vastation of all things which are of proprium . . . for the things proper to man must die . . .

731. The proprium of man, which is as it were destroyed when it is vivified. Sig. and Ex.

—¹. The proprium of man is all evil and falsity; but when he comes into temptations . . . it is resolved and tempered through truths and goods from the Lord, and is thus vivified, and appears as if not present . . . Still, it is not destroyed, but remains. Ex.

780. For in the proprium of the man there is the life of the Lord, which is the life of charity and faith.

841². After temptation . . . the things of the Lord, and those proper to man, appear confounded . . .

848². When told that no one can do what is good from himself, or from proprium, he is astounded.

868². No evil and falsity can ever be abolished, because man's proper life consists in evil and falsity.

874². Man's Own cupidities mingle themselves in what he does . . . so that inwardly it is filthy.

875⁴. If the Lord were to remit . . . so that man acted from his Own will, he would do evil . . .

876². Such things are in proprium . . .

878³. Evils are from the proprium of his will; falsities are from the proprium of his understanding.

942. Own justice.

978. (People) believe that they do good and think truth from proprium. Proprium is attended with this.

981³. The spiritual . . . do not acknowledge (mercy), because they remain in proprium, and love it.

987. Man, Spirit, and Angel (as to) all his proprium, is the vilest excrement. Des.

994⁷. The filthy pleasures which derive their origin from proprium. Sig.

99². Propria voluntaria. Sig.

1000. The new life . . . is entirely separate from the Voluntary or proprium of the man, that is, from the life proper to man, which is not life . . .

1001⁵. That the Celestial, which is the proprium of the Lord . . . should not be commingled with the proprium of man, which is profane. Rep.

1011. When charity is extinguished, man is left to himself and his proprium . . .

1023. The heavenly marriage in the Most Ancient Church was in the voluntary proprium; but in the Ancient Church was in the intellectual proprium; for when the Voluntary of man became wholly corrupt, the Lord separated his intellectual proprium from that corrupt voluntary proprium, and in his intellectual proprium formed a new will . . . So far as the voluntary proprium can be separated from this intellectual proprium, the Lord can be present with him . . . Temptations . . . cause the voluntary proprium to be quiescent, to become as nothing, and as it were to die. So far as this is done, the Lord through conscience implanted in the intellectual proprium can operate in charity. Sig. 1040³.

1025³. Their Own proper posterity.

1042². With the regenerate spiritual man, there is an intellectual proprium in which the Lord insinuates innocence, charity, and mercy. Sig. (by 'the rainbow.') 1043.

1044. 'The earth' here = the voluntary proprium of man, which cannot be regenerated.

—³. The 'sign of the covenant' is this: that in so far as there is the presence of the Lord in the intellectual proprium, the voluntary proprium must be removed.

1047. That on account of the voluntary proprium of man the faith of charity does not appear. Sig. and Ex.

1049. Man's proprium is infernal, and is his very Hell itself; for through his voluntary proprium he communicates with Hell, and from Hell and itself it is such that it desires nothing more than to precipitate itself into Hell; nor is it content with this, but desires to cast down all in the universe.

1076^e. Hence do they live in proprium.

1316. With whom his Own good is the end, the Lord can never be present: the proprium itself of man alienates the Lord. Ex.

1326. The love of self is nothing else than the proprium . . . from which flow forth all evils . . .

1387. Suppose that they would be bereaved of all life, because they would (then) think nothing from self or proprium . . .

—². They then live from the Lord, and also have proprium, which is given them with all happiness.

1412. The exterior things are those which are proper to the body.

1438². All men have no other seed than a something filthy and infernal, in which and from which is their proprium . . . and therefore unless they receive from the Lord new seed, and a new proprium, that is, a new will and a new understanding, they must be accursed to Hell.

1444². The Lord had no actual or Own evil. 1573⁸.

1551^e. 'Made with their hands'=what is from proprium.

1568⁴. The things which are discordant are of the man and his proprium.

1594⁵. To angel or man, while he lives in mutual love, the Lord gives a heavenly proprium, so that it appears to him no otherwise than that he does good of himself; hence the internal man is predicated of man, as if it were his.

1639. The speech of words is the speech proper to men . . .

1661⁴. When man . . . supposes good and truth to be from self . . . the goods and truths from which he is combating . . . are not goods and truths . . . for proprium is in them . . .

—^e. His Divine Essence thus introduced the Human to overcome from its Own power.

1673⁴. Regard all that is their Own as the common good.

1695. Evil Spirits are not allowed to think and speak contrary to their Own evil.

1712. The proprium and self-merit which they place in them . . .

—². With their Own forces.

1745^e. The internal man of the Angels . . . in so far as their Own things do not hinder, is the Lord.

1755². The will to dominate is something of human proprium . . .

1813². For his proprium from the father, in addition to the proprium actually acquired by himself, is such.

— . The human proprium is attended with such phantasies.

1937². These Spirits are as if devoid of proprium, so that they have no determination, and are among the more useless.

—³. (Thus) man ought to compel himself to do good and speak truth, (because) he is then gifted by the Lord with a heavenly proprium. Man's heavenly proprium is formed in the endeavour of his thought . . .

—⁵. This (interior) freedom is from the Lord, who . . . by means of it causes him to overcome the evil as it were from proprium. Through this freedom the man receives a proprium in which the Lord can operate good. Without a proprium acquired through freedom . . . man can never be reformed, because he cannot receive a new will. 1947.

—⁶. It is celestial love which the Lord then insinuates, and through which He creates his proprium; and therefore the Lord wants it to appear to the man as his, although it is not his. This proprium, which he thus receives through what is apparently compelled in the life of the body, is infilled by the Lord in the other life with indefinite delights . . . The Angels are in such proprium; and in proportion as they are in the truth that all good and truth are from the Lord, they are in the delight and happiness of this proprium.

—⁷. But those who reject all good and truth . . . cannot compel themselves, and thus cannot receive this proprium of conscience, or new Voluntary.

1940². The Rational, which appears as proper to man.

1947². When man is being regenerated, he compels himself from the freedom with which he is gifted by the Lord . . . and thence receives a heavenly proprium, which proprium is afterwards perfected by the Lord by degrees, and becomes more and more free . . .

2041. 'Flesh'=the proprium of man. The proprium of man is nothing but the love of self and of the world . . . which is filthy . . . and is to be removed. Sig.

2654⁴. This Rational mocks if told that it has nothing of its Own . . .

2657⁵. The proprium which man has before regeneration, and the proprium which he has after it. Ex.

2678. The spiritual man left in proprium. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. Unknown to themselves, they are led by their proprium. 2679.

2831⁸. Scientific proprium.

2880. Nothing appears to man as his own-suum, or, what is the same, as his proprium, except what flows from freedom. Ex.

— . To act from affection is to act from life, that is, from self, thus from what is our own-suo, or, what is the same, from proprium. In order, therefore, for man to receive a heavenly proprium, such as is the proprium of the Angels in Heaven, he must be kept in freedom, and be introduced through freedom.

2883. In order that man may receive a heavenly proprium, he must do good of himself, and think truth of himself; but still know . . . think, and believe, that all good and truth are from the Lord. (Thus do) good and truth become as his Own. 2891.

3108². Before truth has been conjoined with good, it is indeed with the man, but does not become as his-ejus, or as his Own; but as soon as it is initiated into its good, it is appropriated to him.

3341. All shade, thus all insanity and folly, are from the proprium which man, Spirit, and Angel has.

3394². For (the spiritual) cannot be separated from proprium . . .

3518. This good in the Natural, which the Lord had from the Father, was His proprium, because His life itself. (Rep. by Esau.)

3603^e. Thus makes evils his own-sua, or his Own-propria.

3705. That the good in which He was, was from proprium. Sig. and Ex.

3812. 'Bone'=man's intellectual proprium; and 'flesh,' his voluntary proprium; thus 'bone'=his proprium as to truth; and 'flesh,' his proprium as to good.

—². As concerns the proprium in general, it is twofold, one infernal, the other heavenly. Man receives the infernal one from Hell, and the heavenly one from Heaven, that is, through Heaven from the Lord. Ex.

—³. This proprium, in both senses, is signified by 'bone,' and 'flesh.' Ill.

3813. 'Flesh,' in the supreme sense, =the proprium of the Lord's Divine Human, which is Divine good; in the relative sense, man's voluntary proprium vivified by the proprium of the Divine Human. (6968.) . . . This proprium is what is called the heavenly proprium, which, in itself, is of the Lord alone appropriated to those who are in good and thence in truth. Such a proprium have the Angels, and men who as to their spirit are in the Lord's Kingdom. But, in the opposite sense, 'flesh'=the voluntary proprium of man, which in itself is nothing but evil, and because not vivified by the Lord is called dead. Ill.

[A.] 3901³. The Rational from proprium . . . Sig.

3906². Good from proprium cannot but regard self . . .

3993⁵. 'Black,' in special, =the proprium of man, because this is nothing but evil.

3994. The proprium of innocence. Sig. and Ex.

3999. 'Hire,' predicated of the Lord, = proprium, namely, that which is acquired from His Own power.

4001. The proprium of the man who is being regenerated reigns at first; for he supposes that he does what is good from proprium . . .

4007^e. There are two things which are put off by all who enter Heaven, namely, proprium and the derivative confidence, and self-merit or Own justice; and they put on a heavenly proprium, which is from the Lord . . . and, in proportion as they do so, they come the more interiorly into Heaven.

4086. Advertence from proprium. Sig.

4088. The proprium of the good signified by Laban, that it is not such as to act from itself. Sig. and Ex.

4137. The state in which it would have believed from proprium . . . Sig. 4138.

4145². Then begins to think that by the good he does from proprium he merits nothing.

4151⁷. The evil . . . urgently entreat to be allowed to live in proprium . . .

4166. That no truths were His Own, but all were given. Sig.

4168. 'Twenty' = proprium; (for) remains, when predicated of the Lord, are nothing else than His proprium. 'Twenty years'=the states of the proprium. . . In the supreme sense, these words treat of the proprium in the Natural, which the Lord acquired for Himself by His Own power . . . 4176.

4171. From this (actual evil) is the proprium which man acquires for himself.

4174^e. Thus derive the good which inflows from the Lord, into their own proprium.

4295³. In proportion as the Angels are not in proprium, they are in good and truth.

4623. Those in evil and falsity by affection are in the life of the proprium, thus in a life not real . . .

4735. With the Ancients, 'flesh and blood' =the Human proprium . . . The Lord's proprium itself which He acquired for Himself by His Own power, is Divine. His proprium from conception was that which He had from Jehovah, and was Jehovah Himself; and hence the proprium which He acquired for Himself in the Human was Divine. This Divine proprium in the Human is what is called the 'flesh and blood' . . .

4843^e. Such things with man, proper to him, which he must 'leave.'

5155. All evil inflows from Hell, that is, from the proprium of man which makes one with Hell.

5376. Nothing is appropriated to anyone which he does not acknowledge from His Own view . . .

5608⁵. Infants do not rule themselves from proprium.

5647. For they feared to be adjoined to the Internal, and thereby to lose their own proprium; and, with their proprium, their freedom . . . 5660².

5660². They would receive instead a heavenly proprium, and, with this proprium, blessedness and happiness to eternity.

—³. As to the heavenly proprium, this comes forth from the new will . . . and differs from the proprium of man in the fact that they no longer regard themselves in everything which they do, learn, and teach; but they regard the neighbour, the public, the Church, the Lord's Kingdom, and thus the Lord Himself . . . He who is gifted with a heavenly proprium, is also in quiet and in peace; for he trusts in the Lord, and believes that nothing of evil can happen to him; and he knows that concupiscences do not infest him. Moreover, those who are in a heavenly proprium are in freedom itself; for to be led by the Lord is freedom; for they are led in good, from good, to good.

5672^e. The states of shade come forth . . . from the proprium of the Angels; for in proportion as they are let into their own proprium, they come into a state of shade, or of evening; and in proportion as they are elevated into their heavenly proprium, they come into a state of light. 6110⁴.

5725. When a man who has lived in good is remitted into his proprium, thus into the sphere of his own life, there appears as it were an inundation; and, when in this inundation, he is indignant, angry, thinks with disquietude, and desires with vehemence . . .

5758². In proportion as I have been left to proprium, or myself, I have been inundated with evils; and in proportion as I have been withheld thence by the Lord, I have been elevated from evil into good.

5760. To be without freedom from proprium. Sig. 5763, Ex. 5786, Ex. 6138. 6568.

5773. Mourning on account of the loss of truths from proprium. Sig. and Ex.

—². (In the second state of regeneration) they are let into temptation, whereby the things of proprium are weakened, and good is insinuated . . . and, with this, a new freedom, thus a new proprium. Rep.

5886⁵. 'Sell all that thou hast . . . '=that they must alienate all things which are their Own, which are nothing but evils and falsities.

5964^e. (In this state of 'evening') they can no longer be withheld from their proprium . . . and therefore this state comes when they are left to themselves. or to their proprium; and, in proportion as they . . . are immersed in it, they recede from the things of Heaven, and good becomes imperceptible to them, and truth obscure.

5993². As all of man's life from proprium is of the love of self and of the world . . .

6119. (In states of shade) they are remitted as to some part into their proprium . . .

6122. In a state of desolation they are obscured by proprium . . .

6138². 'Father and mother'=in general the things which are of man's proprium from heredity; 'son and daughter,' the things which are of man's proprium from actuality.

6163. That they would renounce their proprium. Sig.

6323³. For love towards the neighbour and love to the Lord are proper to man.

6368. For man's will and thought from proprium are nothing but evil and the derivative falsity.

6960. 'Bosom'=proprium, for that is man's proprium which is of his love . . .

7007². Good and truth, in order to belong to man as his Own, must be inrooted in his will . . .

7430^e. 'Work of the hands . . .'=such things as are from proprium . . .

7784². The proprium (of those who are in the good of the Spiritual Church) is nothing but what is evil and damned; but the Lord's proprium which they receive is good.

7821. To look above self is proper to man; but to look below self is proper to beasts.

8179². When man fights as of himself, and still believes that he does so of the Lord, the good and truth which inflow . . . are appropriated to him; and hence he has a new proprium, which is called the heavenly proprium, which is a new will.

8349^e. This communication with good is interecepted as soon as man comes into his proprium; for he thus falls into the love of self or of the world.

8408. For (a life according to one's pleasure) is a life of proprium.

8409. That the proprium of man is nothing but evil. Refs. 9166⁸. 10283, Refs. 10660^e. 10808.

—³. All who are regenerated are vivified from the Lord's proprium. Sig.

8481. The falsity of evil which is in good from proprium. Sig.

8495³. That they should 'do no work on the Sabbath day'=that they should not do anything from proprium, but from the Lord; for the state of the Angels is that they will and do nothing from themselves, or from their proprium . . . The proprium from which they do not act, is signified by 'not doing their own ways . . .' This state with the Angels is the heavenly state itself; and, when they are in it, they have peace and quiet.

—⁴. It is to be known that all things which come from the proprium of man are evils.

—⁵. 'To kindle a fire'=that which is of life from proprium.

8497. The enjoyment of all good and truth as if from proprium. Sig. and Ex.

—². It is said as if from proprium, because the goods of faith and of charity cannot be given to man or Angel so as to be his Own; for men and Angels are only recipients, or forms accommodated to receive life, thus good and truth, from the Lord . . . and, as life is from the Lord, it cannot be appropriated in any other way than so as to appear as if it were their Own . . . The reason why life appears as if their Own, is that the Lord . . . wills to give all His things to man . . . This proprium, which is given by the Lord, is called the heavenly proprium.

8500. The infernal filth which is in the things which are done from proprium. Sig.

8768. These are called the Lord's Own. Ill.

8853. Every man has a proprium which he loves above all things. This is called the dominant, or universally regnant with him. This is constantly present in his thought, and also in his will; and makes his veriest life. 8854, Examps.

8869. 'A graven image'=what is from the proprium of man . . .

8942. Truth made from proprium. Sig.

8988. For whatever is of the will with man is his proprium.

9039. What is acquired from proprium. Sig. and Ex.

9166⁸. 'That which is more than these,' is not from the Lord, but from the proprium of man, thus 'from evil.'

9229. For that which is of man, and is called his proprium, is evil.

— . In proportion as man can be withheld from his proprium, in the same proportion the Lord can be present. 9954⁵.

9299. The good of worship not [to be] from proprium. Sig. and Ex.

9310. It is a characteristic mark—proprium—of love to . . .

9336². Man from proprium loves himself more than the Lord, and the world more than Heaven.

9338⁶. For the Divine must be in the Divine, not in the proprium of anyone.

9383. One state is peculiar and proper to the internal man . . . the other is peculiar and proper to the external man.

9391¹⁴. For the things which are from proprium are from evil, and thence are false, although outwardly they appear as true, because taken from the letter of the Word.

9954⁵. Without the good of love, the Divine is not present, but the proprium of man, and, with the proprium, Hell . . . for the proprium of man is nothing else.

9959⁴. That the holy things of worship were not to be commingled with the proprium of man. Sig.

10027. The Divine power of the Lord from proprium. Sig. and Ex.

10067⁷. The Lord cannot dwell in anything proper to man, because it is evil.

10283. Not communicative with the proprium of man. Sig. and Ex.

—². There are with man a voluntary proprium, and an intellectual proprium; his voluntary proprium is evil, and his intellectual proprium is the derivative falsity. Sig.

[A. 10283]². For the proprium of man desires nothing but its own-suum . . .

—'. 'Teeth' = the corporeal proprium, which is the lowest of man.

10405. Things which favour the proprium. Sig.

10406¹². That all falsities are from the proprium of man. Sig.

10490⁷. Things proper to man, which are evils and falsities in their order. Sig.

10646^e. From him who is in humiliation proprium recedes; and, in proportion as this recedes, what is Divine is received; for the proprium of man is the sole obstacle to the Divine, because his proprium is evil and falsity.

10729. Man in the former state of regeneration is indeed led by the Lord, but through his proprium; for to act from truths is to act from the things which are with man . . .

H. S. The Angels do not (make Heaven) from any possession of theirs. 12.

158. The second cause (of the changes of state with the Angels) is that they have proprium equally with men, and that it is to love themselves, and that all in Heaven are withheld from their proprium; and, in proportion as they are withheld from it by the Lord, they are in love and wisdom; and in proportion as they are not withheld, they are in the love of self; and, as everyone loves his proprium, and is drawn by it, there are these changes of state.

160. When the Angels are in the last state, which is when they are in their proprium, they begin to be sad . . . for Heaven to them is to be withheld from proprium.

277. Infants have no proprium acquired from the love of self and of the world.

278². As (those in innocence) love nothing more than to be led by the Lord . . . they are removed from their proprium; and, in proportion as they are removed from their proprium, the Lord inflows.

280. For (the Angels) know that to lead themselves is to be led by proprium; and proprium is to love self . . . 558.

—². (The celestial Angels) are separated from proprium, inasmuch that they live as it were in the Lord.

283^e. (Thus) the proprium of man . . . is contrary to innocence; for all in Hell are in proprium, and thence in the love of self.

293^e. The good which man receives in freedom . . . becomes as his Own.

341. Man is so far in innocence as he is removed from his proprium; and, so far as anyone is removed from his proprium, he is in the Lord's proprium. The Lord's proprium is what is called the Lord's justice and merit.

484 (r). (Refs. to passages on the subject of the proprium.) N. S2.

501^e. Hence it is evident what things are proper to man, and what are not proper to him . . .

504. Man's state in company is not his proper state.

—^e. The state of the interiors . . . is his proper state . . .

551^e. Vastation is . . . an immission into the interiors; thus into the proprium of the spirit . . .

556². A life of self is a life from the proprium of man; and the proprium of man, regarded in itself, is nothing but evil.

558. For the proprium of man is his hereditary evil . . .

—². Man is let into his proprium, thus into his hereditary evils, whenever he regards himself in the goods which he does. Ex. . . There are evil Spirits . . . who are skilled in the art of letting upright Spirits into their proprium . . . which they effect by this, that they let them into thoughts about themselves . . .

591. For the Angels are all withheld from their proprium, and are kept in the Lord's proprium, which is good itself; but the Spirits who are in the Hells are all in their proprium, and the proprium of everyone is nothing but evil; and (therefore) is Hell.

592². For the proprium of everyone, whether Angel, Spirit, or man, is nothing but evil; and therefore no Angels or Spirits can resist the evils continually exhaled by the Hells, because from proprium all tend to Hell.

N. 57. The dominant of man's life . . . is his will, his proprium, and his nature . . . and cannot be changed after death, because it is the man himself.

S2. On the proprium of man: that it is the love of self and of the world. Refs.

145. As to act from freedom appears to man as if from his proprium, heavenly freedom may be called heavenly proprium; and infernal freedom, infernal proprium. Infernal proprium is that into which man is born, and it is evil; but heavenly proprium is that into which man is reformed, and it is good.

U. 174². For from proprium, in which are those who are in the love of self, nothing else springs than evil; for the proprium of man is nothing but evil; and the proprium, being evil, does not receive good from Heaven: hence the love of self, when regnant, is the father of all such evils.

L. 18⁵. 'He came into His Own, but His Own received Him not . . .' (John i. 11). . . By 'His Own' are meant those who were then of the Church . . . 'The will of the flesh' = the voluntary proprium of man, which in itself is evil; 'the will of man' = the intellectual proprium of man, which in itself is falsity. . . (Life 17^e.) (Thus those are saved who are in the good of love and truths of faith from the Lord; and not those who are in proprium.

60. For nothing blinds man but his proprium . . . The proprium of man is the love of self, and the derivative pride of Own intelligence.

61². When they read the Word, their mind sticks in themselves and the world, and they thence think constantly from their proprium, which is in thick darkness as to all the things of Heaven; in which state man cannot be withdrawn by the Lord from proprium, and thus be elevated into the light of Heaven.

115. Make inquiry, and you will find that the will of man is his proprium; and that this, regarded in itself, is mere evil; and that thence comes the falsity in the understanding.

Life 30². That these things are from proprium, and therefore there is no life in them. Sig.

93. As this proprium of man makes the first root of his life, it is evident what kind of a tree man would be if this root were not extirpated, and a new root implanted . . .

W. 73. Nothing proper to nature can be predicated of the Divine; and space and time are proper to nature. T. 27.

114. For the Angels are not Angels from their proprium; their proprium is exactly like the proprium of man, which is evil. The proprium of the Angels is such because all Angels have been men, and this proprium is inherent in them from birth. It is only removed; and, in proportion as it is removed, the Angels receive love and wisdom, that is, the Lord, in themselves. Everyone can see . . . that the Lord must dwell with the Angels in His own-suo; that is, in His own proprium, which is love and wisdom, and not at all in the proprium of the Angels, which is evil. P. 53³.

264. That the origin of evil is the abuse of the faculties which are proper to man, and are called rationality and freedom. Gen.art.

298^e. Those things are not called uses which are from the proprium of man; for this is Hell . . .

335². (By adoring and worshipping the Lord) man removes proprium, which hinders the influx and reception of the Divine; for the proprium, which is the love of self, hardens the heart and closes it up. This is removed by the acknowledgment that nothing but evil is done from himself . . .

361. The thought then communicates with the Sensuous, which is the proprium of man.

—³. Thought separated from common perception falls into the imagination, from sight, and from proprium.

396^e. Causes man to immerse his mind in his proprium . . .

P. 74. The rationality and freedom which are proper to man . . .

78. For the proprium of man and his freedom make a one. Man's proprium is of his life . . . also, man's proprium is that which is of his love; and what he does from (these) he does from freedom, (and it is appropriated to him). Ex.

—³. There is not anything proper to man; but it appears to him as if there were.

79³. Lest they should believe the good in which they were to be their Own . . .

89^e. Not from interior freedom, which is his proper freedom.

154². For the Lord elevates them from their proprium.

176. Without the appearance that man acts, etc., as of himself, no one would have anything of his own-sum, or be his own-suus-man; thus would have no proprium . . .

186². The Lord leads man silently . . . and therefore man knows no otherwise than that he is constantly in his proprium; for freedom makes a one with proprium . . .

189. The man who has become . . . wise by a rejection of proprium, sees the Divine Providence . . .

191. That Own prudence is null, and only appears . . . Gen.art.

206. Own prudence is from the proprium of man, which is his nature, and is called his soul from his parent: this proprium is the love of self and the derivative love of the world, or the love of the world and the derivative love of self. Ex.

—^e. Lest he should see that . . . the proprium of man is Hell, and the derivative love of the proprium, the devil.

211. For the proprium of man, which is his will, never acts as one with the Divine Providence: there is in the proprium of man innate enmity against it; for this is that serpent which seduced our first parents. Ex.

215⁷. Man's Hereditary is his proprium, in which he is, and into which he comes, through the love of self, and chiefly through the love of dominating from the love of self; for the man who is in this love regards nothing but self, and thus immerses his thoughts and affections in his proprium . . .

219. Temporary things are all things which are proper to nature, and which derivatively are proper to man. Ex. . . . But eternal things are all which are proper to the Lord; and, from Him, are as if proper to man. Ex.

233¹². The love of self, regarded in itself, is the love of proprium; and the proprium of man, as to its affections, which are all natural, is not unlike the life of a beast; and as to its perceptions . . . is not unlike an owl; and therefore he who continually immerses his thoughts in his proprium, cannot be elevated out of natural into spiritual light, and see anything of God, Heaven, and eternal life.

287. All that man thinks and wills . . . if evil, is from the proprium of man.

293. There is not in man a grain of Own will and Own prudence . . . If there were a grain with anyone, Heaven and Hell would not stand, and the whole human race would perish. Ex.

294². For everyone wants to be his own-suus, and to be led by self . . . for this is freedom itself, which appears as the proprium in which every man is; and therefore if he knew that what he thinks and wills inflows from another, he would seem to himself like one bound . . .

298³. Every man has a voluntary proprium, and an intellectual proprium; the (former) is evil, and the (latter) is the derivative falsity . . . The voluntary proprium, in its essence, is the love of self; and the intellectual proprium is the pride from that love: these two are like two married partners, and their marriage is called the marriage of evil and falsity . . . 321^e.

308³. (As everything inflows into man,) what is his proprium? His proprium does not consist in his being such a receptacle; because this proprium is nothing else than his quality as to reception; but is not a proprium of life; for by proprium nothing else is meant than that which lives from itself, and thence thinks and wills from itself; but that this proprium does not exist with man, and is not even possible with anyone, follows from what has been said above.

[P.] 309. I said to them that man has not any proprium, unless you want to call this his proprium: that he such or such a subject, or such and such an organ, or such and such a form. But this is not the proprium which is meant; for it is only quality. So that no man has any proprium as proprium is commonly understood. Those who had ascribed all things to Own prudence, who may be called proprietaryies in their own image, were so wroth that flame appeared from their nostrils, and they said, You speak paradoxes . . . according to that would not man be nothing and emptiness? Ex.

313². 'The serpent'=the Sensuous and proprium of man . . .

—³. The condemnation of the serpent=the condemnation of Own love and Own intelligence; the condemnation of Eve=the condemnation of the voluntary proprium; and the condemnation of Adam=the condemnation of the intellectual proprium.

316. Own prudence is the intellectual proprium of man inflowing from the love of self, which is the voluntary proprium of man; and proprium cannot do otherwise than make all things its own-sua . . . All who are led by the Divine Providence, are elevated from proprium, and then see that all good and truth are from the Lord . . .

317. That everything persuaded and confirmed remains with the man as proprium. Ex.

327. (Good) can be turned into evil by a recipient subject whose form is a form of evil: such a subject is man as to his proprium . . .

R. 323. 'Death'=the love of the proprium. Ex.

452. The proprium of the will, the proprium of the understanding, and the common proprium flowing forth from these two (which is the concupiscence of evil and falsity). Sig.

457. They had not shunned their Own things . . . Sig. and Ex.

504. Retaining similar properties of the flesh.

875⁹. For everything which proceeds from man, as from himself, proceeds from his proprium, and the proprium of man is evil from birth . . .

882. Heaven is not Heaven from the things proper to the Angels . . .

M. 77⁷. A tree native or proper to our Heaven.

So². The Conjugal, which is peculiar and proper to a Christian man.

106. He wants to possess her as a property loveable above all things; and, when she has promised herself to him, he regards her as one's own regards one's own.

194². 'The 'father and mother' a man is to 'leave'=his proprium of the will and proprium of the understanding; and the proprium of the will of man is to love himself, and the proprium of his understanding is to love his own wisdom. . . That these two propriums are evils deadly to the man, if they remain with him, and that the love of these two is turned into conjugal love. Sig.

196. All affection of love is a property of the will . . .

210. That the proper sense of conjugal love is the sense of touch. Ex.

262². To dominate from the love of self is [to do so] from proprium; and the proprium of man from birth is evil itself.

331³. The love of the proprium, since it cannot endure an equal, never becomes conjugal love; but so long as it prevails, it remains scortatory.

524. Everyone has his Own proper life. —², Ex.

B. 60. Ascribes to God human properties. Ex. 63. T. 133.

T. 9³. These were not gods, but so many properties . . . of the one God.

15². Attribute to each Person separate qualities, or properties . . . 16³. 17³. 135². 168^e. 185³.

31^e. There is not anything proper of the world in God . . .

139. Is properly signified . . .

141^e. These properties are not communicable.

245^e. None of this is their own property.

357^e. The Lord gives this power (to man) as some property.

359. In (natural faith and charity) there is the proprium of man . . .

361². In proportion as, with man, faith and charity become spiritual, in the same proportion is he withdrawn from proprium, and does not regard himself, and his reward . . .

382. Therefore those who deny God, do not want, and therefore cannot receive, any good from any other source than their own proprium; and the proprium of man is the concupiscence of his flesh; and, whatever proceeds from this is, spiritually, evil; however, naturally, it may appear good.

405². For they love themselves alone, and thence immerse the wills and thoughts of their minds in proprium, which, regarded in itself, is hereditary evil.

438. No one can purify himself from evils from Own power and Own forces; but still it cannot be done without the power and forces of the man, as if they were his Own. Ex.

439. Immerse the interior desires of their minds in their proprium.

466^e. 'The tree of the knowledge of good and evil'=man not in the Lord, but in his proprium, as is he who believes that he does all things of himself, even good.

493^o. Whatever proceeds from the love of the internal will . . . being the same as the esse of the man's life, is also his proprium; which is the reason why that which is received from the freedom of this will remains; for it adds itself to the proprium.

494. These things are proper to the soul.

611. Begins to think from his Own understanding.

658. To examine the properties (of the will and understanding).

—⁵. All the proprium of man is in the will, and this is evil from the first birth; but becomes good from the second.

—⁶. (Thus) there is one property of the will, and another of the understanding . . .

801. His Own good coheres with this . . .

810. From their own-suo-rational lumen, and thus from their Own spirit.

D. 241. The properties of the spiritual form . . .

1178. All good is the proprium of the Lord.

1370. The Holy with Angels and Spirits is the proprium of the Lord; and that which is the proprium of an Angel or Spirit is evil and unclean.

1561. Whenever man reflects upon himself: that he thinks good, and does good, this comes from his proprium . . .

1587. That it is common and proper to man to speak with Spirits and Angels.

2043. What to be nothing signifies.—Spirits . . . supposed that if they should lose the things which are proper to them, nothing would remain . . .

2060^e. The less anyone has from his own proprium, the more he has from the Lord.

2250. That all the proprium of man is hard, consequently bony.

2486. That the actual and proper evils of man are those which torment him in the other life.

2994. So much as man has of pertinacity, so much he has of proprium . . .

3474. On the proprium of man, Spirit, and Angel.

— . Certain interior Spirits insinuated that they had a proprium which was not evil; namely, an inmost mind. Ex.

— . Therefore, if a Spirit or Angel were deprived of his proprium, which is of the natural mind, both interior and lower, he would be deprived of all life . . .

—². That the propriate or natural mind may be obsequious to the spiritual and celestial mind, the case is this: that it is not destroyed . . . for then they would feel nothing of themselves; but his propriate things are disposed into a form which may be compared to a rainbow, in which the colours derive their origin from black and white, answering to the propriate things of man, namely, his evils. These are disposed by the Lord in order that he may thus live as it were from his own life; and the less of remains there are, the less has he of life from proprium.

3919. Truth can never come forth with man as his proprium . . .

4067. The deceitful Spirits could not destroy me, because there was nothing [of me]. (Thus) to be something, so as to have something proper, is to be that which they can assault and destroy.

4079. Whatever evil Spirits infuse is of their proprium; for they inflow from their proprium, and a propriate idea is always in it; for they want to rule man, and do not suffer him to be anything.

4137. Whatever flows from the proprium of Angels, Spirits, or men, is evil and false . . .

4144. On proprium.—Spirits are indignant when they perceive that another is leading them . . . but care nothing about it when they do not notice it . . . 4161.

4414. To want to become good, nay, to make one's self good, when one intends good, is good, when they are ignorant that it is done by the Lord; for they thus receive a heavenly proprium.

4588. I was also in the opposite sphere, that all things are from proprium. This sphere continually inflowed . . .

5464. They turn the thoughts of another Spirit, and thus also of a man, to himself, to his own power, his own praise, in a word, to proprium. Almost all the infernals know how to do this.

—². Others inspect various parts of the body . . . and, where they see what is black, they know that proprium still reigns there; for the proprium of man is black, because it is of the love of self; and they then inquire what of self is there, and (then) infuse their own thoughts there, and lead him wherever they will. —⁵. J.(Post.)241.

—⁸. It is the Sensuous of man where the love of self or his proprium, dwells. In proportion as he can be elevated thence as to the thoughts towards interior things, in the same proportion he can be withdrawn from his proprium . . .

—⁹. It is given me to perceive when I am in proprium, and when not in proprium; and, when in proprium, I am helpless; and therefore I have been withdrawn from it by the Lord as much as possible.

6052. For the love of commanding sinks the mind in its proprium . . . But everyone in whom is Heaven is elevated from proprium, although the man does not feel it.

D. Min. 4681. Some one wanted to give me his all, so that he would have nothing left for himself . . . and thus I should have his proprium. Hence it was insinuated how the case is with the heavenly proprium from the Lord; namely, that from Divine love He continually wills to give what is His to man, and does give it in so far as man can receive.

4694. From constant experience, I know (that everything inflows); and yet the things, when they are interior goods and truths, appear exactly as if they are mine, or from proprium . . .

4728. On the light and understanding which are from proprium. Des.

E. 23². Neither is the Church the Church from the proprium of men; but from the Divine of the Lord . . .

77. When man is in the acknowledgment (that all good is from the Divine, and nothing but evil from himself) . . . he comes as it were out of himself; and is (then) removed from proprium, which in itself is merely evil; and, when he is removed, the Divine infils him, and lifts him up.

242⁸. Man cannot be withdrawn or elevated from his proprium unless, as to those things which are of life, he looks to the Lord . . .

254². For the Lord is not conjoined with the proprium of man, but with His own with him. The Lord removes the proprium of man, and gives from His own, and dwells in it.

291. For when man is in humiliation, he is then removed from his proprium; and the proprium of man does not receive and acknowledge anything of good and truth from the Lord; for the proprium of man is nothing but evil; and evil rejects all the good and all the truth of Heaven and the Church.

304. The reason the Angels (have an evil proprium) is that . . . every man retains his proprium after death; and the Angels are withheld from the evils which are of their proprium, and are kept in goods, by the Lord.

318². Man's voluntary proprium is evil, and his derivative intellectual proprium is falsity; and therefore whatever is from proprium, is contrary to wisdom and intelligence. (Thus) unless man is elevated by the Lord from his proprium—which is done when he receives Divine truth not only in memory but also in life—he cannot be at all wise or intelligent. But this elevation by the Lord from proprium, does not appear to man, nor is it perceived by him, so long as he is in the world; but when he comes into his spirit . . . and even then only by those who come into Heaven.

355³⁶. The proprium of everyone resides in the natural man, and there is not proprium in the spiritual man . . .

386⁴. The formation of doctrine from proprium in both understanding and love. Sig.

401³⁴. As the love of self lets man into his proprium, and keeps him in it . . .

433³². 'When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh from his Own' (John viii.44)=from what is innate. (=from the evil of the will. 740⁹.)

458⁸. Natural good separated from spiritual good, is good from proprium; but, regarded in itself, is not good, but the delight of desire especially from the love of self and of the world, which is felt as good: how man forms this good with himself and persuades himself that it is good. Sig.

483⁶. In the sensuous and natural man resides the proprium of man . . .

517². Those in the love of self are immersed in their proprium . . .

563. The ultimate Sensuous is altogether destroyed with man; for therein is the proprium of everyone, into which he is born, which in itself is nothing but evil.

585². It is to be known that, in itself, the proprium of man is nothing but evil and the derivative falsity . . .

This proprium is derived by man principally from his parents, in a long series backwards; so that at last the Hereditary, which is his proprium, is nothing but evil successively heaped up and condensed . . .

—³. As man as to his proprium is such, therefore of the Divine mercy . . . means have been given, through which he can be removed from his proprium. These means are given in the Word; and, when man operates by these means, that is, thinks, speaks, wills, and acts from the Divine Word, he is then kept by the Lord in Divine things, and is thus withheld from proprium; and, when this lasts, as it were a new proprium is formed, both voluntary and intellectual . . . which is completely separated from the proprium of the man . . .

616². The proprium of man is in his will.

629¹⁵. For quantity and quality are properties of the finite . . .

646³. It is to be known that in proportion as man acknowledges the Lord, and lives according to His precepts, in the same proportion he is elevated above his proprium. The elevation is from the light of the world into the light of Heaven. That man is elevated above his proprium, he, while he lives in the world, does not know, because he does not feel it; but still there is an elevation, or as it were an attraction, of the interior understanding and the interior will of the man to the Lord . . . This is manifested to a good man after death . . .

650². For the love of self is the love of the proprium of man . . .

653². For he who loves himself only, loves his proprium; and thence immerses in his proprium all things of his will and of his understanding, insomuch that he cannot be elevated from it to Heaven and the Lord . . . whence the man becomes merely natural, and the merely natural man favours evils of every kind; for the evils into which man is born reside in the natural man . . . and the proprium of man also resides in the natural man; and the proprium of man is nothing but evil.

714¹⁰. For the love of self is the proprium itself of man . . .

727²². For when the proprium is consulted, it answers him falsity: the proprium is of the will; thus of the love; and the falsity thence is of the understanding.

745⁴. 'His Own received Him not'=those of the Church where the Word is . . . 'The will'=the proprium of man . . .

817⁶. For natural love separated from spiritual is the proprium of man . . .

850. For the proprium of the Angels cannot make Heaven, nor the proprium of man, the Church; because the proprium of both Angels and of men is not good.

852⁵. He said that God was His proper Father.

893³. 'His cross' = the proprium of man, against which he must fight.

934². Abstaining . . . from the concupiscence for the possessions and properties which belong to others.

945. When man is in this state, he is then elevated from his proprium. For man is in his proprium, when solely in the external Natural; but is elevated from his proprium, when in the internal Spiritual. That he has been elevated from his proprium is not felt by the man, except from the fact, that he does not think evils, and that he is averse to think them; and that he is delighted with truths, and with good uses. Nevertheless man, if he progresses further into this state, perceives the influx with some thought; but still he is not withheld from thinking and willing as of himself . . .

950³. He who loves himself, loves his own proprium . . . hence he loves evil in the whole complex . . . In like manner he who loves the world, but in a less degree; for the world cannot be loved as much as the proprium; and therefore the world is loved from proprium, and for the sake of proprium, because it is of service to it.

962. 'Sores' = works from proprium, and thence evils, because from the proprium of man nothing but evil can be produced; for the proprium of man is that into which he is born, and which he afterwards contracts by his life; and, as his proprium is from birth itself composed of mere evils, man must be created anew . . . When he is being regenerated, then the evils, which are from proprium, are removed; and goods are implanted in their place, which is effected through truths.

1032². Thus man can no longer be led by the Lord; but he is led by his proprium; and to be led by his proprium is to be led by Hell . . . For man has been so created, that he can be elevated from his proprium, and think in the elevation; and he is elevated from proprium, and thinks in the elevation, when [he is led] by the Lord . . .

—³. But when man seeks for dominion over the world, Heaven, and the Lord, he immerses the interiors of his mind . . . in his proprium; and, when man is immersed in his proprium, he thinks and wills from Hell . . .

1053⁶. The proprium of man, regarded in itself, is nothing but evil, nay, is profane.

1082². 'Flesh,' here, = the proprium of the Lord's Divine Human, which is the Divine good of the Divine love.

1103². The property which is added to each Person as His special attribute. Enum. 1118².

1150³. Thus freedom makes one with proprium.

1170⁵. How the proprium of man is distinguished from his non-proprium . . . The proprium resides more interiorly; but the non-proprium more exteriorly; and the latter veils over the former . . . nor does it appear until this veil is taken away, as is done with all after death.

472. Those now in truths and in the Lord's protection. Sig. and Ex.

556⁸. For they know that the Lord protects all who are in good against the evil; and that He protects them according to the good with them; but that He would not protect, if on account of the evil done them, they were to be kindled with enmity, hatred, and revenge; for these avert the protection.

—⁹. 'Not to resist evil' = that we are not to fight back, nor retaliate: the Angels . . . permit evil to be done to them, because they are safe by the Lord . . .

601⁶. The protection-tutatio-of the faithful by the Lord. Sig.

—⁷. Their protection-tutatio-by Divine truth. Sig.

642². When an evil Spirit attacks . . . (anyone) whom the Lord protects, he at once deprives himself of protection by the Lord; for every Spirit both evil and good is in the Lord's protection; and, when he is deprived of it, he falls into evils and falsities of every kind which are from Hell, and at the same time into the hands of those who are thence, and are called punishers. 643².

669. Separation and consequent protection. Sig. (Compare 670.)

700⁸. Protection-tutatio-from falsities and evils which are from Hell. Sig. . . (That is) protection-tutatio-through Divine truth in ultimates . . .

Provide. Providere.

Providence. Providentia.

See under CHERUB, FORESEE, and FORTUNE.

A. 197^e. 'The brazen serpent' = the Lord's Sensuous, who . . . alone is circumspect and provides for all.

306. To provide that he could not enter into any arcanum of faith. Sig.

609. Of the Lord's Providence . . .

1755. The Lord foresees, provides, and disposes everything; but some things from permission; some from admission; some from leave; some from good-pleasure; and some from will.

1874^e. He provides and disposes that evils are turned into goods.

1919^e. Providence not merely universal.

2256². He provides that goods are never mixed with evils.

2357². The Lord's Providence takes care that man is not admitted further into faith of heart than he can be kept in it.

2429⁴. He provides that no one has more truth than he receives of good.

2679^e. The least things are foreseen and provided to eternity. 2694.

2694³. Attribute all things to prudence, and little or nothing to the Divine Providence.

— . The Divine Providence is universal because in the most singular things . . . 3175⁴.

2747^e. Acknowledge a universal Providence, which is none.

2761⁴. The Lord's Providence preventing man from entering from himself into the mysteries of faith. Sig.

2829. Thought about everything . . . to eternity, with the Divine Providence. Sig.

2837. 'Jehovah shall see' = the Lord's Providence. 2839.

3039. 'He shall send His Angel before thee' = the Divine Providence. 3154⁴.

3062. Providence from eternity. Sig.

3177. That all things are now provided. Sig.

3384³. The Lord as to the state of Providence. Sig.

3398². Providence that Divine good and truth be not profaned. Ex. 3402².

3556. Providence. Sig.

3686. The Lord's foresight and Providence . . . Sig.

3688³. As the Lord foresees this, He also provides . . .

3711. 'I will keep thee . . . '=the Divine Providence.

3732. A state of Providence. Sig. and Ex.

3833³. Those who reason about the Divine Providence . . . cannot know these innumerable arcana of Providence . . . 4031².

3854. 'Jehovah saw' = the Lord's foresight and Providence.

— . There is foresight relatively to man ; Providence relatively to the Lord . . .

—³. The foresight and Providence of the Lord are in the most minute singulars with man . . .

3869. 'Jehovah hath heard,' in the supreme sense, = Providence . . .

—³. The Foresight of the Lord is to see from eternity to eternity that it is so ; and the Providence of the Lord is to rule so that it is so, and to bend the freedom of man to good, in so far as He foresees that man will suffer himself to be bent in freedom.

3880⁹. The votive sacrifices . . . in the internal sense, = that the Lord would provide ; in the supreme, a state of Providence.

3901⁵. 'Face of eagle' = circumspection and thence Providence . . .

3951. Stipulated from what was provided. Sig. and Ex.

— . The Lord's Providence is especially concerned with the conjunction of good and truth. Ex.

3966. Foresight and Providence. Sig.

—^e. 'To listen to anyone,' when predicated of God, = Providence.

4060⁴. A remnant of the Church is always provided . . .

4091. To will that the Lord should provide. Sig. and Ex.

4101. To obey, when predicated of the Lord, = to provide. Ex.

4154. Of the Lord's Divine Providence.

4198. The Lord's presence through Foresight and Providence. Sig.

4262. Those things which happened of the Divine Providence. Sig.

4329^e. The Lord's universal Providence without the most singular things which are in it, and from which it is, is nothing at all.

4359. Truths from the Divine Providence. Sig.

4364². The Lord thus bends by a silent Providence . . .

4549. 'To be with anyone in the way in which he walks,' when predicated of the Lord, = His Divine Providence ; for to provide is properly to be with anyone, and to protect from evils.

4606. 'Simeon,' in the supreme sense, = Providence.

4654. Spirits who inflowed strongly into the thought when the things of Providence were being treated of. Ex. They were those who when they had prayed for anything, and had not obtained it, had doubted concerning Providence.

4975. That all things were from the Divine Providence. Sig. (See PROSPER.)

5049. That the Divine Providence is from Him. Sig.

5122³. The Lord knows everything, and provides every moment. If He were to intermit it for an instant, all the progressions would be disturbed . . . (Thus) the Divine Foresight and Providence is in the most singular things : if it were only universal, the human race would perish.

5124. What was provided. Sig. and Ex.

5155. Providence is predicated of good ; but Foresight of evil ; for all good inflows from the Lord, and therefore this is provided . . . Providence about evil is nothing else than the direction or determination of evil to a less evil, and, so far as possible, to good . . .

5177. For they attribute to themselves that which is of the Divine Providence.

5179^e. Fortune is the ultimate of Providence.

5195. Providence regards the successive state to eternity . . .

5264. Apperceived what was provided. Sig.

—². For all that the Lord does is Providence, which, being from the Divine, has in it what is eternal and infinite . . . This is called Providence ; and as this is in everything which the Lord does, therefore His doing cannot be expressed by any other word than Providence.

5275. States of Providence. Sig. and Ex.

5284. For what is of the Divine Providence certainly happens.

5291⁷. These historical things happened of Providence, that Divine things might be represented.

5316. 5620¹⁴. 5688².

5309. Foresight and Providence of the Celestial of the Spiritual. Sig.

5503. 'God doing' = Providence ; for all that God does can be expressed by no other word than Providence ; for the reason that in all He does there are what is eternal and what is infinite ; and these are in the word Providence.

5508. Reflection from the good of that truth upon the things hitherto provided. Sig.

—². For everything which happens . . . is from Providence. The Divine Providence operates thus invisibly and incomprehensibly, in order that man may in freedom ascribe it either to Providence, or to chance ; for if Providence were to act visibly and comprehensibly there would be danger . . . of man's believing that it was of Providence, and afterwards going into the contrary : thus . . . truth would be profaned . . .

[A.] 5664^e. Forprudence corresponds to Providence . . .

5890. Spiritual life in them from Providence. Sig. and Ex.

5894. Such is the Lord's Providence, and indeed continuous; although man . . . denies Providence in singular things, when yet it is in the most singular things of all, from the first thread of man's life to . . . eternity. More things of Providence concur in each moment with every man than can be comprehended by any number.

5896. Consulted for by the Divine Providence. Sig.

6025. This was of a peculiar Divine Providence.

6128. 'To provide bread' (Gen. xlvii. 17) = the sustentation of spiritual life.

6185. So done from Providence by the Divine. Sig.

6298. Foresight and Providence to eternity. Sig.

6303. 'God shall be with you' = the Lord's Divine Providence . . . For when the Lord is with anyone, He leads him, and provides that all things which happen . . . turn out for his good: this is the Divine Providence.

6480. As . . . the Lord's influx through Heaven, and immediately from Himself, is more fitly called Providence—for the Lord inflows not only into the will and thought of man, but also at the same time into many things which befall him—therefore in what follows we may say Providence.

6481. (Souls) take with them the opinion that the Divine Providence is (only) universal, from seeing the wicked (succeed), not knowing that the Divine Providence has for its end man's eternal salvation . . . S717³.

—². The Lord provides His ends through the evil (also).

6482. (Argument for a particular Providence.)

6484. One who had confirmed himself . . . that nothing is of the Divine Providence, but everything from prudence, fortune, and chance . . . It was shown that every single thing of his life had been guided by the Lord, and that he would have precipitated himself into the most frightful Hell if the least thing had ceased from the Lord's continual Providence.

6485. The good Spirits said that man's prudence is to the Divine Providence as a mote is to the universal atmosphere . . . They said, further, that all contingent things are of Providence; and that Providence acts silently and secretly . . . D.4393.

6486. The Angels said that the Lord's Providence is in the most singular things of all; but not according to such an order as man proposes to himself, because the things to come are both foreseen and provided; and that it is like one building a palace, who first heaps up materials of every kind which lie without any order, while the resultant palace is solely in the understanding of the architect. 6487. D.3724.

6490. If the Lord's Providence were not in the most singular things, man could not possibly be saved, nor even live . . .

—^e. The sphere of ends, which is of Providence from the Lord.

6491. That the Lord's Providence is infinite, and regards what is eternal, may be evident from the formation of embryos in the womb . . .

6493². It was said, further, that the least things of all, down to the leasts of the leasts, are directed by the Lord's Providence, even as to the very steps; and that when such a sphere prevails as is contrary thereto, misfortunes happen.

6494^e. What is called fortune is from the influx of Providence in the ultimates of order . . . Thus Providence is in the most singular things of all, according to the Lord's words, that not a hair falls from the head without the will of God. 6493. D.4562.

6570. That God will provide. Sig.

6692². All who have firmly impressed on themselves that all things are of Own prudence, and nothing of the Divine Providence, in the other life are very prone to magic . . .

6951. Providence from the Divine. Sig. . . (This) was predicated of the Lord as to the Human, when He was in the world.

6964. 'Jehovah said' = Providence.

7004². By such an influx the Lord leads man by Providence . . . in the most singular things of all.

7007⁴. (Refs. to passages on the subject of Providence.) N.276.

7270⁴. Truth Divine . . . without successive formation inflows into the ultimates of order, and there, from the First immediately also, rules and provides each and all things.

8093. 'To lead,' when done by God, = Providence.

8455. Peace has in it confidence in the Lord, that He . . . provides all things . . .

8478. That the Lord daily provides necessaries. Sig.

—⁴. The Divine Providence is universal . . . and those who are in the stream of Providence are continually carried to things happy . . . and those are in the stream of Providence who trust in the Divine, and attribute all things to Him; and those are not in the stream of Providence who trust in themselves alone, and attribute all things to themselves; for they are in the opposite, because they derogate from the Divine Providence, and claim it for themselves. It is also to be known that in proportion as anyone is in the stream of Providence, in the same proportion he is in a state of peace; and also that in proportion as anyone is in a state of peace from the good of faith, in the same proportion he is in the Divine Providence. These alone know and believe that the Lord's Divine Providence is in . . . the most singular things of all . . . and that the Divine Providence regards what is eternal.

—⁵. But those in the opposite scarcely want Providence to be named . . .

8560. The Divine Providence differs from all other leading and control in this: that Providence continually regards what is eternal, and continually leads to salvation, and this through various states, now glad, now sorrowful, which man cannot possibly comprehend, but still all are conducive to his life in eternity. This is signified by 'the journeyings at the mouth of Jehovah.'

8588. Those who in temptations almost disbelieve in the Divine Providence. Tr.

8717². The Divine disposition or Providence . . .

—³. Few ascribe to the Divine Providence . . .

—^e. Therefore the Lord provides for the good who receive His mercy in time, such things as conduce to the happiness of their eternal life ; riches and honours for those to whom they are not injurious, and none for those to whom they are ; to the latter He gives, in time, in place of honours and riches, to be glad with a few things, and to be content more than the rich and honoured.

8813³. The Divine Providence of the Lord . . . which is truth Divine proceeding from His Divine good. Sig.

8869. Such attribute all things to self . . . (and) wholly deny the Divine Providence in such things . . .

9010. Those who were of the Ancient Churches knew that the Lord's Providence is in each and all things ; and that contingent things, that is, those which appear as of chance, are of Providence . . .

9296². For the Lord in every present time foresees what is evil and provides what is good.

9304. 'To keep thee in the way' = His Providence and guard from the falsities of evil.

— . Providence is to provide and look out for ; thus to lead to good and guard from evil . . .

9787^e. For everything which the Lord ordaineth, that is, provides, with man and Angel, is eternal.

10409². (The connection of man's coming to dignities and wealth with the Divine Providence.) Fully ex.

—³. The goods and happinesses which the Lord provides for man are eternal . . . That which lasts to eternity is, but that which has an end relatively is not ; the former is provided by the Divine, but not the latter, except in so far as it is conducive to the former. 10775.

10452^e. All disposition into good, which is called Providence, is thence. Ex.

10773. The government of the Lord in the Heavens and on earth is called Providence ; and, as all the good of love and truth of faith are from Him, and not at all from man, it is evident that the Lord's Divine Providence is in each and all things which conduce to the salvation of the human race. Sig. 10774.

10775. Those who think from worldly things about the Divine Providence conclude that it is only universal, and that the singular things are with man. Ex.

10779. Nevertheless the Divine Providence continually accompanies (Own prudence), by permitting and continually withdrawing from evil. But to be led to things happy in Heaven . . . is effected from His Divine Providence by disposing and continually leading to good.

H. 594^e. The Lord alone provides that there shall be equilibrium between good and evil . . .

N. 267. On Providence. Chapter. (From A. 10773, et seq.).

W. 37. The Divine Providence in reforming, regenerating, and saving men, partakes equally of the Divine love and the Divine Wisdom . . .

P. Title. Angelic Wisdom concerning the Divine Providence.

1. That the Divine Providence is the government of the Divine love and Divine wisdom of the Lord. Gen. art. E. 152, Sig. —^e.

7. That it is of the Divine Providence that every created thing be such a one . . . Ex.

16. The chief end and operation of the Divine Providence is that man may be in good and at the same time in truth . . . and may not have a divided mind. Ex.

21. That the Lord's Divine Providence causes evil and falsity to serve for equilibrium, relation, and purification . . . Ex.

—^e. (Thus) it is the perpetual object of the Divine Providence, with man, to unite good to truth, and truth to good ; for thus man is united to the Lord.

27. That the Divine Providence has for its end a Heaven from the human race. Gen. art.

45. (The various subordinate ends of the Divine Providence.) Enum.

46. That the Lord's Divine Providence, in all it does, regards what is infinite and eternal. Gen. art.

55. That the Divine Providence, in all it does, regards what is infinite and eternal from itself . . . The infinite and eternal from itself is the Divine proceeding, or the Lord in others . . . and this Divine is the same as the Divine Providence ; for, through the Divine from Himself, the Lord provides that all things be in order . . . and, as the Divine proceeding operates this, it follows that the whole of it is the Divine Providence.

64. That to regard the infinite and eternal in forming the angelic Heaven, so as to be before the Lord as one man, which is His image, is the inmost of the Divine Providence. Ex.

69^e. This is the inmost of the Divine Providence concerning Hell.

70. That there are laws of the Divine Providence which are unknown to men. Gen. art.

71. That it is a law of the Divine Providence that man should act from freedom according to reason. Gen. art.

100. That it is a law of the Divine Providence that man, as from himself, should remove evils as sins in the external man ; and that thus and no otherwise the Lord can remove evils in the internal man, and then at the same time in the external. Gen. art.

123. That it is a Continual of the Divine Providence that He conjoin man with Himself and Himself with him, so that He can give him the felicities of eternal life . . . Ex.

124. Two arcana . . . from which can be seen the quality of the Divine Providence. One is that the Lord never acts into anything particular with man, without acting into all things together. The other is that the Lord acts from inmosts and from ultimates at the same time. Ex. 125.

[P.] 129. That it is a law of the Divine Providence that man should not be compelled by external means to think and will . . . the things of religion; but that man should lead and sometimes compel himself. Gen.art.

154. That it is a law of the Divine Providence that man should be led and taught from Heaven through the Word, doctrine, and preachings therefrom, and this in all appearance as of himself. Gen.art.

175. That it is a law of the Divine Providence that man should not perceive and feel anything of the operation of the Divine Providence, but that he should still know and acknowledge it. Gen.art.

— (Arguments of the natural man against there being a Divine Providence.) 182, 216, 236, 237, 238, 249, Gen.art. 250, Gen.art. 251, Gen.art. 252, Gen.art. 254–274, Gen.art.

176. That if man perceived and felt the operation of the Divine Providence, he would not act from freedom according to reason, nor would anything appear to him as his. Ex.

—². For the Lord through His Divine Providence leads all; and man does not lead himself except apparently.

177. The operation of the Lord's Divine Providence is continual to withdraw man from evils; and if anyone were to perceive and feel this continual operation . . . would he not continually resist it, and thus either quarrel with God, or else mix himself up with the Divine Providence . . .

180. That if man manifestly saw the Divine Providence, he would introduce himself into the order and tenor of its progression, and would pervert and destroy it. Ex.

—⁶. That if man were at the same time in internal things, he would pervert and destroy all the order and tenor of the Divine Providence. Ex.

182. That if man manifestly saw the Divine Providence, he would either deny God, or make himself God. Ex.

183. For the Divine Providence never acts together with the love of man's will; but continually against it . . .

186. Hence the Lord does not manifestly appear in His Providence; but leads man by it as silently as a hidden current does a ship . . . (and thus) freedom appropriates to man that which the Divine Providence introduces.

187. That it is given to man to see the Divine Providence on the back, and not in the face; also in his spiritual, and not in his natural state. Ex. 189.

190³. Without His Divine Providence, which is like a continual creation, could the infinite affections and derivative thoughts of men . . . be disposed so as to make a one . . .

191. That . . . the Divine Providence, from things most singular, is universal. Gen.art. 201², Ex.

200^e. That the affections of the life's love are led by the Lord through His Divine Providence, and the thoughts at the same time, from which is human prudence. Ex.

201. That the Lord through His Divine Providence composes the affections into one form, which is the human one. Ex. This is a universal of the Divine Providence.

—³. Providence with God is called prudence with man . . . So that we cannot speak of a universal Providence, if men provide all things from Own prudence.

202. (The universality of the Divine Providence in relation to creation.) Ex.

203². Of this universal Providence man sees nothing . . .

205. That those who have acknowledged God and His Divine Providence make Heaven. Ex.

207. Whence and what the Divine Providence is.— It is the Divine operation with the man who has removed the love of self . . . This being removed, the Lord enters with the affections of the love of the neighbour, and opens the windows . . . and makes him see that there is a Heaven, etc. . . and, through the spiritual light and the spiritual love then inflowing, makes him acknowledge that God, through His Divine Providence, rules all things.

210. Unless man, as from his own prudence, disposes all things of his function and life, he cannot be led and disposed from the Divine Providence. Ex.

—². Therefore if you want to be led by the Divine Providence, use prudence, as a servant and minister who faithfully dispenses the goods of his lord. Sig.

—^e. This is the prudence with which the Divine Providence acts as one.

211. The Divine Providence operates so occultly . . . lest man should perish. Ex.

212. The Divine Providence in ultimates . . . by constancies and inconstancies acts marvellously with human prudence; and at the same time hides itself.

214. That the Divine Providence regards eternal things, and temporal ones no otherwise than as they agree with eternal ones. Gen.art.

220. That the conjunction of temporary and eternal things with man is the Lord's Divine Providence. Ex. —². —⁴. —⁸.

227². That the Lord through His Divine Providence continually disposes that evil be by itself, and good by itself, so that they can be separated. Ex.

233⁹. That the Lord through His Divine Providence most carefully provides that (truths) are not received by the will sooner or more than man as of himself removes evil in the external man. Ex.

234. That the laws of permission also are laws of the Divine Providence. Gen.art.

235. He who does not acknowledge the Divine Providence at all, in his heart does not acknowledge God; but, instead of God, nature; and instead of the Divine Providence, human prudence.

241^e. By 'the tree of life' is there meant the Lord as to His Divine Providence; and by 'the tree of the knowledge of good and evil,' man as to Own prudence.

249⁴. All the laws of the Divine Providence are necessities.

285. That the Divine Providence is equally with the evil as with the good. Gen.art. 287.

296⁷. That the Divine Providence with the evil is the continual permission of evil, to the end that there may be a continual withdrawal from it. Ex.

297. That the evil cannot be completely withdrawn from evils, and led into goods, so long as they believe Own intelligence to be everything, and the Divine Providence not anything. Ex.

298⁴. That the Divine Providence continually causes man to see truth, and also gives the affection of perceiving and of receiving it. Ex.

— This is done because the Divine Providence acts from the interior . . .

—⁶. He who believes in the Divine Providence is withdrawn from evil ; but he who does not believe in it, is not withdrawn ; and he believes in it who acknowledges evil to be sin, and wills to be withdrawn from it . . .

308. That the Divine Providence does not appropriate evil to anyone, nor good to anyone . . . Gen.art.

318¹⁰. See PRUDENCE, here.

331. That the Lord cannot act contrary to the laws of the Divine Providence ; because to act contrary to them would be to act contrary to His Divine love and contrary to His Divine wisdom ; thus contrary to Himself. Gen.art.

— Among the things which proceed from the Lord, the Divine Providence is primary . . .

— The operation and progression of the end through the means is what is called the Divine Providence.

—². It may also be said that the Lord is Providence, as it is said that God is order ; for the Divine Providence is the Divine order primarily concerned with the salvation of men . . .

332. That the operation of the Divine Providence to save man begins from his birth, and lasts to the end of his life, and afterwards to eternity. Ex.

335. That the operation of the Divine Providence is continually effected through means from pure merey. Ex. 336. 337

 4625². (Various provinces enum.)
 4797. Every Angel is in some province of the Grand Man; and thus communicates generally and widely with all in the same province, although he is in the part of that province to which he properly corresponds.
 4800^e. They did not know that they were allotted to the province of the face; for to what province they are allotted is hidden from Spirits, but not from Angels.
 4803. The states of good Spirits and of Angels are continually being purified and perfected; and they are thus carried into the interiors of the province in which they are; thus into more noble functions . . . D.668.
 4805². In Heaven there are those who relate to all the provinces of the body as to its exteriors and interiors; but if they were to aspire beyond those which correspond to their life, they could not have Heaven.
 4931. Heaven relates to the Lord . . . Hence it is that Heaven is distinguished into as many provinces as it were as there are viscera, organs, and members in man, with which, also, there is a correspondence. . . But all these provinces relate to the two Kingdoms . . .
 5171. To what provinces the angelic Societies belong, may be known from their situation relatively to the human body; and also from their influx; for they inflow into that organ or member in which they are . . .

6655. 'Let us use prudence with them' (Ex. i. 10) = cunning; (for) 'prudence,' when spoken of by the evil, means cunning; for that which the evil do from cunning and deceit they call prudence.

6692². All who have firmly impressed on themselves that all things are of Own prudence . . . in the other life are very prone to magic . . . 7296². D. 5010.

6704. (Christia prudence to be exercised in works of charity.)

6760. Prudence as to whether he was in safety. Sig.

8250. Simulation, hypocrisy, cunning, and deceit, which are modern prudence . . .

P. 70. Not knowing that human prudence is nothing . . .

126. Then in place of cunning the Lord implants prudence.

187^e. Those who have confirmed themselves for nature and human prudence, do not acknowledge the Divine Providence, because the natural light inflowing from below extinguishes the spiritual light inflowing from above.190^e. From things constant and stated . . . they find arguments for their delirium in favour of nature and human prudence.

191. That Own Prudence is null, and only appears to exist, and also ought to appear as if it existed . . . Gen. art.

— . Prudence is from God . . . prudence is from no other source than intelligence and wisdom (and therefore it is only an appearance that it is from man). Ex. 193.

197. Man knows his thoughts and derivative intentions . . . and as all prudence is from these, he sees it in himself. If, then, his life's love is the love of self, he comes into the pride of Own intelligence, and ascribes prudence to himself; and he collects arguments in its favour, and thus recedes from the acknowledgment of the Divine Providence. . . In like manner if the love of the world is his life's love; but this does not recede in so great a degree. Thus these two loves ascribe all things to man and his prudence . . .

—². Two priests disputing with an ambassador about human prudence . . . At heart all three believed that human prudence effects all things; but the priests . . . said that nothing of prudence is from man. (On changing their garments, they changed also their sentiments.) Afterwards all three entered the way of Own prudence, which tends into Hell. M. 354.199². (Arguments showing how little human prudence can do.)200^e. The affections of the life's love are led by the Lord, and the thoughts at the same time, from which is human prudence.

201. Those who ascribe all things to nature, also ascribe all things to human prudence. Ex. But for the sake of their good name, both say that the Divine Providence is universal, but that its singulars are with man; and that these singulars in the complex are meant by human prudence.

—^e. The Divine Providence is in . . . the most singular things of human prudence . . .205. That those who have acknowledged nature alone and human prudence alone make Hell . . . Ex. All who lead an evil life, interiorly acknowledge nature and human prudence alone: the acknowledgment of these is inwardly concealed in all evil. —². Ex.

206. Whence and what Own prudence is. It is from man's proprium. Ex.

— . The mate of the love of self is the pride of Own intelligence; and hence is Own prudence.

[P. 206]^e. The love of self and its mate then sit in the dark and reason . . . in favour of Own prudence against the Divine Providence.

208. But those who acknowledge nature and Own prudence are like the Spirits of Hell, who are averse to being led by the Lord, and love to be led by themselves. (Various classes of them des.) They are all enemies of God, and scoffers at the Divine Providence.

210². Therefore, if you want to be led by the Divine Providence, use prudence, as a servant and minister who faithfully dispenses the goods of his lord. This prudence is 'the pound' which was given to the servants to trade with, an account of which they must render. The prudence itself appears to man as his Own; and is believed to be his Own so long as man keeps within him that most deadly enemy of . . . the Divine Providence, the love of self. . . The door for this to be cast out is opened by man's shunning evils as sins as of himself, with the acknowledgment that it is of the Lord. This is the prudence with which the Divine Providence acts as one.

211. The 'enmity between thy seed and her seed' = that . . . between the Own prudence of man and the Divine Providence of the Lord; for Own prudence is continually lifting up its head, and the Divine Providence is continually putting it down.

212. Does not fortune laugh at prudence and wisdom?

213. But I know that human prudence brings the Rational over to its side more than the Divine Providence does to its; because the latter does not appear, and the former does . . . But I say to the natural man, Write books, and fill them with arguments . . . in favour of Own prudence, and an Angel would write on them, They are all appearances and fallacies.

215³. Then originated degrees of dignities . . . and, with these, the love of self, and the pride of Own prudence.

235². Those who have confirmed themselves in favour of human prudence . . . in whatever they see, hear, and read . . . notice nothing else; nor can they, because they receive nothing from Heaven . . .

308. That . . . Own prudence appropriates both evil and good to men. Gen.art.

310. What Own prudence is, and what is prudence not man's Own. Ex.

— . Those are in Own prudence who confirm appearances with themselves, and make them Truths, especially this appearance: that Own prudence is everything, and the Divine Providence not anything, except something universal . . .

316. The reason Own prudence persuades and confirms that all good and truth are from man and in man, is that Own prudence is the intellectual proprium of man inflowing from the love of self . . .

318¹⁰. That the simultaneous voluntary and intellectual confirmation of evil causes man to believe Own prudence to be everything, and the Divine Providence not anything; but not intellectual confirmation alone. Ex. There are many who, from the appearances in the world, confirm with themselves Own prudence, but still do not deny the Divine Providence . . .

321. That he who confirms with himself the appearance that wisdom and prudence are from man, and in man as his own, cannot see but that otherwise he would not be a man, but either a beast or an image; when yet it is the contrary. Ex.

—^e. The proprium of the understanding is the pride of Own intelligence; and from this is Own prudence.

A. 66^e. The fourth style (of the Word) is that of the Psalms of David, which is intermediate between the prophetic style and the common style of those who speak. There, under the person of David as a king, it treats of the Lord. L.44. D.2721^e.

1648. The form of the Psalms of David compared with the speech of choirs of good Spirits. Des.

1771. When I was reading some of the Psalms of David, the interior mind of (these Spirits) was opened . . . and they perceived the interiors of the Word in these Psalms; at which they were astounded, and said that they could never have believed such things.

8337^e. See INSTRUMENT, here.

9809⁵. This is the sense perceived in Heaven when this (exth) Psalm is being read by man.

L. 37. See PROPHETS AND PSALMS, here.

S. 108. Spirits from Abyssinia . . . on hearing singing in some place of worship in the world from a Psalm of David, were affected with such delight that they sang along with them; but presently their ears were closed so that they heard nothing thence, and they were then affected with still greater delight, because with spiritual delight, and at the same time were filled with intelligence, because that Psalm treats of the Lord, and Redemption. The cause of the increase of delight was that communication was given them with that Society in Heaven which was in conjunction with those in the world who were singing that Psalm. From this it was evident that communication with the universal Heaven is given through the Word. De Verbo 18². (Compare D.5947. J.(Post.)122.)

R. 38². As every letter signifies a Thing in the Spiritual World . . . David wrote Psalm exix in an order according to the letters of the alphabet . . . Something like it appears in Psalm exi.

279². The Psalms of David are nothing but songs; for they were played—psallebantur—and sung; and therefore in many places they are called 'Songs.' Ill.

Ad. 3²³. (The speech of Spirits) is a species of song . . . being terminated in a similar way, as the Psalms are wont to be . . .

D. 335. That when the Psalms of David have been read, they were of such efficacy in Heaven that some of the celestials could not but be astounded. Ex.

A. 245. The Lord punishes no one; but the diabolical crew does it. 592². 1408³.

391. Evil Spirits are highly delighted to punish one another.

587². To be punished is of mercy, because it bends all the evil of penalty into good.

696. Such is the equilibrium . . . that the evil itself punishes itself . . .

816^e. The horrible punishment of hatred and revenge des. It lasts for ages.

817. After (the poisoner's) confession, punishment followed. Des.

831^e. These witches or Sirens are grievously punished. (By snakes, collisions, etc.)

957. The punishment of those who say one thing and think another. (Raeking, blows, collision, and rending.) Something is removed by each punishment. The renders said that they are so delighted to punish that they would not want to desist if it were to last to eternity.

959. Spirits wanted to insidiate against me in my sleep. Punishers were suddenly present, who miserably punished those Spirits. (They clothed them with visible bodies and bodily senses, and tortured them by violent collisions of the parts, with pains induced by resistance.) The punishment lasted a long time, and extended to many companies around me; and to my astonishment all the insidiating Sirens were found. (Continued under PENALTY.) 1983.

967. When the evil are being punished, Angels are always present, who regulate the penalty, and alleviate the pains of the sufferers; but they cannot take them away, because there is such an equilibrium there that evil punishes itself; and unless it could be taken away by means of punishments, such could not but be detained in some Hell to eternity; for they would then infest the Societies of the good . . .

1011^e. Evil (there) punishes itself; in like manner falsity. Sig.

1838². Punishment is often predicated of the Lord; when yet it is of the man of the Church, who punishes and condemns himself. Ex.

1857². The evil (there) are not punished until their evils have been brought to their height; and this both in general and in particular: for such is the equilibrium there that the evil itself punishes itself . . .

1936³. No one is ever punished on account of evil acts done from an end truly good.

2258⁸. Unless the evils were punished, the whole kingdom would be infected with them; and therefore there is more mercy in kings and judges in punishing evils . . . than in showing an unseasonable elemency.

2417⁷. In punishing the evil there is charity. Ex. 4730³.

2447. So with punishments and damnations: they never come from the Lord: but from the man, or Spirit, or devil himself; and this from the laws of order as to truth: because they separate themselves from good.

—³. For example: one devil punishes and torments another . . .

— Unless a king who is merciful and gentle were to allow his laws to punish the evil—although he himself punishes no one: but rather grieves that they are such as to require to be punished by their evils—he would relinquish his kingdom as a prey to such, which would be the height of unmercifulness.

2746. (In the case of one who had lived lasciviously, delighting in variety) everything was disclosed, and he was miserably punished, and that in the sight of the Angels. He was then cast into Hell.

2768^e. He who separates himself from the laws of Divine order . . . casts himself into the laws opposite to Divine order, which are of evil and falsity, and consequently of punishments and torments.

3614⁵. 'Anger' is predicated of the punishment of evil; 'wrath,' of the punishment of falsity; and 'fervour,' of both. . . There being repugnance, there is also punishment: for the things which are repugnant, collide, and then evil and falsity are punished.

4208⁴. Therefore (the Jews) were compelled by punishments, etc. 6997³.

4293³. After they had been punished, they could be in the greatest external humiliation.

4502². 'To curse' = to avert one's self; and also to be punished on that account.

4951. (The interiorly malicious) are often punished . . .

5008³. Those in evil are also the neighbour; but these are benefited if they are punished according to the laws; because they are amended through punishments . . . 5036⁴.

5185. The Spirits of the pancreatic, hepatic, and cystic ducts . . . present themselves especially in elastisements and punishments, which they want to direct. D. 893.

5721⁴. These are grievously punished, until they desist from seducing others by an appearance of what is just.

5764. As in Hell associates conspire together for evil, when they do evil, all are punished.

6559. If evil Spirits do evil in the World of Spirits beyond what they had imbued by their life in the world, the punishers are at once present, and chastise them exactly according to the degree of the excess; for it is a law there that no one must become worse than he had been in the world. Those who are being punished are quite ignorant whence these chastisers know that the evil is beyond what they had imbued; but they are informed that in the other life there is such an order that the evil itself has its own penalty with it . . . (This is the case) in the World of Spirits; but in Hell the one chastises the other according to the evil which they had actually imbued in the world; for this evil they take with them into the other life.

—^e. As for good Spirits, if they chance to speak or do evil, they are not punished; but excused; for their end is not to speak or do evil; and they know that such things have been excited with them by Hell . . .

6997⁵. By 'anger,' 'wrath,' 'fury,' 'fire,' are meant the punishments and damnations into which man casts himself when he casts himself into evils; for from Divine order goods have rewards with them, and hence it is that evils have punishments with them, insomuch that they are joined together. III.

—⁶. For all the punishments of the evil come forth from the Lord's mercy towards the good, to prevent them from being injured by the evil; but the Lord does not inflict the punishments upon them; but they themselves do it; for in the other life evils and penalties are joined together. The evil especially inflict punishments on themselves when the Lord is doing mercy to the good; for their evils then increase.

7032². They never desist except through grievous punishments . . .

7102². 'The sword' = . . . the punishment of falsity; 'famine' = . . . the punishment of evil; 'the evil beast' = the punishment of evil from falsity; 'the pestilence' = the punishment of evil which is not from falsity but from evil; and, as punishment is signified, so also is damnation; for this is the punishment of those who have persevered in evil. III.

7188. When the infernals are deterred from doing evil through punishments, they at last abstain from infestation; but (cannot do so) unless the undelight of the punishment prevails over the delight of doing evil. Hence are the punishments of the evil in the other life.

7808. If the chastiser Spirit returns, (the man of Jupiter) is punished more severely; but angelic Spirits regulate the punishment according to the intention in the deeds, and the will in the thoughts.

7810. The kinds of punishments inflicted on the men of Jupiter if they act evilly. Enum.

8214^e. To every evil there is its own punishment. Refs.

8223³. It often happens there that when the evil want to inflict evil on the good they are grievously punished . . . and this appears as revenge on the part of the good; but it is not from the good, but from the evil, who then, by a law of order, obtain an opportunity . . . The evil who punish, do it from the cupidity of doing evil; but the good from the affection of doing good.

8227. When the Divine is . . . protecting the good against the evil, the evil burn still more against them . . . hence they rush on, and, in the same proportion, from a law of order, cast themselves into punishments . . .

—^e. It is to be known that all the punishments . . . in the other life have good for their end.

8232². When, in Hell, they do evil to others there, they are punished . . . by those to whom they do it.

8632. The Spirits of Jupiter at first did not want to admit that the Lord punishes no one . . . D.627.

9033. It is a spiritual truth . . . that the Lord punishes no one . . .

—². It is a law of Divine order that good has its reward in it . . . Hence it is that evil has its punishment in it . . . The former law is from the Lord . . . but the latter not so . . . 9049.

9036. The punishment of spiritual death. Sig.

9049. When anyone does evil to another from the heart . . . punishers are at once present, who treat him evilly. Thus is evil with its delight restrained.

9277³. The punishment for the non-reception of these goods. Sig.

9982. For man is deterred from evil by regarding the punishment.

10383. Those are grievously punished (in the Third Earth) who profane holy things; and before the punisher Spirit comes, there appears to them the wide gape of a lion. . . They call the punisher spirit the devil.

10711. As he induced them to believe that his life was communicated to them, he was grievously punished (by wrapping up in a sack, and contortion).

10790. The governors are to punish those who live contrary to order.

10791. Unless (men) were held in bonds by . . . rewards . . . and by punishments contrary to their loves, which are losses of honours, possessions, and life, for those who do evils, the human race would perish.

P. 249. He who thinks against God is rarely punished in the natural world, because there he is always in a state of reformation; but he is punished in the Spiritual World . . . for he then can no longer be reformed.

251³. When the sons of Israel . . . fell into any evil . . . they were punished by the nation which (signified that evil).

M. 80. When (the infernals) do evil, they are grievously and miserably punished.

500. They cried, Let them be punished! let them be punished!

935. On the punishment of revenge and hatred.

937. 944. 1488, Gen. art. 5097. D. Min. 4774.

1039. On the difference between punishments and vastations.—All the punishment in the other life is done for the sake of his amendment; for the penalties are such that they as it were take away the evils, or put on the faculty of doing what is good; thus, in themselves, all the punishments are vastations, because they devastate evils by the putting on of the faculty of speaking truth and doing good; and this faculty is a something superadded, the gift of the Lord; for if evils were merely taken away, without the donation of faculties of good, nothing of the man would remain, because there is nothing but evil in man.

1040. But all the punishments are done with pain, or resistance (whereas there are vastations which are done without resistance . . .).

1071. On the punishment of one who desired to do everything from himself.

1074. Such punishments do not indeed take away the nature; but have the effect that when the evil Spirit is doing it again, the recollection of it arises, so that he is deterred. . . But punishment once inflicted does not have this effect; it must be often repeated, so that something is subdued each time; which is wont to be done in the course of many years.

1119. For when he is about to be punished, he ought to know . . . of what quality he is . . .

1203. Grievous punishment of those who exercise venery without true conjugal love, or the desire to procreate offspring.

1354^e. In this way (the profane Spirit) is miserably punished. (The tun, des.)

1494. (The office of the Angels in regulating the punishments.) 3299. 3465.

1497. Thus do they remain [in punishment] for centuries—sacula, until their former life has been changed.

1807. The discerptors, or punishers . . . were greatly delighted with that penalty; and . . . said that they would not want to desist if it were permitted them thus to punish to eternity: they call this their function. . . They are those who constitute such functions of the infundibulum . . .

2305. When any Soul, or Spirit, comes among others . . . there are many who then think of scarcely anything else than to find something evil, so that they may chastise and punish. With such an ardour are many carried away; so that they are as it were executioners, although in the life of the body no such thing is heard of from them. 2354.

2354. The Soul is relinquished to such to be punished; for, when the evil is great it is in the evil that it be punished; and therefore the Lord in justice permits that evil, and falsity, be punished; but only for the sake of his amendment, or good.

2579. For the more interiorly a man is evil, the more grievous and prolonged is the punishment. Thus there remains for them a Hell most grievous and prolonged, and vastation until almost nothing remains of those who are contrary to mercy, and contrary to innocence; all of whom are deceitful, and evil more interiorly than others.

2711. The punishment of those who delectati sunt puellas parvas stuprandi. (In boiling water.) 2719.

2746. The punishment of laceration inflicted. 3297.

3110^e. Those at the nates are carried away by the cupidity of punishing everyone in a subtle manner.

3201. How and why the Lord permits Spirits to undergo such punishments and torments. (Shown by experience.)

3489². It would be absurd to suppose that the Lord permits anyone to be punished in Hell for [the sins of] so short a life. . . Therefore it is not to be thought that the Lord permits anyone to be punished . . . except with the end of amendment; for whatever is from the Lord is . . . for the sake of a good end; but eternal punishment could have no [such] end.

3606. How filthy ideas punish those who have them. Ex.

3747. They are not punished the instant they come into the other life, because they are in persuasion, and they would be broken . . .

3869. How evil Spirits are punished by their Own ideas.

3926^e. Those who were subtle supposed that they could not be punished, supposing their [doings] to be beyond punishments.

3927. They are punished by grievous penalties of folding; which were such that they were reduced from their subtlety into a very gross state. Des.

4110. How the evil states of men in the world return there, and cause punishment.

4206. That evil punishes itself.

4207. (The punishment of those who desire to return into the body.)

4224. When a Spirit rushes into evil greater than what is actual with him, he then punishes himself, or runs into the punishment.

4239. The arts of Sirens in trying to elude the punishers. Enum. . . But yet they were most grievously punished.

4298. The punishment of circumgyration inflicted. The punishers were those who, in the life of the body, had inwardly studied . . . to destroy others. It was said that these could inflict such a penalty, and not others, because the penalty was a peculiar one.

4369. Being such, they (thereby) summoned the punishers; who were such that they at once knew where they were; what they had thought; what they had said to each other; and who treated those who supposed they could do all things . . . as cats do mice. Des.

4370^e. (These malignant Spirits who desire to torture infants) were punished; and, when they wanted to thrust themselves into an innocent state, there came other punishers, who were more subtle, who tortured them until they desisted.

4395². The punishers do not need to explore others in this way; they know at once without such exploration who they were, and where they are . . .

4419. I heard that very many (of these hypocrites) were being punished, in order; and that the punishment passed along to a distance and above to many. The punishment was a peculiar one of laceration. 4420^e, Des.

4421. On punishments: that they are of mercy.

4451. Sirens elude the punishments either magically or filthily . . . They sometimes eluded them; but sometimes could not; and were thus punished most grievously with contortions as to the bones and flesh and also as to phantasies . . . 4463. 4474. 4478. 4502.

4471. Evil Souls or Spirits first return into their own life, and then exercise their wickednesses according to their nature, and then when they exceed the delight of their life, they are punished, and this often enough to deter them, which may be done to 20, 50, 100, 200 times, or more . . . After they have led this life for some years, and have exercised their wickednesses . . . they become nothing else than the evil of their own kind . . . and thus they precipitate themselves into Hell . . . and there torment each other . . . and sit, meanwhile, like skeletons . . . and then they dare not rise up into the World of Spirits; for they know that there would at once be grievous punishments for them. . . At last, after many centuries, they having been thus tormented, their corporeal delights can be to some extent lulled, and they are then sometimes elevated into the World of Spirits, in order to serve for the lowest uses, with only little life, and scarcely any delight; for . . . no one is tormented or punished except that some use may arise from it . . . Such is the lot of the evil.

4472. Whenever infernals have come to me they have risen up into the World of Spirits; but . . . they did not dare to remain there . . . and said that they could not do anything; and I perceived that they had learned such things through punishments; whereas those who have not yet (completed their stay in the World of Spirits) do not know this . . .

4511. The infernals who receive nothing of amendment through punishments, are those who are carried towards Hell . . .

4512. In the Hells are such that they suffer themselves to be punished and fear the penalties; for they are as often punished there by their like . . .

4513. But those who are punished in the World of Spirits, and receive amendment, are those who become better [thereby].

4549. They suggested that the Lord does evil to the evil, because when, as it were of Providence, the evil are excited to do evil, they are punished. But . . . this is because they stand opposed to those whom the Lord is benefiting in Heaven . . . and thus when the Lord does good, those who will evils are punished.

4648². Whenever he moved, a noise was heard below, like the noise of punishments; (for) by many efforts to do evil he had opened to himself the Hells which punish . . . At last he came there, in that he himself should be punished through that with which he wanted to punish or do evil to others . . .

4660. As they are such it cannot be otherwise than that they should mutually punish each other in the Hells . . .

4748². In punishments and dangers (Charles xii.) was more present in his internal diabolical life . . .

4756^e. If they sin they are brought to the judges, who at once see whether they are guilty, and grievously punish them, and this continually for a long, long time, until at last they dare not do it any more, not from conscience, but from fear.

4994. That sorceress . . . avoided punishments in various ways.

5097. (The revengeful) are punished much more grievously than others . . . (Immersion in a great privy.) This may last for centuries. 5098.

5506⁵. Common vastation is effected through punishments, which take place whenever he tries to do evil to another. The punishments are grievous according to the evil; and frequent according to the contumacy. 5507.

5843^e. (Benedict xiv.) was punished like the rest, and that grievously in a cavern where there is a grievous punisher.

6040^e. (Melancthon) was in much cupidity of punishing. He was often punished: I have heard the judge speaking of his punishment.

D. Min. 4547. Man has charity if he is in the zeal of punishing the evil for the end that they may become good, and that the good may not be injured . . .

4717^e. (These hypocrites) are grievously punished, until they desist from seducing others by the appearance of what is honourable.

4757. (These sorcerers) assailed me also; but were punished grievously and long. The punishment lasted continuously for many hours.

4774. (James Benzelius) thus exceeded the limits of his delight, and was therefore grievously punished by inward pains; and it was perceived that while he was enduring the penalty he still retained his revengefulness, because that grievous punishment lasted long; for they are not let go until something of amendment or aversion for such things is perceived by the Angels; but he retained his revengefulness however much he was punished. . . He was again given over to a more grievous punishment, so that he was set on fire within . . . and it was shown him to the life that the punishment of burning could be aggravated indefinitely . . .

4792. Evils cannot be . . . so subdued that [those in them] do not long to do them, except by punishments. Ex. Their nature often holds out for many years, before it suffers itself to be subdued.

[D. Min.] 4793^e. (This Genius of the thoughts) was grievously punished; but he still persists, and therefore grievous suffering is imminent, before he is thrust down into Hell.

E. 633⁵. Plenary punishment is described by 'forty;' for punishment equally (with vastation) is the consummation of evil. (That) after punishment, reformation succeeds. Sig.

642². When any Spirit does evil, he removes himself from the Lord's protection, and then falls into evils and falsities of every kind which are from Hell, and at the same time into the hands of those who are thence, who are called punishers. These then punish and torture him according to the evil which he has attempted to do, or which he has done. 643².

746¹⁸. Three degrees of punishment are signified by 'the judgment,' 'the council,' and 'the Hell of fire' . . .

890². The infernals are continually withheld from their loves, and, whenever they break forth into them, they are punished . . .

989^e. No one suffers penalties for the evils of his parents . . . and therefore it is provided that after death only a Man's Own evils recur, and he is then punished on account of those which recur.

J. (Post.) 230. If the infernals do the works imposed on them negligently, they are severely punished . . . If they only put their feet out, they are punished.

302^e. The punishment lasted until they asseverated that they would not do so any more.

Pupil. Alumnus. D.6095.

Pupil. Pupilla.

8865^e. Like touching the pupil of the eye . . .

P. 97^e. As a man guards the pupil of his eye.

M. 268². The pupils of their eyes as it were flashed in a green plane.

E. 37². Hence the iris and pupil appear now dilated, now contracted; now obscure, now lucid; and sometimes sparkling, exactly according to the desire and longing of the understanding.

5 M. 2. The pupils of the eyes sparkled . . . then became opaque, and the irises became green . . .

A. 1706. The beginning of purification. Sig. 1710.

1717². (How temptations operate in purifying.)
1725².

1793. After, through combats of temptations, He had purified the Maternal.

1901². It is purer than can be perceived . . .

1986. That man must first remove his loves . . . and thus be purified, was represented by circumcision.
—². 2045.

2039. Purity. Sig.

—^e. In proportion as the evils of cupidities and the derivative falsities are removed, in the same proportion man is purified . . .

—^e. For, without the Knowledges of truth, there is never any purification. 2046, Ex.

2049². The gentiles can be purified equally with those within the Church; and they are purified when they reject filthy loves, and live together in charity; for they then live in truths. Sig.

2051². Purification from these filthy loves is in the highest degree necessary within the Church; because (such) can render holy things impure.

2053. With man there is no pure intellectual truth . . .

2102. Their purification and justice from the Lord. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. The conjunction of the Divine with man cannot take place, unless man is purified from these loves; but, as soon as he is being purified from them, the Divine Human inflows, and conjoins the man with Himself.

2114^e. That those who have been purified from the loves of self and the world, both within the Church and without it, are justified by the Lord. Sig.

2249⁴. For according to the purification of the ideas (the Angels) are perfected for the reception of heavenly things. That Heaven is not pure before the Lord, is known.

2307. Are infants pure, because they have no actual evil? I was told that they are equally in evil . . .

2342. 'Cooked unleavened things' = purification.
—^e.

2362⁵. How pure the Word is in the internal sense, although it appears otherwise in the letter.

2526. 'Blamelessness' is expressed in the Hebrew by a word which also means 'cleanness' and 'purity.'

2632. The purification of the Rational. Sig. and Ex.

2634². Circumcision represented the purification of the heart. . . That the heart; that is, the interiors of man, is to be successively and continually purified from the evils of cupidities, and the falsities of the derivative phantasies, is according to Divine order. The precepts concerning the purification of the heart are each and all of Divine order . . .

2715². (Thus the spiritual man) can scarcely acknowledge any pure truth, such as the celestial acknowledge.

3147. 'Water to wash his feet' = purification there. Ex.

—⁵. 'To wash with waters' = to purify from falsities. Ill.

—⁶. That only external or natural things are to be purified; and unless these have been purified, that is, unless the things of the love of self and of the world have been removed thence, internal things, which are of love to the Lord and towards the neighbour, can never inflow. Examp. —⁸.

—⁷. Then the Lord, through these things, purifies also the natural or external man . . .

3148. The purification of all things which are His in the natural man. Sig. and Ex.

3219^e. The grosser cannot inflow into the purer.

3993⁸. With man there is no pure good, or good not mixed with evil; nor pure truth, or truth not mixed with falsity. Ex.

—¹⁰. For example: if anyone believes himself to be pure from sins . . . if he lives a new life . . . this is falsity with which good can be mingled . . .

4007². 'Purify me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow' (Ps. li. 9) = to be purified from sins through the reception and putting on of the Lord's justice.

4224. There are organic forms still purer, which cannot be detected even with the microscope. Ex.

4295². How it is to be understood that Heaven is not pure in the eyes of God (Job xv. 15). Ex.

4496. For when man is being purified from these loves, as is the case when he is being regenerated, he is in grief and anxiety. The cupidities which are then being wiped away are what feel grief and anguish.

4527². Thus Spirits are in a body as it were purified.

4545. 'Purify yourselves, and change your garments' (Gen. xxxv. 2) = that holiness is to be put on; (for) 'to be purified,' or 'cleansed,' = to be sanctified.

—³. (Thus) 'to remove the garments, and put on changes of garments,' represented purification from falsities.

4803. For in Heaven there is continual purification, and thus, so to speak, new creation.

5146². Man has no other conception of what is more interior and perfect, than as of what is purer in a continual diminution; but what is purer and grosser may exist in one and the same degree; both according to extension and compression, and according to the determinations; and also according to the insertions of things homogeneous or heterogeneous. Ex. 6465².

5170. (Thus) with the sensuous things subject to the intellectual part, which are retained. They are not therefore conjoined; for they are not as yet pure from fallacies; but, as they are purified, so they are conjoined.

5174. Souls first come as it were into the region of the stomach, and are there agitated and purified . . .

5198^e. The 'water' thus prepared (Num. xix. 2-11) represented the medium of purification.

5391. The purer blood.

—^e. They detain the mind of the other in certain fixed thoughts, whence there rise up and manifest themselves such things as cohere in a series . . . from which the man is to be purified.

5669. 'They washed their feet' = the purification of the Natural.

5849². How, then, could he see the things which are within even this purer nature?

5954^e. (Thus) purification, which was represented by the washing of the garments, is effected through the truths of faith.

6373. For the Divine which flowed through the Celestial Kingdom could not be pure, because Heaven is not pure.

6639². The man of the Church who comes into the other life is to be purified from such things as infest truths and goods, otherwise he cannot be elevated into Heaven . . . Therefore in order that he may be purified, he is kept in a state such that he may be assaulted by scientifics which disagree with truths, and also by falsities; and this until those scientifics become of no account to him, and are removed. This rarely takes place during the life in the body; but it takes place in the other life with those who are to be elevated into Heaven; yet with the greatest variety. (Sig. by the Israelites being oppressed by the Egyptians.)

6724². For what is interior, being purer, acts into every single thing of what is exterior.

7291^e. Internal things are relatively purer and simple.

7343². Evident from the common rule, that with the pure all things are pure, and with the impure all things are impure. Ex.

7601³. Natural truth is represented there as a con-texture of the purer threads of flax.

—⁶. The washing of the feet = purification from sins, which is effected through the truths of faith; for by these man is taught how he should live.

7853. 'Unleavened things' = what is purified from all falsity. 7902. 8058. 8060.

7854. For man could not endure pure truth and pure good.

7861. For purifications are effected by fire.

7902². As to truth purified from all falsity, it is to be known that there can never be pure truth with man. Ex. . . But truth is said to be purified from all falsity, when man can be kept by the Lord in the good of innocence. Innocence is to acknowledge that with himself there is nothing but evil . . .

7906². It is to be known that the purification of truth from falsity can never come forth without fermentation. Ex.

— . The state has not as yet been purified when man acts from the truth of faith; but it has been purified when he acts from the good of charity . . .

7918. 'Take a bundle of hyssop' = an external medium through which is purification. . . The reason 'hyssop' = external truth which is a medium of purification, is that all spiritual purification is effected through truths; for the earthly and worldly loves from which man is to be purified are not known except through truths. When these are insinuated by the Lord, horror is insinuated at the same time for these loves, which causes that when the like inflows into the thought, that horror returns, and consequently aversion for them. Thus is man purified through truths, as through external media.

8099. When they had been delivered from the Lower Earth . . . they were brought into a second state of purification, which is that of temptations.

8487². Therefore with the man (of the Spiritual Church) the good of truth cannot long remain pure . . .

[A.] S521. 'White . . .' = that the truth therein was pure. Ex.

8711. Because the truths are pure without a worldly end. Sig. and Ex.

8725^e. Good cannot be conjoined with truths until the truths have been purified from falsities of evil.

8789. The purification of truths. Sig.

8809. The purification of the good of faith. Sig. and Ex.

— . Those who, as to the interiors, are not in good and truth, cannot be in pure marriage . . .

8811. At the end of the purification. Sig.

8902¹⁶. Purification from that evil because done from immoderate zeal . . . Sig.

9088². Purifications from these loves are impossible except through the truths of faith, because these teach that all concupiscences are from these loves.

9286². For the man who is being regenerated is first purified from falsities . . . 9294², Ex.

9287. Worship and thanksgiving on account of purification from falsities. Sig.

9293^e. 'To purify the sons of Levi . . .' (Mal.iii.3) = the purification of good and truth . . .

9333². Man is not purified from sins; but is withheld from them . . .

9468⁹. The purification and withdrawal from evils and falsities through truths and goods from the Word. Sig.

9572. 'The snuffers,' etc. = things purificatory and evacuator in the Natural. Sig.

— . All things of the internal man descend into the Natural, and are purified. Why this is done in the Natural.

—^e. 'Washing' = the purification of the internal man.

9670⁶. 'The bullock' and 'ram' = the purification of good from evils in the external and internal man. (9990.) That this purification was effected through truths from good. Sig. And 'the he-goat,' etc. = the purification of truth from falsities in the external man.
